The Lenten season has ended with the glad service of Easter. The night of weeping has been succeeded by the joy of morning. In the Easter liden and festival thousands united who have no special regard for times and seasons. They improved the occasion to impress some practical lessons of the resurrection. But after all the Lenten fastings and exercises, we ask cui bono? What should we naturally expect from such a season of spiritual retreat, of special prayer and rigid introspection? If the forty days were wisely employed, their influence would certainly be projected into the far future. The spiritual strength received from those days of intimate communion would resist many a temptation, and put to flight many a bitter foe. Those experiences would not fade away with the evening light of Easter day. Those visions of God and aspirations after his likeness would not be forgotten with the close of the Lenten season. We have reason to be shocked at the very suggestion that after Lent there is an adjournment of religion and an excess of worldly gaiety. It is too great violence to the aims and sincerity of those Lenten confessions, prayers and good resolutions. But, alas! what are the facts? In all good conscience, we must relate them as a lesson of warning to our readers.

Our observation is that as Lent is preceded by Shrove Tuesday—"Fat Tuesday"—with its wild revelries and sinful follies, it is succeeded by an excessive worldliness that seems to riot in its escape from a forty days' painful restraint. This is history, known and read of all men, in every local community where churchism has a name and habitation. Not only so, but the Lenten period is much employed in planning amusements and providing costumes for the same when the time of freedom shall arrive. Nor are these gaieties planned alone by youthful giddiness, that make no religious pretension, but most generally by certain ardent church women, who carry on their shoulders the burdens of fashionable Zion. Those who are full of ecclesiastical "small talk" who prate about the church and its beautiful service, and whose religious pride is to enslave and proselyte the weak-kneed of other denominations. They are the patrons of the dance and chaparrones of the young in all worldly vanity. Though painful, we do not hesitate to say it; that society church women are the blight and mildew of true piety in many communities. They shame evangelical conviction and aspiration out of hundreds who, under other influences, might have developed into saints and heroes. We have known more than one to offer the sparkling glass to a young man, and, overcoming his scruples, lead him out into all the mazes of the sinful dance. Then it is high time for every true believer in spiritual religion to lift a danger signal and sound a note of warning. When worldly conformity is enthroned in and condoned by the church, it becomes an enemy of reformed and more subtle power. Against it every pulpit ought to become a throne of thunder, and every young Christian urged to flee the fatal snare. The Lord called Methodism into being to protest against lifeless form and worldly compromise in the church. And that call is as clear and imperative to-day as when her first itinerants rang out Heaven's alarm-voice over slumbering England. We have no mission but to protest against sin in and out of the church, and to conserve evangelical religion.

The after-Lent practice of the average church people is a reversal of all spiritual philosophy. The idea of the Lenten period and appointment is Christian growth and attainment. A special season of meditation and prayer for better service and holier living during the entire year. But in ordinary estimation it is an offset to folly—an equivalent for any amount of "pleasure." Lent, faithfully observed, is a license for relaxation—a full atonement for all social sinning. The most worldly, who piously keep Lent, count themselves quite respectable Christians. Forty days of prayer and fasting entitle them to large liberty. And thus Lent becomes a rock of offense and stone of stumbling. Its fruits do not appear, and the conviction is irresistible that the spirit of consecration was conspicuously absent. When Moses held audience with God only for a little while on the mountain, he came down with a shining face and a mighty faith. And this forty-day communion with the Master ought to show itself in the countenance, speech and walk of every child of the church. If not, why not?

It is said that at least ten thousand persons, within a radius of thirty miles of New York, live from the cultivation of flowers.

"The Religion of Barns."

Thus Methodism was once denominated and stigmatized. Having no other shelter our brave itinerants gathered their eager congregations into barns and preached to them the word of life. What a striking parallel, therefore, in this taunt and the birth of our Lord. Ours was "the religion of barns," and he was the child of the manger. Why should we not begin in our Lord's birthplace? So what was said in derision was indeed an eloquent tribute to Methodism's Christly spirit and zeal. But the Master did not always dwell in a manger. He was willing to be born there, but not make it a place of residence. From thence he preached in temples and tabernacles, on the mountain top and by the shining sea. So if to meet the necessities of the early times our fathers had to preach in barns, we need not do so now. Let us build chaste and beautiful temples for our Lord. He deserves our costliest sacrifice, and is well pleased with a fitting tabernacle for his dwelling-place. On this subject we quote, to commend, some words from the London Watchman:

Let us not forget that the beautiful is useful. Ornament, decoration, costliness, all have their use in the church of God. We may care for the poor, without neglecting the rich, and we may work in the slums without forsaking the middle classes. Surely we are not called upon to hide ourselves altogether in slums and back streets. An ugly building on a bad site is no necessary recommendation of religion. God has made his works attractive by their beauty as well as by their use. In sound, taste, color and form God has revealed the beauty of holiness, for there is a sense in which beauty is the perfection of holiness. Let us follow the example of the God of nature, and while we have many things useful let us have some things useful for their beauty. Why not have a monumental structure in London? Beautiful for its architecture and valuable in its use? So of other cities in the kingdom. Why should not Methodism plant her standard where all men may behold it. Monumental structures such as we now contemplate are not in the immediate present, and they may be only in the distant future. Yet they will surely come as Methodism increases in her wealth and expands in her usefulness. We have no sympathy with the outcry against the beautiful in Methodist arrangements. We should as soon think of saying that the flowers ought to be turned into grass and vegetables, to provide food for man and beast.

Holding the Dust-Pan.

We heard this charming story told some days ago with fine effect. A little girl besought her mother to allow her to assist in sweeping the house. When permission was granted her younger brother, a little tot, begged that he might help. It was objected that he was too small. What can you do? said his sister. You can't handle the broom. "Well," said he, "I can hold the dust-pan." The lesson of the incident is as useful as it is beautiful.

The spirit of the little fellow is worthy of all emulation. He wanted a share in household work. To help his mother—in any wise to lighten her burdens—was a supreme joy. He would not select the character of work—would not shirk something because disagreeable and prefer something else because less difficult—but was ready for anything mother would allow, not command. Such a spirit we need to carry in all Christian work—a readiness, yea, an eagerness, to help the Master's cause wherever and whenever possible. The highest expression of Christian service is not a cold, calculating sense of duty, but the impulse and unrestrained constraint of the love of Christ. Paul expressed it when he said: "Necessity is laid upon me." The desire was imperative and irresistible—a passion for saving souls that could not be arrested or confined. Such a spirit will not seek easy or honorable places, but will hurry to the point where necessity is most imminent and the burdens greatest. Our love for the Master and his cause should make us delight in every opportunity to be employed.

But if the little boy's spirit was eager, it was none the less humble. In order to join sister in helping mother he was willing to stand near and only hold the dust-pan. The humblest place was sufficiently honorable, if mother's burdens could be relieved, and her weary hands could be spared a little labor. If unable to wield the broom, he eagerly sought to hold the dust-pan. There is a practical and striking lesson for every local church and individual Christian. The same humility should control the character of our service—a willingness to occupy the lowest place, if need be, for the Master's sake. Not every Christian has grace to hold the dust-pan. If they can't hold the broom, and get all the credit for cleaning the highway for their King, and making bright his tabernacle, they won't do anything, or else do it very grudgingly. How much contention for place! How much jealousy of those more highly favored, if not honored! It requires a large measure of grace, and the soundest spiritual philosophy, to cheerfully acknowledge ourselves best adapted to the dust-pan. But that is exactly the point in the story. When the little fellow was convinced that he hadn't strength to use the broom, he gladly accepted the dust-pan. So when Providence indicates unfitness for a certain work, and opens the way for other service, we should willingly obey. David's door-keeper spirit and the little boy's dust-pan experience are degrees of spiritual attainment to be earnestly coveted. But they are only possible to the strongest faith and truest humility.

But if the spirit of the dust-pan is to be applauded, its value must not be underestimated. The dust-pan is an important piece of household furniture. Without it the broom is valueless, and its skillful use the fittest employment. The dust-pan must carry out the sweepings or the broom need not be used. So the little fellow was not unemployed or idly employed. He was rendering a needed service—doing what mother or sister would have had to do. So the seemingly humblest places in the Lord's kingdom may have equal importance with the highest. The door-keeper may as truly serve God as the master of the temple. We are all members of the Lord's body, and one of another. Every member has not the same office, but each has an important office. And in the great day these shall share alike in the rewards of the righteous. In the wars of Israel those who "carried by the staff" were equally rewarded with those who went forward to the forefront of battle. It was a Divine statute. And so they who hold the dust-pan are alike valuable in the temple service with those who wield the broom. O! for the grace of the dust-pan!

Comparative Progress.

A correspondent of the Louisville Christian Observer makes a vigorous mathematical argument on the present standard of education and method of ministerial training in the Presbyterian Church. He shows how rapid has been the progress of the Methodist and Baptist Churches as compared with the Presbyterian, and attributes their slowness to the want of ministers. And that felt want is chargeable to the tedious and expensive methods employed in their training. While we favor an educated ministry, believing that the largest efficiency is dependent upon ample preparation, there is great force in the brother's argument. Our neighbors do put the fodder too high, both as to time and character of training. It is poor response for a great church to make to the Master about her meager results—the few saved out of the world's perishing millions—that she was studying Hebrew roots and Greek idioms. Well enough to have large scholarship, but to prescribe the same standard for all strikes us as unnecessary and unwise. If practicable we would have every preacher collegiately educated, but would oppose a uniform standard and method. The wisdom of the plan adopted by the Methodists is eloquently approved by marvelous results. If we have boasted of fewer technical scholars, we have rejoiced in more wise evangelists, whose cruens are gemmed with stars, and whose works do follow them. The following statistics, compiled with much care from official sources, we quote from the Observer correspondent:

In 1775 the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches stood relatively thus: The first had 20 ministers and 3,418 members; the second 140 ministers and about 30,000 members. In 1880 they were in ministers and members relatively thus: The Methodist had 22,582 ministers and 3,574,485 members and the Presbyterian 8,538 ministers and 937,000 members. In the hundred years noted the population increased 47 times, the Presbyterian Church 47 times and the Methodist 1,051, and the ministry of the two denominations increased thus: Presbyterian 60 fold, and the Methodist 120 times.

In the territory covered by the Synod of Virginia, where, humanly speaking, Presbyterianism had all the advantage in the start over Methodism, the two denominations now stand thus: Methodist, 1,185 churches, 498 ministers and 102,741 members. Presbyterian, 320 churches, 216 ministers and 25,437 members. In 1872 we had 205 candidates for the ministry and in 1882 only 160. In 1878 to 1882 our ministry increased 37 in 66 presbyteries, and, taking ministers and churches together, we had in 1883 seven fewer than in 1879. The number of vacant churches in the 66 presbyteries was 473. In Virginia there are 42 counties, in North Carolina 34 and in Kentucky 60 without Presbyterian preaching, and these are our strongest synods. "In most of the presbyteries," says an official report to the General Assembly, "the unoccupied territory far exceeds what has been taken possession of," and the pastoral letter of the Assembly of 1882 makes this startling announcement: "The decrease of ministers, if not remedied, must paralyze the church. Her work must cease for lack of instrumentality to carry it on."

What Shall I Do?

So asked the rich man whose grounds had produced so bountifully. So asked the terrified jailor of Paul. So asks the penitent. The question is spontaneous. Man feels that salvation is contingent upon some act on his part. Or rather salvation is not so much a condition in which to luxuriate as an opportunity to do. Perhaps it was in the conclusion reached by the rich man simply to enjoy as an end of being that his sin and folly consisted. He studied life's game through according to his way of thinking, and saw at the conclusion eat, drink, be merry; after that nothing.

The question is reiterative. There are epochs at which it returns with overwhelming force; but there is hardly a point in all life at which it does not come sufficiently strong to suggest thought. If success crowns one enterprise it is then in order to ask, What shall I do now? The conditions of success may be changed. Success itself may cease to be such. Seldom in life does man achieve highest triumph without first felt as David: "All thy waves have gone over me." So that the question comes in that fearful hour: What shall I do? Resource is certainly not exhausted. Spirit loves to be thrown upon its secret treasures. The sensual and material may be adverse, but that is no argument against, but rather in favor of drawing on spiritual supplies. When David's enemies used the material forces against him he said: "But I give myself to prayer." The materialist sneers at the devout soul's prayer in distress: "Why not pray in the midst of your joy, and not come now in your extremity to pray?" Simply because it is not natural to groan to-day because I know I shall have toothache to-morrow.

The question is cumulative. Life's plot thickens as we advance. Every step beyond the cradle we tread upon the loose ends of that interminable web which we are either to weave or soon twist into hopeless tangle. To gather them up straight and unkninked for the loom is no slight task; but how many feeble, how many malicious, how many helpless, how many unwisely or too officiously loving have scattered and interwined the threads of their life with ours or tried to engage us in the weaving of their designs instead of the celestial one which our own soul has in its ideal. Who does not remember that when in almost childhood this question came first the spirit caught up the few long, strong and beautiful threads and answered in sweet faith and ardor: "I'll live for love and all that it signifies, whether it beats in a mother's heart or flutters in an angel's plume." So childhood built its castles in the elysian fields, where flowers dew-spangled slept and dreamed away the hours. The question returned to the youth. Glory and worldly noise had caught him; but still the threads were not too many. But he began to study the designs that were to be filled in the web—perplexity, hesitation and doubt for the first time came near. But they did not alight. They hovered for a little while, and rose apparently frightened at the resolute movements of the loom. By-and-by he became a man. He paused. Some fearful talks and kinky places. Life half spoiled. No, just begun whispered hope. So the young man finds many answers to the question, but finally he chooses. But choice is one thing, achievement another. Perhaps he meets defeat. Then what? Better try again or choose again. In trying one thing he succeeds at another, as Columbus, in search of the East Indies, discovered America. A life may flod itself endlessly enlarged, embosomed, fitted for enterprises which before seemed superhuman. What to do? Remain below or climb? The answer is not ready. Jacob saw the angels climbing the ladder, but he did not try it himself. Paul was caught up to the third heaven, but he came down. Jesus was transfigured, but returned again to his mortal body. Revelations, therefore, are not developments of life, though they may show what developments are to come. On the other hand, revelations may become the result of development and self-determined growth or progress. Columbus would never have seen America if he had not had definite purpose. Jacob would never have seen the ladder had he not been seeking guidance. Paul would never have seen his best to publish Jesus and the resurrection on earth. Jesus himself would never have been transfigured unless he had been utterly destitute of the selfish and sordid sentiments of the natural man.

"He that is willing to do shall know." The converse is equally true. He that does not desire to do shall never know. Knowledge is not altogether intellectual. Brains may have fresh heart blood all the time. He whose heart faints grows obtuse in mental perception. Philosophy, simply followed for its reverence is a fatuus. Learning that does not enlarge the humanity in man is worthless. The mind is like the ostrich, the most foolish of birds. It will swallow spoons, quartz, glass marbles or rusty nails as readily as the daintiest of tidbits; but when it shuts its eyes it thinks the world has vanished. So the mind swallows all those facts of the universe which it can not assimilate, and yet when it closes its eyes imagines that God and all he made are blotted out. Let him then that is asking Divine guidance only set his heart in frame. If he wishes to do what God has for him there will not lack to him the heavenly vision.

T. A. S.

The action of the Archdiocese of Upsala and other dignitaries of the Lutheran State Church in Sweden, in objection to the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in Stockholm is thus commented upon by the Lutheran Observer:

"The facts are too humiliating to require comment. That there should be in this quarter of the nineteenth century, and in the land of Gustavus Adolphus, who fought and died in defense of religious freedom in Europe, and who founded a college in America designed for 'all who were oppressed in their religion,' that there should be in that land, and at others, some ecclesiastical dignitaries so individual as to oppose the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in their own dominions, after it had been invited to meet there by the Swedish Alliance, is one of the mysteries of human perverseness, which nothing but the influence of a State Church or its officials will explain. And when it is further considered that these same ecclesiastical dignitaries bear the name of Luther, who freed Europe from the domination of Rome, the paradox of this petty intolerance reaches a climax which has few parallels in the annals of Protestantism."

A New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate thus speaks of a little candidating for the episcopacy in advance of the General Conference. We have none of that in our Southern Methodism:

The delegates from the New York East are, as usual, led by Dr. Curry with Dr. Buckley a good second, and Dr. Goodsell a close third. The fourth place is filled by Dr. A. S. Hunt, and the fifth by Rev. B. M. Adams. It is understood that many of Dr. Buckley's loyal supporters are antagonized the election of Dr. Hunt, through fear that he would become a dangerous rival for episcopal honors. All the Bishops are rumored to be canvassing in the latter's favor, but the Bishops have no vote. His friends are fond of speaking of him as "the Christian gentleman," a fair indication of his character.

—Rev. J. Hyatt Smith, of Brooklyn, New York, has renounced the Baptist Church and joined the Congregationalists.

—Miss Clara Barton, of the Red Cross Society, has done a noble work in ministering relief to overworked sufferers along the Mississippi.

—The Carter family, including all who bear the name of Carter, are to have a reunion at Woburn, Mass., June 11. "What a gathering" the Smiths or Jones' might have!

—Rev. J. E. Bradley corrects an error in the Louisiana Conference Minutes. He was transferred to the Conference in 1859 and not admitted in 1857 as published.

—Just beneath the statue of his great master Dr. Arnold, in the chapel of Rugby School, in England, there has been placed a remarkable statue of Dean Stanley. A graceful and appropriate memorial.

—The London Watchman counts to us dropped in mourning in honor of the Duke of Albany and contains a very appreciative editorial tribute to the young prince. The English Methodists are loyal to the crown.

—"Naboth's Vineyard" is the name of the London residence where the late Charles Reade so long lived. It was so called because of the persistent efforts of certain persons to get it, involving a parliamentary conflict.

—The Presbyterians have grown rapidly in Dakota. The first church in the territory was organized in 1872. Now they have three presbyteries, fifty-six churches, and over fifty mission stations and a college at Pierre.

—Mr. J. S. Carr of North Carolina, proposes to give $5,000 to the endowment of Trinity College if $100,000 is raised this year, or he will give out twenty-five or any sum under $100,000. A liberal offer. Now let North Carolina Methodists bestir themselves and make a grand centennial offering to the Lord.

MISCELLANEOUS

REVIEWS OF IMITATIONS

CANTRELL & COCHRANE'S

"GENTLE" "CLUB"
"PALE" "SODA"
BELFAST

"CANTRELL & COCHRANE'S" DUBLIN & BELFAST

E. & J. BURKE, General Agents,
NEW YORK.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent Free.
H. M. WHITLACE, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

ANKER-PAIN-EXPELLER gives instant relief to all the most painful cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, &c.
Price $1. at druggists, or sent direct by mail, sample free. Put in 50¢ order to
J. C. ANKER-PAIN-EXPELLER
Makers, Box 2410 New York.

PILES

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE.
R. S. & A. P. LACEY,
Patent Attys., Washington, D. C.

Morning Express. Evening Mail.

Leaves New Orleans.....	5:30 A. M.	5:30 P. M.
Arrives, Meridian.....	5:09 P. M.	4:30 A. M.
" Birmingham.....	11:15 P. M.	12:25 P. M.
" Chattanooga.....	4:09 A. M.	5:30 P. M.
" Cincinnati.....	5:23 P. M.	7:15 A. M.

Freight and Passenger Depots,
Press street and Lovee.

Freight and Ticket Offices,
34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

H. COLLIERAN, General Freight Agent.

E. P. WILSON,
Gen'l Pass'r Agent;

Queens and Crescent Line,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

BARNARD BROWN,
Gen'l Frit. and Pass. Agt., N. O. and N. E. R. R.,
New Orleans, La.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

THOS. J. CARVER,
Cotton Factor
—AND—
COMMISSION MERCHANT
44 Perdido Street,

ENGINE FOR SALE

A 12 horse power Atlas Portable Engine on wheels, has been but little used, and is in thorough order.

Will be sold on time to a good purchaser.

Apply to

Apply to
T. J. CARVER,
44 Perdido St., New Orleans

NEW JOB OFFICE
CARVER & JAMIESON,
112 Camp Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS
VISITING CARDS,

BLANKS!
 Blanks for Clerks of Court, blanks for Mason
 Lodges, blanks for Granges, &c., blanks for Co Operative Stores,
 —AND—
 ALL THE LATEST STYLES

All Kinds of Job Work
Executed in the best style and prices as low as any city in the North or West.
Send your order to
CARVER & JAMIESON,
112 Camp Street

The Great New Southern Route
—TO—

Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Ports.

Through Sleeping Cnrs from
New Orleans to San Francisco,
— VIA —

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with

RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Jackson Railroad Depot follows:

Alexandria, 11 A. M.	Houston, 11 A. M.
Arrives from
Alexandria, 4:30 P. M.	Houston, 4:30 P. M.

For further information apply to
W. J. O'BRIEN, J. G. SCHRIEVER,
Ticket Agent. Traffic Manager.
Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets,
NEW ORLEANS

ROUTE.
The Texas and Pacific Railway,

is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS
NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN AND OCE-ANIC TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old
New Mexico and California.

Through Express arrives New Orleans at 4:10 P.
For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles corner Gravier street, or depot.
A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent
B. W. MCCULLOUGH,

H. C. TOWNSEND,
Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

1990

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Dated March 10th, 1884. Patents issued free. Thirty-seven years' experience. Patents obtained through MUNN & CO., are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $4.00 a year. Weekly. Special engravings and interesting information. Specimen of our SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 23 Broadway, New York.

The Great Church LIGHT

FRANK'S Patent Halo-Cone gives the Most Powerful, the Brightest, Cheapest and the Most Perfect Light for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Public Buildings.

[illegible]

and manure
poultry.
S. H. Ten-cent place in
E. H. Stoddard,

Hardford, Ct.
for a copy of a Poultry World and it will tell this new Egg-Laid Truss

It is a like a Tied different from A others, its cup shape, with Self Adjusting Tail to create an Air Tight Seal position of the Tail within the cup Presses back the Intes tines just as a porpoise does with the finger. With the constant daily use, the tail is firmly set in place and the cups are free.
BOSTON TIGHT CO., Chicago, Ill.

It cuts off all

BEST "NO TENSION" DRAWING MACHINE OR STRONGEST SEAM
UNEQUALLED LIGHTNESS OF RUNNING.
AND DOES NOT INJURE HEAL.
Full time and action afforded to all.
Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 659 Broadway, N. Y.

MONARCH HORSE HO AND CULTIVATOR COMBINED

For Hoing & Hilling Potatoes,
Corn, Onions, Beets,
Cabbages, Turnips, &c.

SENT ON 30 Day
TEST TRI

An immense saving of labor and money.
We guarantee a boy can cultivate and and his neighbors will envy him. It's so easy and frast as one two three four five six seven eight nine ten eleven twelve thirteen fourteen fifteen sixteen seventeen eighteen nineteen twenty one twenty two twenty three twenty four twenty five twenty six twenty seven twenty eight twenty nine thirty thirty one thirty two thirty three thirty four thirty five thirty six thirty seven thirty eight thirty nine forty forty one forty two forty three forty four forty five forty six forty seven forty eight forty nine fifty fifty one fifty two fifty three fifty four fifty five fifty six fifty seven fifty eight fifty nine sixty sixty one sixty two sixty three sixty four sixty five sixty six sixty seven sixty eight sixty nine seventy seventy one seventy two seventy three seventy four seventy five seventy six seventy seven seventy eight seventy nine eighty eighty one eighty two eighty three eighty four eighty five eighty six eighty seven eighty eight eighty nine ninety ninety one ninety two ninety three ninety four ninety five ninety six ninety seven ninety eight ninety nine one hundred.

Illustrated Catalogue FREE. AGENTS
WANTED. Mention this paper. Address
Mouchar Mfg. Co., 206 State St., Chicago.

DIAMOND DYES

Are the Best Dyes Ever Made.
DRESSES, COATS, SCARFS, HOOVER, STOCKINGS, CARPET RAGS, ROBES, FEATHERS, or any fabric or fancy goods can be colored to any shade.
FAST AND DURABLE COLORING.
Each package will color over 100 yards of material.
For the DIAMOND DYES, take no more trouble than compare with them for Brilliance, Dyeing Power, Economy, and Durability. They are made of Microcarbons, or used in 10 cents and any other water soluble dye. Send for samples and a book of full instructions for coloring.

WILLYS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington.
Gold Paint. Silver Paint.
Bronze Paint. Artists' Black.
 The gliding Fancy Bakers, Frames, Lamps, Oil
 Burners, and several kinds of ornamental work. Equipped with the best of the high priced kinds and only 10 cts. a pack at the factory, or post-paid from WILLYS & RICHARDSON CO., Burlington.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending April 29, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	8 5-16 @
Ordinary	9 11-16
Good ordinary	10 11-16
Low middling	11 7-16
Middling	12
Good middling	12 1/2
Middling fair	13
Fair	13 1/2
Good middling	14
Mobile middling	14 1/2
St. Louis middling	15

SUGAR.
Inferior	34
Common	42
Good common	44
Fair	50
Good fair	51
Prime	51 1/2
Strictly Prime	51 1/2
Choice	54
Yellow clarifier	61
Brass clarified	62
Choice whites	63
Granulated	64

MOLASSES.
Strip	26
Prime	34
Choice	38
Fancy	42

RICE.
Choice	62
Prime	64
Good	64
Fair	64
Ordinary	43
Common	42
No. 2	22

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 00
Minnesota patents	7 00
Extra fancy	6 25
Winter wheat patents	7 00
Choice	5 50
Fancy	6 50

CORN PRODUCTS.
Corn meal	3 40
Corn meal	3 25
Crisp	3 50
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn	58
White	58
Yellow	58
Mixed	65
Oats	46
Western	46
Texas rust-proof	48
Hay	1 00
Choice	25 00
Yield	19 00

PROVISIONS.
Pork	17 75
Moss	17 82 1/2
Prime mess	10 00
Rumps	16 00

BACON.
Choice breakfast	14
Shoulders	8
Sides, clear	92
Sides, clear rib	92

HAMS.
Sugar-cured	132
Shoulders	71
Sides, clear	91
Sides, clear rib	91

FISH.
Maceral	14 25
No. 1, in bbls	7 75
No. 2, in bbls	13 75
Half bbls	6 25
No. 3, in bbls, large	13 25
Half bbls	7 00

GROCERIES.
Coffee	51
Java, choice	12
Java, choice	22
Butter	25
Western dairy	25
New York dairy	25
Country	17
Lard	9
Tea	50
China	50
Fair	25
Oil	18
Coal, cason	45
Coal, bbls	45
Coal, bbls	45
Lard	82

VEGETABLES.
Cabbages	14 00
Country	14 00
Potatoes	1 50
Western	1 50
Seed, Eastern	1 50
Seed, Western	1 50
Kidney	20 00
Onions	2 50
Onions	4 50

BALING STUFFS.
17 lb	104
2 lb	112
Baling twine	134
Twine	130

SUNDRIES.
Poultry	5 00
Young	3 00
Chickens	4 00
Young	2 50
Turkeys	12 00
Eggs	14
Western	15
Southern	15
Wheat	20
Barley	18
Burly	9
Hides	8
Green salted	11
Dry salted	11

FERTILIZERS.
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal	28 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	31

Address all mail matter to New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 22.—The Alabama Mineral Exposition opened today; 10,000 people were present. Gov. O'Neil delivered the opening address, reviewing the industrial history and prospects of the State. The exhibition comprises all the mineral resources and the chief manufactured products of Alabama. Many visitors have been attracted from distant States.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—A vote was reached on the celebrated claim of Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines in the House today, and resulted in a complete victory for that lady. The bill, as reported by the committee, proposed to grant to her claim to cede to Mrs. Gaines 38,457 acres of the public domain, or an equivalent in land scrip at the rate of $1.25 per acre.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 26.—The will of the late ex-minister, James H. Partridge, has been filed for probate. It left his entire estate to two sisters, and after their death, to the children of all their survivors to the Protestant Episcopal Church Home and Infirmary and to the Emanuel Church Home, to be known as the Annie Mary Partridge fund, in memory of his wife, and to be used for the support of indigent sewing girls.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 26.—Several months ago John Montrose, agent of Richard K. Fox, came to Atlanta and distributed broadcast through Atlanta hundreds of copies of the Police Gazette with the avowed intention of making a test case before the Georgia courts. Montrose was promptly arrested and arraigned before Judge Clarke of the City Court, who, after a hearing, fined him $1,000 and costs for scattering obscene literature through the community. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court, which today affirmed the decision of the court below and ordered the fine collected.

PITTSBURGH, April 27.—To-night, about 10 o'clock, the interior walls of a two-story building on Smith street, occupied by Mrs. Joseph Wagner as a cigar store and dwelling, fell in, completely burying under the bricks and dirt two children, Albert and Edward, aged respectively sixteen and six years. When extricated Edward was found to be fatally injured, his body was fractured, and he died before medical aid arrived. Albert was badly bruised and cut about the head, but will recover. The building is the oldest in the city, and has long been in a tumble-down condition.

JAMESTOWN, O., April 27.—A terrible cyclone struck this place about five o'clock this afternoon. Two-thirds of the town were completely ruined and six persons killed. Several persons were badly wounded. Hundreds of people were turned out of their houses.

A dispatch from Dayton says that the cyclone passed over the southern part of Montgomery and Greene counties, devastating everything in its course. Forests were leveled down like weeds, and houses were destroyed for miles, and it is estimated that in this county alone at least twenty residences are in ruins, to say nothing of the loss on other buildings, live stock and farm property.

At Alexandria, six miles south of Dayton, several people are known to be injured and one lady is reported killed.

At Carrollton a number of residences are reported destroyed. A brick school house, No. 9, was destroyed and the roof carried 500 yards. Mr. Harris' house and barn were destroyed. A child was caught in the cyclone and carried 200 yards and dropped to the earth only slightly injured.

At Bell Brook, Greene county, at least fifteen farm-houses are more or less damaged, but the families generally escaped by taking refuge in the cellars.

From Carrollton the cyclone took a direct easterly course, and its force was not in the least spent when it reached Jamestown, a thriving village of 600 inhabitants.

Near Xenia there was considerable destruction. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home was badly damaged. A barn, laundry and other buildings were destroyed with the loss of several other buildings were unroofed. Miss Harvey, the Matron, and Night Watchman Richardson were injured, but none of the children were hurt. Between Jasper and Cedar Creek, on the narrow gauge road, the damage is great to farm property, and at this point the trains were unable to move on account of the wind, while others did not dare to pass over the Cedar Creek trestle during the cyclone.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, April 24.—In the House of Commons Mr. Gladstone refused to state what reply had been sent to Egypt's suggestion in regard to the relief of Berber. Berber, he said, was doubtless in danger, but Khartoum was in no danger, either military or any other. The government fully recognized the obligation they were under for the safety of Gordon, and should put themselves in position to render all needful assistance.

Princess Alice's memoirs contains her complete correspondence with the Queen until her death. The work exhibits greater extension than the Queen's book. Fifteen thousand copies were issued as the first edition.

HALIFAX, April 25.—Capt. Scott, in an official report of the result of the inquiry into the loss of the steamer Daniel Steinhilber, says Capt. Schoonhoven made no observations the day of the disaster, and was, therefore, ignorant of his position. The ship was dark and foggy and rainy, and it was highly imprudent under all the circumstances to attempt to enter the port of Halifax. It was clearly his duty to halt if unable to verify his position and obtain a pilot. To these circumstances alone can be attributed the loss of a fine ship and the lives of 124 persons.

LONDON, April 26.—A fire in the premises of William Whitely, dealer in general merchandise in West Bourne Grove, destroyed one building and damaged four others. Loss, $250,000.

MADRID, April 27.—By the breaking of a railroad bridge near Ciudad Real, a train of passenger cars was precipitated into the river. Several persons are reported killed; twenty received severe injuries.

REMEDY FOR BUFFALO GNATS.—I see in your paper that farmers in North Mississippi are losing stock from buffalo gnats. If the owner will start the stock in water that will reach one-third up his side for from twenty to thirty minutes, the mule or horse will be relieved at once and permanently cured. This is very simple and may look unreasonable, but it costs nothing to try it, and if it tried, the owner of a gnat-infested stock will be surprised and delighted at the result. I have tried and known it to be tried in many instances and never knew it to fail. I live where gnats are plentiful every spring, and since I learned the remedy (five years ago) there has been no stock lost from gnats bite. This remedy will cure when the stock are swollen so badly that they can hardly walk.—An Arkansas Planter.

EXPOSITION NOTES.—G. M. Torgerson, supervising architect, reports to Chief Superintendent Ogden that 450 men are at work; that in one day last week 148,000 feet of lumber was delivered. The work is progressing so satisfactorily that Mr. Torgerson is confident that the main building will be completed within the time specified.

The building of the Horticultural Hall is advancing with marked satisfaction. Josephus Plenti, its supervising architect, announces that the central arches will be hoisted into position next week.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1884.

Conference	Date	Place
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANBERY.
Idaho	July 25	Idaho
Montana	Aug. 21	St. Mary's
Wyoming	Sept. 1	St. Mary's
Utah	Oct. 1	St. Mary's
Colorado	Nov. 1	St. Mary's
Arizona	Dec. 1	St. Mary's
SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP McFARLANE.
West Texas	Oct. 29	San Antonio
South Texas	Nov. 12	San Antonio
North Texas	Nov. 12	San Antonio
East Texas	Nov. 12	San Antonio
German Mission	Nov. 27	Houston
Texas	Dec. 3	Galveston
THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri	Sept. 17	St. Louis
Western	Sept. 25	St. Louis
Southwest Missouri	Oct. 1	St. Louis
North Carolina	Nov. 26	Wilmington
Mississippi	Dec. 17	St. Louis
Baltimore	March 11	Baltimore
FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP HARGREAVE.
St. Louis	Sept. 21	St. Louis
West Virginia	Oct. 8	Greenup
Arkansas	Nov. 18	Van Buren
Little Rock	Nov. 26	Little Rock
White River	Dec. 3	Batesville
Louisiana	Jan. 8	Minidien
FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KIRK.
Indian Mission	Sept. 17	Paul's Valley
Tennessee	Oct. 8	Nashville
North Alabama	Nov. 26	Talladega
South Carolina	Dec. 17	Charleston
Florida	Jan. 8	Galveston
SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky	Sept. 10	St. Sterling
Louisville	Sept. 17	Louisville
Illinois	Sept. 24	Nashville
North Georgia	Nov. 26	Atlanta
South Georgia	Dec. 17	Savannah
SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KARKEN.
Holston	Oct. 22	Bristol
Virginia	Nov. 12	Lynchburg
North Mississippi	Nov. 26	Aberdeen
Memphis	Dec. 17	Memphis
Alabama	Dec. 17	Opelika

Bishop McFARLANE has charge of the missions in China and Japan.

Bishop KARKEN has charge of the missions in Brazil.

Bishop KIRK has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop WILSON has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop HARGREAVE has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop PARKER has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop GRANBERY has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop McFARLANE has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop KIRK has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop WILSON has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop KARKEN has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop HARGREAVE has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop PARKER has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop GRANBERY has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop McFARLANE has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop KIRK has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop WILSON has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop KARKEN has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop HARGREAVE has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop PARKER has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop GRANBERY has charge of the missions in Mexico.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Wagona District Conference will meet at Lexington, June 20-22. THOS. Y. RAMSEY, P. E.

The Alexandria District Conference will convene at Colfax, August 27, 1884. N. S. CONNELL, P. E.

The Brookhaven District Conference is to be held in Magnolia, June 12-14. J. A. B. JONES, P. E.

The New Orleans District Conference will meet at the St. Charles Avenue Church, New Orleans, May 13, 1884. Pastors will please report the Bishop's collections at the District Conference.

The Pensacola District Conference will meet at Evergreen, Ala., May 29. Opening sermon, May 29, 11 P. M. J. A. B. JONES, P. E.

The Jackson District Conference will be held at Bolton, Miss., June 5-8. JOHN A. ELLIS, P. E.

The Opelousas District Conference will convene at Lake Charles, Thursday evening, May 15, 1884. The preachers of the district will bring up the Bishop's collection, apportionment to each charge the same as last year; also their quarterly Conference record books. Let all the delegates make their arrangements to attend this Centenary session. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside. C. REEVE, P. E.

The Shreveport District Conference will be held at Natchitoches, La., beginning at nine o'clock A. M. on Thursday, June 20, 1884. B. F. ALEXANDER, P. E.

The Greensboro District Conference will meet at Livingston, June 25-27. J. B. SCHOPF, P. E.

The Brandon District Conference will meet at Brandon, June 10-12. F. M. WILLIAMS, P. E.

The Meridian District Conference will be held at Wayneboro, June 25-27. J. A. B. JONES, P. E.

The Greenville District Conference will be held at Greenville, Miss., beginning at 9 o'clock A. M. on Friday before the second Sabbath in May. Bishop McFARLANE will preside. JOHN W. PRICE, P. E.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Providence Camp Meeting will begin on Wednesday, July 30, and continue six days. The camp ground is beautifully located near Rockport, fourteen miles east of Hazlehurst. Preachers generally are invited, and will be provided with transportation from Hazlehurst to camp ground and return. H. P. LEWIS, P. E.

Quarterly Conferences.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Opelousas DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Shreveport DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Greenville DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Brandon DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Meridian DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Waynesboro DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

BRANDON DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Brandon station, Mar. 8, 9
Wentville, at Pleasant Grove, 15 16
Marilla, at Bethel, 22 23
Hillsboro circuit, at Hillsboro, 23 24
Pawnee, at Union, 24 25
Hillsboro circuit, at Grange Hall, 25 26
Forest and Barton, 26 27
Newell, 27 28
Hillsboro circuit, at Hillsboro, 28 29
Lodge circuit, at Pleasant Valley, 29 30
Dexter circuit, at Dexter, 30 31
Forsyth, at Walnut Grove, 31 32
Columbia, at Liberty, 32 33
Bellevue, at Mt. Hope, 33 34
Trenton, at Trenton, 34 35
F. M. WILLIAMS, P. E.

JACKSON DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Clanton, Apr. 5, 6
Sharon, at Lone Pine, 12 13
Jackson, 13 14
Jacksboro, at Brownsboro, 14 15
Canaan, at Shady Grove, 15 16
Madison, at Ford River, 16 17
Trenton, 17 18
Trenton, 18 19
Trenton, 19 20
Trenton, 20 21
Trenton, 21 22
Trenton, 22 23
Trenton, 23 24
Trenton, 24 25
Trenton, 25 26
Trenton, 26 27
Trenton, 27 28
Trenton, 28 29
Trenton, 29 30
Trenton, 30 31
Trenton, 31 32
Trenton, 32 33
Trenton, 33 34
Trenton, 34 35
Trenton, 35 36
Trenton, 36 37
Trenton, 37 38
Trenton, 38 39
Trenton, 39 40
Trenton, 40 41
Trenton, 41 42
Trenton, 42 43
Trenton, 43 44
Trenton, 44 45
Trenton, 45 46
Trenton, 46 47
Trenton, 47 48
Trenton, 48 49
Trenton, 49 50
Trenton, 50 51
Trenton, 51 52
Trenton, 52 53
Trenton, 53 54
Trenton, 54 55
Trenton, 55 56
Trenton, 56 57
Trenton, 57 58
Trenton, 58 59
Trenton, 59 60
Trenton, 60 61
Trenton, 61 62
Trenton, 62 63
Trenton, 63 64
Trenton, 64 65
Trenton, 65 66
Trenton, 66 67
Trenton, 67 68
Trenton, 68 69
Trenton, 69 70
Trenton, 70 71
Trenton, 71 72
Trenton, 72 73
Trenton, 73 74
Trenton, 74 75
Trenton, 75 76
Trenton, 76 77
Trenton, 77 78
Trenton, 78 79
Trenton, 79 80
Trenton, 80 81
Trenton, 81 82
Trenton, 82 83
Trenton, 83 84
Trenton, 84 85
Trenton, 85 86
Trenton, 86 87
Trenton, 87 88
Trenton, 88 89
Trenton, 89 90
Trenton, 90 91
Trenton, 91 92
Trenton, 92 93
Trenton, 93 94
Trenton, 94 95
Trenton, 95 96
Trenton, 96 97
Trenton, 97 98
Trenton, 98 99
Trenton, 99 100
Trenton, 100 101
Trenton, 101 102
Trenton,

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 19.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1449.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. FELIX B. HILL.

REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.

REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

REV. W. P. BARTON.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

BY GONES.

BY H. A. H.

When we went hill-top picking
On the hill side, you and I,
In the golden summer weather,
Along the honey-scented heather,
Nest the blue, just cloud-docked sky,
How we clamored and made merry
When our fingers, purple stained,
Met above the dewy berry.
Fought for it till none remained,
Was there ever such heart-laughter
In these happy summer days?
Our spirits tossed to madness,
With wild, unthinking gladness,
That can never come hereafter
In life's wind-swept wilding ways.
Once again I climb the hill top,
Sink my knees among the fern,
See the yellow tented wheat crop
In the golden sunset burn.
Other boys and girls are roaming
Toward the hill-top bushes by,
Flicking berries with staid fingers
Whilst the dying sunlight lingers,
Just as we did—yours and I.

Come their laughter from the distance
Wafted to me, where I stand
Thinking of a past existence
In my boyhood's fairy land.
Gently stirring comes the twilight,
Blinks a star from out the blue—
Ah! how bounded is my insight,
Here am I—but where are you?

—Kathleen Illustrated Magazine.

Letter from China.

MR. EDITOR: For a few years this young Indian, Dixon Lewis, was connected with the Mississippi Conference, and preached in Lauderdale district to whites and Indians. In 1877 he went West with the Choctaws, and continued to labor among them until the close of his life, which took place in 1887. His last sermon, in September of that year, was from this text in Hebrews: "For here we have no continuing city: but we seek one to come." When his sermon was ended he was seized with typhoid fever, and died very soon. A closing paragraph in a letter written by some one to his Christian friends in Mobile was as follows: "Tell his friends that he died without a struggle, and all is well—with him now." He was not only a zealous preacher of the gospel, but he was an able counsellor of his nation. As a delegate to Washington, he had more influence with the administration than any other man in his nation. This Sunday-school, of Franklin Street Church, Mobile, undertook the support of another Indian, and continued it for two years until he declined continuing his studies.

In 1844, in the Franklin Street Sunday-school, was made the first move in the city to prevent the desecration of the Sabbath. The first onslaught was made on the Sunday market. Mr. McLellan was the principal mover, and was successful.

Speaking of my father, one who knew him well writes thus: "I feel that I ought to render my tribute of admiration for the faithful labors of the Rev. John R. Lambuth—the man who, when a missionary in Mobile in 1826, taught a day-school for his support, labored with his own hands in building the first Methodist Church in the city, taught a class in the Sabbath-school and preached on Sunday. Truly he showed himself a worthy successor of the great apostle to the Gentiles, and with him might thank God that he had not been chargeable to any."

In 1827 my father was married to Miss Kirkpatrick, in Clark county, Ala. He continued his work in Mobile until 1828, when he moved to Clarke county. In 1829 he moved to Green county, Ala.—eight miles from Demopolis—and in 1830 I was born there. My father was still connected with the Alabama Conference, and continued his labors in that Conference until he moved to Mississippi in 1843. I was brought under the conviction of sin when in my eighth year and united with the church. A revival was going on at that time, and I was led by the Holy Spirit to repentance. I was allowed to unite with the church, though I could not rejoice as other Christians around me. Some thought I was too young to join the church; but my father said, "If he desires to join the church, I shall not oppose it." I attended all the means of grace, and though I did not experience a decided change, the fact of my being in the church and with God's people made me feel that it was a great help to me.

In 1849 my father took his family to visit his relatives near the old homestead, near Fountain Head, in Sumner county, Tenn. His father and mother were both gone to the better world. I remember well the old homestead and the old church. A local preacher, by the name of Hardy Coyer, was living at the old homestead. Uncle William Lambuth lived near the old home, and while with the family I formed a strong attachment for one of his sons who is now a preacher in the Louisville Conference, and has been for many years. During my father's visit in Tennessee we attended all the camp meetings for miles around. It was something new to me, and I enjoyed it exceedingly. We had our own canvass tent. At one or more of these camp meetings I remember hearing that wonderful preacher, Fountain E. Pitts. His preaching seemed to be soul-searching, and carried conviction home to the heart. I felt then that he was eminently a man of God. My brother, Alexander Drake—two years older than myself, was powerfully converted at one of the camp meetings; but I could find no peace.

At one camp-meeting, not far from Nashville, we heard one night a sermon by a young man, and the power of the Spirit attended his preaching. During his sermon I saw, as it were, a halo of light appear just above him and rest upon his head. I spoke to my father about it, and was told that the preacher was the Rev. J. B. Walker. It was my privilege for many years to know him while he labored in the Mississippi Conference as a member of that body. He has been and is still a most eminently useful member of the Louisiana Conference.

After a visit of four months in Sumner county, Tenn., we returned to Nashville. I remember well the old toll-bridge which stood a little north of where the Methodist Publishing House now stands. Leaving the penitentiary to the right, we came to a beautiful grove and a fine spring of water—the camping ground for travelers. It was a disagreeable night for camping out, and my father endeavored to procure lodgings for us at one of the neighboring houses on the hill, but was refused, and so we had to make the best of it by camping out. The next day we all visited the penitentiary, and were kindly taken over the whole place by the superintendent, John A. Murrell, the great highway robber and murderer, was a convict; but, being sick, we did not get to see him. There were then about two hundred convicts in the penitentiary, and some of them very young. Some we saw with grey hairs, and some were there for life. It made my young heart sad to see some of them dragging heavy chains with great iron balls attached to them.

On our return South from Nashville we passed through Franklin and Pulaski, Tenn., and Huntsville, Ala. In 1843 we removed from Green county, Ala., to Madison county, Miss.—twelve miles north of Jackson. The comet of 1843 made a great impression upon my mind. At that time my heart yearned to know more of that spiritual life which makes the Christian happy. My father's deep and earnest piety often impressed me, and I wanted to be like him. My brother, too, was an earnest Christian, and we often talked of the day when he was converted and made so happy. When on our way from Tennessee, well do I remember how the young people of one family where we passed the night ridiculed the idea of my brother professing religion. How it stung my heart! and the impression was such that to this day it is still fresh in my mind. I did all I could to defend him, and it was a great source of joy to me that he did not deny his Lord before those mockers of the religion of Jesus. He remained a faithful, consistent Christian until his sixteenth year, when, after a few days' illness, God took him from our midst. No one knew the deep sorrow of my heart on that day. We had never been separated in life, and my heart mourned him in death. He was the eldest in the family, and the first to precede us to the heavenly land. Two years after this our dear mother was taken from us. I felt deeply for my father, for the death of our mother was a heavy affliction to him. Only a few days more and our mother would have entered her new home on earth; but the Lord removed her to brighter mansions above. The cheerful, loving, tender spirit of our mother was gone from us, and we mourned her loss. One loving, tender spirit came to comfort us in this hour, and that was Mrs. Kirkpatrick, our aunt. We loved her for her kind and gentle nature and because she lived so near the cross. She seemed to be in constant communion with God and always had the assurance of the Divine presence. She earnestly tried to lead us to the Lord. As she talked with me about these things, my heart burned within me and I had an earnest desire to know the Lord. I had been a member of the church about eight years, but I felt I was a branch without life. I knew nothing of the joys of the Christian. Thanks be to God! I know now why it was I could not rejoice. The holy life of this dear aunt was a great blessing to me, for her life of constant devotion and praise to God was ever before me. She has gone to that bright home prepared for the people of God to sing the "new song" of redemption.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, March 15, 1884.

A Dolorosa of Doubt.

"Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this."—Ecclesiastes vii, 10.

In the ADVOCATE, of April 3, is an article entitled, "A Word to Preachers—A Centenary Thought," by "J. W. M." I am sorry the brother did not sign his name. Methodist preachers (I presume he is such) should always sign their names to what they write.

He begins his dolorosa of doubt by saying: "I can not help noticing the contrast between the pulpit of to-day and former times." I presume he means "the pulpit of former times." There is certainly a contrast here, and it is to be sincerely hoped that this contrast will continue to deepen, for it would be a dark day for this world of ours if her pulpit should degenerate to the level it occupied two or even one hundred years ago. He then asks: "Do not the facts then and now justify the assertion made by the old lady in New England, the other day, that then 'we had golden sermons in wooden pulpits, and now wooden sermons in golden pulpits'?" I am no apologist for New England. It may be true of New England; but he has certainly read little who does not know that it is not true of the South. It is true that half a century ago we had a number of popular stars glowing with a remarkable brilliancy; but the majority of preachers were men of less than ordinary ability, and the contrast made the few more remarkable.

"J. W. M." proceeds next to deplore the "failure of revivals" under the ministry of to-day, and says: "No faithful observer can doubt the fact that there is a present lack of power in the pulpit." It must be remembered that the whole of this is merely asserted; not an iota of evidence is adduced. Now I have been hearing this cant about "a decline of faith," "the decay of Christianity," "the retrogression of the pulpit" and "a growing demoralization" until I have become nauseated with it. I have heard it from Bob Ingersoll, and now I hear it from a Methodist preacher; I have read it in that organ of filth and infidelity, the San Francisco Chronicle, and now I read it in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Is it true? "Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this." (Ecclesiastes vii, 10.) Eighty-four years ago there were, unless our statisticians are all in error, 200,000,000 Christians in the world; to-day there are more than 450,000,000. Thus we see that in these last eighty-four years the church of God has made a growth unparalleled in any age of human history. St. Paul never witnessed such a growth. Is this an indication of decay and loss of power? And it is a remarkable fact that the bulk of this growth has been accomplished during the last two decades. But, possibly, "J. W. M." may answer that, while there are more Christians now than then, they are not of so sterling a type—they are less religious, etc. The Master said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." We can pass judgment in this matter; there is an easy method of solving this question. The fruits of Christian life may be counted up for both periods. Eighty-four years ago there were but 170 missionaries of the cross in all the world preaching the gospel to the heathen; now there are more than 25,000; then there were only 50,000 converts from heathenism; now there are more than 1,650,000; then the whole Christian world only gave for missionary purposes $250,000 per year; now the Protestant Churches alone give $6,000,000 and the Roman Churches $1,000,000 more every year. The Protestant Churches to-day give twenty-four times more money for missions than they did then.

"J. W. M." and others of his thought, may tell us that the world had a better type of Christian life then than it has to-day; but when we read that twenty-four times more money is given for missions now than then, and when we read that one hundred and forty-seven times more Christian men and women are suffering the toil and privations of a missionary's life now than then, we can afford to smile at the man who sighs for the good old times when the members of the church were better and there was more spirituality.

Is Southern Methodism on a decline? Is the church of God, upon whom rests the ordaining touch and with whom is the pledge of the Eternal God, dying out? Ask Dr. Harrison as he counts up the multiplied thousands of our Methodist Israel for the General Minutes! Ask Dr. Tudor as he is receiving two hundred young converts into one of our churches in St. Louis! Ask Allen on the shores of China, Ransom beyond the equator and Patterson among the mountains of Mexico!

While Bro. "J. W. M." and others of his thought, are mourning over the imaginary gloom about them, let the rest of us, with wide open eyes full of this nineteenth century glory of God, press hopefully on and during this grand Centenary achieve, by the grace of God, for our Methodism its sublimest triumph!

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Pencilings from Kentucky.

MR. EDITOR: I take this occasion to give the ADVOCATE readers some news of general interest from this section. Around the historic city of Lexington many interesting memories associate. Here, only about one and a half miles from the city, is situated the famous Ashland Park, the former residence of that great statesman, Henry Clay. The estate is at present owned by a grandson-in-law of the Kentucky statesman—"the Harry of the West." Scarcely a vestige of the buildings remains intact at the present time; only an old pigeon house and the basement of the spacious residence of Maj. McDowell, the present owner. We wandered over the beautiful grounds in search of the well from which this great man had often slaked his thirst, and lo! it was dried up, and the great iron pump stands in solemn mockery defying our attempts to make it raise a single drop of the crystal liquid. Now it may have been the fault of the pump. So a great many persons, failing to get water from the wells of salvation, blame the well when it is simply the fault of the pump. We spent several hours in this delightful place exulting in the beautiful flowers which grew in the greatest profusion, the oaks and shady cedars, when suddenly we espied a little girl of ten summers out among the flowers with the zephyrs playing in her brown tresses. Some of our company obtained a few posies, which were presented with a charm and sweetness which would have done no discredit to a fairy princess. We afterward ascertained that she was the great-granddaughter of "Harry of the West."

We saw many things here worthy of remark, but must hurry on; have not time to tell of the fine horses ranging from $5,000 to $25,000. We strolled out to the city cemetery, yesterday evening, just in the suburbs of the city. This cemetery is justly said to be one of the finest in the Union. Here, towering high above the city, is the statue or monument to Kentucky's greatest son. It stands upon a massive column of native limestone, or Kentucky marble, which is supported by a square basement, in which is a marble sarcophagus containing the ashes of the man who would "rather be right than be President." On top of the sarcophagus, encircled by a wreath of flowers, graven in the marble is this simple inscription—"Henry Clay." Below are inscribed these words, spoken on retiring from the Senate:

"I can, with unshaken confidence, appeal to the divine Arbitrator for the truth of the declaration, that I have been influenced by no impure purposes, no personal motives, have sought no personal aggrandizement; but that in all my public acts I have had a sole and single eye and a warm, devoted heart directed and dedicated to what, in my best judgment, I believe to be the true interests of my country."

What noble heritage this man has left to his posterity! More enduring than the marble column which marks his resting-place; more precious than gold or titles of nobility! Surely "a good name is better than great riches." Would like to tell you of a stroll to the springs where Daniel Boone camped when he first came to Kentucky—a bubbling spring which bursts up and runs for a rod, and then goes under a ledge of rocks and disappears for a few rods, when it again comes up rippling and sporting over the rocks, and again disappearing beneath the ledges of mighty limestone not to again make its appearance for a mile or more. Would also like to tell of a visit to "Pepper's Distillery"—an infernal machine consuming daily 25,000 pounds of corn, 32,000 pounds of rye and 17,000 pounds of malt. This distillery turns out daily fifty barrels of whisky, which is sent out over the country, dealing death and destruction over the land and converting this Eden of ours into a pandemonium.

Last, but not least, I would speak of our church in Lexington. Bro. Noland, the pastor, is an energetic, whole-souled man, and is building up the church at this place by his godly walk and earnest preaching. Our church here has just been remodelled at an expense of $6,500, and now may be considered one of the finest in the city. Rev. H. C. Morrison, D. D., of Louisville, preached the reopening sermon this morning. It was a grand effort from Matthew xvi, 13-18. This eloquent and learned divine discoursed for an hour on the foundation of the true church, the mission of the church, the influence of the church and the permanence of the church; but space forbids my enlarging on this subject. Our Sunday-school numbers over two hundred members, and is presided over by an able superintendent and a faithful corps of teachers.

Yours with Christian esteem,
WILLIAM O. CHEVILS.
LEXINGTON, KY., April 27, 1884.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

When one that holds communion with the skies
Jibes filled his urn where those pure waters rise,
And once more mingles with us meaner things,
'Tis 'e'en as if an angel stooped his wings,
Immortal fragrance fills the circuit wide,
That tells us whence these treasures are supplied.

—William Cowper.

—Can two lines teach a lesson from above? Yes, one can give a volume, "God is love."—Leigh Richmond.

Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE AND CENTENARY OF METHODISM.

The Centenary Committee for this district, consisting of Rev. S. M. Thomas, P. E., Rev. Thomas J. Newell and R. W. Jones, met in Oxford, April 26. Dr. Sullivan was present by invitation, and took part in the deliberations.

The presiding elder decided to appoint July 3, 5 and 6 as the time for the District Conference at Courtland. The first half hour of Thursday morning's session, after opening exercises, will be devoted to a prayer meeting; sermon at eleven o'clock A. M., by Rev. J. J. Wheat, D. D. The usual Conference business will be transacted on Thursday and Friday, Saturday, or as much of it as may be necessary, will be devoted to centennial services. The committee suggests to the brethren of the district the following special subjects for reflection. These might with propriety be made the subjects for sermons or addresses during the session of the District Conference or at other centennial exercises.

1. Ministerial relations.
2. Extent to which Methodism has been modified by other denominations.
3. Extent to which Methodism has modified other denominations.
4. Revival influence of Methodism.
5. History and polity of Methodism.
6. The Sunday-school in its relation to Methodism.

The committee further suggests that a centennial service be held at each quarterly meeting on the third round.

R. W. JONES.
Sec. Cen. Committee.

To the Ministers of Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: A resolution of the last session of our District Conference made it my duty to give notice of the time of the District Conference, and to urge it as an important duty on your part to make your arrangements in advance to be present, to come in faith and prayer to do all in your power to make the meeting interesting and profitable, and thereby to impart an impetus to the work in the district at this period of the year. Come give your counsel and the spirit of consecration to your brethren; in turn receive quickening and power from their thoughts and enthusiasm; thus will each one be a livelier and more efficient workman in the vineyard of our Lord.

Our roll shows seventeen local ministers in this district. Only four were present at the last session. Is it wrong to inquire where were the other thirteen? Brethren, the District Conference is provided for by the law of the church; the discipline makes you members of it. Will you not regard this call of duty? Do not allow the roll to show you absent from this District Conference this centennial year.

R. W. JONES.
Sec. Dist. Conference.
Annual Meeting.

The Woman's Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will convene in annual session on Thursday, June 5, in Kansas City, Mo. The opening exercises will begin at eight o'clock in the evening of that day, in the Walnut Street Methodist Church. The members of the board, on arriving at the Union Depot, Kansas City, will please call (inside the ladies' waiting room, and near the north door of same, at the little office of Landis & Hollinger's Carriage Line, where, through a committee of young gentlemen, who will be present for the purpose, or through Mr. Landis himself, they will find carriages ready to convey them to their several homes.

MRS. L. R. MOORE, President.
MRS. NATHAN SCARFITT, Cor. Sec., Southwest Mo. Conf. Society.

When one that holds communion with the skies
Jibes filled his urn where those pure waters rise,
And once more mingles with us meaner things,
'Tis 'e'en as if an angel stooped his wings,
Immortal fragrance fills the circuit wide,
That tells us whence these treasures are supplied.

—William Cowper.
—Can two lines teach a lesson from above? Yes, one can give a volume, "God is love."—Leigh Richmond.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1884.

"GO, LAZAR, OX!"

"Go, labor on!"
Who dares stand idle on the harvest plain,
While all around him wake the golden grain,
And to the Master say, "I have no share?"
"Go, work to-day!"

"Go, labor on!"
Claim the high calling angels can not share,
To young and old the gospel gladness bear;
Rejoice the time, its hours so swiftly fly,
The night draws nigh.

"Go, labor on!"
The laborers are few, the field is wide,
New stations must be filled and kindly supplied;
From stations distant, far or near at home,
The call is, "Come!"

"Go, labor on!"
The enemy is watching night and day,
To sow the tares, to snatch the seed away;
While we in sleep our duty have forgot,
He slanders not.

"Go, labor on!"
Away with gloomy doubts and faithless fears!
No room so weak but may do service here;
By faithful agents run our God fulfill His righteous will."

—Sunday Magazine.

Retrospective.

SEVENTH PAPER.

[Pence's Creek was a good appointment on the Wilkinson circuit. Here we had a new and commodious church, and congregations usually large. After preaching there at eleven o'clock A. M., I rode ten miles to fill an appointment in the evening at Fort Adams, where we had but few members.]

There are many things in the round of pastoral work which are pleasant. To visit families where you are made thrice welcome, where visits are appreciated and made profitable to both pastor and people, enjoy for a time social converse, how together at the altar of prayer, and feel that the heart is warmed with Heaven's benedictions resting upon the family, this is, indeed, pleasant. There are other duties, you know, not so pleasant, but equally important, to be performed by the pastor, who would not fail to declare all the counsel of God. I remember that a prominent member of our church was complained of for violating the Sabbath by one of the stewards, who thought the case required attention. As the brother was advanced in life, and had been a member in good standing for many years, kind and generous hearted, whose hospitality I had enjoyed, I confess to a degree of embarrassment in approaching him on the subject of the complaint. This brother had quite a number of servants. He had prepared ground to set out potato slips, a prearranged drought intervened, the season was advancing, and the prospect for a potato crop seemed gloomy. On Saturday night there was a copious rainfall. The brother, thinking it might be the last good chance to arrange for a crop of this valuable esculent, ordered out his servant Sunday morning, and set out the ground already prepared. When I called on him, stating the ground of complaint, he confessed that his faith in the providence of God was not sufficiently strong. Said he: "When I saw it raining the Monday and Tuesday following I felt heartily ashamed at my distrust in Providence; would avoid a similar occurrence if I were with." He was born with, and so far as the writer is informed, made a consistent member afterward.

I have never forgotten a remark Bishop Paine made to a class to be admitted into full connection at an Annual Conference. Said the good but now sainted Bishop: "Remember that he is not the most successful physician who amputates the most limbs, but he who can cure without amputation." How much do our ministers need the "wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove!"

While traveling the Wilkinson circuit a son of our church historian, Rev. Nathan Bangs, D. D., who was also a Methodist preacher, left New York and came South for his health. He visited me at the parsonage, and inquired if he could take a round with me on the circuit; said he had been traveling had been recommended to him to improve his health, and that he would be able to preach occasionally, if I desired it. I gladly accepted his offer and his company. Before leaving he informed my wife that coffee disagreed with him, that he never drank it, and asked for a package of tea to take along, to be used in families with whom we might stop who had no tea. A package was provided. During this round we called at several places where they had no tea, but the good sisters all knew how to make his favorite cup, with but one exception. This one took the package in hand, and, without asking any questions, boiled the entire package in a tea kettle, and sweetened it with molasses; but, strange as it may have seemed to our guests, my New York brother did not relish it. This prodigal made up closed out the tea before completing our round. My Northern brother was a good preacher, an agreeable companion, and left a favorable impression with the people of my charge, with health somewhat improved. This year I remember to have heard my presiding elder, Dr. Whians, describe a circuit which was considered by the preachers as the most objectionable one in the Conference; that one year was as long as any preacher was willing to travel it. That the people generally were unappreciable, and not noted for their liberality and willingness in supporting their preacher.

That there was one appointment on the circuit where they would only tolerate the new preacher to come and fill his first appointment. After one hearing he would get his orders to come no more, that they had their own notions about religion, and did not want to change them. Most (7) preachers would regard them as hopeless cases, but would leave them in the plan of the circuit for his successor to try, and in this way it had been managed for years. Finally Bro. Thomas Owens was assigned to the work. On reaching the most objectionable appointment a large congregation was in attendance, with more curiosity than to be benefited. After surveying his audience, the preacher said to them: "My friends, this circuit has the reputation of being the meanest one in the Mississippi Conference, and this appointment the meanest one on the circuit. As yet I know nothing about you personally; I speak of the reputation you have." "But," said our eccentric brother, "you are matched for once, for the Bishop has sent you the meanest preacher in the Conference, and now it is fit for fat." After this singular introduction of himself he sang and prayed fervently for them, and preached a sermon which caused at times a smile, then a tear to stain their cheeks. During the year he visited among them, endeared himself to them, and at the ensuing Annual Conference reported fifty accessions, the result of a revival at that the most unpromising appointment on the circuit; and, said Dr. Whians, "we had no other preacher who would have suited them so well." Adaptability should characterize the appointments. D. M.

Endorsing "Gilderoy."

MR. EDITOR: I write to most heartily endorse the article of "Gilderoy," in last week's Advocate—"Muzzling God's Oxen"—especially the latter part of it, where he speaks to that large class "who pay nothing to the support of the preacher." Bro. "Gilderoy" is a presiding elder after my own heart, because he helps the stewards, of which I am one. He is doing his duty, and come brother is trying to choke him off. This is a subject of vital importance to the success of our church, one in which it needs educating. You are right, Bro. "Gilderoy," don't be choked off. The preacher in charge, of course, feel a delicacy in urging the matter, the steward, after a rebuff or two, becomes discouraged, and either gives up entirely, lets the poor preacher suffer the loss or pays it himself. But some stewards, like myself, are not able to do this, hence the preacher is generally the one to suffer. Some members, instead of encouraging the steward by paying promptly themselves, and getting others to do the same, insinuate that he is officious, that he renders himself obnoxious, though he may be ever so kind and gentle in manner. The real object frequently is to bluff the steward, and get out of paying at all. These things are very discouraging to the average steward, and runs many off the track. We need many more "Gilderoy's" among both ministers and laymen.

Yours truly, A. STEWARD.
CUMBERVILLE, N.H., Apr. 22, 1884.

The District Conference Journals Before the Louisiana Annual Conference.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read the report of the Annual Conference Committee on District Conference Journals, as published in the Minutes. This report shows the presence and examination of all the Journals, except those of the New Orleans and Opelousas districts, and is certainly a model one, so far as brevity is concerned. All those reviewed are passed upon in a line or two, except the Homer Journal. It was so faulty, it appears, as to demand as much space as all the others put together. It is well enough sometimes to watch the critics. With this view I have tested the points of this criticism by the record itself, with the following result:

1. It is objected that the Journal is not paged. Ours happens to be one gotten up by the Publishing House at Nashville, with running heads on all the pages, giving name, date, etc., which I suppose obviates the necessity of paging, else the types would have done the work.

2. "There is no distinction between ministers in charge of the circuits and the lay element." It can be easily seen from the record who were preachers and who were not. It is not to the taste of some people to have so much of the "reverend" displayed.

3. "At one of the sessions it is not stated whether or not the minutes were approved." It is stated at that very session, however, that "the minutes were read and corrected." Who corrected them? And if the Conference did it, was it necessary for it to approve its own work?

4. "Reference is made to the committee without saying what committee, when there were several committees." The subject of the record in this place is the work of the Committee on Nominations. After stating what were the nominations it goes on to say "the committee recommended that members be added to the various committees (just mentioned,) from time to time, as they appear and take their seats." There is certainly no difficulty in understanding here that the Committee on Nominations is referred to.

5. "It appears that there was (were?) no divine services held at the opening of one of its sessions." This was the afternoon session of the last day, and it may be that, owing to the rush of business at the close, devotional service was omitted at the beginning. So this is no intrinsic fault of the minutes.

6. "There is no mention made as to how the Conference adjourned, whether with or without the benediction." It is stated that the Conference adjourned sine die. As to the form of dismissal, that stands in the same category with the answer to the point above.

So I am glad to be able to say, in behalf of Homer District Conference, that its minutes have not been so badly kept after all, and would advise committees in the future to be sure of game, lest they waste their ammunition.

The Names of God.

BY THE LATE MRS. ELIA M. SADLER HOWELL.

As there are mortal beings on this earth, so have they all a God which they adore. Be it wood or stone or gold, they worship a God. When mortal man was formed the spirit of worship was placed within him. This is a proof of the immortality of the soul. There was a reaching after something higher than this life afforded. Do what they may, this spirit of worship can not be obliterated. It was given to man by him, who is all-wise in his work; to show us we must have an object to worship greater than self, and that object must have a name. Every nation and people have a name for God. Every human being with sound capabilities has a name for God. Be their gods many or few, they each have a name for the superior object they worship.

We find in reading that there is nearly fifty different languages in which the name of God is recognized. How many more there may be we are not able to tell. The name of God in Hebrew is Elohim or Eloh; Chaldean, Elah; Assyrian, Ellah; Syriac and Turkish, Allah; Malay, Allah; Arabic, Allah; language of the Magi, Orsi; Old Egyptian, Tent; American, Tente; Greek, Theos; Modern Egyptian, Tenu; Cretan, Thios; Aelian and Doric, Ios; Latin, Deus; Low Latin, Diox; Celtic and Old Gallic, Din; French, Dieu; Spanish, Dios.

From these names we perceive that all except the Canibals, perhaps, have a God and a name for their God. What over the names and the names may say they can not deny these names, and the name remains to those who love to worship. It is not of mortal power to destroy the name or the doctrine of our God. Therefore let us magnify and exalt the name of our God, for "great and wonderful are his works, and his ways past finding out."

Let all who know this name rejoice, "for the Lord our God he is God," and this is "the secret of God," that he makes known to his dear children through the "Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, 'Abba Father.'" This blessed secret knowledge is ours, and

"Let every kindred, every tribe,
On this terrestrial ball,
To him all majesty ascribe,
And crown him Lord of all."

Letter from Como.

MR. EDITOR: But for "Gilderoy," the great writer, a letter from the North Mississippi Conference would not often be seen. I do not know why so few of our preachers have anything to say; it can not be a want of interest, or because they are not at work, and many of them abundantly blessed of the Lord. This is our second year in Como and Fredonia charge—a delightful field in which to labor. There are so many promising and pleasant features connected with the church here that we scarcely know upon which to dwell. Near the close of last year the good people, determining to have a home for their pastor, went to work and erected a beautiful and convenient parsonage immediately in the rear of the handsome church in Como. Soon after our last session of Conference this parsonage, by both congregations, was not only most bountifully, but tastefully furnished. With I get a fight on my hands to say that we have the best supplied and most beautifully furnished parsonage in the North Mississippi Conference? Everything, from parlor to kitchen, entirely new. The good ladies (Heaven bless them), when superintending this matter, did not say, "We must get the cheapest," but took the Christian view of their work, and determined that nothing should be less attractive or valuable because pertaining to the cause of Christ. Oh! for a parsonage in every charge, saving the preacher great embarrassment and loss of time.

Our Sunday-schools are growing in interest and numbers. The people attend church well, and give good attention to the word preached. The membership of the church is gradually increasing, both in number and spirituality. Nearly all the people in town attend church, and belong to it.

Como is rather a new town, and one of the most desirable in the State, composed of and surrounded by refined, cultivated people. Being so near the great city of Memphis, we can never hope for it to be a large place, yet with the prospect of another railroad, so healthy and beautiful the locality, lots can scarcely be purchased at the rate of two and three hundred dollars per acre. We have but one slushy shop, and that, according to a recent act of the Legislature, will soon close. (Let the time come speedily.—Ed.) Our drug stores kept intoxicating drink, but have, like men, given up the traffic. About the time of their closing out this writer, suffering from a cold, called upon the druggist for a dose of quinine; through a mistake of the druggist he was given enough morphine to have killed six men; soon being made sensible, from the peculiar drunken feeling produced, that he had taken the wrong medicine, a physician was called immediately, who, by working with his patient from ten at night till next morning, saved him. With a desperate effort upon the part of the sleepy-sick man, the slaps, tears, pinches and hot coffee from an anxious wife, and the fast, constant trotting over the floor, which the good doctor gave, death was no doubt ward off. I never felt more sensibly the presence and power of God, and hope my life was spared for a good purpose. Upon what slender threads we are suspended! How important that we be ready! To-day we are well, to-morrow in eternity. When can you come to see us?

(We thank God for our brother's escape. May length of days be his portion, and a great work for the Master.—Ed.)

Hattiesburg.

MR. EDITOR: There are so many persons writing to me to give them more information about this place than that which they have gathered from newspapers that I have concluded to attempt the task through the Advocate.

This town is located on the west side of Leaf river, just below the junction of Leaf and Bony rivers. The country along the rivers is generally flat, and grown up with long-leaved pines. The soil is sandy and clayey, and, though poor, yet it can be made very productive. Not much attention has been given to agriculture or horticulture in this country, but where any special attention has been given to either it has been found to be very profitable. It will produce corn, cotton, oats, peas, sugar cane, tobacco, rice, potatoes, vegetables of different kinds, and, in fact, it can be made to produce most anything that can be raised in any other part of the South. The timber business has been the chief business, but it is not very profitable now. Not much attention is paid to cattle raising, owing to the meagerness of pasture during the winter. I do not suppose that there is any country that excels this in health. The water is very pure and good. Land is selling at from $3 to $5 per acre without the limits of the town. Within town business lots are selling from $30 to $100 each; acre lots from $50 to $75 each. Daily and monthly labor is cheap. No demand for laborers except for good ones. There are four practicing physicians here, three dentists and one druggist. It would be better for persons who wish to come here to live to come and stay a few days before they move. Hard-working, economical Christian people can live most anywhere. "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."—Psalms xxxvii, 3.

I. L. PIERCE.

From the Work.

NEWTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow a short report from Newton circuit. Our second quarterly meeting is just over. Bro. F. M. Williams and Bro. A. B. Nicholson, of Forest and Morton circuit, were present in good spirits, and with the power of the Spirit in preaching. Notwithstanding recent trials from disturbances on the Sunday-school question, we venture the hope that Methodism will come forth with a clean cut, and, forgetting the things behind, will advance to greater success and grander achievements. She will have nothing to fear as long as she sails under her own colors. We thank God for his rich blessings, and hope soon to see every Methodist stand to his place in the struggle for victory over sin and honor to our gracious Lord. We think we risk nothing in venturing the opinion that the people of Newton circuit, with their many friends, will make a good financial showing at Conference. When people have religion, and enjoy it, it is worth something to them, and their money will freely go to the support of such a blessed cause. We are praying for a pentecostal blessing on the circuit, and hope for a glorious feast at the St. Matthew's Camp Ground. Our camp meeting is appointed to embrace the fifth Sunday in August. We hope, Mr. Editor, you will have the time to come, and we how tender you a cordial invitation. We hope neighboring brethren of the ministry will keep this in mind and be ready to answer to a general invitation to all, especially of the district. It begins on Friday before the fifth Sunday.

J. W. ELLISON, P. C.

O Christian! man renewed by grace, dost thou indeed believe that God inhabits thee with his holiness, and makes thee his temple? Be then, then, a temple indeed, a sacred place to him. Exclude evil influences; make not thy Father's house a house of merchandise. Do not every sin a sacrilege. Let all thy thoughts within, like white-robed priests, move round the altar and keep the fire burning. Let thy affections be always a cloud, filling the room and wrapping the priest-like thoughts. Let thy hallowed desires be ever kindling the weary sent with their wings.—Horace Bushnell.

Marriages.

ROGER-HOWELL.—At the Methodist parsonage, in Hattiesburg, Miss., April 8, 1884, by Rev. H. D. Howell, Mr. Walter M. Roger and Miss Ada Lou Howell.

ALDRIDGE-ATTEBURY.—At the residence of the bride's brother, Dr. J. T. Attebury, April 15, 1884, by Rev. H. M. Scroggs, Mr. W. O. Aldridge and Miss Mary S. Attebury, all of Washington county, Miss.

PERINGER-HART.—March 22, 1884, by Rev. A. C. Cowder, Dr. E. Peringer and Miss Alice Hart, both of Camille, La.

PEPPER-WALTON.—In Sardis, Miss., April 22, 1884, by Rev. A. D. Cameron, Capt. Daniel G. Pepper, of Lexington, Miss., to Miss Emma W. Walton, of Sardis, Miss.

PRICE-KIDD.—In the Methodist Church, Aberdeen, Miss., April 23, 1884, by Rev. R. P. Mitchell, Mr. J. C. Price, of Eufaula, Ala., to Miss Callie R. Kidd, of Aberdeen.

REYNOLDS-DAVIDSON.—At the residence of the bride's father, April 24, 1884, by Rev. Thomas J. Tatum, Mr. C. E. Reynolds to Miss Mary E. Davidson, all of Florida parish, La.

RHODES-NUGENT.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. R. J. Nugent, of Bolivar county, Miss., April 18, 1884, by Rev. H. L. Vaughn, Mr. S. T. Rhodes and Miss Naomi Nugent.

Obituaries.

HAYNES-SALLIE E. HAYNES, nee Moore, was born October 17, 1843, and was married to Bro. T. F. Haynes, September 12, 1861. Sister Haynes joined the Methodist Church in the summer before her marriage, and a short time became satisfied of her acceptance with God and that Jesus was her Saviour, which she never in after life doubted for one day. She died December 23, 1883, in full confidence of meeting before the throne her little children that had gone before in infancy and, better still, of seeing that dear Saviour who loved her and had given himself for her.

She had been an invalid for some time before her death, and suffered intense pain almost constantly, but always with that patience and forbearance which exhibits the Christian's faith in Divine support in every hour of need, and that God's grace is sufficient. She said to her husband a short time before she breathed her last that death had no terrors; her only regret was that she must leave him and her children without her care and comfort. She had trusted her Saviour in health, and had followed him from her youth up, and as she was about to cross over to the other shore, she found him a friend that stood closer than a brother. About three months before her death she resigned to the Master her son, Enoch Marvin; and when she had looked on his waxen features for the last time, she said: "Marvin has gone before. I feel that it will not be long till I follow after." And so it was. They have met in the beautiful beyond, where there is no more parting or sorrow nor care, and where all tears are wiped away.

When her gentle spirit was wafted from its tenement of clay—when her noble heart was stilled by the chilling breath of death, her children lost a cherishing, loving mother; her husband, an affectionate and devoted wife; the church, a faithful and useful member; her pastor and family, a warm and fast friend; but the Lord who gave has taken his own unto himself. If earth is poorer, heaven is richer by her going thither. May God comfort the bereaved! D. A. G.

MCCOLLUM-WILLIAM D. McCOLLUM, son of Daniel and Margaret McCollum, was born in North Carolina, October 2, 1854; died, of consumption, July 27, 1883, aged twenty-seven years, nine months and twenty-five days. He was married to Miss Emma Walker, January 25, 1877. He made a very bright profession of religion, in September, 1878, at a meeting conducted by Rev. W. S. Harrison, at Trinity Church, Crawford county, and at the same time united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he lived until he died.

It was not the privilege of the writer of this tribute to know Bro. McCollum but a few months previous to his fatal illness; but ere he was called away we had learned to love him. His sickness was protracted for several months; but he suffered and waited patiently, the child of God, until the end came. He acknowledged the hand of God in his affliction, and believed that it was "in mercy sent." The writer, being his pastor, visited him frequently during his last illness, and enjoyed with him much of the faithful and useful member. It was sad to see one so young, and promising die and leave a companion with two little children; but we submit and feel assured that he is now in the home of the pure and good. Of his readiness and willingness to go we can not doubt; we have too many assurances from his own lips. He talked to his friends of heaven, and rejoiced and praised God in hope of an "abundant entrance." He exhorted sinners to become religious and meet him in heaven. Through grace his end was triumphant. Many faithful and encouraging things might be said of our dear brother who has been so early called away from the thorns and briars of earth to his Eden home above. He leaves a mother, brothers, sisters and a loving companion and two little ones to mourn their loss. May the Lord sanctify and save them all! HESLER R. TUCKER.

BOWMAN-MARY BOWMAN, who departed this life on December 23, 1883, was born in New Andover, England, C. August 23, 1807; joined the Methodist Church at fourteen years of age, and after afterward tried to faithfully perform the church vows. In her eighteenth year she was married to Hester Bowman (her maiden name was Townley), who became a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and preceded her to the better land thirty-six years and three days.

Sister Bowman was a remarkable woman in some respects. Though joining the church at fourteen years of age, she never could testify of a surety that God, for Christ's sake, had pardoned her sins, and did not enjoy the witness of the Spirit until she was sixty-four years old; but during this half century she often expressed that she had faith that the Lord would give her a sure testimony, and in the last twenty years of her life she was able to testify that "Christ had power on earth to forgive sin," and enjoyed all the sweets and comforts of our holy religion. She lived to see every one of her children converted and members of the church. Three of her children, seven remain on earth, but are following after.

What a legacy the consistent lives of our Christian fathers and mothers are! They are better evidences for us than all the reasoning offered by the world. Let us heed the lessons they have given us. May God help us to emulate their virtues! A FRIEND.

ALLEN-WILLIE ANNA LANE, born March 11, 1852, was married to U. Allen, February 11, 1869, and died in Little Rock, Ark., October 22, 1883. I think it was in 1864 that her father, F. A. Lane, moved from Ark. to Calhoun parish, La. He was a prominent and useful member of the Methodist Church. The writer at this time became intimately acquainted with her. A little girl was at that time a member of the church, devotedly pious, and dear lover of the Sabbath-school. The girls of the community were often referred to little Willie Lane as a model of piety and consistency. As she grew older her zeal for the Master's cause grew stronger. After her marriage she was a useful worker in the church—warm Christian heart running out in exhortation and prayer for sinners. But for several years before her death she was the subject of an affliction of body and mind; yet her heart was constantly stayed on Christ.

Nearly all her children preceded her to the land of rest and the home of the saints. The husband, nephews, brothers and sister mourn their loss, and earnestly look for a reunion in the sweet by-and-by. JOHN A. MILLER.

HYDE-MRS. MALINDA P. HYDE was born November 11, 1810, and breathed her last in Cincinnati, Ohio, March 11, 1884. Her home for several years past was in the city of Meridian, and she had gone only recently to the town of Cincinnati, Ala., hoping the change might serve to benefit her failing health. She was the faithful, loving wife of A. J. Hyde, Esq., of this city, who, with her, remained in Meridian, Miss., until her death. Her father, Admiral Hyde, died some years ago. Her mother still lives on the shores of time in feeble old age. She leaves behind three sons and two daughters. She was a member of the Methodist Church in Meridian, and loved the cause of the divine Master, and was doubtless ready when the summons came to go to meet her Lord. As we are informed by a surviving sister, as she needed the eternal shores she told her friends she was ready and willing to go. May the loved ones who remain be comforted in the assurance that their loved one is before tests, rests forever! R. D. SOUTHWORTH.

HOLMBERG-MRS. MARY HOLMBERG, nee Jones, was born in Rockingham county, N. C., March 7, 1820, and died in Hernando, DeSoto county, Miss., January 7, 1884. Her sickness was long and painful. She was married October 23, 1837; joined the Methodist Church in early life, in which she fully lived and fell asleep comforted. Several years of her early life were spent in widowhood, during which time she managed her business with skill and success. She was a devoted woman of a good family. The gospel of Christ was a delight to her. Her concern for her children to be followers of Jesus was intense. May the assurance that their loved one is before tests, rests forever! J. M. WATTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Our advice to consumers of Ivory Soap is, buy a dozen cakes at a time, take off the wrappers, and stand each cake on end in a dry place, for unlike many other soaps, the Ivory improves by age. Test this advice—and you will find the twelve cakes will last as long as thirteen cakes bought singly. This advice may appear against our own interests; on the contrary, our interest and desire is, that the patrons of Ivory Soap shall find it the most desirable and economical soap they can use. Respectfully,

PROCTOR & GAMBLE.

Cincinnati, O.

PHOTOGRAPHS

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WAS HBURNS

Photographic Parlors

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal Hotel and almost directly opposite the City Station.

You are cordially invited to visit us.

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known to art, from the miniature for the pocket to the life size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayons, &c., &c.

Small and faded pictures enlarged and retouched to the likeness of the original preserved.

HENRY HUBBARD & CO.,

Buckeye Bell Foundry.

Bells, Fire Engines, and all kinds of machinery, cast and repaired.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1884.

BROKEN CHORDS.

BY JULIA H. THAYER.

That wondrous instrument, the soul,
In perfect tune to man is given,
But earthly days soon lower the tones,
And scatter the melodies of heaven.
Yet sometimes fits a gentle breath—
Perchance an angel's snowy wing—
Across the hour supremely blest,
To wake to life each silent string.
And fills the aching heaven of thought
With music, oh! so thrilling sweet
The least grooves faint with longings wild,
To hear that melody complete.
Only a measure now and then,
With broken strings, and broken chords,
O'er the perfect, matchless strain.

Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society.

We are indebted to Miss Annie Linfield, of Raymond, Miss., the very efficient and accurate recording secretary for the full daily proceedings of the recent session of the Woman's Missionary Society, but as our notes covered all the salient points we cannot room this week only for the reports of the corresponding secretary and treasurer.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

Again is the opportunity offered to make an annual report of our conference society, and it is my greatest privilege to record some progress and awaken interest. Our little has been overshadowed by a cloud of cloud, and to-day, when we consider the past twelve months, we prepare for the onward march, we find that with few exceptions the opportunity of life is granted to our membership.

Each succeeding year the work was in importance and the field was extended. The harvest invites us to reap and the Spirit urges us to gather the sheaves until our zeal should be unrestrained and every woman would press in to have a part in this work that hastens the kingdom of Christ when the knowledge of the word of the Lord shall cover the earth the waters cover the sea.

In applying for quarterly reports in some instances there was failure to respond, and I was forced to use the report received, though several months which may result in some inaccuracies in my statistics.

Two of our societies seem to be quite quiet, as repeated calls to them bring not even an echo. Our juveniles are altogether irregular in reporting, though I distribute letters, etc., among them. Woodville has been supporting a Bible woman for two years past, has also a society auxiliary to this Conference; but fails to follow constitutional methods in reporting and remitting money. There seems to be some little misunderstanding between me and the society that has all correspondence.

We now number twenty auxiliaries, against sixteen last year. Members, against 307 last year. Subscribers, Woman's Missionary Advocate, 144; Year, 75. This little messenger is widely circulated, and it is my favor. I should be gratified if it could be the instrument of introducing it into every member's family. We ought to be a circulation of at least 200 in our society, whereas we have about 105. I am encouraged to believe we will have a better report in regard to this matter next year. Let us work for it.

I have distributed the annual reports of leaders as they were sent to me, an expression of my gratification in their expression of their reports. Bethesda as auxiliaries, full of zeal and prompt in making their reports. This is a great item, and one that I feel constrained to urge, the importance of making reports when due, as laid down in our by-laws. The example of our auxiliaries in this matter is of emulation.

I take special pleasure in recalling the co-operation of some of our members, Bros. W. B. Lewis, Moun-Weens and Drake, who, true to ancestry, is abundant in labors, having organized three auxiliaries last April; also Dr. Galloway, whom we are pleased to claim as a kinsman to this society. He has helped us since our organization.

Many are interested in our work and are ready to assist, but we are aware of the fact that there are others who do not seem to recognize the call in this woman's work for man, and by their acts refuse to help those women who are timid; for lack of a word of encouragement from their pastor their effort to do together a feeble band is given up and they die. That pastor who does not know what he has lost. We know that the eyes and hearts of those who may be opened. Woman must work, and we have ample proof of the Divine approval in this great work. We rejoice that God does approve, our faith is strengthened and we are encouraged to press on, the difficulties will be removed in time. Let us grow weary in well doing, for we shall reap if we faint not.

The expenses for the society has not exceeded $5. The freight and postage annual reports was $2.75, the balance stationary.

The gracious presence of our beloved president recalls the eventful evening this society was organized. A rainy Saturday evening, during Annual Conference, this good woman, nothing daunted, marshaled a little band of women into the Presbyterian Church, to organize a society. These women were ignorant of what it meant, and hesitated about taking part, but Mrs. Hayes talked so beautifully and pathetically their sympathies were enlisted, and she was successful in getting a beginning, though small and feeble, yet, though some of those members have had almost insuperable barriers to overcome, they still cling to the cause and bless the day the good Spirit sent dear Mrs. Hayes to the Mississippi Conference. Her presence is an inspiration, and we return thanks to our kind Father for permitting this reunion. Long may she live to carry on this blessed work that was begun with a few and now we can number them by the hundreds!

Oh! no; we are not discouraged, but rejoice that we are counted worthy to work in the vineyard of our Lord.

Respectfully,
ANNIE LINFIELD,
Cor. Sec. M. C. S.

APRIL 17, 1884.

ANNUAL REPORT OF TREASURER.

APRIL, 1884.

Brandon.....	$ 7.00
Vicksburg.....	38.00
Hazlehurst.....	7.00
Crystal Springs.....	19.50
Crystal Springs Willing Workers.....	19.85
Raymond.....	42.00
Meridian.....	47.20
Jackson, Miss.....	19.90
Burtonton.....	13.55
Bethesda.....	26.35
Edwards.....	10.50
Fayette.....	12.87
Jackson, La.....	28.50
Moss Point.....	22.85
Clinton.....	10.00
Clinton Juvenile Society.....	15.00
Madison Station.....	27.20
Madison Stn Juvenile Society.....	4.25
Bolton.....	13.00

Total.....$354.52

Forwarded to Mrs. R. Weakley Brown,
General Treasurer.

September 4, 1883.....	$ 92.00
January 19, 1884.....	149.02
March 3, 1884.....	20.67
March 15, 1884.....	75.15
February 10, 1884.....	10.65
Drafts, 12.00 Orders.....	82.00
Registered Letters, May, 1884.....	2.00
To Miss Linfield, August, 1883.....	3.00

Total.....$354.52

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. ANNIE DE MOSS,
Treas. W. M. S. Miss. Conf.

AN APPEAL TO PASTORS.

DEAR BRETHREN: At the session of our Woman's Missionary Society, held in Brandon, Miss., April 17 and 18, 1884, a committee was appointed to prepare an address to the pastors in our bounds. By this means we hope to enlist our prayers and co-operation in this great work of woman for woman. Our hope of success in this endeavor lies, first of all, in the fact that we expect to touch a responsive chord in your heart when we tell you that the ultimate of our work and faith is the world for Christ. We would not know one thought or cherish a feeling that could not always realize the fulfillment of the promise. "Lo! I am with you." Of course the inspiration of this promise has ever strengthened your heart and nerved your arm to do battle for the prisoners of hope. Now that "our hearts burn within us," as our Saviour opens the path of duty so plainly before our eyes, may we not be permitted to walk by your side and tell how he hath loved us, and sent us to read, sing and pray while you preach the word of life? Not more surely were you called to God to stand in the pulpit and proclaim the way of salvation to dying men than does his providence and blessed spirit reveal our place and work. And now, brethren, what we earnestly desire, and hope to gain, is your sympathy and co-operation. Pray for us that our numbers and usefulness may be increased a hundred-fold. This is needed. Effectual doors are opened to our work on every side, and our women are ready to enter in and work for the Master: To-day we feel that we must go, send or die. And to meet the enlarged and ever increasing obligations of this work we must have more of the women enlisted, and this can only be done through you. If we have not your co-operation our work must be cut off in your charge. The helpfulness of our organization in your work you can not afford to lose any more than can the cause of Christ at home and in distant fields. Those pastors who have helped us most have become our enthusiastic supporters because of the reflex influence of this work upon every department of the home work. Our women become intelligent workers, and the spirit of consecration is perceptible wherever they are organized. This training gives them a preparation for thorough and systematic work that enables the pastor to utilize the hitherto undeveloped forces of our women. Learning to work, and how to work, they are ready to work. Then, for the sake of the cause to which you have so nobly given your valuable lives, we pray you help us in your charge. Bring woman's work for woman before your women and help them organize; and then encourage them with your presence, your counsel and your prayers. The financial feature of our organization will be quite as helpful to you as our training in work and faith. The great need of our cause at home and abroad is a more thorough training in giving to the support of our institutions. And the giving of ten cents per month to the missionary cause has proven as helpful in teaching us to give as the one hour each month given to our meetings has been in teaching us to work. During the five years of our organization we have raised ninety thousand dollars, and, if true to our Saviour and ourselves, we must raise sixty thousand dollars during this year. If this is not done we will fall in our duty to God and a lost world. If we succeed it will be but the offering of a mite from each of the many dear women of our beloved church. Shall we succeed and honor Christ by saving ourselves and others? The answer to this question depends largely upon the help, and sympathy we shall receive from you. Praying the blessings of God upon you and yours in this great work we close this appeal and shall watch for developments with prayerful solicitude.

MISS JENNIE PETTY,
MISS ANNIE E. LINFIELD,
MRS. J. W. STEWART,
MRS. J. M. WEENS;
Committee.

"Rationale of Christian Atonement."

BY REV. D. G. W. ELLIS.

In the April number of the Southern Methodist Quarterly Review Dr. Abbey gives his view of the much-discussed doctrine of atonement. The author, as usual, tries to go to the bottom of the question. He states correctly, as I think, the facts in man's condition that made atonement necessary. Disobedience to God is at present man's natural condition. It is an abnormal condition. The means adopted by God in the work of human salvation seek the restoration of man to his normal condition of loving obedience. All right as far as it goes; but the author failed to stress the doctrine of satisfaction to the claims of the violated law.

When he says "cure this one thing (disobedience) and the world is well," what is to be done with the countless acts of disobedience prior to the cure? Sins vast in number and heinous in character are committed by all men (excepting only a few converted in childhood) before they are restored to a state of loving obedience.

Every one of these sins expose to the infliction of the penalty of the violated law; hence must be pardoned or otherwise. The loving obedient child of God will of necessity suffer the full demands of his past sins notwithstanding his cure. Now I do not say that Dr. Abbey's theory does not make provision for pardon, but that it fails to stress the propitiatory and vicarious nature of the atonement. It fails to show how God can be just, and at the same time the justifier of the ungodly. We need deliverance from the guilt of sin as well as from its power and dominion. The atonement of it meets the necessities of our situation must make provision for pardon, not by waiving the claims of justice, or lowering the demands of law; but in harmony with both. The reading of Dr. Abbey's able article makes the impression that the only thing God had in view in the work of atonement was a manifestation of his infinite goodness to his rebellious creatures in a sacrifice of himself as the God-man, in which he voluntarily submitted to pain, shame and death. This it is thought will appeal so strongly to the gratitude of the sinner that it will, when properly apprehended, turn the current of his affections and unite him in holy obedience to God. That this is the grand end of the atonement is not denied, but that the only thing needed to secure this end is proof of the infinite benevolence of God afforded in the fact of redemption is denied. Of this I will have more to say further along.

If Dr. Abbey were asked, What made the atonement necessary? And he should answer to make proof of the infinite benevolence of God, this and nothing more, he would give a partial and imperfect answer to the question. The scheme of redemption contemplates satisfaction to law. It is a governmental expedient made necessary by the exigencies of man's situation. Dr. Abbey thinks that "satisfaction to justice is not a first-rate expression." Perhaps not, but he failed to suggest a better one to take its place.

"Justice," continues the doctor, "is a quality or principle, not a person, and supposes dealings between two or more individual persons, whose rights or interests counterbalance with each other." It is but justice to say that the doctor is here trying to guard against the notion of the Father and the Son entering into negotiations by which the Son covenanted to do certain things by way of satisfaction for sin, and the Father agreed to accept such vicarious suffering as satisfactory. No such contract can be shown to have taken place. The Father and Son are One, One in essence, One in interest. One in all the infinite perfections that make up the Godhead. There can, by possibility, be no dissimilarity of views between the persons of the Godhead to serve as the basis of a contract. The doctor is right in what he says in opposition to this mythical covenant. But if he means the atonement was in no sense a "satisfaction to justice," I pause, and wait for further proof. I have pointed out what appears to me a defect in the ground or reason of the atonement as presented in the doctor's able article—a defect of omission, or negative defect—and now I must be allowed to direct attention to another thing. The grand end to be attained by the atonement, as correctly stated by Dr. Abbey, is the restoration of the revolted subjects of God's moral government, in holy, loving obedience to himself. He shows, first, that a command enjoining obedience, although shown to be right, is not sufficient; secondly, that a revelation of the loveliness of the divine character falls to engage man's affections; and thirdly, that mere beneficence is not a sufficient motive to obedience. God, as Christ, suffering, bleeding, dying, is the thing, and the only thing, that can melt down the hardened sinner and call forth his affections. He writes as if he thought nothing more was needed in order to the work of conversion than a clear apprehension of this fact. Or as if he thought conversion was nothing more than a rational conviction of this great fact. Now I do not charge Dr. Abbey with teaching the heresy of natural conversion, but that his article is capable of that construction. His error here, as before, is one of defects. He is not particular to explain the process of conversion. The fact is, no unregenerate man ever did, or even can, love God, however deeply convinced of the fact of atonement. "The carnal mind is enmity against God, not subject to the law, neither can be." In the process of personal salvation we have laid down in Scripture: First, the convicting spirit; second, as the result of conviction, repentance; thirdly, faith on Christ; fourthly, pardon and regeneration; and not until this last work is accomplished does the soul go out in loving obedience to God.

Obedience, affectionate obedience, is the fruit of conversion. The penitent living in view the sufferings of Christ in his behalf, is at the same time painfully conscious of his lack of love for him. Indeed this consciousness of estrangement from God is the source of his trouble and sorrow. He knows and feels that he ought to love God in view of what he has done and suffered for him, yet he knows he does not and feels that he can not. To the converted man the sufferings of the God-man appeal with intense force, but the unregenerate and impenitent while acknowledging the facts of redemption, are not sensibly impressed by them. Upon the whole, Dr. Abbey's contribution shows profound penetration into the mysteries of this great subject. I am glad he wrote that article; for its real excellencies far outweigh the defects I have felt constrained to notice. To call attention to defects is a very ungracious and thankless service, but I throw myself upon the known magnanimity and generosity of my brother. It may be I have misconstrued, or misunderstood, some of Bro. Abbey's positions, and if so, I will be glad to be corrected.

DEALD, Miss., April 17, 1884.

If the belief in God be lost to humanity, we shall lose not only the direct, the calculable effects on individual souls of the belief in a Divine searcher of hearts, but also the indirect and universal uplifting influence on society of the presence of men who have experienced such efforts and formed their moral standard accordingly. Is it too much to argue that the result will be a depreciation of the common ideal standard, and a consequently still further depression of the practical level of personal virtue?—Frances Power Cobbe.

Religious Intelligence.

The Episcopal Council have finally agreed to pray for the "United States," instead of the ruler, the word "nation" being rejected. The Committee on Canon reported a resolution that a joint committee be appointed, to consist of three Bishops, three clergymen and three laymen, to consider the duty of the church in relation to the whole subject of marriage, including impediments to the contract thereof, the manner of its solemnization, and the conditions of dissolution, and to report to the next general convention.

One of our missionaries in Japan has secured the translation of Prof. Fisher's article on "The Christian Religion," published originally in The North American Review, and it is to be issued by a native Japanese Publishing Society. A Japanese scholar, not a Christian, into whose hands the translation was placed for correction, expressed himself as greatly pleased with it, and said it was the best defense of Christianity that had appeared in Japan.

According to the London Christian, the Bishop of Gibraltar has refused to sanction the erection of an English church at Monaco, the notorious gaming town, on the ground that its effect would be to give an appearance of respectability to the place which would tend to draw English families to this nest of temptation and vice, and so by exposing them to its dangers, rather hinder godliness than promote it.

The temperance reform is making rapid headway in Germany. It is enlisted the earnest co-operation of many of the most influential men—physicians, ministers, lawyers, judges, State attorneys and men from all stations in life.

For the first time in two hundred years Protestant services, with the Lord's Supper, have been held at Friedland, in Bohemia. Regular services are to be held there hereafter.

Three petitions, with nearly two hundred thousand signatures, in favor of the Sunday closing of drinking saloons in England, were presented to the House of Lords on a single day in the month of July.

Towards the erection of a German Evangelical Church in Jerusalem, the congregations in the Province of Nassau have contributed $5,000.

The Indian Witness says: "Evidence multiply every year that the Holy Spirit is moving upon the great deep of Hindu and Mohammedan thought in India."

"Fear God, and take your own part," is the motto proposed for the State seal of Dakota.

Our Young People.

BLESSED DREAMS.

BY FLORENCE PRUCE.

The sunset's smile had left the sky,
The moon rose calm and fair,
As low a little maiden knelt
To breathe her nightly prayer,
And thus her brief petition rose,
In simple words and few—
"Dear Lord, please send us blessed dreams,
And let them all come true."
Ah, little maiden kneeling there,
Beside the sunset star,
What need have we of other prayer?
Than yours, so sweet and wise?
Henceforth I breathe no studied plea,
But low and pray with you—
"Dear Lord, please send us blessed dreams,
And let them all come true."
—The Little Girl.

Pull off Your Shoes and Let's Run a Race.

I am so glad you have opened a column in the ADVOCATE for letters from the little folks. The children ought to have a part and a place in every family paper; and they ought to have a chance to talk now and then at home, in the family, even when company is present. Of course the little fellows would be modest and polite in expressing their thoughts in company. They should not be allowed to monopolize all the time, but if an idea hits a boy a good square he ought to be allowed to fire it off. To cultivate children without suppressing or oppressing them is the real secret of successful family government. When you and I were boys the old folks wanted to do all the talking and the boys had to do all the "hushing." I don't know how you were, but I used to have thoughts when I was a boy that would swell up in me till I felt like I would pop open if I did not get a chance to have my say. If I started to say it some one would say, "Hush, boys must be seen and not heard." That nearly killed me. It was so roughly and unkindly said. The conversation would have been ten times more interesting to me, if I had been permitted to put in a paragraph once in a while. Things have changed, and they are yet changing since that time, and the danger now is, that we will go too far the other way and let the children do all the talking and the old folks all the "hushing." You must watch this point.

But the long, cold, dreary winter has gone, and the bright, glad spring-time has come, and the boys can pull off their coats, and shoes, and run and jump and romp and play out of doors as much as they please. They can paddle in the spring branch and make frog houses in the sand, and have good times generally. They play deer, leap-frog, base ball, shinny and all of that. It is one of the "bestest" things in the world to be a boy, a real live boy with a good glad heart inside of you. It cramps a boy to stay in the house and wear a coat and clumsy shoes that depress his spirits and destroy his freedom. When he goes to play or to run a race, he wants to lay aside those "weights" and "clogs" that he may be perfectly free. Now, anger, wrath, hatred, envy and evil passions, and tempers, are the "clogs" or "weights" that hinder us in the heavenly race. We are not free while we are subject to any sin. Sin holds us down and holds us back in all that is good and true and noble in this life, and it utterly ruins us in the world to come. We must, by the help of Christ, put off sin, lay aside all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and be free indeed if we want to win the heavenly prize. The only perfectly free man in the world is the man who is free from sin. Christ came into the world to set us free from sin, and he will do it if we trust him.

GULDEROY.

Mr. Editor: As I have seen no communication in your valuable paper from the little boys in and around Starkville, I thought I would write you a letter to see how my name looks in print. Papa has been a subscriber to your inestimable paper from the time it was first created up to the present day, and I don't see how we could possibly do without it. When we miss a copy it is certainly a disappointment to us all. Bro. Oakley is our pastor, and we can truthfully say that he is dearly loved by all who know him. He is not only a good preacher, but a high-toned Christian gentleman. We would be highly delighted if our Bishops would send us Bro. Oakley's first, last and all the time. Bro. Wier is our presiding elder, and as a man noted for purity of heart and Christian influences, he stands second to none. For fear my letter will find its way to the waste-basket, I will close by answering some questions propounded in last week's ADVOCATE. Willie H. Dove wants to know what chapter in Psalms contain two verses alike. It is found in Psalms xlii, 7, 11. Answer to Joseph E. Norwood's question is found in Ezekiel xlii, 2. By turning to 1 Kings vii, 40, we find the answer to Milton C. Holt's question. I will ask a question. In what part of the Bible will these words be found: Is there any taste in the white of an egg? With many bright wishes for yourself and ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your true little friend,

JOHNNIE CARR NIXON,
Starkville, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I have been wanting to write to your paper a long time. My father takes the ADVOCATE, and I love to read it very much, especially the children's department. I think Grandpa Jones pieces to the boys are splendid, and I do hope they will follow his advice, and then we will have good young men. In our school there are boys that chew tobacco and soil the floor with their spit, and give us girls a great deal of trouble. I am going to give them some of his pieces to read. I regret to say that I am not going to Sabbath-school. There is no school near us. I spent some time this last winter in Natchez. I attended while there, and enjoyed myself very much. Bro. Drake is our pastor. We all love him very much, and he is indeed the children's friend. When he comes to our house he always talks to me about Jesus, and sings some beautiful song with me before he leaves. Rosa Mixer, the answer to your question is Nehemiah, and it is found in Dan. iv, 25. I think the old gentlemen had a rough time of it. I will close by asking a question: Whom did the king command to ride his mule to Gilboa? With many kind wishes for the success of the ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your true friend,
NONA M. WILLIAMS,
Humboldt, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I read a great many letters written to the ADVOCATE by the children, but have never seen one from this county. I am a little boy 14 years old. I love to read the ADVOCATE, especially the young people's letters. I joined the Methodist Church; last August was a year ago. I will answer some of the questions by Mary-Carradine: They told Joseph to Potiphar, Gen. xxxvii, 36; the eldest son of Isaac was Esau, Gen. xxvii, 1; Laban was the father-in-law of Jacob, Gen. xxix, 6; in the first word in the twelfth chapter of Luke; Absalom was the third son of David, 1 Samuel iii, 3; Sarah was the grandmother of Jacob and Esau, Gen. xxi, 2; Colossians is the twelfth book in the New Testament. I will ask a question: What king sent messengers to David about cedar trees and carpenters and masons, and they built David a house?
JESSE T. CALHOUN,
Mt. Olive, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: As I see so many little children writing letters to your valuable paper, I thought I would write one. I am a little girl ten years old, and go to school to the Rev. J. V. Penn. He is a very good teacher. I like him very much. We have preaching twice a month. Mr. Penn preaches. I am a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. I joined last summer. Papa takes the ADVOCATE, and I take much interest in reading it, especially the children's column. I will now answer Lizzie Norwood's question: "What river in the United States flows through the corner of four States?" It is the Tennessee. I will now close, hoping to see my letter in the ADVOCATE.
I remain,
Your little friend,
HANNAH B. SQUIN.

Mr. Editor: As I have never seen any letters from this portion of the world, I thought I would write one. Papa takes your valuable paper, and I like to read the young folk's column very much. I am a farmer's daughter. I live six miles west of Hernando. We have no Sabbath-school now, but I hope we will have when the weather moderates. Our pastor boards with us. His name is Rev. M. M. Dunn. As this is my first letter, I will close by asking, Where in the Old Testament is the word "endureth" mentioned in every verse of one chapter? I wish you and the ADVOCATE much success.
Your little friend,
ADDIE NAIL,
Hernando, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I like to read the children's column very much indeed. My papa is a minister, and a member of the Louisiana Conference. I guess you know him. This is our second year here, and I like the place very well, but we are now in the midst of a distressing overflow. I was ten years old last January, and this is my first letter for publication in the ADVOCATE. In answer to Minnie Hamilton's question, "Who is greater than Solomon?" I reply Jesus. Now, with your permission, I will ask one: What king laid an iron bedstead? For fear of that yawning waste-basket, I will close with best wishes. I am,
Your little friend,
OCKIE WYNN,
Oak Ridge, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: Minnie takes the ADVOCATE, and I see so many letters from the little folks that I thought perhaps you would find room for mine too, as I wanted to ask our little friends a question. Where in the Bible will you find the word "eyebrows"? I will now answer two questions: Samson caught three hundred foxes. Samson's riddle is found in Judges xiv.
HENRY M. SCOTT,
Winnsboro, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: I am very much interested in your paper. So I will write a letter to the children's column. I am a little girl ten years old. We have a nice Sunday-school. My papa is our superintendent. I rank third in the Bible class. I will answer Wiley C. Oakley's question: "Dead dog" is found in 1 Samuel xxiv, 14.
FLORENCE KINOKEY,
Bogard, Louisiana.

Call them in—the poor the wretched,
Who stained and reeked from the fold;
Peace and pardon freely offer;
Can you weigh their worth with gold?
Call them in—the weak, the weary,
Laden with the doom of sin;
Bid them come and rest in Jesus;
He is waiting—call them in.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.
CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1884.

Matthew Arnold defines religion as "morally touched with emotion." A conception so low and narrow of the Christian system is altogether becoming a snarling censor, but unworthy of one who affects omniscience on all subjects. It is the essence of all true morality, and inspires emotion, but it is infinitely more.

We judge from the following, an extract from a letter signed by the vice-president and secretary of the British Evangelical Alliance, and published in the Loudon Times, under date of Copenhagen, April 3, that there is a possibility of the General Conference yet holding a session, despite the ecclesiastical snobbery of the Lutheran State Church of Sweden:

We were deputed by the London Council of the Alliance to visit Denmark, with a view to the Conference being held in the city of Copenhagen. We have now the pleasure to announce this after conferring with friends of the society and other leading Christians in this country. It has this day been decided to hold the eighth General Conference of the Evangelical Alliance in the Danish capital, from August 24 to 31 next. In Sweden and Norway, as well as in Denmark itself, much interest has been awakened in regard to the proposal, and a large number of Scandinavian Christians will embrace this the first opportunity of meeting in one of their own countries their fellow-Christians from all nations. Influential representatives from the various European and other branches of the Alliance, some forty delegates from the United States of America, and a still larger number of British visitors will, it is expected, attend the gathering.

Bishop Wilson has recently spent two weeks in South Carolina, dedicated three churches and held the Charleston District Conference. He preached in Trinity Church, Charleston, on Centenary day, and raised a thousand dollars for connectional objects. Centenary services were held in the other two churches the same, on which the Southern Christian Advocate remarks:

Taking into account both local and connectional purposes, and including subscriptions made for the Wofford endowment at the inception of the Centenary movement, Charleston's contribution up to date may be put down at between $8,000 and $9,000. And the work, with the blessing of God, is to be pressed till the end of the year.

Happening to be in a Ohio town on the occasion of a Methodist presiding elder's silver wedding, Joseph Cook, the Boston lecturer, was invited to be present and make a speech. In the course of his remarks he paid this tribute to the power and influence of Methodism: "If America is ever ruined the Methodist Church will be to blame. For she is the strongest and most influential church on the continent of America to-day, and can do more to turn back the tide of ruin than any other church. Among her communicants, in her pulpits and at the head of her schools, she has some of the finest minds. We used to think the Methodist adapted to only frontier and missionary work. But the frontier of our country to-day seems to center in our large cities, where more missionary work is needed than anywhere else, and where our greatest peril is; and the Methodist Church, adapted to the city as well as the country, and every kind of work, can do much to solve the problem—how to save America!"

We will publish next week the admirable programme of the Homer District Centenary Committee. The third resolution reads as follows: "That a committee be appointed in each church to distribute Centenary literature, solicit subscriptions to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and to assist the pastor in Centenary operations." Much every way depends upon the circulation of our periodical and tract literature. An industrious committee in each pastoral charge soliciting subscriptions for the ADVOCATE during the next few weeks will make the largest contribution to a successful Centenary than any other like number in the congregation. It is the sincerest folly to talk to uninformed, unread people about our centennial glory and gratitude. They must read the Advocates, learn of what has been done and what others are doing, and catch the spirit of the year, or they will give nothing, and stand amazed at the foolish enthusiasm of the pastor. Let such a committee be appointed in every congregation. A church paper in every family will assure the success of our Centenary.

Church Loyalty.

"It makes no difference what church you belong to, so the heart is right." How often has that ancient platitude been repeated as expressive of large Christian charity! It is a proclamation of broad evangelical liberality as opposed to narrow sectarianism. But we hesitate not to say that the oft-quoted words are mere sound and a snare. It makes all the difference what church you belong to. We do not inveigh against evangelical denominations that stress the great doctrines of justification by faith and the witness of the Spirit. In the providence of God, by their different politics and methods, they have wrought mightily to the pulling down of strongholds and the up-building of the Redeemer's kingdom. May a perpetual Pentecost abide upon their pulpits and pews, and their trophies multiply with the revolving years! Yet we claim that a difference in church relation is important, and may be vital. It involves motive, intelligence and conviction—the three things that differentiate character.

The expression above quoted indicates indifference to the denominational tie. And such indifference is horn either of ignorance or irreligion. Making open confession of Christ and assuming membership in his church involve responsibility, and presuppose solemn purpose and conscientious conviction. It is not a mere pastime or religious dress-parade, to be indulged for self-gratification or public inspection. If sincere, and the inspiration of earnest prayer, it is a clear, full and final decision for Christ—a soul seeking fellowship with the people of God to help him work out his salvation. What church he joins, therefore, is of infinite concern, because involving eternal interests. To be indifferent about the matter must evidence one of two things—either ignorance of the Bible as a system of truth or a vitiated motive which is gross irreligion.

A sincere church membership, therefore, is the expression of an intelligent acquaintance with the Scriptures, and a holy purpose to be spiritually benefited. A certain church is joined because her system of doctrine is approved and her spirit and zeal most promotive of personal piety. Those who are affected by social considerations, or who want large liberty in matters of worldly pleasure, are controlled by a vitiated and vicious motive, dishonoring to God and perilous to the soul. As our purpose should be abundant and efficient labor for the Lord and personal meetness for heaven, we must seek the church where the spiritual life is most sacredly conserved, and whose doctrines and polity best express the word and providence of God.

Now, when such convictions are formed, and the relation has been entered into, loyalty thereto is imperatively demanded. Change can not readily be effected without spiritual hurt. And they who have a zeal for proselytism may well reflect if they are not imperiling rather than saving souls. They are disturbing convictions, poisoning motives and loosing ties, that will send the soul adrift without compass or anchor. We have a righteous contempt for such ecclesiastical marauders and the commiseration of idleness for the weaklings who are fatally ensnared.

Nothing operates so sadly and universally against denominational loyalty as "society" so-called. It breaks up the associations of years, and pours contempt upon the convictions of a lifetime. Moving from one community to another, where the old church is weak in membership, and unpretentious in social display, the more "fashionable" is sought and entered, not for Christ's sake, but to serve the ends of worldly ambition. Methodism has carried the gospel to thousands in their poverty, nursed them into respectability, and helped them along the pathway of both spiritual and social achievement, only to be contemned and forsaken in a spirit of worldly compromise. We know some congregations largely made up of purchased persons found in the wilderness by Methodist itinerants.

We do not believe that all can be alike religious in any church. If so convinced, we would wish God-speed to every young person baptized and confirmed. We therefore appeal to Methodists to be loyal to their church, and teach their children the good old way our fathers trod.

Since their signal failure to get relief by special legislation in Congress, the large holders of surplus whiskey are hurrying it to Atlantic ports for foreign shipment. They are seeking to escape the payment of honest taxes. The whiskey business is becoming more and more odious in public estimation, and the advance of a healthy prohibition sentiment more positive and apparent.

Contaminated Money.

The Louisville Christian Observer has an editorial article on this subject, suggested by the widely published incident in Philadelphia, some weeks ago, of the Presbyterian Hospital managers refusing the proceeds of a ball given for their benefit. This fact in the case above, we believe, entirely justifies the action of the managers. Announcement was made in advance—that a ball would be given for the specific purpose. By that publication the hospital would become the beneficiary of a ball. The sinful dance would be patronized in order to serve a noble charity. Now, there is a principle involved which may well arrest prayerful attention in these days of money raising for churches by extraordinary means. It is stated explicitly by Paul in these words: "Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat." * * * But if any say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice to idols, eat not."

The principle we want to emphasize for guidance in all such cases is this: Money gained by wrong-doing, with an avowed purpose of devoting it to a Christian enterprise, can not be received. That dignifies the methods employed, condones the wrong, sets aside the divine statute against doing evil that good may come, and makes Christianity at once the patron and beneficiary of sin. We may not inquire how voluntary offerings were made. It is not for us to discover whether every dollar cast into the Lord's treasury was ill-gotten or honestly earned. Indeed, we may know that a certain contribution was the fruit of an illegitimate and wicked business, and yet willingly accept it. But when the person proposes to ply his sinful trade for the purpose of helping the church, both his proposition and offering must be declined. In the one case the church has no responsibility in the methods used to secure the amount. But if the offer is accepted, and the ball given, or the saloon opened, or the lottery ticket purchased, or the race-course stakes put up, the church approves the act and condones the shameful sin.

Now, with that principle clearly in mind, we have a rule for determining the rightness or wrongness of certain things enacted at church "fairs" and affairs. Money raised at raffish should be refused. It is gambling, and gambling for the church at a "fair" is as wicked as playing at faro or handling paste-board kings in the back room of a low dogger. Dancing for the church at twenty-five cents a set is just as wrong as swinging in lustful embrace, through the mazes of the German in any ordinary or extraordinary ball-room. The end proposed does not purify the virtue of an act wrong in itself. We must be quite sure that all things done at church suppers, fairs, socials or entertainments are righteous altogether, or the offering is contaminated, the cause made to suffer, and Christ put to an open shame.

Apostolic Blows and Knocks.

In free Protestant England, and in the latter half of the nineteenth century, church bigotry displays occasionally an intolerance worthy of the days of the Inquisition. The last instance we have noticed is the subject of a ringing editorial in the Loudon Watchman, that able and scholarly organ of English Methodism. Two boys, scholars in the National School, at Speldhurst, near Tunbridge Wells, were flogged in presence of the entire school by the master for having, on the previous Sunday, March 2, attended service in a dissenting chapel in the village. This case was so scandalous as to occasion Parliamentary inquiry and explanation. And the beating was done in the presence of the clergyman and his sister-in-law, who exacted a promise of the entire school by holding up their hands not to repeat the offense. The Watchman makes the point and sharpens it, that such outrages are the logical expression of doctrines championed by a school of bigots in the Established Church. And in support of the charge quotes largely from a work by the Rev. Frederic Aubert Gace, vicar of Great Barling, Essex. He taught that it was a sin to enter dissenting "meeting houses," that dissenters were gross heretics, and their worship wicked and idolatrous. The Speldhurst flogging is the logic of such doctrine. And, if the conditions were as favorable, like intolerance would be enacted on this side the sea. What warnings and maintenance of these societies, but, anyhow, let the attempt be made, and it will be found quite practicable, and certainly very helpful to the missionary cause. On page 11 of the Minutes will be found all information necessary for starting a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The logic of such narrow bigotry is the Speldhurst scandal. We believe most entirely in denominational loyalty, but ecclesiastical tyranny is a child of the pit. The one is fidelity to convictions; the other an aggressive intolerance, whose breath is "threatenings and slaughter." The one our Lord approves; the other the devil applauds.

The Northern Methodist General Conference.

This body met in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, Philadelphia, on Thursday of last week. All the Bishops were present, including the venerable senior Bishop Simpson, who has been critically ill, and 389 of the 417 delegates. Dr. D. S. Monroe, of the Central Pennsylvania Conference, was elected secretary. It is an interesting coincidence that he and Dr. John S. Martin, secretary of the Southern Methodist General Conference, were for several years fellow-members of the old Baltimore Conference, and in the boyhood of the former the latter was his pastor. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. Dr. A. Longacs and Gov. Patterson, who is the son of a Methodist preacher. To these cordial words of welcome felicitous responses were made by Bishop Bowman and Gen. Clinton B. Fisk. The Bible used in the religious service at the opening of Conference formerly belonged to John Wesley, and was the one used by him in his study for private devotion and pulpit preparation. It became the property of Joseph Benson, the commentator, and through his son passed into the hands of S. D. Waddy, M. P., of London, England, who presented it to the Methodist Episcopal Church as "a token of an English Methodist's love." Among the notable men present are Ram Chandre Bose, the native lay delegate from the South India Conference, and Rev. William Taylor, the founder of "free missions" in India and South America. The Bishops' address was read by Bishop Harris. It gave the net numerical increase of the church during the quadrennium as 69,232—the accessions were 158,587. There are ten theological seminaries, 45 colleges, 66 classical institutions and 8 female colleges. The Bishops referred to the laxity of the laws of divorce and recommended stringent regulations with regard to solemnizing the marriage of divorced persons. They suggested the election of additional Bishops, but did not indicate the number.

Much discussion was had on the first two days in an endeavor to improve the plan for the organization of General Conference committees. But at last the old order, substantially, was adopted. Up to the hour of our going to press but little had been done beyond a mere organization. The Revs. Robert Newton Young and Sylvester Whitehead, fraternal delegates from the British Wesleyan Conference, arrived on Friday and were introduced. Their formal addresses and those of other fraternal delegates will probably be delivered on stated evenings during this week.

From Bastrop, La.

It would be just right for every station and every appointment of every circuit in our Conference to have in active operation a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and 1884 is the very year in which to start our women into this grand work. Statistical Report No. 1, as published in our Minutes, discloses the fact that there were last year only fourteen charges where these organizations were at work. The names of the charges and the amounts raised are as follows: Carondelet Street, $371 50; Trenton circuit, $206 70; Sireveport, $173; Mansfield, $150; Mooringsport circuit, $107 95; St. Charles Avenue, $100; Pellety Street, $87 65; Louisiana Avenue, $75; Minute, $24 10; Baton Rouge, $20 20; Tulip circuit, $19 20; Pleasant Hill circuit, $13; Alexandria and Pineville, $8 35; Maury circuit, $8; total, $1 360 05.

These fourteen charges reporting $1 360 05 as raised by the women for foreign missions, how large a sum might be raised if this year, in every station and in every appointment of every circuit in our Conference, there should be put into operation a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society? On circuits and in country places there is some difficulty attending the organization and maintenance of these societies, but, anyhow, let the attempt be made, and it will be found quite practicable, and certainly very helpful to the missionary cause. On page 11 of the Minutes will be found all information necessary for starting a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

APRIL 24, 1884.

"The Magnetic Rock."

In the May number of the Pulpit Treasury Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, contributes an able and stirring sermon on "Demas, the Deceiver." Its careful reading would excite alarm and awaken reform in many a sluggish and backsliding church member. So striking and timely are some passages that we gladly give them editorial space and endorsement. Without wishing to divert attention from the leading thought we can but express surprise that a son of John Calvin should avow the doctrine of the last few sentences quoted below. But they are scriptural and a dread warning to the backslider:

Do you remember the reading in your childhood, in that favorite volume of oriental stories, about Sinbad's voyage into the Indian ocean? Do you remember that magnetic rock that rose from the surface, surrounded by a placid and glassy sea? Silently the ship was attracted toward it; silently the bolts were drawn out of the vessel's sides one by one by the magnetic rock! And when the fated vessel drew so near that every bolt and clamp was up-loosed the whole structure of bulwarks and masts and spars tumbled into helpless rubbish in the sea and the sleeping sailors awoke to their drowning agonies!

So stands the magnetic rock of worldly enchantments! Its attraction is silent, slow, but powerful to the soul that floats within its range! Under its spell, bolt after bolt of resolution, clamp after clamp of Christian obligation is drawn out! What matters it how fair and goodly his profession shows, or how confidently his "streamers" float before the eye? Let sudden temptation smite the boldest professor and—he is a wreck! He founders where Demas floundered; where thousands as promising as he have floundered! His Christian principle is gone! It was silently drawn out of him by that nightly lodestone of attraction—an evil, godless, self-pampering, Christless world.

Desertion of Christ begins in the occasional neglect of duty and the occasional yielding to what men call small sins. "This once only" pleads the tempter. "This once only" pleads indolence when the hour for devotion comes. "This once only" whispers the syren when some sinful place of entertainment opens its attractive doorway. "This once only" pleads appetite when the intoxicating glass is offered. "This once only" has made a man a tipple, and another man a rogue, another a libertine, another a Sabbath breaker, and another a backslider or an apostate. Such small leaks have sunk great ships. "This once only" sells a conscience and often breeds a lust that becomes inveterate. One neglect of duty paves the way for another. One desertion accustoms the man to the path of evil until he is used to what a Christian never should "get used to"—sinning. A backslider gets so accustomed to neglect of secret devotion that he passes by the bolted closet door with a little concern as he passes by the doors of his neighbors on the street. He becomes habituated to a deserted Bible, a deserted sanctuary, a deserted Sabbath-school, to a neglected heart, to a deserted Saviour.

At length he finds that the Friend he has deserted deserts him. The God whom he has offended with-draws his presence. This is the penalty of sin. No man offends God with impunity. No deserter from Jesus escapes unpunished.

"From the Hand of the Fowler."

This other day I was buying some quails from a countryman, who had netted more than a hundred—all of them alive. "A nickel apiece" was his price. He did not discount a dozen, nor even a hundred. I handed him fifty cents, and he began to deliver the birds to me. I was trying to put them alive into a paper sack. If any of my readers think that such a feat requires no dexterity let him try to put ten live quails in a half peck paper sack. One of the birds got loose and flew to the top of a two story brick store and sat, "and nothing more." I asked a friend to help me with the rest, and none of my other nickels took wings and flew away. On my having secured the words of the wise man, "as a bird from the hand of the fowler," I will number my reflections:

1. Birds are especially the object of the predaceous and sporting both of birds and men. Though blessed with wings, it seems that for that very reason they are more obnoxious to pursuit and capture. So man need not complain that he is not winged. Perhaps if he were so salvation would be next to impossible. Moreover, it is noticeable among men that the most highly gifted are most liable to be overtaken by some temptation or disaster. Intellect and moral nature of shining features furnish no immunity, but rather serve as a sign or mark for the enemy. If no hunter's arrows fly near or pierce, if no traps are baited, it is good negative evidence that the game is not worth catching. Mediocres have no half-breadth escapes, no horrible depths of woe or despair. They know nothing of the agony of isolation, and that a pursued isolation, where loneliness is not solitude nor seclusion security. The hane of heroism and its badge is that it is limited.

2. "In the hand." For beauty and symmetry of form I think the quail is perfection. But the fowler does not pursue quails to study esthetics. He is a caterer to the lowest appetite. "A dish fit for a king" can be relished as well or better by a hog. Yet it seems that royal faculties are sometimes taxed to their utmost to find a relishable dish. But the caterer sees in the quail "a nickel apiece." This would be all the same whatever the form of the bird. Call to him as the quail runs so lightly along the hedge and speak of its beauty. "A nickel apiece." Let the bird whirl-r-r away across the field and hide in the sedge. "A nickel apiece." The eagle is utilitarian. It looks to men as machines or horses or quails according to the use to be made of them. The political economist puts the working man down at $600. There is a higher value set upon some public speakers, showmen, etc., not for the actual muscle, but for the sport they furnish. But the demagogue who buys his votes by this drink comes nearly to any quail man, and takes them at "a nickel apiece." This eagle, that has sacrificed a million of men and five thousand millions of money to abolish the human chattel, has figured down the whole race to chattel values. If men studied men as men, for the wealth of heart and soul, for the matchless symmetry and heauty of spiritual structure, it would be an ennobling study. To catch the imagination upon the wing, to rise with reason, mounting its colossal arguments skyward, is a glorious thing if we would fly or mount alongside; but when we grasp, cage, chain these to be sold in the shambles to cater to the lowest animal appetites of our nature is more than a parody on the study of man as man.

3. "Out of the hand." The bird got away. The last chance. It looked and no doubt felt solitary upon that house-top. Genius now and then does flounce out of the clutches of a gourmand world and soars out of reach above the busy marts of men, who are chaffing over "a nickel apiece." Yet there alone it sits, and, though itself escaped, it thinks of its kindred all caged and waiting the spit of "the king of men," whose genius flies immediately back of the navel. Poor bird! Better come down into the bag again. No; "out of the hand" stay out. It is a sad lot. Indeed; a perch above men who think to be eaten is better than solitary elevation and safety. Away over the weary stretches of wood and fell, to the home of the birdling fly, and teach and nurture others in God's higher delights and glories.

4. If in the fowler's hands—try to be the first to get away. Your fate will be no worse for the attempt if it prove abortive. After one successful attempt the fowler becomes more careful. He calls in help, and in his hands your life, your beauty, your love of liberty and glorious flights of mind are all reduced to the unimagine, unsympathetic, soulless "nickel apiece." When you are set free by your endeavor you will enjoy the loneliness of liberty, which is to some more intolerable than companionship in chains. You will hear, so plainly that it will seem to be your own heart saying: "Fly down again. It is the doom of all to suffer, to die, and that too, for those whose thoughts never soared above 'a nickel apiece.' Fly down and bravely perish with your mates." Don't do it. They are the perishing. There are those yet free, and who may never be snared. Dare to live, solitary and called coward; renegade; but live, for a living sacrifice is acceptable to God and posterity.

T. A. S. A.

We had the pleasure on Wednesday of last week to visit the Southern University, the State Institution for the colored people in this city, under the presidency of Prof. J. H. Harrison. We were delighted with our observations—the faculty, methods of instruction, character of discipline, government and specimens of work. About two hundred and sixty are in attendance—fully ninety per cent. of the number enrolled. Prof. Harrison impressed us as having the genius of an educator—scholarship, aptness to teach and the administrative faculty. He is doing solid, excellent, missionary work. We applaud not only the character, but the spirit of his labors. The Greenville District Conference meets to-morrow in the thriving little city of Greenville by the river. It has been our purpose to attend the session if possible, but an engagement at Shingalak will prevent. We have heard good reports from the brethren in the valley. Under the leadership of Rev. J. W. Price, the presiding elder, there is advance all along the line. Bishop McTear will preside. We shall expect a stirring report from their Centenary meeting.

—Deck-clearing is the order of the day among our churches in California.

—The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly meets in Vicksburg next Wednesday.

—Mrs. H. H. Kavanaugh is residing in Louisville, Ky. Her address is 211 Chestnut street.

—The town of Vermilionville, La., has changed its name to Lafayette by an almost unanimous vote of the citizens.

—In fifty years the number of Methodist Churches in Brooklyn have increased from three to thirty-seven, valued at $1,500,000.

—A lady from Texas, renewing her paper, says: "Dr. Andrews' centennial sermon in the ADVOCATE is worth the subscription price."

—Rev. B. Carradine, of New Orleans, will deliver the address before the literary societies of Centenary College, at Jackson, La., on Tuesday night, June 3.

—There is a tradition in California that every twentieth year is a year of drought. But this year all prophecies have failed, and the rains have been unprecedented.

—The Columbia District Conference, Rev. Dr. T. C. Wier presiding, meets to-day at Shuqualak, Miss. Rev. L. D. Worsham preaches the opening sermon.

—The Kentucky Methodists are raising a special centennial gift for their missionary in China, Rev. C. F. Reid. Rev. S. Noland, Nashville, Ky., has the matter in hand.

—Gen. Gordon, it is said, has caused an Arabic text to be conspicuously inscribed over his throne in the palace of Khartoum, a translation of which is: "God rules over the hearts of men."

—The Wabash and Pacific railroad issued an order prohibiting all employees from using tobacco while on duty. Some took offense and resigned, but their places were filled, and the order stands.

—Rev. W. A. Sanpey, of Tyler, Texas, formerly of the Alabama Conference, is having marked success in his pastorate. Rev. J. T. Daves, of Marshall, an old Louisiana, has been assisting him in a gracious revival.

—The New York Advocate says: "It is announced that Bishop McTear, of the Church, South, will shortly visit the China mission of that church." We had not heard of it, and don't believe it, but would be glad to know it was a fact.

—Rev. Dr. J. M. Trimble, of Ohio, is now in Philadelphia serving in his seventh consecutive General Conference. A vaudeville Methodist legislator truly. Dr. Nathan Bangs had a like term of service, but Peter Cartwright served in twelve General Conferences.

—Our church in San Francisco, hitherto called "Trinity," has changed its name to "Centenary Church." The change was effected because another church in the city was known as "Trinity," and called Centenary because it was dedicated on the first Sunday of the centennial year of American Methodism.

—The Rev. Rufus T. Davis, Inclosing a communication, adds a personal note, from which we extract as follows: "We are moving along nicely in our direct work, and I believe the rest of the Yazoo preachers are doing the same. A good deal of church repairs being done as a Centennial offering. It is useless to say the ADVOCATE is in favor in this part of the Conference."

—The Rev. Dr. H. M. Smith, editor of the New England Presbyterian, delivered a lecture on Tuesday evening of last week in Werlein Hall, before the Thorne Society, on "An American Opinion of the Opium Question." It was a terrible arraignment of England's responsibility for its illicit traffic, and a graphic description of the evils, social, moral and civil, of the dread-ful opium habit.

—The higher education of woman is receiving unusual and almost universal attention. The latest and most significant indication we have noticed is her inclusion to certain privileges in ancient and honorable University of Oxford, England. A cablegram from London last week said: "A resolution of the University of Oxford decided, by a vote of 404 to 321, to admit women to the honor of examinations."

—Mr. Robt. P. Thompson having completed his fiftieth year of service in the Western Methodist Book Concern at Cincinnati last week, his associates in this office presented him a handsome testimonial—a silver tea service. His presentation speech was made by Rev. Dr. J. M. Walden. Drs. Hoyt, and others spoke briefly and eloquently on the occasion. That rather a phenomenal record—fifty years of continued service in one house.

—More than half of the seventy seats in the gallery overlooking the platform in the hall where the Northern Methodist General Conference is being held have been sold for $50 each. The proceeds will be devoted to the general expenses of the Conference.

—Assistant Bishop Potter, of New York, who declared recently that Episcopal clergymen received smaller salaries than ministers of any other church in America, proposes as a remedy that all pastors and Bishops who receive over $3,000 give two and a half per cent. of the same to a fund for poorer brethren. Whether the plan works or not, the motive is most worthy. The old equalization system of Methodism had some features of special merit.

—We traveled last week with an Iowa gentleman returning home from the recent grand meeting of the Knights of Pythias in this city. He talked quite freely about his observations by night and day while sojourning here, and this was his conclusion: "I was an anti-prohibitory amendment man in Iowa during the late campaign, but henceforth I favor it and the most right laws to enforce it." Alas! for our city, that her exegeses are so revolting.

—The Mexican Messenger for May is to contain a likeness of the late Rev. R. N. Freeman, of the Central Mexican mission, the work to be executed by a Mexican artist. The paper for one year can be had for fifty cents. One dollar will secure the Messenger for one year and a photograph of the members of the Central Mexican mission (forty-five faces) including Bishop Keener and Dr. Kelley. Send orders to Rev. W. M. Patterson, City of Mexico.

—The New York Tribune calls the present prohibition agitation "a national awakening of conscience." Some papers in the Southwest are yet ridiculing it as fanatical folly, but their range of vision is very narrow and their moral perceptions rather dull. Up in Mississippi we have noted with pleasure the course pursued on this question by the Brookhaven Leader, Clay County Leader and Enterprise Courier. Others will soon fall into line as the "awakening" spreads.

—A correspondent of the New York Independent thinks that the "Teaching of the Apostles," the Brynolensis manuscript recently found, sustains the theory of the "Disciples of Christ," nicknamed Campbellites. The special point mentioned is their celebration of the eucharist every Lord's day. He says of the disciples: "There are congregations that have not failed to break bread every Lord's day for twenty-five years, and this they do whether any of the preaching brethren are with them or not."

—The train-wrecker has been at his devilish work again on the Illinois Central railroad. On Saturday night last the north-bound train was thrown from the track near Duck Hill, within one mile of the very place where the other wickedness was enacted about one month ago. The engineer was killed, the fireman, conductor and several passengers more or less injured. We can hardly conceive of a crime so cold-blooded and ghastly. The officers of the road are uniformly kind and courteous, and in the adjustments of losses for stock killed or otherwise have shown large liberality. The Governor ought to offer a generous reward for the apprehension and arrest of the fiend.

—Our neighbor, the Southwestern Christian Advocate, thinks the case-question will be the leading issue in the General Conference. The action of the New England Conference is warmly commended, and the brethren are exhorted to hold fast their profession. If they prefer mixed congregations and schools, North and South, no outsider has a right to object. But, as a matter of practical wisdom and the best interests of the Master's kingdom and all concerned, we are of opinion that radical legislation should be avoided. Instead of retarding, it will most surely embarrass their work. As their congregations and Conferences are at present organized we see no cause for this great hubbub. Why not get in a rage because the Germans and Scandinavians prefer their own organizations? There is in it more fanatical folly than Christian zeal. Somebody is coveting cheap martyrdom.

To the Sunday-Schools of the Louisiana Conference.

The Sunday-School Convention for this Conference will be held in Mansfield, June 12-13. The time given in the published Minutes is a mistake, for which the secretary of the Conference is not responsible. The Convention is to be composed of presiding elders, preachers in charge and one delegate from each Sunday-school. By being in Mansfield on the preceding days of the week the commencement exercises of the college may be enjoyed. A programme of the Convention will be published, and we hope to have an interesting and profitable time. Let all take an active interest in this centennial year.

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman S. S. Board.
WATERBURY, LA., Apr. 21, 1884.

To the Preachers in Charge.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dr. Morton writes requesting that we call upon you to send forward as soon as collected every dollar you have for church extension, as it will be necessary for him to have at least twenty thousand dollars to meet the demands that will be made upon him in the next few months. Please give attention to this subject, and as you get as much as five dollars in hand send it to Col. R. C. Clark, treasurer, at Verona. We have aided in building several churches in the bounds of our Conference this year, and still have some money in the treasury. Send your applications to the treasurer, and they will be duly considered.

THOS. T. KEMSTY,
Chairman Executive Committee.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The exigencies of the church building season make it important that the church extension funds be raised and forwarded as soon as possible. Urgent is the need, and present.

JOHN A. ELLIS, Treasurer.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

DEAR BRETHREN: I will send to each of you a copy of the Conference resolutions regarding the State lottery. Please get some active member in each charge to immediately circulate it for signatures, and mail it back to me at Monroe by May 20.

D. F. WHITE.

Our special friend and correspondent, Rev. H. M. DuBoise, of Texas, in a letter to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, pays this fitting and well-deserved compliment to Louisiana Methodism's gifted son:

"The appointment, by the Bishops, of Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., of Felicite Street Church, New Orleans, as clerical delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which meets in Philadelphia in May next, brings into prominent service one of the strongest and worthiest men in our Methodism. No man is more retiring and modest, yet no man more eminently qualified by gifts of nature, education and grace. Whether in the swamps of Louisiana or in the pulpit of a metropolitan church and on the platform before cultured and critical audiences, Dr. Carter is at home, and sways with his boundless resources the souls and minds of his hearers."

The Southern Cultivator Free.

All old subscribers by paying up full to date, and two years' subscription in advance, will receive the Cultivator free for one year, postage prepaid. We will also send the Cultivator free for one year to all new subscribers paying two years' subscription in advance. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters and cash with orders. This is a fine opportunity to secure the only first-class agricultural paper published in the South free for one year.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon St., New Orleans, has a good twelve-row piano for $75; an elegant new 7½ octave piano for $100; an elegant new piano for $150; or $250 a week or $500 per month, for the first year; another elegant piano, formerly $500 for $300 cash. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low prices. The Chickering, Weber, Mason & Hamlen, Werlein, Hale, a home-made, Debing and Cable pianos. The Mason & Hamlen, Sterling and Bay State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Immense stock of sheet music and musical instruments. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange, or paid for means for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent to any address.

"Husband, I don't know where that boy got his bad temper; I'm sure not from me!" "No, my dear, for I don't find that you have lost any."

The New La. Remedy is a product of our swamps. It is a home remedy, and the witnesses to its remarkable success are at home where it is prepared. They are numbered by thousands.

He must be a thorough fool who can learn nothing from his own folly.

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested his wonderful cure in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actual testimonials are sent free of charge, to those who desire it, this remedy, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. ROYCE, 140 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

The following is from Philadelphia, Pa. One of our advertising patrons, writes as follows: "The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is the best advertising medium in the South. At least we have found it so."

The following is from Texas: "The not discommending our advertisement in the ADVOCATE. It has brought many letters in the last four weeks."

Charles James Fox used to say that there was only one thing better than lying on the grass with a book, and that was lying on the grass without a book.

COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC is admirably adapted for females in delicate health. Colden's, no other, 117 druggists.

A little niece of Mr. Darwin asked him one evening what the cat has that no other animal has. The question was asked with gravity, and the great naturalist, after deliberation, confessed himself puzzled. When he "gave it up" she answered "Kittens."

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP beautifies the skin. HILL'S HAIR AND WHISKY DYE, black or brown, 55 cts.

Josh Billings says: "There is one thing about a pen that looks like wisdom; they don't knock much until after they have laid their egg. Some folks are always bragging and knocking what they are going to do before-hand."

Bad coughs cured by HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND PEPPERMINT. HALE'S TOOTHACHE DIOPHORE cure in one minute.

Venus & Adonis are visiting Ireland now. If the following advertisement, from a Du Ha paper, be correct: "Lost, a cat, black, representing Venus and Adonis while walking in Sandy mountain on Saturday last."

For sufferer: Curable Diarrhea, 25 pp. symptoms, remedies, helps, advice. Send stamp—Dr. Whittier, St. Louis, Mo., (advertising office). Single case your way.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner, tea and breakfast sets, $14.10—rose tea sets, $4.50—more rose chamber sets, $4.50.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resort. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Business Notices.

TESTIMONIAL.—This is to certify that I have been traveling in the State of Mississippi for the Birmingham Lightning Liniment Co. of Bryan, Tex., for nearly one month, during which time I have sold very near 1,000 bottles of their celebrated medicine, and giving entire satisfaction to every one who purchased of me. Again, every bottle I sold, I told the buyer if it did not cure me, I would return the money and I would refund the money. Not a one has ever been returned. But the golden opinions and very best testimonials are received every day. God bless the discoverer! J. L. WALTON, Bogalusa, Miss., March 13, 1884. Agent.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL-JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York, for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and which now benefits secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly, than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. W. TRUXE, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE, MANSFIELD, LA.

Twenty-sixth Annual Commencement, 1884. Friday evening, June 6, eight P. M.—Exhibition of Young Ladies' Literary Society, Miss Mary Dickey, Manager.

Sunday, June 8, eleven A. M.—Commencement exercises, by Rev. B. Carradine, New Orleans.

Monday, June 9, two P. M.—Annual meeting of Board of Managers, appointed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Monday, June 9, eight P. M.—Exhibition of music department, Miss R. J. Barr, Director; melodrama, conducted by Miss Williams.

Tuesday, June 10, eleven A. M.—Annual meeting of the alumni.

Tuesday, June 10, eight P. M.—Art lecture, conducted by Miss Perry.

Wednesday, June 11, ten A. M.—Exercises of the graduating class. Address by Rev. B. Carradine.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE, MANSFIELD, DEWITT PARISH, LOUISIANA.

The twenty-ninth Annual Session will begin on the 1st of September, 1885.

Mansfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is easily accessible from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana.

The College is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Conference. The buildings and grounds are extensive and all the facilities for instruction are provided. The College last year had nearly a hundred boarders and sixty pupils in Music, Theory in Art and one hundred and twenty in all.

Board and tuition, per term: $65.00. Music and use of instrument $20.00. Usual charges in Art Department and Modern Languages. F. M. GRACE, President.

ENGINE FOR SALE!

A 12 horse power Atlas Portable Engine on wheels, has been but little used, and is in thorough order.

Will be sold on time to a good purchaser.

Apply to T. J. CARVER, 44 Perdido St., New Orleans.

ESTABLISHED IN 1838.

F. BELDEN

WHOLESALE DEALER IN

HATS, TRUNKS, FLOWERS, UMBRELLAS, ETC.

No. 14 MAGAZINE, 75, 76, 77, and 78 COMMON STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

HEADQUARTERS

FOR

Sunday-School Supplies:

Consisting in part of

GOSPEL IVY, Single and Combined, With and Without Music.

Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teachers' Bibles Oxford-Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible Dictionaries, etc.

Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books; Union Spelling Books; Union Question Books; Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards; Tracts, etc. Also a large assortment of Books suitable for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents to children. Pupil and Family Bibles, from $2.50 to $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.

W. D. SKILLMAN, Business Manager, 34 Camp Street, New Orleans.

MISCELLANEOUS.

603,292

SINGER SEWING MACHINES

Sold in The Year 1882.

REWARD OF

WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

GREAT REDUCTION.

25¢ in prices of NEEDLES for all Machines, and parts for the Singer Machine. Singer Family Needles, 10c per doz., two doz. 25c. All other styles from 15c. to 25c. Oil, 1c. a bottle. Singer, Shuttles, 50c. each. "Genuine Sewing Machine" also, ask for the book, "Genuine Sewing Machine" (History of the Sewing Machine).

McCall's Sewing Patterns, Catalogues Free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

185 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

N. E. HUNTER, Agent.

FREE Send to MOORE'S BUSINESS UNIVERSITY Atlanta, Ga. For illustrated Circular 25th year.

The Great New Southern Route

TO

SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Points.

Through Sleeping Cars from

New Orleans to San Francisco.

VIA

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with

RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Jackson Railroad Depot as follows:

Alexandria, 11 A. M. Houston, 11 A. M.

Alexandria, 4:30 P. M. Houston, 4:30 P. M.

For further information apply to

W. J. TOULIN, J. C. SCHAEFER, Ticket Agents.

Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

ROUTE,

The Texas and Pacific Railway,

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN AND CENTRAL TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from Jackson Depot at 11 A. M. through to San Francisco via Alexandria, Shreveport and Marshall.

Through Express arrives New Orleans at 4:30 P. M.

For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles corner Gravier street, or depot.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.

Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas.

H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen. Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

H. M. HOXIE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

ACCLIMATED JERSEYS.

I am prepared to fill all orders for AMERICAN JERSEY CATTLE CLUB

Registered Bulls, Cows, Heifers and Bull Calves.

Bulls For Grading Up Common Cattle.

CAN ALSO SUPPLY FAMILIES WITH

FIRST-CLASS GRADE JERSEY MILK COWS.

Grade Jersey Heifers at Farmers' Prices.

TO PARTIES DESIRING OF SECURING ONE OR MORE

JERSEYS DIRECT FROM THE ISLAND.

TO BE LANDED AT NEW ORLEANS.

I OFFER SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS.

Orders filled for MR. RINO SHEEP.

W. R. STUART,

56 Carondelet St., New Orleans,

OR OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

THE GREAT EVENTS OF HISTORY IN A SINGLE VOLUME

FAVORABLE AND DECISIVE BATTLES OF THE WORLD.

By CAPT. KING, U.S.A. HISTORY FROM THE BATTLE-FIELD. Shows how Nations have been made, destroyed in a day—how Empires of thousands of years have been overthrown in a single hour. A grand book for all who wish to know the history of the world. Write at once for full description and terms. Address J. C. McCLURE & Co., St. Louis, Mo.

No. 56 USE St. Charles St.

THE

GLASSES

A WONDERFUL and

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE, AND possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by a chemist and a physician, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and in some cases, restore the sight, if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no disagreeable or tiresome sensation, which usually improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS—NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame in H. HOUSAH, MEDICATED.

Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who may wish to procure these spectacles, can send for a circular containing description, price, etc., and directions for obtaining a perfect fit, and have them sent by mail, by addressing

HERC. HOUSAH,

CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY,

56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.

In writing mention this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash,

Blind and Door

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending May 4, 1884.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	8 1/2
Good ordinary	10 1/2
Low middling	11 1/2
Good middling	12 1/2
High middling	13 1/2
Low extra	14 1/2
Good extra	15 1/2
High extra	16 1/2
Low Louis	17 1/2
Good Louis	18 1/2
High Louis	19 1/2

SUGAR.

Low	34	44
Common	44	44
Good common	44	44
Fair	44	44
Good fair	44	44
Fully fair	44	44
Prime	44	44
Strictly Prime	44	44
Choice	44	44
Seconds	44	44
Yellow clarified	44	44
White clarified	44	44
Granulated	44	44

MOLASSES.

Syrup	25	31
Fair	31	38
Prime	31	38
Choice	31	38
Fancy	31	38

RICE.

Choice	54	54
Prime	54	54
Good	54	54
Fair	54	54
Ordinary	54	54
Common	54	54
No. 2	54	54

FLOUR.

Minnesota	5 00	6 00
Minnesota	5 00	6 00
Extra fancy	6 12 1/2	7 00
Winter wheat	7 00	7 00
Choice	6 00	5 90
Fancy	6 00	6 20

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3 40	3 50
Corn meal	3 25	3 40
Crude	3 50	3 60
Hominy	4 00	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.

Corn	71	72
Yellow	67	67
Mixed	69	69
Oats	46	46 1/2
Western	46	46 1/2
Texas	46	46 1/2
Barley	1 02 1/2	1 05
Choice	1 02 1/2	1 05
Prime	1 02 1/2	1 05

PROVISIONS.

Mesa	17 00	17 00
Pork	16 50	16 50
Rumps	16 00	16 00
Beef	11 1/2	12
Shoulders	8 1/2	9
Sides, clear	9 1/2	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2	9 1/2
Beef	13 1/2	13 1/2
Sugar-cured	13 1/2	13 1/2
Shoulders	7 1/2	7 1/2
Sides, clear	9 1/2	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2	9 1/2

FISH.

Blackfish	14 25	14 25
No. 1 in bbls	7 75	7 75
No. 2 in bbls	6 25	6 25
Half bbls	6 25	6 25
No. 3 in bbls, large	13 25	13 25
Half bbls	7 00	7 00

GROCERIES.

Coffee	12 1/2	12 1/2
Cardova, choice	12 1/2	12 1/2
Java, choice	22	23
Butter	23	23
Western dairy	23	23
New York dairy	23	23
Country	17	20
Lard	9	9
Choice	9	9
Feather	50	1 00
Choice	25	50
Year	25	50
Coal, cases	18	18
Coal, bbls	13	13
Coal, bbls	45	50
Lard	80	80

VEGETABLES.

Carrots	12 00	14 00
Country	12 00	14 00
Potatoes	2 00	2 75
Louisiana	2 00	2 75
Beets	20 00	20 00
Onions	3 00	3 75
Choice	3 00	3 75
Baling stuffs	101	101
Country	113	113
Baling twine	131	131
Country	131	131
Bundle	1 30	1 30

SUNDRIES.

Chicken, Western	5 00	5 25
Young	3 00	3 50
Chicken, Southern	2 50	3 00
Young	2 50	3 00
Turkeys, Southern	12 00	16 00
Western	14	14
Southern	15	10
Wool	20	20
Louisiana	18	18
Burly	9	15
Elms	8	8
Green salted	11	11 1/2
Dried salted	11	11 1/2
Okla. apples	50 00	50 00
Okla. apples	75 00	80 00
Okla. apples	50 00	100 00
Okla. apples	75 00	140 00
Hoghead	40 00	40 00
Barrels	20 00	20 00
Half barrels	12 50	12 50
Fertilizers	12 00	14 00
Meat	24 50	24 50
Pure ground bone	42 00	42 00
Muriatic acid	3	3
Sulphuric acid	22	22
Bone black	34	34

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 30.—The county poorhouse of Van Buren county, located near Kalamazoo, thirty miles west of here, burned to the ground at 2 o'clock this morning, and fourteen inmates perished in the flames. The first known of the fire was the cries of the paupers, and a few minutes later the flames were seen rising from the building. The building contained forty-five paupers; the remaining thirty-five escaped and all the rest perished. The loss on the buildings is $15,000; insured.

GALVESTON, Tex., April 30.—During the past six hours a strong southeast wind has prevailed, causing the highest tide known here for many years. The very high sea is running and much damage has been done to property in the east end. The Gulf has made rapid and disastrous encroachments on that part of the beach east of Twenty-first street, the huge waves rolling with terrible fury. All east of Twenty-first street, as far as the eye can reach, is a mass of boiling, surging water, before which the sand hills, with their cedar hedges are rapidly dissolving. The breakwater, recently constructed by the city at great cost, has proven wholly inadequate for the purpose intended.

MERIDIAN, Miss., May 1.—This was a day of excitement in the suburbs, about the appearance of hydrophobia among the cattle. A valuable cow was killed this morning that had given unmistakable signs of madness. The mystery surrounding the origin of the disease causes much uneasiness.

DEL RIO, Tex., May 2.—A cyclone struck this town last evening. The new Episcopal Church, Southern Pacific Station, and a number of small buildings were swept away and many new buildings twisted out of shape. Four persons were severely injured and Charles Schack was killed. Loss to the town, $10,000.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., May 3.—The entire village of Gilmart's Depot, on the Port Jervis and Monticello Railroad, burned yesterday afternoon, and the residents were obliged to flee for their lives, unable to save anything. Not over half a dozen houses are standing in a radius of five miles. The fire is still burning. Loss, $100,000. Two railroad bridges burned.

ALTOONA, Pa., May 3.—The town of Albion, Clearfield county, was totally consumed by fire yesterday afternoon. Loss estimated at $100,000 to $200,000.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, May 3.—The official majority for the debt amendment is 5,687; for Gov. McNary, 44,715.

GALVESTON, May 4.—The Texas Jefferson (Tex.) special says the river is higher than for eighteen years. The lower portions of the town are under water, and a number of families have been forced to abandon their homes. It is believed that every bridge in the county has been swept away. Large sections of farming country are submerged. The loss on crops, bridges and other property will reach many thousands of dollars.

MINDEN, La., May 5.—The first regular passenger train on the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad, between Monroe and Minden Junction, arrived at the junction at 9:45 this morning. Trains will be run regular as far west as the junction in future.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Pa., May 5.—Fire in the woods of Harrison township, from 100 to 200 acres.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 5.—Ralph Dagley, president of the Arthur Lumber Company of this city, returned from the scene of the conflagration in Elk county this morning and reports the devastation great. He estimates the loss of Elk county alone is over $1,000,000. The heaviest losers are the mill owners.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, April 30.—Sir Samuel Baker, in a letter, refers to Gen. Gordon's appeal to the ministers of England and America. He asks whether there can be a more terrible example of faithlessness on the part of a government in this necessity. He proposes that the Sultan supply 5,000 Nizams, India 10,000 and England 5,000 troops to relieve Gen. Gordon. Half of the force to converge toward Berber from Suakin and thence to proceed up the Nile from Cairo.

BUENOS AIRES, via Galon, April 30.—A heavy storm is prevailing. Thirteen centimetres of rain has fallen, more than has been known for fourteen years. A number of houses and walls have fallen and four children have been killed. The rivers have overflowed their banks and many villages are inundated. There has been great loss of cattle.

MADRID, May 1.—An official statement concerning the recent railroad disaster near Ciudad Real gives the total number of persons killed at fifty-nine, of which fifty-eight were soldiers. Fifty-six persons were injured.

LONDON, May 2.—The News prints Khartoum dispatches of April 21. Everything is reported safe. Trade will be carried on with El Mahdi's men in case Khartoum is taken. Greek merchants are already in correspondence with El Mahdi with a view of the establishment of commerce.

LONDON, May 2.—The Egyptian Government offered a Soudanese chief $5,000 to bring Gen. Gordon from Khartoum.

EXPOSITION NOTES.—Work on the Exposition building is now being pushed with great vim. The entire St. Charles street side, and over half the lower elevations and pavilions are ready for painting and sashing. Over one thousand squares are ready for roofing, and the contractor states that by the first of June 2,000 other squares will be completed. On Monday the work of attaching the annex to the main building will begin. Horticultural Hall will, in a few days, assume some shape, and the fern and southern wings are being raised already.

Letters from ex-President Diaz, of Mexico, Commissioner General of that country to the Exposition, and from H. H. Ringgold, Commissioner from Venezuela, are to the effect that early shipments of exhibits from those countries will be made. Applications for maps of the city of New Orleans, issued by Chief of Installation Mullen, are coming in from all parts of the country.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. F. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 179 Girod St., N. O., for price list of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positively free from Alum or any other harmful ingredient. It is not only inviolate, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1884.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANBERY.
Denver	July 21	Denver.
Montana	Aug. 21	Stevensville.
Columbia	Sept. 3	Dayton.
Pacific	Oct. 2	St. Louis.
Los Angeles	Oct. 22	San Bernardino.
SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP M'YRE.
West Texas	Oct. 23	San Antonio.
Northwest Texas	Nov. 5	Waco.
North Texas	Nov. 12	Galveston.
East Texas	Nov. 19	Lawrence.
German Mission	Nov. 27	Houston.
Texas	Dec. 3	Galveston.
THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri	Sept. 17	St. Louis.
Western	Sept. 17	St. Louis.
Southwest	Sept. 17	St. Louis.
North Carolina	Nov. 26	Wilmington.
Mississippi	Dec. 17	Yazoo City.
Baltimore	March 11	Salem.
FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP HARGREAVE.
St. Louis	Sept. 21	St. Louis.
West Virginia	Oct. 8	Greenup.
Arkansas	Nov. 19	Van Buren.
Little Rock	Nov. 26	Little Rock.
White River	Nov. 26	Batesville.
Louisiana	Jan. 8	Minden.
FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PIERCE.
Indian Mission	Sept. 17	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee	Oct. 8	Nashville.
North Alabama	Nov. 20	Talladega.
South Alabama	Dec. 3	Charleston.
Florida	Jan. 8	Gainesville.
SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky	Sept. 10	St. Sterling.
Louisville	Sept. 17	Louisville.
Illinois	Sept. 24	Nashville.
North Georgia	Nov. 26	Atlanta.
South Georgia	Dec. 17	Savannah.
SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEENE.
Holston	Oct. 22	Bristol.
Virginia	Nov. 12	Lynchburg.
North Mississippi	Nov. 26	Aberdeen.
Memphis	Dec. 3	Memphis.
Alabama	Dec. 17	Opelika.

Bishop McTear has charge of the missions in China and Japan.

Bishop Keener has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop Granbery has charge of the missions in Brazil.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

Absolutely Pure.

This powder varies. A marvel of purity, strength and whiteness. More economical than ordinary kinds, and can be sold in competition with the best. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

NEW JOB OFFICE.

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS,

VISITING CARDS,

BLANKS.

Blank for Clerks of Court, blanks for Masons,

Lodges, blanks for Granges, etc., blanks for Co-Operative Stores.

—AND—

All Kinds of Job Work,

Executed in the best style and price as low as any city in the North or West.

Send your order to

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street.

PIANOS!

—AT—

P. WERLEIN'S,

135 Canal St. and 18 Bourbon St.,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Oldest House in New Orleans!

Thoroughly Reliable.

One Elegant New Piano, rosewood, 7 1/2 octave, for 7 octave rosewood, $100 cash. Will take it back in exchange for new piano within one year.

One Elegant New Piano, price $250 at $1 per week

—cash—

One Large Assortment of First Class Pianos and Organs at correspondingly low prices.

Chickering, Weber, Mautzke, Hale, Hardman,

Wheeler, Becker, J. B. Böhling, Cable and

Schneider Pianos and Organs and

Hagelin, Sterling, Day State

Organ sold here.

Immense Array of the Most Beautiful Style

My Guarantee goes with every instrument sold and secures all my customers.

Brass Instruments, Bells, Accordion, etc., in great abundance.

Immense Stock of Sheet Music, including all the

Will give you all your old piano is worth in trade.

MY PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

Glad to exhibit my stock. Send for free catalogue.

Call or write.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Corinth District Sunday-School Convention and District Conference will be held at Ripley, June 20-29.

Wednesday night, June 25, sermon by K. M. Harrison. The Convention will open Thursday, at nine o'clock. When the following programme will be observed:

1. The Relation of Children to the Church, by Revs. R. M. Davis and R. A. Ellis.
2. The Grounds on Which Infants are Entitled to Baptism, by Revs. K. M. Harrison and G. W. Gordon.
3. Duties of Parents in Relation to the Sunday-School, by Revs. D. W. Bosh and J. H. Brown.
4. Sunday-School Literature, by Capt. T. B. Winston and D. L. Cogdell.
5. The Importance of Officers and Teachers Being Prompt, by Judge W. H. Kilpatrick and J. W. Dorman.
6. Duties of a Teacher to His or Her Class, by Rev. L. B. Sprague and C. H. Owen.
7. The Best Method of Opening and Closing Sunday-School Exercises, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, G. P. Hamner and H. Klyce.
8. The Moral Influence of a Well-Regulated Sunday-School on a Community, by Prof. J. W. Johnson and Rev. J. H. Mitchell.
9. Rev. R. A. Ellis will preach a Sunday-school sermon at eleven A. M.
10. Rev. E. L. Sprague will preach the opening sermon of the District Conference, Thursday night. Century mass meeting, Saturday night, to be addressed by Judge Kilpatrick, J. A. Bowen, Prof. J. W. Johnson, and we hope Dr. C. B. Galloway or some one from Nashville. Let pastors report the "locks cleared" if possible. Let all come who are members, and others who may desire to do so. Ripley will be ready for you.

AMOS KENDALL, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, APR. 29, 1884.

The Holly Springs District Conference will meet at Pleasant Grove, Hickory, on Monday, July 22, 1884. Opening sermon by E. H. Moon, Friday 25, 11 o'clock A. M.

W. F. BAILEY.

The Homer District Conference will convene at Lisbon on Thursday, August 23, at 9 o'clock A. M.

A. A. CORNETT, P. E.

The Winona District Conference will meet at Lexington, June 20-29.

THOMAS Y. RAMSEY, P. E.

The Alexandria District Conference will convene at Colfax, August 27, 1884.

N. A. CORNELL, P. E.

The Brookhaven District Conference is to be held in Magnolia, June 12-15.

J. A. B. JONES, P. E.

The New Orleans District Conference will meet at St. Charles Avenue Church, New Orleans, May 13, 1884. Pastors will please report the Bishop's collections at the District Conference.

J. A. WALKER, P. E.

The Pensacola District Conference will meet at Evergreen, Ala., May 25. Opening sermon, May 25, at 7 P. M.

J. S. FRAZER, P. E.

The Jackson District Conference will be held at Bolton, Miss., June 5-8.

JOHN A. ALLIS, P. E.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 20.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1450.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. HARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

MY PSALM.

BY JOHN H. WHITTIER.

I mourn no more my vanished years:
Beneath a tender rain,
An April rain of smiles and tears,
My heart is young again.

The west winds blow, and singing low,
I hear the glad streams run;
The windows of my soul I throw
Wide open to the sun.

No longer forward nor behind
I look in hope or fear;
But grateful take the good I find,
The best of flow and here.

I plow no more a desert-land
To harvest weed and tare;
The manna dropping from God's hand
Rebukes my painful care.

I seek my pilgrim staff—I lay
Aside the cunning art;
The angel sought so far away
I welcome at my door.

The air of spring may never play
Among the rippling corn,
Nor freshness of the flowers of May
Flow through the autumn morn.

Yet shall the blue-eyed gentian look
Through crimson lilies to heaven,
And the pale star in the brook
Shall see its image given.

The woods shall wake their robes of praise,
The south-wind softly sigh,
And when I, calm days in golden haze,
Melt down the amber sky.

No less shall manly deed and word
Rebuke an age of wrong;
The grassy flowers that breathe the sword
Make not the blade less strong.

But smiting hands shall learn to heal—
To build as to destroy;
Nor less my heart for others feel
Than I for the mere joy.

All as God wills, who wisely leads
To glory or to willow;
And counsel more of all my needs
Than all my prayers have told.

Enough that blessings undesired
Have marked my erring track;
That when my feet have wandered
His chastening turned me back.

That more and more a Providence
Of love is understood;
That the springs of life and sense
Sweet with eternal good.

That death seems but a covered way
Which opens into light,
Wherein no child can stray
Beyond the Father's sight.

That cure and trial seem at last,
Through memory's misty air,
Like mountain ranges overcast,
In purple distance fair.

That all the jarring notes of life
Seem blending in a strain,
And all the angels of its strife
Slow coming into train.

And all the shadows fall apart,
And so the west wind sighs,
And all the windows of my heart
I open to the day.

Letter from China.

MR. EDITOR: I went to the University of Mississippi, situated at Oxford. In those days we had to travel by stage, as there were no railroads. The university had just opened, and I believe I was the thirty-fifth pupil to arrive. There were about one hundred and fifty students enrolled there. Our first president was Dr. Holmes, from the University of Virginia. He remained but one year. Judge Longstreet was our president the next year, and a more suitable and efficient man for the post could not have been selected. There were but two classes formed: the freshman and sophomore. I was placed in the sophomore with fifteen others. Dr. Waddell was professor of languages; Dr. Bledsoe, professor of mathematics, and Dr. Millington was professor of chemistry. It was an able faculty, and much respected by the young gentlemen in the university. Judge Longstreet had perfect control over the whole college of young men, and was respected and beloved by all. He talked with them as calmly and gently as a father would to his children. One morning early, as we entered the room for prayer, not a seat was to be found. It was the morning for Judge Longstreet to conduct prayers. When he came in and found no seats, he said: "Young gentlemen, if you prefer to stand, I am perfectly willing you should do so." Not another word was said, and the young men all stood while the president read a chapter and prayed. The next morning not a seat was missing.

On my arrival at Oxford I connected myself with the Methodist Church and attended all the means of grace; but it was a service without any joy to me. There were two or three other young men of my class who united with the same church. In 1850, during my third year at the university, a revival of religion began in the Methodist Church, and some few persons were converted. I began to feel there was no hope for me, especially when I saw the meeting was to be brought to a close. I was under conviction and deep distress of mind. To my great joy the meeting was continued in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. I attended these meetings as often as I could. My distress of mind greatly increased. Day and night I prayed in my room, and often fled to the grove to seek for peace to my troubled soul by prayer. So great was my anguish, and so great was the struggle going on in my soul, I could not attend to my studies. The president and professors very kindly gave me permission to attend the meetings, as often as I desired. Often did I fall on my knees in the midst of the audience completely overpowered, and yet I would return to my room in deep sorrow and without any hope. This deep distress continued for twelve days and nights. Three young men of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church manifested a deep interest in my welfare, and while life lasts I shall never cease to be grateful to them for their prayers and the help which they gave me. One Sabbath afternoon there was to be a prayer meeting in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. I intended to attend and found about twenty persons present. Another person besides myself knelt and asked the prayers of God's people. It was there in that little prayer meeting, on that beautiful Sabbath afternoon, I found Jesus, and was made a new creature in him. For twelve years this blessing was denied because I would not yield my heart to God. For each year I had a day of agony and distress which well might overpower me. I can never forget that beautiful Sabbath afternoon when I entered into the joys of God's people—yes, into the kingdom of my blessed Redeemer. On that day God, for Christ's sake, pardoned all my sins and light, joy and peace filled my soul. Every one I met seemed to be happy and all nature seemed to rejoice with me. On my way to the university I met one of my dear Christian friends, a member of my class—Mulborough Pegues. He returned with me to my room and rejoiced with me that I had found peace with God. From that time I felt that God had something for me to do, and I determined to do what I could to bring others to Christ. It was soon known that I had found peace, and all the young men who had been converted came to rejoice with me. This was in the winter of 1850. The next year I graduated and returned home a different person, and with a blessed hope through Christ of eternal life. During this year and the next we had great revivals of God's grace in our midst, and often did I feel the power of God's grace in my heart. I did what I could to lead others to the Saviour, and often have I fallen at the feet of Jesus overpowered by his love. The Lord was leading me in a way I knew not.

About that time I commenced the study of medicine; but such was the working of the Spirit of God in my heart that I could do nothing with it. I then took up the study of law, and I was soon convinced that God had a better work for me to do. I had a better work for me to do. I prayed earnestly for direction, and was urged by Christian friends to preach the gospel; but I felt that I was unworthy to take up such a holy calling. I, however, assisted in Christian meetings, and was greatly blessed. At such seasons I felt willing to do anything or go anywhere the Lord would direct. In the early part of 1853 I was licensed to exhort and urged to join the Conference. I still shrank from undertaking such a work. It was during this year, and before the meeting of Conference, I saw a letter from Bishop Andrew pleading for young men to go as missionaries to China. His appeal fired my heart with holy zeal, and the blessed Spirit of God stirred my heart within me, and I said, I will go even to China to preach the gospel.

The missionary hymn had often inspired me with an earnest desire to carry the blessed gospel of Christ to the regions beyond, and it seemed, in the providence of God, that time had come. I talked with my father about it, and his answer was: "My son, you could have no greater field in which to glorify God and do good to men than the preaching of the glorious gospel of Christ, and I freely give my consent for you to go to China." To save souls became the burden of my heart, especially to go as a missionary to China and to labor for the salvation of that dying people. After making it a subject of prayer I wrote to Bishop Andrew and received a favorable answer. In the fall of 1853 the Mississippi Conference met at Canton, Bishop Capers presiding. I was received into the Conference, ordained by Bishop Capers, and was appointed missionary to Nankin, China.

On October 20, 1853, I was married to Miss M. J. McClellan by President Thornton, of Sharon, Miss. Before our marriage she promised to go with me as missionary to China, and to this day—more than thirty years—she has been a faithful worker in the glorious cause to which we both gave our lives, and in which we have always felt the deepest interest.

At a missionary meeting early in 1854, in our neighborhood, my father was present, and not only freely gave of his money to the missionary cause, but willingly gave his son and daughter, and to the day of his death he felt a great interest in the spread of the gospel among the heathen. About that time a letter came from Bishop Andrew, requesting me to be present at a farewell missionary meeting to be held in Richmond, Va., in the latter part of March, just before leaving for China. We left our home in Madison for Vicksburg, my father going with us to that city. Our last night in Mississippi was spent with Dr. Marshall and family. My father accompanied us to the steamer, and his last parting words were, "God bless you, my son!" It was a sad hour for us, leaving home so young and inexperienced. With an unseen future ahead of us, we felt that we could only look to our kind heavenly Father for his blessing and direction. We praise his holy name that to this day he has never forsaken us, but has verified all his precious promises to us in a thousand ways. I am,

Yours in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH,
SHANGHAI, CHINA, APRIL 1, 1884.

Jesus Blessing Babies.

In the gospel by Mark, he writes: "And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them; and his disciples rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God." Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them."

For what purpose did these parents bring their little children to Jesus? That he should touch them. What do we understand by touch? Touch, usually, means the slightest contact. What does the word "touch" mean in this passage? It means more than contact, however slight. It means to embrace, to hold, to fasten. Then these parents brought their little children to Jesus that he should embrace and join them to himself by contact. Therefore "he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them."

Was there any objection to Jesus doing this work? There was. By whom was the objection offered? By his disciples. What did his disciples do? They rebuked those that brought them. How did Jesus like this in his disciples? "When Jesus saw it, he was much displeased."

"Much displeased" is a mild rendering. The words rendered, "much displeased," mean pained, angry, vexed, indignant. The revised edition gives it thus: "When Jesus saw it, he was moved with indignation." Why was Jesus indignant at the conduct of his disciples? Because they were obstructing the way to the kingdom by objecting to those coming in to whom the kingdom of God belonged. Does the kingdom of God belong to babies? Jesus says it does. Do all the disciples of Jesus believe him at this point of his teaching? Many do not. Does this offend Jesus to-day as in the days of his personal ministry on earth? It certainly does. What did Jesus mean by the phrase, "kingdom of God?" Surely he meant his church on earth. The phrase often has this meaning: "Jesus said to the Jews, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." This was the church. Who has the right and power to take the kingdom of God from one people and give it to another? Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Head of the church. After expressing indignation at the conduct of his disciples, what did Jesus do? He said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." By this he means, Give them the exercise of their right and freedom to come, and then do not hinder them in coming. Do not provoke them to wrath by the exercise of parental authority against Divine law, which is the rule of church conduct and worship.

What was the nature or character of the act of Jesus in blessing these babies? Was it a pardon for their sins? This is not said. Was it the regeneration of their nature? It seems not. Did he baptize them? No; Jesus never baptized anybody with water. The word "bless" expresses the character of the act of Jesus. The same word is employed to express the act of Jesus when he instituted the Lord's Supper—he "blessed" the bread. He did not change the nature of the bread, but consecrated it. It was, therefore, officially "set apart" to a holy use. In like manner Jesus blesses the bread in the eucharist to-day through the ministry of his own calling and sending. Then, Jesus blessed little children officially for each membership. What he did in putting his hands upon them, his ministers do by the application of water in the name of the Trinity.

While objecting to the baptism of babies as an act or rite securing membership in the church, the parents thereof offend Jesus. Those preachers who so severely and vehemently attack infant baptism offer nothing as a substitute. At this point they utterly fail to follow the example of Jesus. Both parents and preachers stand right where the disciples of Jesus stood when they rebuked those parents who brought their "infants" to Jesus that he should take them up in his arms, put his hands upon them and bless them. Let us all obey and love Jesus.

ANGUS DOWLING,
RAMEY, ARIZ., MAY 7, 1884.
The Homer District Centenary Committee.

The Homer District Centenary Committee convened at Haynesville, La., April 19, 1884. After due deliberation in reference to the church in this district in connection with the Centenary movement, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the first object of Centenary observance should be the spiritual improvement of the church.

Resolved, That in order to obtain this spiritual improvement each preacher in charge conduct a series of centenary services, commencing with the fourth Sunday in May (or as soon after as practicable) and continuing until each appointment in his charge shall have been served.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed in each church to distribute Centenary literature, solicit subscriptions to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and to assist the pastor in Centenary operations.

Resolved, That the co-operation of every Sunday-school be secured, and that suitable services for the children be held in every congregation.

Resolved, That each pastor use due diligence to organize class meetings and prayer meetings for the purpose of giving each member of every church an opportunity to co-operate, and thereby secure the end sought.

Resolved, That in order to a more thorough organization, and that ministerial co-operation be had to secure spiritual improvement in this district, the district is hereby divided into five sub-divisions as follows: (1) Homer, Haynesville, Minden; (2) Minden and Mt. Zion, Tulip, Ringgold; (3) Vernon; Rochester, Saline, Sparta; (4) Ruston, Arcadia, Sumnerfield; (5) Downsfield, Farmersville, Indian Village.

Resolved, That the preachers in charge of said sub-divisions, respectively, are hereby constituted a committee to draft a suitable programme for holding mass meetings—at least one—in every pastoral charge, and a series of services connected therewith for one week, more or less—the time to embrace from the first Sunday in July to the third Sunday in August. The preacher in charge of the circuit first mentioned in each of the sub-divisions is appointed chairman of committee for his division. Each preacher shall designate the place of holding services in the hands of his work.

Resolved, That we suggest that the subjects used on said occasion have direct reference to the distinctive doctrines of Methodism, and a historical synopsis of the same.

Resolved, That a district mass meeting be held in connection with the District Conference, embracing the fifth Sunday in August. (Programme to be furnished.)

Resolved, That an opportunity for a thank-offering be given in connection with each centennial service of this programme.

A. A. CORNETT, P. E.,
Chairman Committee.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D.,
Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.,
Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH,
Treasurer.

To the Preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Permit a word of exhortation in view of the grave responsibilities of the next few days. We are on the eve of our Centenary service. A majority of the Annual Conferences resolved to observe Sunday, May 25, as Centenary Day. On that day to all our churches in those conferences our people will be assembled in a Centenary Love-feast to recount their personal indebtedness, under God, to the great religious movement called Methodism. After a suitable Centenary sermon, they will be allowed to make their thank-offering to one or more of the great connective objects—Education, the Church Extension Loan Fund, and Foreign Missions.

Nothing has been left undone, we hope, to make them acquainted with the nature and objects of the Centenary observance. A circular letter or address for every household in the Church has been sent to the pastors for distribution among the people. The programme for Centenary Day has been sent to all the Church papers so that all might become familiar with the character of the services. Centenary subscription books have been sent to all pastors applying for them, with full instructions as to their use. So, too, the Centenary Manual, with its suggestive array of facts and arguments has been put within the reach of all who will simply send their address. Yet all the labor of planning and preparation will avail little without the cordial help of the preachers. The success of the Centenary observance in every charge will depend mostly on the fidelity and intelligent zeal of the pastor, under the blessing of Almighty God.

We venture to offer only three suggestions:

1. Make the Centenary Day a religious occasion. Prepared by much communion with God, each pastor may impart largely to his people his own sense of the sacredness and importance of the day, which marks at once the close and commencement of century's labors for Christ by a Church whose providential mission has been to spread Scriptural truth on these lands. Let Centenary Day be a Pentecost, to prepare us for another hundred years of labor.

2. Secure, if possible, contributions to each of the great connective objects of our Centenary observance. While some may prefer one to another, let every congregation remember each of them.

3. Do not rest content with a Centenary thank-offering from every member and friend of the Church. Giving will be a means of grace to all, however humble the gift. Let the widow have the blessing of the Master's loving words, "She hath done what she could." Let every child share His benediction as He says, "Out of the mouth of babes Thou hast perfected praise." No worship will be so perfect in His sight as the gifts and songs of childhood this Centenary year. To realize these ends may require several successive Sundays to be used on circuits for the Centenary observance, and much private work by the pastor for the rest of the year to see that all have given. But what pastor will not cheerfully do this?

Let every thank-offering be recorded in the Pastor's Centenary Subscription-book, and be kept as part of the history of our Centenary year.

On behalf of the Central Centenary Committee,

E. R. HENDRIX,
Chairman.

Studies for Auxiliaries.

1. What is the meaning of the phrase, "The Centenary of American Methodism?"
2. How long before the organization of Methodism in America had it existed as a fact in England?
3. Who led the first Methodist meetings that were ever held?
4. Who is called the founder of Methodism?
5. To whom was he indebted for counsel in regard to some work that was distinctively Methodist?
6. What do you know of Susanna Wesley?
7. Mention some of the characteristics and qualities of mind of Wesley's father and grandfather?
8. What influence did the Moravians have on Wesley's mind?
9. For what purpose did John and Charles Wesley come to America in 1736? and how long did they remain?
10. What was the reply of Wesley's mother when she was consulted in regard to his going as a "missionary" to America?
11. Where did they cast anchor and establish the first Methodist Society in America, and the second in the world?—Wesley's Missionary Advocate.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, on Thursday, May 1st, 1881, Frederick S. Winston, Esq., vice president, in the chair.

Religious services were conducted by secretary Gilman.

The death of A. Robertson Walsh, one of the oldest vice-presidents of the Society, was announced, and the Board adopted a minute concerning him, directing that a copy of it be sent to the family of Mr. Walsh and also be published in the Record.

Numerous communications from foreign lands were presented to the Board or made the basis of their action, including reports of Bible work in Chili, Cuba, Russia, and Switzerland.

Appropriations for the work of translating, publishing, and circulating the Scriptures abroad were made to the amount of $12,000, making the aggregate sum appropriated for expenditure in this way during the current year, $173,100.

Grants of books were made for benevolent distribution, chiefly in the United States, of the aggregate value of about $10,100.

It was stated that two hundred and seventy-one copiers are now prosecuting the work of the Fourth General Supply.

One Bible society was recognized as auxiliary in Florida, and one in Nebraska.

The total receipts for April were $12,776 23; and 136,804 volumes were issued from the Bible House during the same month.

The total issues from the Bible House during the year ending March 31st, were 1,357,051 volumes of Bibles, Testaments, and Portions; and when these are added, 451,164 volumes issued in foreign lands, the aggregate, 1,808,215 copies, represents the entire circulation of the year. Of this large number 499,370 copies were complete Bibles. The expenditures of the year, $782,106 10, for manufacturing and general purposes, exceed the receipts by $117,037 10.

The Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1884.

FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

Mark 16: 7-13.

He calleth thee in childhood.

When life is young and free.

When youth and beauty smile.

On hearts of purity.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

He calleth thee in childhood.

The light of life is in his eye.

On life's pathway.

The blessed Jesus said:

Oh! hasten then to me.

While youth and beauty smile.

preached the same doctrine to the Germans, covered up as they were under the mantle of formality and pompance and indulgence imposed by the church of Rome, and they by thousands rejoiced in the new light and in the new love, and the reformation followed. John Wesley preached it again when all England and most, indeed, of all Europe had again gone into darkness on this subject, and even the so-called Christians were trying to work their way into favor with God and to heaven. Under Wesley's preaching the blasphemous ceased his profanity and became a happy man, a man of prayer and praise. The inebriate dropped his cups and substituted the Bible and church-going, and became a consistent, devout, pious, happy Christian. The man that could not read could hear, and he that could hear could come, and he that came could be saved. Wesley and his messengers, and learned of him and his ambassadors the way to heaven: I see the multitudes gathering; the poor, the rich, the beggar, the laborer, the mechanic, the farmer, the laboring, horny-handed of all classes came as well as a few of the intelligent and the rich; and again "the poor had the gospel preached to them," and now salvation by faith in Christ is preached by every Methodist preacher in all the world; and not only by Methodist preachers, but by all of the evangelical churches, and millions rejoice in the pardon of their sins and in the assurance of salvation through Christ.

That one conversion in the eighteenth century, May 21, 1738, set the world aflame. That night, about nine o'clock, while he was attending a society meeting, and while one was reading what Luther says of the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, Wesley says: "I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death." This was the beginning of the greatest religious movement of all the centuries since the days of Constantine. We think, we hope now, that the Christian world will never again try to save itself by good works. We have nothing to say against good works. They must be "maintained," but they do not atone. Faith in Christ saves now, and saves forever. May the people of God, clergy and laity, tell this story of the cross "to earth's remotest bounds," and may the time soon come when "all shall know him, from the least to the greatest."

LOCAL ITINERANT.

The Duty of Methodists in Mississippi.

I spent last Sunday in Oxford, the site of the University of Mississippi, and perhaps the most beautiful town in the State, and, for some reasons, by far the most important to all churches. Young men are there from year to year to receive their education, and they are not only impressed by the University influence, but by all those things seen and heard in the city of Oxford. These years spent at school constitute the formative period of their lives, and the impressions made upon them will, in a large measure, control them in all the departments of after life. It becomes, therefore, to every denomination an important question: "How are these young men, who above all others are to mold the future sentiment of our State, being affected by us?" This question seems to have addressed itself to some denominations more than ten years ago, and to all but Methodist before this. The Baptist, seeing the situation, put the matter in the hands of their State Board of Missions, which at once secured, by largely supplementing the salary which the congregation could pay, the services of one of their best and ablest men, and soon assisted the congregation in building one of the most substantial and attractive churches in the State. The same might be said as to the prosperity and general improvement in both the Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches, and within the past two years the Protestant Episcopal Church has located Bishop Thompson there, and made large expenditures on their property. But what has Methodism done during all this time? Nothing. We are there in the same dingy, uninviting and uncomfortable church that was there, even in a much better condition, years ago.

The question comes home to us: "How are these thousands of young men, who are being molded by Oxford influences, being impressed by Methodism?" Let men of God and of Methodism answer, and say: "Under God we will change things." But does not this reflect on Oxford and its former management? Perhaps so; but our church here is made up largely of those men who live, in a measure, on the salaries paid by the University, who, with a few others faithful and true, have supported their pastor and kept up the usual expenses of the church against great odds; they are now ready to do all they can; their hearts and hands are in the work. Do you ask is not this a matter that belongs altogether to the North Mississippi Conference? I answer no. There are many things which Mississippi Methodists have in common; I have often thought that the two Conferences ought to have a "Joint Board" to consider all common questions. Young men go from all parts of our State to Oxford, and receive an impression which becomes the common property of Methodism in our State, either for good or evil. "I speak as to wise men, judge ye what I say." The necessity is upon us. We must this year build in Oxford a Centenary church which will cost ten thousand dollars. Can we do it? Yes, I feel it. We must do it. Let every son and daughter of Mississippi, who loves the State and Methodism, say I will help, and before the sun sets write to Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, of Oxford, and tell him how much you will give on the first day of September to build this church. If you prefer to send it now it will be in safe hands. There is a great number of men in the State who were educated in the University, and are Methodists. Let them take an active part in this matter. Our pastors can do a large work here if they will spend sometime and strength on this important work. I have no pastoral charge, but I will raise one hundred dollars. Let us not say we have already enough upon us; do all you have to do and this much more. Do give something, and as much as you can. We can not afford to remain as we are. I appeal to you in behalf of the feelings of young men who are Methodist and attend the University. I appeal to you in behalf of the parents, who would send their sons to Oxford, and if you love your church I appeal to you in behalf of Methodism, and ask that you this day give all you can that we may erect at this our common point a suitable monument that shall tell other denominations and unborn generations of our gratitude to God for the blessings vouchsafed to us and our fathers.

T. J. NEWELL.

GREENADA, Miss., May 2, 1884.

Some Reminiscences.

Bro. Harris' reminiscences of Cole's Creek circuit during his charge thereof, and the great revival under his faithful and laborious ministry, calls up vivid memories in the mind of this writer. The revival was one of the most powerful ever witnessed in my experience of over forty years in the ministry. The power of God was so wonderfully manifested, not only at the public services, but in the social meetings, at the households, all through the country, that the unconverted were amazed, and expressed their astonishment to the preachers. One young man, Thomas Nash, I remember, said to Bro. Harris, "This work astounds me; you can not preach much, and I know I have (myself) can not preach, and yet these wonderful results are manifest so that it can not be denied," although he was not wont to be moved religiously in his previous history. I can never forget the experience of that year and its associations with my friend, who exhibited the extraordinary energy inherent in his small body divinely endowed with power from on high. The reminiscences of Bro. Harris and Morse reawaken the long-felt desire and renew the purpose to give expression to my estimation of the great and good men, fathers of the Mississippi Conference, whose characters are photographed indelibly upon my mind and heart—Bros. Winans and Drake, and Bros. Lane, Campbell and Owens, and the youthful and brilliant Elijah Steele—all of whom were my loved friends, with whom I was in intimate association and confidential relationship as my presiding elders, and Bro. Steele and Owens as intimate friends and neighbors.

Having waited with intense anxiety to see in print before I die the history of the Mississippi Conference, by my dear friend, Bro. Jones, as one of the few connecting links between two generations of preachers, I feel like contributing pen and ink sketches of these eminent men in their immortal work of evangelization. Should this contribution be favorably considered by editorial supervision I will furnish it in serial numbers when the ADVOCATE is not crowded with more interesting matter.

H. M. MOOTH.

Precious Faith.

It is faith which illumines the dense darkness of the valley of death. Death to the natural man is, indeed, a dread monster, but faith removes, as in thousands of instances, all its terror by sending rays of light through the dark vaults of the future, and shines into the soul the Divine presence, and makes the "dying bed as soft as downy pillows are." It extracts the sting of death, and gives to the soul the grand victory over sin, death and hell; and hence the possessor can but, in rapturous ecstasy, view the beautiful future, and sing of heaven, angels and redeemed ones. A more beautiful and sublime scene was never gazed upon than that of faith triumphing in death. This has been beautifully illustrated in the ecstatic death of Christians, who now enjoy scenes and pleasures beyond the conception of the human mind. We retire to the closet of our meditation, and are lost in amazement and wonder at the unspeakable victories of faith. In life men may vacillate, tremble and fear, but in the arms of faith even the youth of only a few summers, and also the aged man, without fear or dread of the grim monster, can calmly and serenely talk of a blissful home amid the howers of the Eden above. That faith which calms, quiets and rules the spirit of the Christian, enabling him to die serenely happy, exhorting friends and loved ones to meet him in heaven, is so precious as to be desired above rubies, diamonds, diadems and crowns. The loss of the loved and the dear, from a human standpoint, is heart-breaking, and produces sorrow, distress and anguish, but faith asserts her power, and in true composure looks up and says I will see them again. Faith softens many a bed, smooths many a rough place, dries many a tear, suppresses many a sigh, removes darkness and sorrow, and gives placidity to the brow and radiance to the face of him who possesses the sweet experience of faith. It is faith which throws wide the portals of heaven, and guarantees to the soul a grand reception by all the shining retinue of the golden city. Saints, angels and all the white robed hosts of heaven, with radiant faces and star-crowned brows, gather around the soul of faith to welcome it home. Faith is the instrument through which heaven is gained. From the evidences of revelation, the experiences and foretastes of faith, heaven is precious—in desirability precious—and the preciousness of heaven makes the instrument of gaining it precious.

HESLEY.

MAY 2, 1884.

Revival in Carrollton, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting in the town of Carrollton, Miss., which continued three weeks, lacking one day, and resulted in forty-six conversions and fifteen accessions to our church. Among those who joined the church are some of the most prominent citizens of the town. Bro. E. G. Kilgore, of the North Mississippi Conference, was with us more than two weeks, laboring with us in the pulpit, on the streets and in the homes of our people. He preached to the edification and delight of all who heard him. He has made impressions upon the hearts of this people that time will never erase. Long will he be remembered by this community. We had some of the most remarkable answers to prayer. One gentleman, who had not been to church for years, was made an object of prayer by the Christians from day to day. He finally came to church one night of the meeting. He gave strict attention to the word preached, and, it being attended by the Spirit, was carried home to his heart. He was brought to see himself a lost sinner. He arose and presented himself at the altar for prayer. The next night he was happily converted, and joined the church. I might speak of other instances of direct answers to prayer during this meeting, but for want of space. Several of our new members were called on to pray in public during the meeting, and without hesitation they took up the cross. We have eight more members who pray in public when we had at the beginning of the meeting, but as no other church had a pastor present we opened the doors of all the churches represented in the town, and merely took the names of all those who wished to join any of these churches. Ten joined the Presbyterian and about the same number the Baptist and one the Episcopal Church. I believe every Christian who attended the meeting was thoroughly revived. You may rest assured that the meeting has produced a wonderful change in this entire community for good, for which we give God all the praise.

H. E. SMITH.

CARROLLTON, MISS., MAY 2, 1884.

From the Work.

YAZOO CITY.

MR. EDITOR: The first of May finds us, in addition to a very backward season among our hill farmers, with much of our swamp lands under water. About two weeks ago a big rise was reported at Sharkey's, on the Tallahatchee, and within a few inches of the highest of the season at Greenwood, situated at the confluence of the Tallahatchee and Yazoo rivers, where they make the Yazoo river. We have heard of no great distress, but a greater part of the lands that were planted will be to plant over, with much loss of labor and seed. In fact, we already hear great demand for cotton seed. At Silver City and in that section at least one-half of the land is reported as under water. With us the water has not covered so much of our territory, but it is rising still and may yet give trouble. Below us, in the neighborhood of Statia and mouth of Sunflower river, we hear that the condition of the farmers is discouraging in the extreme, some abandoning their farms for the second time. This is the second rise of the season. Truly have our people on the river been warned fully of the uncertainty of temporal things and the necessity of giving some care, at least, to the meat that perisheth not. I do not know that we can report anything on a boom here, except the river, and that has been booming so long that we give but little thought to its movements. The trains are at last coming in regularly, the turn-table having been completed yesterday. We hear but little from the brethren on the adjoining works. Bro. Cooper seems to have excited a spirit of rivalry among his people on the Benton work on the subject of church improvement. Whether by guile or otherwise I know not, but one thing I find—Cooper is always trying to catch his people in some good work. Adams and Davis, both sons and sons-in-law, are moving their people up to greater things for the Master. Bro. Bell, we suspect, has had to reverse the command for a time and dash for perch and trout rather than fish. Yazoo makes haste slowly. We look, hope and pray for better things.

Yours,

T. E. HOLLMAN.

MAY 1, 1884.

Marriages.

TUCKER-BIRMINGHAM.—At the Birmingham Hotel, at Vaughan Station, April 21, 1884, by Rev. Thomas W. Adams, Mr. T. D. Tucker and Miss Ida Birmingham, all of Vaughan Station, Yazoo county, Miss.

KIMBRA-MALLOY.—In the Methodist Church, at Inks, Miss., April 23, 1884, by Rev. J. H. Mitchell, Mr. Ayar Kimbra and Miss Eleanor P. Malloy, both of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

MCCLAIN-SKINNER.—At the residence of the bride, April 16, 1884, by Rev. J. S. Parker, Mr. J. W. McClain, of East Helena parish, La., and Mrs. C. N. Skinner, of St. Helena parish, La.

Obituaries.

MCINTOSH.—Died, in Girard, Richmond parish, La., March 11, 1884, Du. WILLIAM S. MCINTOSH, in the fifty-fifth year of his life. Bro. McIntosh was a native of the State of Mississippi. He moved to this State in 1851, and settled in Franklin (now Richland) parish, engaged in the practice of his profession, making a host of friends who honored him as a Christian gentleman and a good physician. He was twice married. His first marriage was with Sarah C. Barker, who preceded him to the better land several years. They have living four children—all useful men and women in society. His second marriage was to Mrs. L. V. Nettles, who now survives him.

It is not known when Bro. McIntosh united himself with the church, yet it is well known that his life was of that type of Christian character that none ever doubted the genuineness of his faith. Honest, upright, self-sacrificing, possessing such a high regard for moral law, he would not stoop to a low thing for maintenance an impure act. On coming to this work, and hearing of his sickness, I visited him, found him suffering intensely, but never complaining. Realizing he was nearing the end of his natural life, I asked him of his future prospects as to eternity. He answered: "All is clear. I have been preparing for this hour for forty years. He desired the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and to him and a few friends present we administered it; and to him it was a season of precious nearness. A short while before he died he asked that they would sing his favorite hymn, "There is a fountain filled with blood." He is gone to rest with him who said, "I go to prepare a place for you." Our loss is his gain; yet the wife has lost an affectionate husband, the child a kind father, the community one of its best citizens, the church a faithful steward, the preacher a true friend. Let us endeavor to meet him in the home of the blest.

C. T. MURKOLAND.

HOLMES—WILLIAM—Holmes left this world January 16, 1884, and doubtless went to a joyful reward, for his life had been that of an exemplary Christian for nearly a half century. He was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., June 2, 1813, and about the year 1837 he went to Texas in a spirit of adventure, and for seven years he led a wild life more or less hostile to the Indians and Mexicans. After a time, however, he tired of this roving life and returned to Georgia, where he was married, in 1845, to Miss E. C. Wright, and for fifteen years he enjoyed the pleasures of peace and home in his native State. The increasing cares and wants of a large family led him to seek his fortune again in the golden West, and in 1859 he moved to DeSoto parish, La., where he resided twenty-five years—all the time strengthening in good influence in church and society, gaining friends and winning the confidence of all with whom he came in contact. He was one of a family of seven children raised by a widowed mother after the strictest rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He leaves a wife, six children, fifteen grandchildren, one sister—Mrs. Tabitha Fallowell, of Caddo parish, La.—and one brother—Robert Holmes—to mourn his loss, besides an innumerable host of relatives in Georgia—the Hills and Pines, descendants of his maternal uncle, Burwell Pope and Miller Hill, all of whom will regret to hear of their loss. His absence in the community will long be felt, and his Christian influence will circle wider and wider until it reaches the shores of eternity. Oh, may it reach every heart of his numerous family, and help them to their soulfully to the heavenly shores where there will be no more partings.

works of mercy she would often go home weary and worn to seek rest. In her last sickness she said she had no fear of death. Her only desire was to be to enjoy the society of her children whom she loved tenderly. Her last moments were blessed by the manifestation of all her children and the attention of kind friends. A more noble and even disposition is seldom found. Not very demonstrative in her profession of religion, yet her piety was none the less deep and fruitful. She loved her church dearly; the communion, its ordinances were enjoyed and prized much by her. Her home was an ever welcome home to her preachers. Emory has lost one of its best members. Sister Buckley, it is said, was ready to stand at the foot of her death bed, but she was comforted with the assurance that she sleeps in Jesus. Her pastor, G. W. HOWES.

GUNN—SARAH ANN GUNN, daughter of W. G. and F. E. Gunn, was born July 17, 1861, in Carroll county, Miss., joined the Methodist Church at Lodi, Montgomery county, Miss., in September, 1882; died March 17, 1884, in Wesson, Copiah county, Miss.

She spoke of not remaining with us some two weeks before her death, and said that she was prepared to die. Afterward she was taken sick, and frequently spoke of dying, and always said she was prepared to meet her Savior. Later, she told her mother that she was going—she hated to leave her; but she must go. On the evening before her death she seemed to fix her eyes on some object, and, pointing her finger, said in a clear tone, "I am coming." A. FULMER.

Nashville Christian Advocate, special copy.

GILLOTT—Bro. W. G. GilloTT died, in the triumphs of a divine faith, near Big Lake, La., on November 13, 1883. Bro. GilloTT was born in the State of Georgia in 1825, and came to Louisiana many years ago.

About fifteen years ago the wife of this noted man died, and his wife, the Methodist Episcopal Church, Smith. He lived out his days and was having respect to the great recompense of reward. Happy in his latest breath, his only regret was leaving his dear companion behind. The last years of his life, he said, were his happiest, having enjoyed more religious comfort of living himself to God. Rest in peace, dear brother. We meet you on the shining shore. Send GilloTT, dry your tears. Soon you will meet him no more to part.

FRED. WHITE.

MANGUM.—The committee appointed by the fourth Quarterly Conference of Choctawhatchee Circuit, Shreveport district, November 21, 1883, to draft resolutions in memorial of Bro. J. C. MANGUM, who died October 10, 1883, beg to report the following:

Resolved, That, while we bow submissively to the Divine behest, we feel that the church has lost a good, true and useful member, a kind and valued citizen.

Resolved, That we tender the sympathies of our family our heartfelt sympathies and prayers that they may be able to rest their loved one in heaven.

Resolved, That a copy hereof be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

MONT. STOKHART, for Committee.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Where art Thou Going?

To buy some

Ivory Soap

She said.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sent to any one who can not get it of their own.

Photographs

The Finest Establishment in the South

WA. HBURNS

Photographic Parlors

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal hotel, and almost directly opposite the City Market.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known to art, from the miniature for the pocket to the life size.

Water Colors, Indian Ink, Crayons, etc.

Busts and seated figures copied and enlarged to the likeness faithfully preserved.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1884.

REULAH LAND.

There is a country calm and fair,
Where soft the breeze blows,
And heavenly hills in golden air
Rise on the further side.
Beside the hill a river runs,
I hear it murmuring low,
And softly pass the shining ones
Above it and to fro.
The breeze a grateful coolness yields,
And tender is the sky;
While all about the grassy fields
The daisies show the blue.
And resting in those meadows fair
Are pilgrims speed and word;
Their hair is crowned with silver hair,
They have been burdened borne.
The weakness of life they know,
Their eyes have looked on grief,
With tears they have gone forth to sow,
With patience banded the sheaf.
And now they walk "heavenly quiet,"
The sunbeams smile on their eyes,
Who wisely, from weary eyes
The tears of sorrowing.
And when the shining ones draw near,
And wait them by the hand,
They come without one pang of fear
Unto a clearer land.
— Christian at Work.

Reason.

An article in the ADVOCATE, of April 17, headed "The Ultimate Rule of Right," may admit of a reply, indeed it reads as if challenging an answer. Prof. W. P. Overbey, of Centenary College, certainly did not expect "to annihilate with few words" the theory of Des Cartes, quoted by him, which is but a part of the discussions for centuries, among learned men, Greeks, Romans, French, Germans and English, to be found in more books than will ever be read by any one man. These discussions, running into controversies, involve the relation of reason and revelation to induction and deduction to each other and of God in reference to either or all of them.

This writer dissents in the extreme from the conclusion of W. P. Overbey, wherein he modestly puts revelation aside and claims that reason is the ultimate rule of right. We have thought that reason was always based upon premises, called in logic propositions; which are facts or principles, known or admitted; then reason or argument is the use of language by which we apply these known or admitted facts or principles, to practical cases in forming opinions, controlling conduct and making character.

The importance attached to reason among the ancients was the origin of logic and the syllogism, commenced by Aristotle, which the schoolmen, so called, carried to such an extreme of subtilty that the science became almost in popular estimation and logic has really lost its proper place in a complete education. Reason did not supply the irrepressible demand of human nature for the ultimate rule of right as that Des Cartes and those who argue with him met a glad welcome and cordial reception by all earnest seekers after truth.

The opposition, however, was neither silent nor inactive. Hume, in England, with his denial of a possible miracle; Kant, in Germany, with his ridiculous transcendentalism and the pretended philosophers in France who have the unenviable credit of exalting reason to such a pinnacle as to incarnate their ideal into a ballot of iron of whom the least said the better, nor would this situation be made but for its well known place in French history in the eighteenth century with the result, the guillotine and human blood.

And now in the nineteenth century comes Hicok, Upham and W. P. Overbey, with other great and good men who, consenting to be lead themselves, would lead others by some ultimate rule of right antecedent to or coincident with the revealed will of God.

A few quotations from W. P. Overbey: "Man is ever seeking for reason in all things, and then, when the self-sufficient reason is found, and not until, he rests content, seeing that there is nothing beyond." Answer: Who has decided when this self-sufficient reason is found? Hicok, Upham or W. P. Overbey? If so, What was it and what is it now? when announced this writer will unite in the cry, "Eureka."

W. P. Overbey again: "We know that Des Cartes has many followers, who are willing to submit indolently to his theory, and say that God does not command us because his commands are right, but that his commands are right simply because he commands." This writer would be considered among that number, with Virgil's Italian shepherd.

without any reason as to what they were called to do.
Moses and Elias did not reason. Often God would have them appear to Jesus and his three disciples on Mount Tabor.
The devil did not reason heretofore as to his destiny, and can not reason now as to what he shall do or the limits of what he would do.

Reason appertains to human beings only, commencing with intelligent accountability and ending with the probation of each individual. To all persons, and whenever it may be said, can and ought, reason has its domain, but with God, angels, demons and the dead the words must and will are final and forever.

In Eden it was necessary to contradict and disregard the word of God to prepare the way for the first reason ever recorded. The word of God was, "ye shall not eat lest ye die." The contradiction, "ye shall not die." The suggestion reject the word of God the reason, "your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." (Genesis III, 3-10). The result transgression which "Brought death into the world with all our woe."
There were but little of any attempt to reason at the temptation recorded—Luke III, 5. Both Jesus and the devil quoted Scripture and the Saviour's triumph was by this authority and not by some reason a part from or superior to the words of God.

The greatest of all issues between reason and revelation are found at the crucifixion. Reason will say: it was wrong, the cross, the nails and the spear. Revelation says: "Christ ought to have suffered and died." (Luke xiv, 21-26.) Reason says that no ultimate rule of right can authorize the infliction. Revelation states then: without shedding of blood there is no remission. (Hebrew ix, 22.) Reason again: then the ultimate rule of right demands that each transgression shall answer and die and not one in whom no fault was found. (John xix, 4.) Revelation: God gave and sent the just for the unjust to atone for the guilty. (Romans vi, 7, 8.) Reason: The ultimate rule of right did not admit the sending of Christ to die. Revelation: Christ was a volunteer to "finish the work God gave him to do." (John xvii, 4.) Reason: Both the Father and Son acted without conformity to the ultimate rule of right. Revelation: God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. (John III, 16.)

We conclude then the will of God is ultimate. Revelation may be called penultimate, and then reasons may be as varied and numerous as human thought can originate and human language express.
H. C. C.
HARRISBURG, Md., May, 1884.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)
Wednesday, August 11, 1847: Yesterday morning we had a delightful prayer meeting; a large number out and nearly all blessed. At night Bro. Sparks was expected, but did not come, being absent from Tuscaloosa. Bro. Powell and Hamilton exhorted. Three mourners came forward, and we prayed with them till twelve o'clock. No one clearly converted. This morning a good prayer meeting. Oh, that the work may deepen throughout the community, and all the people be embraced in its gracious influence! Christians seemed to be much revived and encouraged. Oh, that the Lord may do much for my soul during this glorious visitation. I want more faith and power in the ministry and perfect love in my own soul.

August 14: On Thursday morning there was a larger number than usual at the prayer meeting. Five or six mourners came forward. One or two converted, and a general baptism of the members. It was a time of great refreshing towards the close. One sister rejoiced in the witness of full redemption, and great divine influence attended her words. All were melted that approached her. This was Sister Eckford, a devoted Christian. Several lingered in the sanctuary long after dismissal, fasting on heavenly manna which had been rained down so copiously. At night Bro. Hamilton preached from, "They hated me without a cause." On Wednesday night he preached from (Genesis xv, 16). The inquiry of the Amorites is not full. A very awakening discourse. I left Friday morning, and have had good times in my own meetings. There seems to be awakening power among the sinners. May the Lord give us triumphantly and scatter his enemies to the four winds, Amen!

August 21: I returned yesterday from Prairie Hill Camp Meeting. Between forty and fifty conversions took place, and it was truly a time of refreshing. There was a great work among the overseers; six of them were converted and others very serious. Three men came to the meeting expressly to get religion, and came immediately into the altar before an immediate invitation was given, determined not to leave till they were converted, and it was according to their faith. I was led to pray especially for the conversion of one man; who had been very wicked; who was not at the meeting; nor did I know that he was at all serious, or that he would be at the meeting; he did not come until Friday morning. The first moment I saw him he beckoned to me, and when I approached him he said, "I want to go into that altar." Said I, "Come along." He immediately went in and took his seat on the bench and said to me, "I came here for the express purpose of getting religion, and I am determined not to leave till I obtain it." He was happily converted that night, and though quite desirably he skipped like a lamb, exclaiming, "Happy! happy! happy! O, to think that God could convert such a sinner as I am in one day!" He made a valuable member and a useful class leader. The meeting is still going on in Columbus, but seems rather dull. No mourners last night nor this morning. I think there will be some to-night.

September 5: On the night above referred to my eldest son George and two others came to the altar as penitents, since when they have all been converted. Several more have been converted, and the meeting is still progressing with increasing interest. Last night I spent at Mr. Wm. B. Winston's Plymouth plantation. I found the overseer, Mr. Sanderson, and his wife, both serious and at family prayer. Mrs. Sanderson professed religion, and Mr. Sanderson struggled long in prayer for salvation. We had a powerful time. I had the negroes in praying for the overseer and his wife, and we all rejoiced together. I feel thankful to God for his mercies and blessings and would give him all the glory; for he alone is worthy and he does all the good that is done in the world.

"Our good is alive."
The place of every virtuous thought
And every righteous act is thine."

On November 12 I wrote in my journal: I have recently experienced some revival in my own soul. I have felt an increased desire for holiness, and have been blessed with more devotional feelings, have been more drawn out in prayer, and been blessed with comfortable religious exercises. I humbly hope that the Lord has commenced a deeper work of grace in my heart and that I shall be enabled to make some higher attainments than I have yet realized. I want to feel the influence of the Spirit constantly in my heart. I want my Saviour to dwell in my heart, by faith, and to be always in the spirit of prayer and praise. I believe it is the purchased privilege of all believers to be always rejoicing in the Lord, to be religious in all things, and at all times. I want to be altogether the Lord's, and to be always employed in his work. I waste too much time. I do not keep myself properly disciplined. I am too indolent, too self-seeking, too proud and too uncharitable. I want more faith, more zeal and much more self-denial. Lord, help me; I must amend. I will try to amend.

On December 14 I wrote in reference to the overseers, "I have spent the last two nights with pious overseers, who have recently been converted and who are in the full enjoyment of religion. I feel convicted when witnessing their zeal and love; they seem to be feasting on heavenly manna continually. I believe the overseers are becoming the most religious class of the community. I sincerely pray that they may all become pious, God-fearing men; nothing would have a better influence in promoting the welfare of the blacks. These men are among the most influential of their class, and will do good."
(To be continued.)

The School-House to Decide the Temperance Question.

BY MRS. M. H. HUNT.

In the temperance movement now agitating our country, threatening to disrupt it, not destroy old landmarks in party politics, sweeping great States like Maine, Kansas and Iowa, and leaving majorities in its favor, the whole question rests upon the character of a certain chemical substance called alcohol. If moderately used it is a good creature, a safe luxury; then all this agitation is feigned, and the temperance cause is a hoax. But if it is a poison, and the evils resulting from intemperance are only a natural sequence from the nature of alcohol when used as a beverage, then as such it is bad—bad per se—and it is wrong to use it, wrong to legalize its sale for the State, and wrong to legalize its traffic; and the families are the people who cling to it, who drink it, or vote for it.

Is alcohol, in any quantity as a human beverage, good or bad? Is the pivotal question on which the entire argument in this whole temperance cause rests? And the logic for or against is as invincible as a Minie ball.
The hallucination about this substance, ascribing to it properties it never possessed, is dispelled by the nineteenth century touch of science.
The American Medical Association, our national society of Allopathists, of physicians in this country, at their annual meeting in St. Paul, Minn., in June last, resolved in a series of resolutions their conviction, that "Alcohol should be classed with other powerful drugs; that when prescribed moderately it should be given with conscientious caution and a sense of great responsibility. That used as a beverage it is productive of a large amount of physical and mental disease; that it entails diseased and enfeebled constitutions upon offspring, and is the cause of a large percentage of the crime and pauperism of our large cities and country."

This testimony of eminent men in the healing art in our land is more than corroborated by that of equally profound scientists on the other side of the Atlantic.
These convictions, comparatively new, have fought their way step by step against the combined forces of long-established habits, appetites, prejudices, and to-day are being formulated into prohibitory legislation. The success of such legislation depends upon the knowledge or ignorance of the masses of the real truth about their favorite beverage. In no reform can we go far in advance of the people. We must convince them before we can depend on their aid.

The false idea now so prevalent that "the abuse and not the use of alcohol is the cause of the trouble," must be dispelled by a universal knowledge of the truth about this thing. Dr. Willard Parker, of New York, the Nestor of American physicians, in a recent letter, says: "We shall never control alcohol until we have taught the people, first, what alcohol is; second, what it will do to us if we drink it; third, what it will make us do. I can see no way that this can be done but through the schools." A text book teaching these elementary facts in the hands of every child in the land as soon as it is old enough to read, is what we want. A law requiring such teaching in all our public schools would be the wisest kind of temperance legislation. It is a question of intelligence in the beginning, easily controlled if we start on the right, but too easy task if we wait until it becomes one of imperious appetite.

All history proves that it is safe to trust great questions to the verdict of the people, if they understand and believe the truths in the case. If we can imbue in the intelligence of the children of this generation, before they are contaminated by it, the scientific facts about alcohol, they will banish it and its vendors from the pale of human society when they come to be voters in our States.

The Star of Bethlehem of the temperance reform shined over the school-house,—"N. E. Journal of Education."

The Divinely Appointed Text Book.

TO PASTOR, SUPERINTENDENTS AND ALL FRIENDS OF THE SABBATH-SCHOOL.

As fellow-workers in the gospel and in the Sabbath-school, we have been deeply impressed with the prevalent abuse of the Bible as a text book. We rejoice most heartily with all Christian people in the uniformity of Scripture instruction secured by the system of international lessons and leaflets, and we appreciate the valuable service rendered by the great variety of lesson books, class books and other helps so generally employed; but we are constrained to feel that there is need of making all these supplementary to the use of the Bible itself. We are led to believe that large numbers of the scholars never use it in preparing or reciting at lesson, and too often they have a teacher's example for depending entirely on the helps, with no Bible at hand. How can any such fragmentary method be any less injurious in a Sunday-school than in a secular school?

Such a method tends inevitably to keep God's word from the place it should occupy as the text book he has himself provided. Such a disuse of the sacred volume prevents the familiarity with it, which is so desirable, and tends to a fragmentary and superficial method of study by the scholars, and to a loss of the connection and parallel passages, and in general leaves out of sight the divine order and relations of Scripture truths.

We feel assured that you will agree with us in the principle, for all evangelical Christians make the Sabbath-school a place in theory, a distinctive feature of the Bible school. Therefore, we venture nothing in requesting your sympathy and co-operation, with pen and voice, in an organized effort to put the Bible into the hands of every Sunday-school teacher and scholar in our country, and to secure a constant employment in studying the lessons both at home and in school.

Should not each scholar be persuaded, if possible, even at some sacrifice, to purchase a Bible for himself, or at any rate to own one?

Should not each teacher encourage his scholars among his scholars by precept and by example?

Should not each school adopt for itself a rule enforcing the use of that blessed book in all regular exercises?

Perhaps you have already secured to the Bible in your school the place that it should occupy, and kindly give us the result. But, in any case, we desire to know whether your experience has led you to approve the change which we urge.

In order to obtain definite returns from this letter, we recommend that the first Sunday of October next be fixed as the date upon which each Sunday-school shall strenuously endeavor that every member be possessed of a Bible of his own. That time is far enough in the future to secure concert of action among the schools, to obtain the necessary supplies of books, and to enable every scholar in current employment to have enough for the purchase.

If this recommendation be approved, we suggest also that the first Sunday of November next be observed by Sunday-schools as a day of thanksgiving for the open Bible, and of prayer for the promised blessing upon its use.
Please favor us with your reply in full at the earliest practical date, that we may be enabled to bring these recommendations before all the Sunday-schools in the country if our circular letter meets general approbation.
Please address replies to Mrs. S. L. Brown, 115 Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will soon send out a circular prayer in view of the presidential campaign) addressed to the Christian people of America, fixing Tuesday, May 27, as the time. Each hour has a special subject assigned, including prayer for pastors and editors, dead issues and toward that of a national constitutional amendment prohibiting traffic in intoxicating liquors as a drink; for party leaders, that their platform may recognize this issue, and their candidate be one whose habits shall be an example to young men. Also, and emphatically, a prayer for Christian voters that their spiritual perceptions may be quickened, their consciences aroused and their house constituents (meaning the women of their households) represented by them at the ballot-box. This day to be observed by all Christian women, and is requested to preach on the Sabbath following upon "God in Government."

Determined effort is essential to success in almost everything. A man who engages in anything in a half-hearted way, is not likely to succeed. "Whoever they have found to do, do it with thy might," is an important injunction, and one that must be observed by every man who would succeed in accomplishing his purpose. The world has no need of drones. Active, determined effort is what is wanted in every good cause. Press to the front rank; do to the utmost of your ability; make your mark, and live to some purpose.—Methodist Recorder.

Our Young People.

ASK MOTHER.

Where is the sweetest pet,
The brightest bride yet?
Whose are the prettiest eyes,
Most loving and most wise?
What form the fairest mold?
Is with its weight in gold?
You can't imagine! Well,
Ask mother—she can tell!
Where is the sunniest gleam
That makes her life a dream?
Where are the rosy cheeks,
And blessed little nose,
And the dimpled hands and feet,
The models all complete,
Which nature can't excel?
Ask mother—she can tell!
Who is the grandest king,
Or queen, or angelic thing,
That may be great or high?
Who wandered from the sky,
The loss of girls or boys,
To be her joy of joys?
You guess—the baby? Well,
Ask mother—she can tell!

MR. EDITOR: I write to answer Mary Carradine's aerotic. The name of the court held on Mar's Hill was Aropeagus; the Ishmaelites sold Joseph to the Midianites; the oldest son of Isaac was Esau; the father-in-law of Jacob was Laban; the first word of the twelfth chapter of Luke is In; the third son of David was Absalom; the grandmother of Jacob and Esau was Sarah; the twelfth book of the New Testament is Colossians; the king of Bashan was Og; the daughter of David was Tamar; the son of Eunice and grandson of Lois was Timothy; The initials form the name of Amelia Scott, Ida Sallier is wrong in regard to the commencement of Methodism. Methodism commenced one hundred and fifty-four years ago. This is the Centennial of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America at the Conference at Baltimore, Dec. 25th, 1781. Now Mr. Editor, let me tell my little friends about one of my missionary chickens which, unfortunately, did not hatch. It is a wonderful freak of nature. It has two distinctly formed bodies, joined at the posterior. In front of the point of reunion it has two heads, each perfectly formed; four wings—two on each part; three feet—two of which are perfect. I carried it down town. It is now in a bottle of alcohol at a drug-store.
Your little friend,
JOSEPH E. NORWOOD.
LINCOLN, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote to your paper once, but I suppose the waste-basket or some other dreadful place received it, so I will write again. I think you are very kind to let the young folks have a department in your good paper. Our preacher is Mr. Gilmore, and we like him very much. We have not a Sunday-school now, but I hope we may soon. I will answer some of the little readers' questions: The words "blue sea" are found in Exodus xxi, 37, and "bottles," Luke v, 37, 38. I will also ask some questions: Who pitched the twelve stones from Gilgal into Jordan? Where are the words "coriander seed" found in the Bible? I delight in searching for the questions, and also in reading the young folks column. My sister and I are going to have a missionary ben this year. If this finds room in your paper I will write again. I will close before my letter gets too long, and hope it may not have the fate of my other. Your little friend,
SALLIE L. HAWKEY.
CLINTON, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter from this place, I have concluded to write one. Papa takes your paper and we all like it so much. I attend Sunday-school regularly. We have two churches, Baptist and Methodist, and the Presbyterians are getting up money to build them a church. I go to the Methodist Sunday-school. [Mr. M. C. Shell is our superintendent, and Mrs. Shell is our teacher. We all like her so much, and would not be contented with any other one. Ernest Smith asks where the word "honeycomb" is found in the Bible? It is found in the Song of Solomon iv, 11; v, 1. I will now ask our little correspondents where the words "pomegranates," "grasshopper" and "stiff-necked people" are found in the Bible? I will close. As this is my first attempt to write to a paper I hope it will not find its way to the waste basket.
Your little friend,
ELLA HOBSON.
HOUSTON, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters written from this part of our State, I am going to write you a short missive. I am a girl fourteen years old. I go to Sunday-school twice a month. We have not got a very good Sunday-school this year. Our preacher is Mr. Featherston. We like him very much. He preaches once a month for us. As this is my first letter to the young people's column, I will close, hoping it will not reach the waste-basket.
Your friend,
KATE FELDOR.
TOPISAW, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: I believe I will write you a letter. I will not ask any questions, though I can ask questions that papa can not answer. I do not think Ida Sallier's definition of Centenary year is correct. I believe the Methodist started in 1739, but did not start in America till 1785. Now, in 1784, Thomas Coke came over to America from England, and called together all the preachers, and at the Christmas Conference held at Baltimore, the Methodist Church was organized. So it has been one hundred years since Methodism was organized in America. I am going to give something this year.
Your little friend,
IRVIN ARNOLD LEWIS.
LANSINGTON, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: As the children are writing so much for your paper, I will write something too. I will soon be twelve years old, but I am not a very little boy. I joined the church last year. My papa is the preacher on the Vossburg and Hiedelburg circuits this year. We like to live here very well. I am going to school here; we have about 19 scholars. Prof. James is my teacher. We also have a very good Sunday-school. I will answer Fletcher Tatum's question: Noah's ark was built of gopher wood. I will also answer Willie Cousley's question: "Dead dog" is found in I Samuel xiv, 11. I will also ask a question or two: How old was Noah when he built the ark? Where is the word "honeycomb" found in the Old Testament? I will close for fear my letter will be too long.
Your new friend,
GEORGE L. CARLEY.
VOSSBURG, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: Mamma has been taking your paper ever since I can remember. I love to read the letters from the little folks. As I have not seen any from our little town, I thought I would write one. We have a good Sunday-school here, and my uncle, Mr. T. D. Porter, is superintendent. Miss Bessie Coleman is my teacher. I have been attending Sunday-school regularly ever since I was three years old. We have preaching three Sundays in every month. Bro. D. C. Langford is our pastor. I will answer Minnie Roberts' question: The four things Solomon says are little on earth, but exceedingly wise, are ants, conies, locusts and spiders. It is found in Proverbs xxx. I will ask a question: Which of the disciples was called the brother of the Lord? Your little friend,
MINNIE A. WILK.
TACHPHARKE STATION, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: I am so glad you have encouraged us by printing our little child-like letters. I am sure we read, more and try more to learn the Scriptures. We children need a great deal of help in trying to be good, and I hope your labor for us will not be lost. Rosa Mixor, Nebuchadnezzar eat grass like an ox. It is found in Daniel v. A. W. Manly, Josiah was the boy king. It is found in II Kings xxi. Mr. Editor, I think this Centennial year dates from the first Methodist Conference which met on this continent. Please correct me if I am wrong. I will ask a question: For whose sake did the annual run backward ten degrees. Love to you and all the cousins.
REULAH LEWIS.
CHINA GROVE, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: I see so many letters from the young people in your good paper and I like to read them so much, I thought I would write you a short one. We have a very good Sabbath-school near by, and my father is the superintendent. Bro. Charles Jordan is our pastor this year, and we love him very much. I will answer one of Little Goodwyn's questions: The word "reverend" is found in Psalms xli, 9. I will ask a question: In what part of the Bible is the word "mule" found? I remain, Your little friend,
EMMA F. ADANT.
SHREVE, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy living in the central city—not of China—but of Mississipp. I fear some people think Canton is celestial only in name. Though I have plenty of work to do in school, yet I find leisure time for reading. Of course I have become acquainted with Robinson Crusoe, Pilgrim's Progress and others. I take the Youth's Companion and enjoy it very much, especially its stories of adventures. Papa takes the Christian Advocate. I read and enjoy the young folks column. I saw Willie Nelson's question, "Where can the words 'Cut off a dog's neck' be found?" They are found in Isaiah xlii, 3. I will ask a question: Who in the Bible was deceived by monilly bread?
H. R. SINGLETON, JR.
CANTON, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: As I have seen so many letters from the little folks, I thought I would write a short letter for the first time. My papa is a minister and is on the Knoxville circuit, and has to cross the Housa Chitto river to get to his work. He has a large family of ten children. I am not going to school now. I have no teacher. Mamma teaches us at home. I hope I will get a teacher soon. I will close my uninteresting letter.
Your little friend,
ANNA PETTY.
CANTONVILLE, Mississipp.

MR. EDITOR: My mamma takes the Advocate, and as so many little folks write to your paper, I thought I would drop you a few lines. I am a little boy five years old. My papa is a planter. I have two sisters younger than myself. Their names are Agnes and Belle. I will ask the question, Who interpreted the handwriting on the wall, and what was it? With kind wishes for the Advocate, I am,
Respectfully yours,
DELANEY CALHOUN.
RABBIT STATION, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy six years old. I am going to school, and I hope my teacher will say I am a good boy. Jacob's ladder reached from earth to heaven, and angels ascended and descended on it. It is found in Genesis. I will ask the cousins, How many stories high was Noah's ark?
THEODORE LEWIS.
CHINA GROVE, Mississipp.

Christian Advocate.

ORDER OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. R. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1884.

The Mobile Register brings cheerful tidings from our Israel in that city. A revival is in progress, led by Drs. Crawford and Loveless. Forty or fifty were at the altar in Franklin Street last Friday night and twenty-five were converted. The meeting has taken a fresh impetus, and the Holy Spirit only knows whereunto it may lead.

Methodism's maxim, "All at it, and always at it," needs emphasis this Centenary year. There must be no exemptions or intermissions if a success worthy of our grand history is to be achieved. Every soul that can offer a prayer or sing a song or deliver an exhortation or give a penny must be wheeled into line. This must be a year of no laggards and sluggards.

The shrewd party leaders on both sides in advance of the nominating conventions announce as their choice for President "any available man who can carry the doubtful States." A good suggestion to congregations. Only ask for the pastor who can do the most doubtful and difficult work and leave the Bishop to select him. Availability is the condition of appointment. The man who can accomplish the most immediate good should be desired and sustained.

In course of an able address, the following words of appeal to the ministry were spoken by Hon. Wm. M. Everts, of New York, one of the foremost lawyers and statesmen of our country. They are worthy of reproduction and the warmest commendation. Unlike many men in his profession, Mr. Everts has a just conception of the true function of the pulpit. He said:

Stand fast, brethren in the ministry. Preach the gospel with no apologetic airs. Preach positively. Declare the whole counsel of God whether man will hear or forbear.

The Western Christian Advocate, published at Cincinnati, has celebrated its semi-centennial. The first number was issued May 2, 1834, with Thomas A. Morris as editor. Its succession of editors has been as follows: 1834 to 1836, Thomas A. Morris; 1836 to 1845, Charles Elliott; 1845 to 1852, Matthew Simpson; 1852 to 1856, Charles Elliott; 1856 to 1864, Charles Kingsley; 1864 to 1868, John M. Reid; 1868 to 1872, Stephen M. Merrill; 1872 to the present, Francis S. Hoyt. Of these, Morris, Simpson, Kingsley and Merrill were elevated to the episcopacy.

As evidence of the world's proneness to substitute inference for fact witness the following. Dr. Bascom, president of the Wisconsin State University, addressed a letter to the city of Madison on the relations of the university to the city, and in it urged the enforcement of the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors. Whereupon the papers published abroad that Dr. Bascom reported the institution in a terrible condition, that young men entered there to become dissipated and that roidism prevailed to an alarming extent. But in order to break the force of appeal against liquor such falsehoods are staple arguments. Its friends would destroy a university before they would embarrass their darling iniquity.

One fact is noticeable and commendable in our Southern colleges—their freedom from foolish extravagance. But few young men indulge the spirit of the spendthrift, and none find that liberal pocket-change elevates their standing with the faculty or multiplies worthy friends among the students. We hope that spirit may ever doubt our institutions of learning, and never allow the wild extravagance of Northern and European colleges to stain their noble record. And to this end they must prohibit "college athletics," so-called—the wild excess that provoked a facetious Japanese to write home that in America college boys studied boat-racing, and when it rained they read books. So great is this demoralization that educators, Bishops and other clergy are becoming alarmed. We quote from Bishop Huntington:

College extravagance has come to be a monstrous evil. The expenses of a college course, for tuition, board, books, etc., are but a fraction of the amount which public sentiment requires for societies, spreads, games and matches. This is not only a needless burden to parents, but actually discourages worthy young men from going to college.

Editorial Correspondence.

An engagement to attend the Columbus District Conference at Shuqualak, Miss., and visit Enterprise en route, necessitated our leaving the city on Wednesday morning of last week. And this gave a long coveted opportunity of a trip over the new railroad—the New Orleans and Northeastern. Its praise has been sounded in all the papers, but on the way we felt that in smoothness, swiftness, ample accommodations, splendid equipments, variety and beauty of scenery, the half had not been told. The ride over the long bridge—the longest in the world—was a rare experience. The train skirts along the shore of Lake Pontchartrain for about twelve miles—a continuous trestle—and then across the placid water for five miles to high land. There are two draw-bridges for vessels to pass through. Here and there on the lake were the white sails of different craft bringing to market the treasures of the deep. Beyond the lake we plunged into the far-famed, exhaustless pine forests of Mississippi—a wealth of the finest timber the world affords. Little towns are sprouting up along the way, which in time are destined to become important centers of trade. The lands adjacent are comparatively poor, but susceptible of ready fertilization and capable of producing varied and large crops. That is the home of the sheep. The rolling hillsides and beautiful water courses secure thorough drainage and a dry soil. This, with a luxuriant, nutritious grass that perfectly covers the ground beneath the stately pines, eminently adapts it to sheep culture. Some farmers, we understood, had large flocks, and made them most profitable. Their fleece is said to be exceptionally fine.

Besides sheep and mulberries, that is a region of good old orthodox large families. We heard of two neighbors whose children aggregated thirty-three; one had sixteen, the other seventeen. Into that religious association we would like to immigrate some of the fashionable Zion of New England. One or two children in a family up in that latitude are all that respectable society will tolerate.

At about four P. M. we reached Enterprise, having made 180 miles in seven hours, without "let or hindrance," delay or jostle. Here the enterprising pastor, Rev. J. M. Weems, and Capt. Davis were in readiness to extend a welcome, and give us a ride behind a pair of handsome Kentucky iron grays. At night a large congregation met for worship, and the editor expounded as best he could. Such singing we have not met in many places of our Israel, and a more pleasant visit we have not enjoyed. The church is in fine condition, and the outlook favorable for a good Centenary year. A horse-car line has been built connecting the two depots, which will prove a great convenience and benefit. We found warm friends of the ADVOCATE and secured others. For special attentions and hospitality we shall long cherish the memory of that visit to Enterprise.

On Thursday afternoon a run of less than an hour brought us to Meridian by the Northeastern, where a few hours were spent most delightfully shaking hands with brethren beloved. President McVoy, whose college is closing up a prosperous term, Presiding Elder Godfrey, a veteran in the sub-episcopacy, and whose health we are glad to know is ruddier than for a year or two, and Pastor Norsworthy, who has just closed a successful revival meeting, were all at home and at work.

Shuqualak is fifty-three miles north of Meridian, on the Mobile and Ohio railroad, and a pleasant little village. Ecclesiastically it is now connected with Macon, and is served by Rev. J. M. Boon most acceptably. We found the District Conference in session and well advanced in business. Dr. T. C. Wier, presiding elder, in the chair, and Bro. Lampkin, of Starkville, secretary. The preachers all made their reports in writing, with the privilege of additional or explanatory statements. This secured condensation and accuracy, and saved the secretary a vast deal of labor. We like the plan and commend it to the favor of other Conferences.

The district is well manned by active, energetic pastors, and their reports indicated an advance over last year. In the organization and rejuvenation of Sunday-schools, the building and repairing of churches and parsonages, and in the re-enthronement of the old revival spirit and methods of early Methodism, the district is moving forward. The admirable report on Sunday-schools, written by the distinguished veteran in that department of service, Judge H. W. Foote, elicited intelligent discussion, and was enthusiastically adopted.

On Friday night the Centenary mass meeting was held, with addresses by Rev. J. S. Oakley, of Starkville, and this editor. Bro. Oakley is a native of Sheffield, England, and is personally acquainted with many of the historic places connected with the labors of Mr. Wesley and his brave coadjutors. His speech was happily conceived, and was a rare treat to an immense congregation. We pray that an influence may go out from that evening over the entire district quickening confectional enthusiasm and inspiring great things for North Mississippi Methodism.

In view of Dr. Wier's retirement from the superintendency of the district after this year, the Conference paid fitting tribute to his fidelity, ability and marked efficiency in a series of resolutions. He has the conservatism and decision of a leader united with a gentle, companionable spirit, that wins the confidence and affection of his brethren. It is a coveted honor thus to retire to another field after a quadrennium of successful and happy toil. The Conference passed, by a rising vote, another resolution, which we wish here to reproduce with emphasis:

Whereas, The Cotton Centennial and World's Industrial Exposition is to be held in the city of New Orleans, beginning December next; And whereas, It has been endorsed by the United States government and by the several States in the Union; And whereas Sunday is a civil day, and its rest prescribed and protected by statute in every State, with possibly one exception; And whereas, The Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876 and the Louisville Exposition in 1883, did respect that national sentiment; therefore Resolved, By the Columbus District Conference of the North Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, representing a communicant membership of 4,500 persons, citizens of the State of Mississippi, that the Board of Management of the Cotton Centennial and World's Industrial Exposition be requested to close the gates of the Exposition grounds on Sunday.

As the people of Mississippi and other States will be the liberal patrons of the Exposition, and from their public treasures money has been voted to sustain it, they have a perfect right to make this request. And we say here and now, that if this and other requests are disregarded, it will be an offense to the moral sense of this great nation, richly deserving condemnation and the withholding of public patronage.

Other matters connected with the Conference and the charming little town of Shuqualak we desired to present, but space will not allow. With grateful acknowledgments to Mrs. Slaughter for appreciated hospitality, and kind attentions from the entire community, we left on Saturday night, and ran down to Meridian to spend the Sabbath. Here Pastor Norsworthy worked a jaded editor to the full measure of his strength. Two sermons, and an afternoon talk at the Young Men's Christian Association meeting, attending Sunday-school, and a meeting of the county Bible Society, very nearly consumed the day. Meridian is putting on metropolitan airs, and has a right to do. She is growing rapidly and substantially, and is already known as the "Atlanta of Mississippi." Our church also grows apace, under its active pastor, claiming the largest congregation in the city. A new church building, of architectural taste and finish, ought to be projected this Centenary year. And so after completing this round of visitation and labor, here we are Monday morning at our desk, at 112 Camp street, with a fine list of subscribers and a snug sum of coveted cash.

"Paralyzed by Piety."

One of the most eloquent tributes to Christianity we have read in years has been paid by its enemy. Mr. Moncme D. Conway, the American apostle of liberalism, who has resided for some years in London, engaged in literary pursuits, has recently been on a visit to the Sandwich Islands. He made diligent observations, and reported his conclusions in a sweeping epistle that speaks volumes for the power of Christian truth. It will be remembered that only a little over fifty years have passed since the first missionary landed at Honolulu. He found the grossest forms of idolatry, the most bestial vices and horrid cannibalism. Patiently the work of preaching the gospel of Christ went on, converts multiplying, laborers increasing, until in just a jubilee of years the Sandwich Islands were stricken from the list of foreign missions. The churches became not only self-sustaining, but themselves sent a missionary abroad. Now Mr. Conway visits the land so recently brought from heathen darkness under the influence of Christianity. Of course he does not see its best fruitage. Years of education must yet pass before its highest expression will be observable. But what says the high priest of liberalism?

In the first place, he was disgusted with the Puritanic strictness of the Sabbath. He says: "Never in Scotland or Connecticut have I seen such a paralysis as fell upon Honolulu the first day of the week." He called it a "silent city, paralyzed by piety," and said he had to "go to church to see people." This was to him disappointment even to disgust. He expected to witness "merry scenes, islanders swimming around the ship in Arcadian innocence, the joyous dance and song of the guileless children of the sun." It was not the purpose of this boasted apostle of culture to make an admission in favor of Christianity, but such is the eloquent undertone and interlude of every word he has written. Would to God a like "paralysis of piety" could affect the Sabbath life of all our cities, and more especially our own New Orleans. Such an attack would be moral and civil health—a salutary paralysis of motion necessary in the divise economy for physical and spiritual recuperation.

Northern Methodist General Conference.

Not much important legislation is ever effected in a Methodist General Conference before the latter part of the second week of its session. Every memorial, resolution, etc., has to go to its appropriate committee, and there receive patient consideration before the Conference, as a body, is acquainted with its merits. Then the committee's report has to be printed and laid over for the members to quietly study. This method, though tedious, serves as a check to hasty legislation, and gives progressive conservatism a good vantage ground. The history of ecclesiastical legislation in American Episcopal Methodism is more remarkable for deliberation than the Parliament of England. Changes have been made, but only to meet the indications of Providence and the imperative demands of the hour. Many revisions are suggested, but few accepted.

The General Conference now in session at Philadelphia has done but little so far. Dr. D. Curry is chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy. The College of Bishops have suggested the election of three new Bishops, and to-day has been set apart for the election. How many will be chosen has not been agreed upon at this writing. The Committee on Episcopacy have recommended the location of one Bishop in India. Dr. J. M. Buckley is chairman of the Committee on Itinerancy, to whom the question of the time-limit extension or removal will be referred. His position on that subject is well known. To-night the Southern Methodist and Canadian fraternal delegates will be formally received. Their addresses will be delivered in the spacious Arch Street Church.

The Committee on Missions have recommended that the missions in China and Japan be made into a separate Annual Conference, and that the South India Conference should have the privilege to divide itself into two Annual Conferences during the next quadrennium.

A Judge Sibley, of Ohio, introduced a resolution fixing the Bishop's tenure of office at twelve years. In such a venture the learned judge is likely to be in "a crowd by himself."

Revival at Columbus.

A great revival is in progress at Columbus, Miss. Rev. J. H. Scruggs pastor. The entire community has been stirred to the very depths. The venerable George Schaeffer, who has known the place for years, says "there was never anything like it in Columbus." Bro. Scruggs has been assisted by Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Corinth, and Rev. E. G. Kilgore. The Presbyterian pastor, Rev. Mr. McAlpine, has engaged in the work with true evangelical heartiness. "We clip the following notice of the revival from the Columbus Index:

It is doubtful whether in the history of Columbus there has been such a religious awakening as that now going on at the Methodist Church. Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Christians all are cordially co-operating in the work, forgetful of every sectarian consideration. There are meetings in the morning, three in the afternoon and a general gathering of all sorts and classes at night. Not far from a thousand persons were in attendance on Tuesday night, the colored people even crowding into the galleries. In these days an usual spectacle. The oldest in spiritual matters amongst us declare that the spectacle presented at the "second service" Tuesday night exceeded any religious manifestation ever seen in our city. A half hundred or more were moved under conviction to ask for the prayers of God's people. The work was quiet, free from all wrought up excitement, but attended by an expression of feeling profound, impressive, even to the most callous beholder.

Dr. Longacre's Address.

In his very felicitous address of welcome to the General Conference the Rev. Dr. Longacre, of Philadelphia, made interesting reference to some historic facts connected with the Methodism of that city. New York and Baltimore may contend as to which held the first Methodist "meeting," but Philadelphia welcomed the first regular itinerants. We make room for a few appetizing extracts:

We think our city has strong and interesting claims to be the place of your meeting. Here arrived in 1769 the first preachers Mr. Wesley sent to America, Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmoor, after a rough nine weeks' ocean voyage. They had come, using their own words, "To devote themselves entirely to God, denying themselves, taking up their cross daily, steadily aiming at one thing to save their own souls and them that heard them." When they found, on arriving, "a society of about one hundred members" they wrote back, joyfully, to Mr. Wesley: "This is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes." They preached chiefly in the open air, on the steps of the old State House on Chestnut street, and on the race-course, where Franklin Square now is.

It was in this city, a few years later, in 1773, the first Annual Conference in America was held, with nine preachers. One hundred and eleven years have passed since, and of the twenty-five General Conferences this is but the third to hold its sessions here.

But now the 100 members have become 100 churches within the city limits, and our Methodist population is the greatest of any in the world. London city, perhaps, excepted; and you who meet here, instead of the nine preachers of the first Conference are the 416 clerical representatives of 1,750,000 members and 12,500 preachers in this country alone.

In not a few of our homes there are treasured traditions of the guests of the former General Conferences. In my father's house Bishop Andrew was a guest as a delegate from Georgia when he was made Bishop, and one of his first sacramental acts afterward was his own baptism. Dr. Capers, afterward Bishop in the Church, South, was his room-mate. Too young, of course, to remember the time, I know they won the hearts of the household, and, although in later years they were separated from us by the division of the church, their names remained enshrined among our household veneration; and I make no doubt but that some day—yes, and before now—the cloud of earthly difference has been lifted, and the old love, that had been strained a little here, has leaped into fuller and better freedom.

Bishop Riley, of Mexico.

The career of this well-known ecclesiastic in the Republic of Mexico has been a strange contradiction. He has shown indomitable zeal and a commendable liberality, having spent his large fortune in missionary work. But with this he has united an offensive imperiousness, dogmatism and ecclesiastical bigotry, quite inconsistent with the consecrated spirit of a missionary disciple of Christ. He has discounted and obstructed the work of other missionaries, and administered the affairs of his own church in such a spirit as to lose what had been gained and invoke the condemnation of the church at home. Fortunately for the peace and honor of the Episcopal Church in the United States, he has at last resigned his commission and connection with that board, and is now pursuing an independent work. He is Bishop of his own diocese, without obligation to any other authority. His last performance was to preach an incendiary sermon, designed to inflame the mob spirit, at all times too prevalent and dangerous in that Republic. The sermon has been published as a tract by Roman fanatics and scattered broadcast over the land. It serves as a good argument against all evangelical missions, and is destined, as designed, we fear to precipitate serious trouble. The following extract is a translation from the sermo-moble firebrand:

Representatives of certain sects from a neighboring nation, a nation which in 1817 waged unprovoked war in the very heart of this Republic, robbing it of half its territory, unfortunately have arrayed themselves against the Mexican church, not only here, but in other lands. This Mexican church, entirely distinct from the American missions which have been establishing themselves here since 1873, missions of the so-called churches of the Northern Methodists and of the Southern Methodists of the United States, and of various other sects in that land, and which has been bitterly opposed by their emissaries both in and out of the Republic, this Mexican church ought not to be confounded with these other bodies. Which body will be most likely to preach a pure Christianity in Mexico, a church in the highest sense Christian, patriotic and Mexican, or a church shameful, anti-patriotic and Roman, or unchristian from the United States pertaining to sects which bear the name of North and South even on Mexican soil?

The first religious newspaper published in America was at Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1814, by John Andrews, and called the Recorder.

—Bishop Keener has returned from District Conference work in Alabama, and preached last Sunday at Felicely Street.

—Judah P. Benjamin, the great jurist and statesman, and once distinguished citizen of and senator from Louisiana, is dead.

—The library at Washington is now the largest in this country, and is the sixth in point of size of the great government libraries in the world.

—The Board of Trustees of Paine Institute will meet at the rooms of the Institute in Augusta, Ga., June 11. A full attendance is urgently requested.

—Rev. Felix R. Hill, pastor of Carondelet Street Church, New Orleans, will preach the commencement sermon at East Mississippi Female College, June 15.

—The bill providing for a "horizontal" reduction of the tariff known as the "Morrison bill," was defeated in the lower house of Congress last week by a vote of 151 to 151.

—Rev. R. F. Chew, professor of Ancient Languages in Bellevue Collegiate Institute, Caledonia, Mo., will deliver the alumni address at the Vanderbilt University commencement.

—Dr. James Strong has a good word for the connectional spirit of Drew Theological Seminary. He says out of 300 who have graduated there only six have left the Methodist Episcopal Church.

—The Des Moines Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at its recent session, passed strong resolutions recognizing the efficient work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Iowa.

—A note from Presiding Elder D. A. Little, of the Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, just as we are going to press, brings the sad news of the death of Rev. G. M. Gilmore at Clinton, La., on last Sabbath morning at 7:30 o'clock. A more extended notice will appear soon.

—The Rev. J. W. Lowrance, of Kansas City, writes that his beautiful new church, Lydia Avenue, is finished, and will be dedicated by Bishop Wilson on the twenty-fifth instant. It has a seating capacity of five hundred. The pastor held the first service in it two weeks ago, when a class of seventeen were received on profession of faith.

—Rev. Thomas J. Gooch, of the Missouri Conference, and presiding elder of the Mexico district, died on the morning of the first of May. He was a man of the spirit, versatile gifts and great energy. His labors were abundant and successful. In the midst of his years he has fallen on sleep, greatly lamented by the entire Methodism of Missouri.

—Miss Laura Haygood, who will sail in October for missionary work in China, has been on a visit to Nashville. Her presence occasioned a missionary prayer meeting at McKendree. The words she spoke that evening, Dr. Kelley says, were "weighty and wise." Such laborers, who "can not be spared at home," are the ones most needed for the foreign field.

—Dr. J. H. Riggs, of London, ex-President of the Wesleyan Conference, in the recent article on Methodism in the Encyclopedia Britannica, thus speaks, and truly, of our episcopacy: "American Methodism is episcopal. But its episcopacy is neither prelatical nor diocesan. The Bishops are superintending preachers, and they visit the whole territory of Methodism in rotation, holding (presiding over) the Annual Conferences."

—We visited the Exposition grounds last week to note the progress of work. Six hundred men were busily engaged, and the mammoth structure was going up quite rapidly. The St. Charles street elevation and a part of the city side elevation are aided and ready for the cornice and roofing. The horticultural hall, a cruciform building, will be quite handsome. Everything betokens a grand success of the happily conceived enterprise.

—The case of Rev. J. M. Fuller, of the Detroit Conference, is a little anomalous and is likely to occasion the arraignment of two Bishops for maladministration. The facts in the case are as follows: Bishop Harris, at Bro. Fuller's request, transferred him from the Detroit to the Tennessee Conference. Bishop Andrews, presiding at the latter Conference, it is alleged, refused the transferred brother an appointment because he was not consulted, and finally retransferred him back to the Detroit Conference. By that time, however, all the appointments were filled, and Bro. Fuller was left churchless. He wants the matter adjusted and the "limitations of episcopal prerogatives" ascertained and defined.

Rev. G. W. Horn has returned from Colorado to his friends in Missouri, with whom he wishes to die. He said to the editor of the Colorado Methodist, who visited him at Colorado Springs just before leaving: "Tell my friends I am disappointed in not regaining my health, but am reconciled and at peace and ready to die at any time. I know whom I work and my life; I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day. Religion is no fiction; it gives me solid comfort." Bro. Horn has been one of Southern Methodist's most brilliant and versatile newspaper correspondents. This work he has done for the whole church when too feeble to be out on parol duty. We pray for a stay of the disease and years yet to bless our Zion with the fruits of his pen.

Our Centenary Thank-Offering.

We gladly reproduce the following choice extract from the admirable and timely editorial in the May number of the Woman's Missionary Advocate, Mrs. Frank A. Butler, editor. The thought is as practical as beautiful:

Most poor matters
Point to rich ends.

These words of the "gentle bard of Avon" may be most appropriately quoted in connection with our Centenary thank-offerings. Not that we would disparage these gifts by calling them "poor matters," but we should like to convince every person who bestows a gift upon this altar that however small it may be it "points to rich ends."

To secure and build a Centenary monument that shall endure when our lives have faded from the earth, and one that gives such fine promise of help in the Christian education of girls, may surely be considered a rich end; but when we add to this the impress made on the hearts of the donors, and the consequent blessings received by them, we dare not try to estimate the "growing numbers."

It is something to know that we have the unquestionable ability, under the guidance of God, to shape our own hearts and minds, and make them worthy of our most elevated ideals, and thus, in the words of Mrs. Browning, with "inwardness" we may "touch the bounds of our being." This may be done though few of us recognize the fact at the time, in the conscientious performance of the daily tasks in the place which Providence has found for us, for mental and spiritual laws are as certain in their results as natural laws; and here we find our compensations—the returns being not in proportion to the dollars and cents given, but to the spirit of giving which abides in the heart.

The sweetest harmonies on a stringed instrument of music are in perfect ratio to, but in an opposite direction from, the tones of the voice; and it is true with the harmonies of our spiritual natures.

Cordial Endorsement.

We are greatly indebted to the Columbus District Conference for its hearty endorsement of the Advocate. The following, from the report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals, was unanimously adopted:

A copy of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, our Conference organ, has been referred to your committee. We regard this paper as exactly adapted to the requirements of our people. It is well printed, on superior paper, ably edited, and is exerting a fine influence wherever it circulates. The paper is not an individual enterprise, but is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In this connection we wish to express our pleasure at the visit and efficient services of the Rev. C. B. Galloway, D. D., the editor of our Conference Advocate.

Woman's Missionary Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Annual Conference will hold a meeting at Mansfield, La., June 7-9 next. The meeting will be composed of the officers of the society and one delegate from each of the Conference auxiliaries. The auxiliaries will each attend at once to the election of a delegate and a reserve to attend the meeting at Mansfield. Full reports of officers will be made, an election of officers will be had, and other business important to the advancement of the interests of the society and the cause of missions will be presented for consideration. A full attendance is desired.

MRS. M. W. READ, President.
Baton Rouge, La., May 9, 1884.

The officers elect of the society are: President, Mrs. M. W. Read, Baton Rouge; vice-presidents, Mrs. W. H. Wise, Shreveport, Mrs. W. H. N. Magnier and Mrs. M. K. Knox, Baton Rouge; Mrs. Judge E. T. Merriam and Mrs. J. H. Keller, New Orleans; Mrs. John Pipes, Mansfield; Mrs. N. N. Pharr, Morgan City; Mrs. Dr. W. E. Hamilton, Mendenhall; Mrs. Maggie Hayes, Opelousas; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. H. Foster, New Orleans; recording secretary, Miss Carrie Robertson, Baton Rouge; treasurer, Mrs. R. M. Walmsley; auditors, Mrs. Bishop L. Parker, New Orleans.

From Bastrop, La.

MR. EDITOR: Such editorials as your's entitled "After Lent—What?" are very strengthening to your brethren at the front. Your words as follows deserve to be carefully read and thoroughly heeded:

They shame evangelical conviction and aspiration out of hundreds who, under other influences, might have developed into saints and heroes. We have known more than one to offer the sparkling glass to a young man, and, overcoming his scruples, lead him out into all the mazes of the sinful dance. Then it is high time for every true believer in spiritual religion to lift a danger signal and sound a note of warning. When worldly conformity is enthroned in and condoned by the church, it becomes an enemy of reformed and more noble power. Against it every pulpit ought to become a throne of thunder, and every young Christian urged to flee the fatal snare. The Lord called Methoslim into being to protest against lifeless form and worldly compromise in the church. And that call is as clear and imperative to-day as when her first titubations rang out Heaven's alarm-bell over slumbering England. We have no mission but to protest against sin in the out of the church, and to conserve evangelical religion.

This being the year for reading up and getting informed as to Methodism and Christian duty, I recommend to all to get and read the following books: "The Methodist Armor," by Dr. Hudson, and "Mannion; or, Covetousness the Sin of the Christian Church," by Rev. Dr. John Harris. Our Publishing House at Nashville has them.

Notice.—Will the pastors of the Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, please send to me at Lexington, Miss., the names of the members who will attend the District Conference from each charge? Please attend to this immediately, as I wish to provide suitable homes for all. We expect the editor of this Advocate.

T. W. LEWIS,
LEXINGTON, MISS., May 8, 1884.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce in the Advocate that the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference will be held in Corinth, Miss., July 2 and 3; the Centenary meeting July 1. Would be glad if each auxiliary would send a delegate.

Yours respectfully,
M. M. THURMOND,
R. S. W. M. S., N. M. C.
RIPLEY, MISS., May 6, 1884.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the Advocate. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the Advocate.

CARVER & JAMIESON,
Publishers.

THE NATIONAL CABINET LETTER FILE.—Mr. Mackenzie has without doubt captured the climax in the way of Letter Files. In the manufacture and general make-up of the National, it is one of the few or few that are made to last and sold in three times the quantity, that is to say, guaranteed. It is its own price, both as to usefulness and ornamentation. Mr. Mackenzie's advertisement will be found in this issue. Prices and illustrated catalogue sent on application.

"How do you pronounce e-t-i-n-g-e?" asked the teacher of the dance of the class. The boy replied: "It depends a good deal on whether the word refers to a person or a bee."

It can be proved by home testimony which any sworn jury would receive, that the New La Remedy has cured persons of long standing, that have been given up as hopeless. In such cases, the Remedy and Life Tonic should be taken together.

"What does the word 'pedigree' mean, John?" "It means 'descent.'" "Write a sentence on the board containing that word." John went up and chalked off the following: "We peddled down the hill."

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures. Nose, Throat, Lungs, full blood, 30 p. route, cost free.

"Well, how are you to-day?" asks the doctor. "My rheumatism has gone," I replied the next day for an hour's sunbathing," replies the patient. "You knew it but said it was your arm." "Yes; but the exercise cured me."

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India physician a formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the cure of a permanent cure for Consumption, Lung Affections, Cough, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested his wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, he felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. He will send free of charge, to those who desire it, a full recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Novak, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

GOLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC is admirably adapted for females in delicate health. Golden's; neither of drugs.

"Hore! Do you know you are riding in the wrong direction? This train doesn't go anywhere near Philadelphia." "There! I kept a-tellin' of him that twain't right to be ridin' back'ard; but he twined, he knowed it all. Men is dreadful smart, a-ways."

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP beautifies the skin. It's the Hair and Whisker Dye, black or brown, 50 cts.

The ebull of a boarder at a hotel struck him over the head with a wash-bowl, the other day. When his friends asked him what his head, he replied: "Inflammatory brain-matter," and promptly guided the conversation into another channel.

Bad coughs cured by HALE'S HONEY OF THIMBLEBERRY AND SALT. PIKE'S THROAT AND LUNG CURE in one inhalation.

"Herr Meyer, I suppose you understand that every one was to bring along something to the picnic. What have you brought?" Herr Meyer: "My little twins, Hans and Jakob."

For further Chronic Diseases, to give symptoms, remedies, help, advice, send address—Dr. Whittier, St. Louis, Mo., (latest edition.) State case your way.

Mr. Philip Weirlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon Sts., New Orleans, has a good assortment of rosewood pianos for $125; an elegant new 7½ octave rosewood piano for $200; an elegant new piano for $250; or $300 per week or $100 per month, for the first year, another elegant piano, formerly $300, for $200 cash. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low prices. The Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Decker, Hardman, Weirlein, Hale, Schencker, Bohning and Viallet pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Sterling and Bay State organs. Mr. Weirlein's assortment goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Immense stock of sheet music and musical instruments. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange, or paid payments for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent to any address.

The following is from Philadelphia Pa. One of our advertising patrons, writes: "The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was our best advertising medium in the South. A. Adams has found it so."

The following is from Texas: "Do not discount our advertisement in the Advocate. It has brought many letters in the last few weeks."

W. C. Shepard sells dinner, tea and breakfast sets, $4.00 rose tea set, $4.50—up to rose chamber sets, $4.50.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for our copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and San Antonio via Houston.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise changes cannot be made.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say: Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the Advocate or no.

Business Notices.

We, the undersigned, who have bought and used the Billington Lightning Locomotive by Mr. J. L. Watson, do hereby certify that it is one of the best of its kind we have ever used, and so that it is in our opinion good for all it is recommended. C. A. FERGUSON, Clerk at Law, at New Orleans. J. L. WATSON, Clerk at Law, at New Orleans. J. M. COOK, Public Cotton Weigher. H. H. JOHNSON, City Marshal. W. W. READES, Dealer. GEO. W. BIRDAKE, Contractor. J. L. STONE, Druggist. CHRYSLER SPRINGS, MISS., Feb. 23, 1884.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, croup, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, blood and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single spoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil. For the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and K. H. TREX, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

AGREAT MUSICAL MARVEL. SHONINGER'S Cymbella Organs and first Class 7½ Octave Upright Rosewood Pianos with a Chime of 30 Bells. Established 1830. 85,000 in Use.

Warranted 10 Years. Send for Catalogue & Prices, and full information to B. SHONINGER, Piano Co. NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A.

WEBSTER'S in Sheep, Russia and Turkey Bindings.

Get the Standard. GET Webster's—It has 118,000 Words. Standard in Govt Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sold 50 to 1 of any other series. It is the most complete Family Intelligent. Best kept for SCHOLARS, TEACHERS and SCIENTISTS.

This vocabulary contains 3000 more words than are found in any other American Dictionary. The Unabridged is now supplied, at a small additional cost, with DENISON'S PATENT REFERENCE INDEX. "The greatest improvement in book-making that has been made in a hundred years."

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY WITH DICTIONARY SUPPLEMENT.

Get the Standard. GET Webster's—It has 118,000 Words. Standard in Govt Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sold 50 to 1 of any other series. It is the most complete Family Intelligent. Best kept for SCHOLARS, TEACHERS and SCIENTISTS.

This vocabulary contains 3000 more words than are found in any other American Dictionary. The Unabridged is now supplied, at a small additional cost, with DENISON'S PATENT REFERENCE INDEX. "The greatest improvement in book-making that has been made in a hundred years."

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY WITH DICTIONARY SUPPLEMENT.

Get the Standard. GET Webster's—It has 118,000 Words. Standard in Govt Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sold 50 to 1 of any other series. It is the most complete Family Intelligent. Best kept for SCHOLARS, TEACHERS and SCIENTISTS.

This vocabulary contains 3000 more words than are found in any other American Dictionary. The Unabridged is now supplied, at a small additional cost, with DENISON'S PATENT REFERENCE INDEX. "The greatest improvement in book-making that has been made in a hundred years."

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY WITH DICTIONARY SUPPLEMENT.

Get the Standard. GET Webster's—It has 118,000 Words. Standard in Govt Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sold 50 to 1 of any other series. It is the most complete Family Intelligent. Best kept for SCHOLARS, TEACHERS and SCIENTISTS.

MISCELLANEOUS. MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE, MANSFIELD, LA.

Twenty-sixth Annual Commencement, 1884. Friday evening, June 6, eight P. M.—Exhibition of Young Ladies' Literary Society, Miss Mary Dickey, Manager.

Sunday, June 8, eleven A. M.—Commencement sermon, by Rev. H. Carradine, New Orleans.

Monday, June 9, two P. M.—Annual meeting of Board of Managers, appointed by the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Monday, June 9, eight P. M.—Exhibition of music department, Mrs. R. J. Harp, Director; melodrama, conducted by Miss Williams.

Tuesday, June 10, eleven A. M.—Annual meeting of the college.

Tuesday, June 10, eight P. M.—Art lecture, conducted by Miss Perry.

Wednesday, June 11, ten A. M.—Exercises of the graduating class. Address by Rev. H. Carradine.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE, MANSFIELD, DENOT PARISH, LOUISIANA. The twenty-ninth Annual Session will begin on the 12th of September, 1883.

Mansfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is easily accessible from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana. The College is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Annual Conference. The buildings and grounds are extensive and all the facilities for instruction are provided. The College that year has already a hundred boarders and six pupils in Music, thirty in Art and one hundred and twenty in all.

Board and tuition per term: $50.00. Music and use of instrument $70.00. Annual charges in Art Department and Modern Languages. F. M. OBACH, President.

FREE Send to MOORE'S BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, ST. LOUIS, MO., for illustrated circular.

The Fire. on the night of April 24 will cause no interruption to our business. We can be found temporarily at No. 12 Magazine street, ready to fill all orders, as usual.

BAKER, SLOO & CO. No More Nauseous Doses.

It has been reserved to our company to furnish materials for the stomach and feeding supply exact for all brands and many complaints. The New La Remedy. Contains no poison and is delicious. Home references by thousands. Life Tonic, infallible for chills. Home Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

ESTABLISHED IN 1838. F. BELDEN WHOLESALE DEALER IN

HATS TRUNKS, FLOWERS, UMBRELLAS, ETC.

No. 14 MAGAZINE, and 75, 76, 77, and 78 COMMON STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST. MONEY SAVED

By BUYING THE HARDMAN PIANO.

THE most durable Upright Pianos made, and equal in any Square or Square Grand in all points of tone, quality and action.

OVER 30,000 Hardman Pianos now in use, and not one has ever reflected an adverse criticism. Acknowledged by the highest musical authorities in every country, and the only Piano that will stand in all climates.

ONLY the very finest and best materials and workmanship used, and every Piano fully and conscientiously guaranteed.

PRICES of Hardman Pianos are far below those of all other strictly First Class Pianos. Comparison will prove this. They are delivered, freight paid, with time 8 and cover and Music Book.

For Catalogue, Circular and Manufacturers' Book Bottom Cash or Installment Prices, address

LUDDEN & BATES Southern Music House, SAVANNAH, GA.

PIANOS!

P. WERLEIN'S, 135 Canal St. and 18 Bourbon St., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Oldest House in New Orleans!

Thoroughly Reliable.

One Elegant New Piano, rosewood, 7½ octave, for $60 cash.

7 octave rosewood piano, good style, $125. Will take 10 weeks in exchange for new piano without interest.

One Elegant New Piano, price $250 at $2 per week, "surprise" contract—no interest paid.

One Elegant Piano, formerly $500, now, for $200.

A Large Assortment of First Class Pianos and Organs at correspondingly low prices.

Chickering, & Walter, Mallett, Hale, Hardman, Weirlein, the best known, reliable, cable and Schencker Pianos, &c. &c. &c. and Hamelin, Spelling Key State.

Organs sold here. Immense Array of the most beautiful Style Pianos.

My Guarantee goes with every instrument sold and secures all my customers.

Brass Instruments, Strings, recorders, etc., in great abundance.

Immense stock of Sheet Music, including all the New Music, Popular Songs, &c. Will give you all you want of piano in worth in trade.

MY PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

Glad to exhibit my stock. Send for free catalogue. Call or write.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

For Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, the Gouty Diathesis, Stone in the Bladder, Nervous and Acid Dyspepsia, Etc.

Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, of New York, Surgeon General U. S. Army (retired), Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System in the University of New York, etc.

"I have for some time made use of the Buffalo Lithia Water in cases of affections of the Nervous System, complicated with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, or with a Gouty Diathesis. The results have been entirely satisfactory. Lithia has for many years been a favorite remedy with me in like cases, but the Buffalo after a certain time better than any other remedy. I also often prescribe it in those cases of Cerebral Hyperemia, resulting from overmental work—in which the condition called Nervous Dyspepsia exists—and generally with marked benefit."

Dr. Harry L. Byrd, of Baltimore, President and Professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children in the Baltimore Medical College, formerly Professor of Practical Medicine, etc.

"I have witnessed the best results from the action of the Buffalo Lithia Water, Spring No. 2, in Chronic Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Gravel and Stone in the Bladder, and I do not hesitate to express the opinion that in all diseases depending upon or having their origin in Uric Acid Diathesis, it is unsurpassed, if, indeed, it is equaled by any other water known to the profession."

"It is an admirable general Tonic and Restorative, increasing the Appetite, promoting Digestion and invigorating the General Health. It is powerfully diuretic, and especially efficacious in what is commonly known as Acid Dyspepsia. It is strongly recommended to a very large class of sufferers by a powerful power, as a Nervous Tonic and Escholarial, which makes it exceedingly valuable, where there is nothing to contra-indicate its use, in all cases where Nervous Depression is a symptom."

"It has all the accepted value in Bright's Disease. A knowledge of its action in that disease thus far would seem to warrant the belief that it would, in many instances, at least in its early stages, arrest it entirely; and in its more advanced stages prove a decided comfort and palliative."

Dr. G. Halstead Boyland, Professor of Surgery Baltimore Medical College, Late Surgeon French Army (Decorated), Corresponding Member Cincinnati Academy of Medicine, etc.

"I have made frequent and free use of the Buffalo Lithia Water in my practice. In Stone in the Bladder of the Boy Lithia, and the White Phosphorus, I have found the solvent power of Spring No. 2 is unmistakable. The best results which I have witnessed from any remedy in Gout have been from this water, in which its solvent action upon the Uric Acid deposit is equally evident. Its value, however, in such cases is by no means limited to its solvent power over these deposits, but it meets the more important indication, that of so changing the Diathesis on which the formation depends, as to prevent reformation. Its Nervous Tonic properties are very decided, indicating its value in a wide range of Nervous disorders."

Water in cases of one dozen half gallon bottles, 85 per case at the Spring Springs pamphlet sent to any address.

May be had of J. L. LYONS, Agent, 42 Camp street, New Orleans, La., at per case.

THOMAS F. GOODE, Proprietor, Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.

THE NATIONAL CABINET LETTER FILE, PATENTED AND MANUFACTURED BY

O. C. MACKENZIE, SUCCESSOR TO

Oliver, Page, Hoyne & Co.,

186 and 188 Fifth Ave., Chicago. 320 and 322 Broadway, New York.

We are much pleased with your Letter File, and can recommend it as a very useful article. RIMON RACIE & CO., New York.

ACCLIMATED JERSEYS. I am prepared to fill all orders for AM. F. I. D. J. F. SEVETTE CLUB.

Registered Bulls, Cows, Heifers and Bull Calves. Bulls For Grading Up Common Cattle. CAN ALSO SUPPLY FAMILIES WITH

FIRST-CLASS GRADE JERSEY MILK COWS. High Grade Jersey Heifers at Farmers' Prices.

TO PARTIES DESIROUS OF SECURING ONE OR MORE JERSEYS DIRECT FROM THE ISLAND. TO BE LANDED AT NEW ORLEANS. OFFER SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS.

Solicit correspondence. Orders filled for SPRING SHEEP.

W. R. STUART, 56 Carondelet St., New Orleans, OR OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

ALE. T. BAKER. THOMAS SLOO. CHARLES M. WHITNEY

BAKER, SLOO & CO., Successors to

George Horter and Hamsell & Co. Manufacturers of—

SADDLERY, HARNESS AND COLLARS, AGENTS FOR—

N. Y. Belting and Packing Co.'s Rubber Belting Packing and Hose; Leather Belting; Southwick Bros. Belt Oil and Dressing for Rubber and Leather Belts; Norris' Pulley Cover; Lane Leather; Rivets; Horns; etc., etc.

Temporarily at No. 12 Magazine Street, NEW ORLEANS.

The great events of history in a single volume FAMOUS AND DECISIVE BATTLES OF THE WORLD.

By CAPT. KIRK, U.S.A. HISTORY FROM THE BATTLE-FIELD. Shows how Nations have been made or destroyed in a day.—How France or England has triumphed on a single Campaign. A Grand Book for the Old and Young.—Saves Days, Weeks, Months.—Over 1000 Pictures and Illustrations. Maps and Fine Engravings. Large, Wanted Every where. Write at once for full description and terms. Address J. V. McFARLAND & Co., St. Louis, Mo.

AYER'S Ague Cure

IS WARRANTED to cure all cases of malarial disease, such as Fever and Ague, Intermitting or Malarial Fever, Remittent Fever, Malarial Ague, Bilious Fever, and Liver Complaint. In case of failure, after due trial, dealers are authorized, by our circular of July 1st, 1882, to refund the money.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists.

BLMYER MFG CO BELL'S

Church, School, Fire Alarm, Fire Bell, etc. Catalogue with 150 illustrations, prices, and full particulars. Blymyer Manufacturing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY

Manufacture of all kinds of Cast Iron and Steel. Bell Foundry, Fire Alarm, Fire Bell, etc. Full Catalogue sent Free. VANOUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati,

An Army Experience.

HOW AN OLD VETERAN ENJOYED ANNIHILATION AND LIVED TO IMPART A WARNING TO OTHERS.

National Tribune of Washington.

A pleasing experience which has just come to our notice in connection with the New York State meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic is so unusual in many respects that we venture to reproduce it for the benefit of our readers.

Capt. Alfred Rensom, of New York, while passing in the lobby of the Metropolitan Hotel, one of the most famous, suddenly stopped and scanned the face of a gentleman who was in earnest conversation with one of the grand army officers. It seemed to him that he had seen that face before, partially obscured by the smoke of battle, and yet this bright and pleasant countenance could not be the same man, and death-like visage, which he so dimly remembered, but the recollection of Banquo's ghost, would not "show" at command and haunted him the entire day. On the day following he again saw the same countenance, and venturing to speak to its owner, the instant the two veterans heard each other's voices, that instant they recognized and called each other by name. Their faces and forms had changed, but their voices were the same. The man whose name was Rensom had recognized Mr. W. H. Sage, of St. Johns, Mich., a veteran of the 23d N. Y. Light Artillery and both members of Burnside's famous expedition to North Carolina. After the first greetings were over, Captain Rensom said:

"It hardly seems possible, Sage, to see you in this condition, for I thought you must have been dead long ago."

"Yes, I do not doubt it, for if I am not mistaken, when we last met I was occupying a couch in the hospital, a victim of 'Yellow Jack' in its worst form."

"I remember. The war seems to have caused more misery since its close than when it was in progress," replied the Captain. "I met old comrades frequently who are suffering terribly, not so much from old wounds as from the malarial poisons which ruined their constitutions."

"I think so myself. When the war closed I returned home and at times I would feel well, but every few weeks I would be attacked with a fever which would come upon me again. My nervous system, which was shattered in the service, failed me under the pressure of the worst possible cases of malarial dysentery. Most of the time I had no appetite, then again I would become ravenously hungry, but the minute I ate down to eat I loathed food. My skin was dry and parched, my teeth loose and falling, I could hold nothing on my stomach for days at a time, and what little I did eat failed to assimilate. I was easily fatigued; my mind was depressed; I was cross and irritable, and many a night my heart would pain me so I could not sleep, and when I did I had horrid dreams and fearful nightmares. Of course, these things came one by one, each worse than the other. My breath was foul, my tongue was coated, my teeth decayed. I had terrible headaches which would leave my nervous system completely shattered. In fact my existence, since the war, has been a living death, from which I have often prayed for release."

"Couldn't the old surgeon do you any good?"

"I wrote him and he treated me, but like every other doctor, failed. They all said my nerve was gone, and without that to build upon I could not get well. When I was at my worst, piles of the severest nature came upon me. Then my liver gave out and without the use of cathartics I could not move my bowels at all. My blood got like a stream of fire and seemed literally to burn me alive."

"Well, you might better have died in battle, quick and without ceremony."

"How many times I have wished I had died the day we captured New Bern."

"And yet you are now the picture of health."

"And the picture is taken from life. I am in perfect condition. My nerve is restored; my stomach regains its power; my flesh is hard and healthy; I have new blood, new energy; a new lease of life wholly as the result of using Warner's Tippecanoe. This remarkable preparation, which I consider the finest tonic and stomachic in the world, has overcome all the evil influences of malarial, the poison of the army, with traces of dysentery, all mal-assimilation of food, and added made a new man of me."

The Captain remained silent for a while evidently musing over his recollections of the past. When he again raised his head he said:

"It would be a good deal if all the veterans who have suffered so intensely and also all others in the land who are enduring so much misery could know of your experience, Sage, and the way by which you have been restored."

And that is why the above conversation is recounted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

W. C. SHEPARD,
49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Wholesale and Retail

Rockery, China and Glass Ware

General Furnishings for

HOUSE, HOTEL AND STEAMBOATS.

For Country Dealers

Parquet, Nicerly Assorted,

ROCKERY WARE

YELLOW WARE

GLASS WARE

Coal Oil Movers and Garden Pumps,

Wanted Agents in every town in the State.

Advertisements in House, Water, Coal, Ice Cream, Fly Traps, Bird Cages, Parrot and Reptile Cages.

CHEAPEST CASH HOUSE IN THE CITY.

Send for Catalogue.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres cypress timber lands. Situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 east, south-western land district of Louisiana.

For information, Apply to N. O. Christian Advocate, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Household.

APPLES FOR DESSERT.—Boil rice very soft and line with it a well buttered pudding dish. Lay over it a layer of sliced apples, using an easily cooked, mildly tart variety. Add another layer of rice and another of apples until the dish is full. Add a little water to keep the rice from becoming too dry on top, and bake until the apples are done. Or pare some apples and remove the core without cutting the apple in two. Fill and cover them with boiled rice, allowing a cupful uncooked rice for each half a dozen apples; tie in a cloth and boil until the apples are done. Eat with cream and sugar. Another excellent dish is made by filling a pudding dish with sliced apples, dredging occasionally with flour as they are laid in the dish; then season with sugar, cinnamon and a few bits of butter, pouring in just water enough to make them moist, but not really juicy, when done. Cover the dish and bake. When partly cooked serve on plates, adding two or three spoonfuls of cream for each person.

CORN-BREEF SCRAPPLE.—Purchase a four-pound piece of corned beef, brisket, free of bone, with fat and lean mixed. Put in a kettle that has a cover, and then pour over it sufficient water to cover it. Put the lid on the kettle and set it on your range or stove where it may cook very slowly for four or five hours, or till it is perfectly tender. Then take it out of the pot, and with the water in which it was boiled mix enough plain water to boil one breakfast cup of Hecker's hominy grits and two cups of yellow corn meal; stir all well while cooking (about half an hour will do); while this is being done, cut the meat up in small thin pieces (not chunks) about half an inch square; mix these pieces through with the mush while warm, and pour the same into a pan. Use a little black pepper and a little sage for flavoring. When cool, cut up in slices and fry.

YORKSHIRE PUNNING.—Make a thin batter, as for frying, with a pint of milk and some flour, season with salt, pepper, and a little nutmeg grated fine. Beat up the yolks of four eggs and the whites of two with one or two teaspoonfuls of brandy, and strain them into the batter. Beat it well with a fork for some minutes, then pour the mixture, to the thickness of an inch, into a tin buttered freely, and put it into the oven. When the pudding is set lay it, in the tin, slanting in front of the fire under the beef which is roasting, and when the top is well browned take the pudding out of the tin and expose the under side of it to the action of the fire. When done cut it up in diamond-shaped pieces, and eat with boiled or roast beef.

CHEESE RAMAKIN.—Grate six ounces of good cheese on a coarse grater; sprinkle among it a tablespoonful of flour; add enough milk to moisten the cheese; then stir in three eggs, previously well beaten and mixed with a cup of milk. These, when mixed with the cheese and flour, should make a thin batter. Butter a small pie dish, fill it only half full with the batter, place a few slices of mutton on it, and bake in a quick oven. When well risen in the dish, and of a good yellow color, which ought to be in about ten or fifteen minutes, it is done; serve it at once before it falls.

BEFF BALLS.—Chop cold roast beef very fine, freeing it from bits of gristle but leaving in the fat. To half a pint of meat, put one small cupful of crumbs, bread or cracker, rolled and sifted, salt and pepper to taste. Moisten the whole with any soup or stock you may have, and add a little Worcestershire sauce; heat all together, and then stir in one egg well beaten. Set the mixture away to cool. When cold form into balls, roll in egg and fine crumbs, and fry in a wire basket for two minutes.

MIXED MEAL BREAD.—Take one part each of rye flour, wheat meal, and oat meal, and three parts of corn meal; mix thoroughly; pour on boiling water enough to soak all the meal; pack into a pan and steam six or seven hours. Before adding to the table it should be browned in the oven. Prunes, raisins, dates, or currants may be added to this kind of bread.

GRAHAM BREAD.—Three cups of graham flour, two cups of wheat flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of molasses and one teaspoonful of salt. Mix these ingredients thoroughly, adding enough cold water to make a soft dough. It will require a longer time to bake than wheat bread.

ONION SOUP.—Chop two or three large onions finely. Melt two or three ounces of butter in a stewpan, put in the onions, dredge in some flour and let them brown. Pour in sufficient water. Add salt, pepper and a little nutmeg. Let it boil a few minutes. Serve with two or three eggs beaten in the tureen.

HAM TURNOVERS.—Chop the ham (one-half pound) and warm in butter. Beat two or three eggs, according to quantity of ham, and pour into a buttered pan on the stove. When it is brown on one side spread the ham on half of it, and turn the other half over it.

HOMINY.—This is very coarse corn grits, the grains of corn being broken into coarse pieces. It should be washed several times; soaked over night, then boiled in the same water four or five hours. Raisins give this dish a very rich flavor.

RHUBARB TOAST.—Peel and cut the stalks in pieces, put them in a stewpan, add a little water, some sliced dates, and a few English currants well picked and washed; let them all cook until done, and then pour them over the toast bread.

POTATO PIK CRUST.—Boil dry nicely potatoes; sift through a colander; mix them thoroughly with one-half the quantity; add boiling water equal to about one-fourth the bulk of the mixture; roll thin, and bake in a moderate oven.

RICE PANCAKES.—One pint of boiled rice, one pint of flour, a teaspoonful of sweet milk, half a teaspoonful of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, two eggs, and a piece of butter size of a walnut.

BEANS AND CABBAGE.—When the beans are half boiled, add a head of cabbage, cut into small pieces. Beans and potatoes may be mixed in the same manner.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Prominent Minister Writes.
Dr. Morley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from indigestion or dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and biliousness, stercorized stools and constipation I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.
REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South, No. 28 Tenth Street, Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies.
I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Morley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.
MRS. R. H. BROWN, 1011 N. 1st St., St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. H. Morley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great nervous prostration, with the usual female irregularities and derangements, accompanied by such a condition of a woman's health I have been permanently relieved by the use of your Lemon Elixir.
MRS. E. DEXTER, No. 46 Chapel St., Atlanta, Ga.

R. Pratt, druggist, Wright City, Missouri, writes: I have cured a case of cholera and fever of four years standing.
MRS. E. DEXTER, No. 46 Chapel St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Morley's Lemon Elixir, prepared at his Dispensary, 114 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. It cures all biliousness, indigestion, headache, neuralgia, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused from diseased liver and kidneys.
Fifty cents for one-half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and for sale by L. L. Lyons and G. R. Finlay, wholesale druggists, New Orleans.

"See What Cuticura Does for Me!"

INFANTILE AND BIRTH HUMORS. Milk Crust, Scalded Head, Eruptions and every form of itching skin disease, Pimples, Scrofula and inherited taints of the Blood, Skin and Scalp, with Loss of Hair, cured by CUTICURA. Absolutely pure and safe. CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, 30 Cts. CUTICURA Soap, an exquisite Skin Beautifier and only Medicinal Soap. 25 Cts. and CUTICURA Stencil, the new Blood Purifier, 25 Cts. Sold by druggists. "Purifier Drug and Chemical Co., Boston." Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

26 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, Blenville Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport. The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness. For circulars, apply to

R. A. SMITH, Principal.

THE EMPEROR

The Emperor Louis Napoleon smoked only the finest cigars the world could produce. He found them especially for him in Havana from leaf tobacco grown in the Garden of the new Bull Durham. This being the finest leaf grown. Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco is made from the same leaf used in the Emperor's cigars. It is absolutely pure and is unquestionably the best tobacco ever offered.

Blackwell's Bull Durham, in Harper's Weekly, called it "herald to the great past. She found him smoking Blackwell's Bull Durham Tobacco, sent him by Hon. James Russell Lowell, American Minister to the Court of St. James."

In these days of adulteration, it is a comfort to smokers to know that the Bull Durham brand is absolutely pure, and made from the best tobacco the world produces. Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco is the best and purest made. All dealers have it. None genuine without the trademark of the Bull.

REDUCTIONS.

To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock, though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.

To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from figures that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest.

THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

W. G. TEBALD,
Wholesale and Retail Furniture,
37, 39 and 41 Royal Street,
New Orleans, La.

A Good Investment.
Messrs. CRADDOCK & CO.,
Please send another $12 box of CRADDOCK'S INDICA. This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

CRADDOCK'S INDICA.
This remedy is sold in 12 boxes for $12.00. It is a sure cure for all the diseases of the stomach and bowels. It is a good investment for all the families in the South.

The Great New Southern Route

SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Ports.

Through Sleeping Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco.

—VIA—

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL PORTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Jackson Railroad Depot as follows:
Alexandria, 11 A. M. Houston, 11 A. M.
Arrives from Alexandria, 4:30 P. M. Houston, 4:30 P. M.
For further information apply to W. O. BROWN, Ticket Agent, Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway.

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTH TEXAS, WEST TEXAS and CENTRAL TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from Jackson Depot at 11 A. M. through San Francisco via Alexandria, Shreveport and Marshall, Texas. Through Express arrives New Orleans at 4:30 P. M. For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.

B. W. MCCLINTOCK, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas.

H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

H. M. TOXIE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

MISCELLANEOUS.

IMPROVED METHOD OF STRINGING.

MASON & HAMLIN

UPRIGHT PIANOS.

Entire from frames, to which the strings are directly attached by metal fastenings, securing

1. Best quality of tone, which is very musical and sweet; free from the dulcetness which is caused by the ordinary method of stringing.

2. Greater durability and freedom from liability to get out of order; adaptation to trying positions and climates.

3. Increased capacity to stand in tune; will not require tuning one-quarter as often as pianos on the old system.

Having tested this new system of construction for two years and proved its advantages, this Company are now increasing their manufacture of pianos, and offer them to the public generally. Every piano of their make will dispense that supreme excellence which has always characterized their organs, and won for them the highest award at every great world's exhibition for sixteen years.

Illustrated and descriptive Catalogue of Pianos and Organs, sent free on application to MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO., 151 Tremont St., Boston; L. G. East 14th St., Union Square, New York; 11, Vauxhall Ave., Chicago.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HAND OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.

Without Harm to FABRIC OR HANDS, and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.

Not family, rich or poor should be without it. Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations.

PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

It Will Pay You

—TO—

READ! READ! READ!

GOOD READING

GOOD READING

CHEAP

As most every family takes secular, as well as religious journals, we have made arrangements to club with the following newspapers, at the rates annexed.

The first column of figures give the price of the publication per year; the second the price of the two, including our ADVOCATE.

New Orleans Picayune $1.00 2.75
New Orleans Times-Democrat 1.50 2.75
Southern Outlook 1.50 2.75
Country Gentleman 2.50 4.00
American Agriculturist 1.50 2.75

Cash to accompany all orders. No reduction allowed on these rates for remittances. Will receive subscriptions for all the leading newspapers in the United States.

GARVER & JAMESON, Publishers, New Orleans Christian Advocate.

RAILROADS.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern

Railroad.

—The Short Line—

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS

—To All Points—

North and East and in the Northwest

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE.

Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains with Pullman Palace Cars.

—FROM—

NEW ORLEANS

—TO—

Meridian,

Birmingham,

Chattanooga

and Cincinnati.

Leaves New Orleans..... 9:30 A. M. 8:30 P. M.
Arrives, Meridian..... 5:00 P. M. 4:30 A. M.
Birmingham..... 11:15 P. M. 12:25 P. M.
Chattanooga..... 4:30 A. M. 6:50 P. M.
Cincinnati..... 5:35 P. M. 7:15 A. M.

Freight and Passenger Depots,

Press street and Levee.

Freight and Ticket Offices,

34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

H. COLLBRAN, General Freight Agent.

E. P. WILSON, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

Queen and Crescent Line, Cincinnati, Ohio.

BARNARD BROWN, New Orleans, La.

Gen'l Frt. and Pass. Agt., N. O. and N. E. R. R.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points

—NORTH EAST AND WEST—

THE ONLY LINE running PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF TRACKS.

ONLY ONE CHANGE TO NEW YORK AND EASTERN CITIES.

THE DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELIGANT COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, and QUICK TIME.

SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY

—AND—

RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST.

On and after Sunday, May 27, 1884—
DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE. ARRIVE.
Exp. No. 2, 9:15 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:50 A. M.
Exp. No. 4, 4:30 P. M. Exp. No. 3, 10:45 A. M.
Exp. No. 12, 7:30 A. M. Exp. No. 11, 8:30 P. M.
Nos. 1, 2, 3 & 4 run daily, Nos. 11 & 12 Sunday only.

Ticket $1.00, 22 Camp street corner Common.

MATT. KENNEDY, Ticket Agent.
WM. MURRAY, Gen. Southern Passenger Agt.
A. H. HARRISON, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago.
J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans.
C. M. SHEAFFE, Superintendent.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Old Reliable Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending May 13, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	8 1/2	9 1/2
Ordinary	9 1/2	10 1/2
Good ordinary	10 1/2	11 1/2
Low middling	11 1/2	12 1/2
Middling	12 1/2	13 1/2
Good middling	13 1/2	14 1/2
Middling fair	14 1/2	15 1/2
Fair	15 1/2	16 1/2
Good middling	16 1/2	17 1/2
Mobile middling	17 1/2	18 1/2
St. Louis middling	18 1/2	19 1/2

SUGAR.

Inferior	34	44
Common	44	54
Good common	54	64
Fair	64	74
Good fair	74	84
Fully fair	84	94
Prime	94	104
Strictly Prime	104	114
Choice	114	124
Seconds	124	134
Yellow clarified	134	144
Gray clarified	144	154
Choice white	154	164
Granulated	164	174

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	31
Fair	31	36
Prime	36	41
Choice	41	46
Fancy	46	51

RICE.

Choice	64	69
Prime	69	74
Good	74	79
Fair	79	84
Ordinary	84	89
Common	89	94
No. 2	94	99

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 30	6 00
Minnesota patents	7 00	7 30
Extra fancy	6 30	6 60
Winter wheat patents	7 00	7 30
Choice	5 00	5 30
Fancy	6 15	6 45

CORN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 40	3 50
Corn meal	3 15	3 25
Grits	3 50	4 00
Hominy	4 00	4 10

GRAIN, ETC.

Corn:
White	70	75
Yellow	65	70
Mixed	65	70
OATS:
Western	45	50
Texas rust-proof	45	50
BIAN:
2 cwt.	1 07 1/2	1 10
HAY:
Choice	26 00	27 00
Prime	22 00	24 00

PROVISIONS.

PORK:
Meat	17 75	18 00
Prime meat	16 50	17 00
Rumps	16 00	16 50
BACON:
Choice breakfast	11 1/2	12 00
Choice	7 1/2	8 00
Sides, clear	9 1/2	10 00
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2	10 00
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	13	13 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	6 1/2	7 00
Sides, clear	6 1/2	7 00
Sides, clear rib	6 1/2	7 00

FISH.

MACKEREL:
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25	15 00
Half bbls.	7 75	8 00
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75	14 00
Half bbls.	6 25	6 50
No. 3, in bbls.	13 25	13 50
Half bbls.	7 00	7 25

GROCERIES.

COFFEE:
Rio, choice	54	114
Cardova, choice	12	13
Java, choice	22	23
BUTTER:
Western dairy	21	22
New York dairy	21	22
Country	17	20
LARD:
Choice	54	55
Fair	50	51
TEA:
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	50
CHES:
Coal, cases	18	19
Coal, bbls	13	14
Cotton seed	45	50
Lard	80	85

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:
Western	12 00	14 00
COUNTRY:
POTATOES:
Louisiana	2 00	2 75
KNOT:
2 bbl.	20 00	21 00
ONIONS:
2 bbl.	3 00	3 75

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGINS:
12 b.	104	114
2 b.	114	124
BALING TWINE:
2 b.	134	144
TIRES:
2 b.	1 30	1 40

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 25	4 75
Young	3 00	3 50
Chickens, Southern	4 00	4 50
Young	3 00	3 50
Turkeys, Southern	12 00	16 00
EGGS:
Western	12	13
Southern	12	13
WOOL:
Lake	20	21
Louisiana	18	19
Burly	9	10
HIDES:
Green salted	8	9
Dry salted	11 1/2	12 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00	55 00
Oak, barrels	75 00	80 00
Oak, clear	50 00	55 00
Oak, boxhead	75 00	80 00
HOOF FEELS:
Hoghead	40 00	45 00
Barrels	20 00	25 00
Half barrels	12 50	15 00
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	12 00	14 00
Meal	27 00	30 00
Pure ground bone	42 00	45 00
Muriatic acid	8	9
Sulphuric acid	24	26
Bone black	84	90

Address all mail matter to New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., May 7.—Col. Wesson, the founder of the town of Wesson, was struck by the north-bound freight train to-day about 9 o'clock. He attempted to cross a long trestle work before the train was over him, and was killed. He got up and rode to Bogie Chitto, and said he was not hurt, but since he is bleeding and it is thought probably he is seriously hurt. The accident happened one mile below Bogie Chitto.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 7.—Mary Johnson, a colored woman, received $500 damages from the Texas and Pacific Railway Company in the District Court of Grayson county for putting her in a smoking car when she had a first-class ticket. She alleges that gross insults were offered her in that car by drunken men. To-day the Court of Appeals affirmed the verdict of the lower court in her favor. This is the first case of the kind ever won in Texas by a negro, and its success is wholly due to the fact that appellee asked for damages on the merits of the case in justice, and not on civil rights grounds, as has been the case with all similar suits heretofore.

NORWICH, Ct., May 7.—John F. Slater, who gave $1,000,000 for educational purposes in the South, died this morning.

CHICAGO, May 7.—The Daily News' (Lewiston) special says: A broken rail ten miles south of this city, on the St. Louis division of the Wabash road, threw a passenger coach and two sleepers into the ditch, injuring thirty people seriously and three fatally.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The House, by about a majority, voted to-day to loan the New Orleans Exposition a million dollars.

ST. LOUIS, May 8.—At a large meeting of the barbed wire manufacturers held here this afternoon it was decided, owing to the increased cost of raw material, to advance the price of wire a quarter of a cent.

NATCHEZ, Miss., May 8.—The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Mississippi adjourned to-day. They will meet at Yazoo City on the first Tuesday in May of next year.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., May 9.—Under the direction of Dr. Eugene A. Smith, State geologist, the investigation of the extent of the phosphate beds recently discovered in the State is being pushed in several new localities, and the search in Alabama county has been rewarded with a successful success. Dr. Smith is confident that the deposits will be found in other localities still, and he to-night sends out another assistant to examine the region around Summerfield, in Dallas county. Further examinations at Hamburg, in Perry county, and the original location, show that the quantity of phosphate there will greatly exceed the first estimate.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., May 10.—This was the last day of the sale of lots in Sheffield. One hundred and nine lots were disposed of. The lowest brought $425 for a residence. The highest was a store lot, 25 by 100, which realized $3,400. Total to-day, $87,325, and for the three days, $270,550. Sheffield's future is in the hands of some of the most substantial capitalists of the country. The high prices realized is something unprecedented in this or any other country's history.

NEW YORK, May 10.—It is pretty generally known that on Sunday last Gen. Grant went to Wm. H. Vanderbilt's and asked him to loan him $150,000, which, he said, was to help the firm of Grant & Ward tide over the affairs of the Marine Bank, which, he said, needed a little aid. Mr. Vanderbilt loaned the money to Gen. Grant, and on the Tuesday following both the Marine Bank and the firm of Grant & Ward failed. On Wednesday Mr. Vanderbilt had an interview with Gen. Grant, and asked him to explain the affair. The general had little to say. He had been asked to borrow the money for the firm, and did it in good faith. The failure was as much his fault as his own, and he felt his position keenly. He said he would make all the reparation possible, and he assigned all his property to Mr. Vanderbilt. Two hours before Mr. Vanderbilt sailed for Europe to-day he sent for Gen. Grant, handed him all the deeds that had been assigned to him, told the general he had no use for them, and also told him to pay him the $150,000 when he got good and ready. He hoped the general would come out of his difficulty O. K., and bid him a cordial good-bye.

BATON ROUGE, May 12.—At noon Clerk Peter J. Troviant brought the House to order and called the roll of members transmitted by the Secretary of State. A quorum was present. Prayer by Dr. Goodrich. Members were sworn in by the Clerk.

At 12 o'clock Oscar Arroyo, Secretary of the Senate, called to order the session and announced vacancy in the office of President pro tem, and that of Lieut. Governor.

FOREIGN.

QUEBEC, May 7.—The Donaldson Line steamer from Glasgow to Montreal touched at this port to-night at 8:30 o'clock, having on board twenty-four of the survivors from the wreck of the State Line steamer State of Florida.

Following is the official report of the third officer, James Allen, of the State of Florida: We left New York April 12 with about 167 passengers and crew, and a full general cargo. All went well until the night of the 13th, when we came in collision with the bark Ponoma, of Chatham, N. B., Capt. Helburn. Both ships went down almost instantly, and out of the steamer's passengers and crew only forty-four, including the stewardess, managed to escape in the boats, and out of the bark's crew of fifteen only the captain and two women were saved. Next morning the bark was observed bottom up. The survivors, after being thirty-five hours in boats without food or water, were rescued by the Norwegian bark Theresa, of Christiansia, from that port, bound for Quebec. On the twenty-second, twenty-four of them were transferred on board the ship Louisa, off and from Cardiff, for Quebec, where they remained until the 5th of May, when they were taken on board the Titania for Quebec. He believed that 135 lives were lost.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., May 7.—The steamer Nevada, Capt. Bromer, from New York, April 29, for Liverpool, was in collision on the 3d instant with the steamer Romano, Capt. Mitchell, from Hull for Boston. The latter vessel was sunk. Her passengers, two in number, and crew were transferred to the Nevada, and next day, together with the Nevada's passengers, were transferred to the steamer St. Laurent, for Havre. The Nevada bore up for this port, where she arrived this morning. Her stern is completely driven in, and bows generally much damaged. The steamer Romano was valued at $200,000. The cargo was a general one, not exceptionally valuable, and mainly small lots, insured by shippers.

LONDON, May 7.—Julius P. Benjamin, the distinguished lawyer and advocate, and ex-member of the government of the Southern Confederacy, is dead. Mr. Benjamin died to-day in his apartments in Avenue Jena, Paris. He has been in failing health ever since he fell while descending from a tramway car several years ago.

Earl Shaftesbury to-day unveiled a statue of William Tyndale, the martyr, turned at the stake at Vilvorde in 1536 on account of his religious teachings. The statue stands in a conspicuous place on the Thames embankment.

VIENNA, May 8.—A Mormon missionary has been condemned to one month's imprisonment.

PARIS, May 12.—Later dispatches confirm the report that the Franco-Chinese treaty has been signed. One clause provides that China shall at once withdraw her troops from Tonquin. The treaty had already been ratified at Peking before the signatures were offered.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 179 Girard St., N. O., for the list of Goodwyn's Extra Yeast Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positively free from Alum or any other harmful ingredient. It not only invites, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

Plan of Episcopal Visitation for 1884.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP PHILLIPS.
Denver	July 21	Denver.
Montana	Aug. 21	Bozeman.
Columbia	Sept. 3	Dayton.
Pacific	Oct. 8	Santa Rosa.
Los Angeles	Oct. 22	See Bernardino.
SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP M'VEY.
West Texas	Oct. 2	San Antonio.
North Texas	Nov. 5	Waco.
North Texas	Nov. 19	Sulphur Springs.
East Texas	Nov. 19	Logansport.
German Mission	Nov. 27	Houston.
Texas	Dec. 3	Galveston.
THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri	Sept. 17	Shelbina.
Western	Sept. 25	Council Grove.
Southwest Missouri	Oct. 1	Jefferson City.
North Carolina	Nov. 26	Wilmington.
Mississippi	Dec. 17	Mobile.
Baltimore	March 11	Salina.
FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP HANCOCK.
St. Louis	Sept. 24	St. Louis.
West Virginia	Oct. 8	Greenup.
Arkansas	Nov. 19	Van Buren.
Little Rock	Nov. 26	Little Rock.
White River	Dec. 2	Little Rock.
Louisiana	Jan. 8	Mineral.
FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP FIBBE.
Indian Mission	Sept. 17	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee	Oct. 28	Knoxville.
North Alabama	Nov. 28	Talladega.
South Carolina	Dec. 1	Charleston.
Florida	Jan. 8	Gainesville.
SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky	Sept. 10	Mt. Sterling.
Louisville	Sept. 17	Louisville.
Illinois	Sept. 24	Nashville.
North Georgia	Nov. 24	Nashville.
South Georgia	Dec. 17	Savannah.
SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KAMMER.
Holmes	Oct. 22	Bristol.
Virginia	Nov. 22	Richburg.
North Mississippi	Nov. 29	Aberdeen.
Memphis	Dec. 3	Memphis.
Alabama	Dec. 17	Opelika.

Bishop McTear has charge of the mission in China and Japan.

Bishop Keiser has charge of the mission in Mexico.

Bishop Granbery has charge of the mission in Brazil.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and not sold in competition with the trade. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

NEW JOB OFFICE
CARVER & JAMIESON,
112 Camp Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS,
VISITING CARDS,
BLANKS!

Blanks for Clerks of Court, blanks for Masonic Lodges, blanks for Granges, etc., blanks for Co-operative Stores, and—
All Kinds of Job Work.
Executed in the best style and prices as low as any city in the North or West.
Send your order to
CARVER & JAMIESON,
112 Camp Street.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The regular annual camp meeting on the Seashore Camp Ground, will begin on Wednesday, July 9, 1884, and continue for about eight days. The grounds are situated on the Gulf coast, on the line of the A. & N. O. R. R., being 75 miles from New Orleans and 62 miles from Mobile. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

R. P. MACKIE, Secretary.
W. H. FORAN, President.

The Seashore District Conference will be held in Moss Point, July 3-6.

The Sunday-School Convention for the Aberdeen District will be held in Oklawaha, Miss., Thursday June 26; and the Aberdeen District Conference in the same place, June 27-29. The opening sermon of the District Conference will be preached Thursday night by Rev. J. B. Stone.

R. G. PORTER, P. E.

The Thirty-Eighth Anniversary of the New Orleans District Sunday-School Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will take place at Carondelet St. Church next Sunday, July 14, at 4 P. M. punctually.

A suitable programme has been arranged, plentifully interspersed with the beautiful songs of Zion, taken from that excellent compilation of hymns, "Prayer and Praise."

Let there be such a gathering of Sunday-Schools, and all who are in accord with its interests as have never been seen in this city before.

May it be a jubilee unto us.

S. L. HILL, Secretary.
W. H. FORSTER, President.

The Corinth District Sunday-School Convention and District Conference will be held at Ripley, June 20-23.

Wednesday night, June 25, sermon by K. M. Harrison. The Convention will open Thursday, at nine A. M., when the following programme will be observed:

1. The Relation of Children to the Church, by Revs. R. M. Davis and R. A. Ellis.
 2. The Grounds on Which Infants are Entitled to Baptism, by Revs. K. M. Harrison and G. W. Gordon.
 3. Duties of Parents in Relation to the Sunday-School, by Revs. D. W. Boyd and J. H. Brown.
 4. Sunday-School Literature, by Capt. T. B. Winston and D. L. Coghill.
 5. The Importance of Officers and Teachers Being Prompt, by Judge W. H. Kilpatrick and J. W. Dorman.
 6. Duties of a Teacher to His or Her Class, by Revs. E. L. Sprague and C. H. Owen.
 7. The Best Method of Opening and Closing Sunday-School Exercises, by Rev. J. A. Bowen, G. P. Hattumery and H. Klyce.
 8. The Moral Influence of a Well-Regulated Sunday-School on a Community, by Prof. J. W. Johnson and Rev. J. H. Mitchell.
 9. Rev. R. A. Ellis will preach a Sunday-school sermon at eleven A. M.
 10. Rev. E. L. Sprague will preach the opening sermon of the District Conference, Thursday night.
- Cenary mass meeting, Saturday night, to be addressed by Judge Kilpatrick, J. A. Bowen, Prof. J. W. Johnson, and Rev. Dr. C. H. Galbreath or some one from Nashville. Let pastors report the "ducks cleared" if possible. Let all come who are members, and others who may desire to do so. Ripley will be ready for you.
- AMOS KENNAL, P. E.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, April 29, 1884.

The Holly Springs District Conference will meet at Pleasant Grove, Hickory Flat circuit, July 23, 1884. Opening sermon by E. H. Moon, Friday 23, 11 o'clock A. M.

W. P. BAITON, P. E.

The Homer District Conference will convene at Lisbon on Thursday, August 28, at 9 o'clock A. M.

A. A. CORNETT, P. E.

The Winona District Conference will meet at Lexington, June 26-29.

THOS. Y. HAMSEY, P. E.

The Alexandria District Conference will convene at Colfax, August 27, 1884.

M. S. CORNELL, P. E.

The Brookhaven District Conference is to be held in Magnolia, June 12-15.

J. A. H. JONES, P. E.

The Pensacola District Conference will meet at Evergreen, Ala., May 29. Opening sermon, May 28, at 7 P. M.

J. S. PIERCE, P. E.

The Jackson District Conference will be held at Bolton, Miss., June 5-8.

JOHN A. ELLIS, P. E.

The Shreveport District Conference will be held at Natchitoches, La., beginning at nine o'clock A. M. on Thursday, June 26, 1884.

R. F. ALEXANDER, P. E.

The Greensboro District Conference will meet at Livingston, June 26-29.

J. BANCROFT, P. E.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 21.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1451.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. F. L. HILL, Editor.
REV. C. H. CARVER, D. D., Publisher.
REV. J. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, Publisher.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
REV. W. P. BARTON, Publisher.
REV. J. D. CAMERON, Editor.

LIVINGSTON'S LAST TRAVEL.

BY REV. RICHARD WILSON, M. A.

in his last journey to heaven he died. They found him—those brave Africans; his head bent low between his hands upon the bed. They listened, but no voice thrilled the night air; they looked, but saw no motion anywhere.

Only Two Witnesses.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read Bro. Featherston's reply, in this week's ADVOCATE, to "J. W. M." in the same paper of April 3. I agree with Bro. Featherston, and wish to add that, in my observation, there are two classes of witnesses against this generation of Christianity.

One is an old man who, in the course of a long life, has seen a great deal of sin and has seen a great deal to make his heart faint; and like old people generally—living largely in the past—he sums up his observation and experience and charges it upon this generation.

The other is a man who has been backslidden himself. He looks at the world through backslidden spectacles and pronounces these latter times worse than the former times.

So when I hear the assertion made that the pulpit has lost its power, that religion has lost its vitality, and the church going to "the world, the flesh and the devil," I look at the man who makes the assertion, and, if he is white-headed, I sympathize with him and reverence him, knowing that he is living away back in the "sweet long ago" when he was younger and saw the bright side of life—away back when people went to camp meetings because it was a necessity, and not a luxury as it is now—when the people got happy and shook hands and shouted. Good times they were too, and it is no wonder that he looks back longingly to them, and, seeing less of it now, naturally thinks the good old times were better. I have associated with one of these, and it was always a pleasure to me to see him come. True, he would worry me sometimes, saying positively that there was no religion now; but then he had a soft heart, and told me many things of the past that he had seen and endured that made him a hero in my eyes. For what he has seen and endured I can stand his assertion; more especially since I know it is not so.

But the other—the man who has been backslidden. His hair is not white; but he is grumbling too. You can tell him at a glance. I will not describe him nor tell you what he is doing. You can tell that for yourself. Maybe you have experienced it yourself. I have. I will tell you what he is not doing. He is not enjoying religion. How can he enjoy it when he hasn't it to enjoy? That man I sympathize with too; but I exhort him to "seek the old paths" in earnest.

I do not know to which class "J. W. M." belongs; but I want to tell him that the world is not growing worse. People may not be as enthusiastic nor so sympathetic as they were in the old times. They may not shout more; but they give and work more. The religion of today is more regular; not so spasmodic as it was in the good old days. People may not hear such high preaching now (in the sense in which that word was once used—a sermon an hour and a half long); but they hear more of them and, I believe, simpler sermons—easier to understand. Wake up, then, beloved, to the fact that we are living in the broad light of gospel day. Wake up and find the gospel preached in almost every language and every nation—that our Lord's command, "Go into all the world," is almost literally fulfilled. Enjoy it; sing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!"

The trumpet must not sound a defeat nor order a retreat till he gets orders from headquarters.

T. B. MALONE.
SENIOR, MISS., May 9, 1884.

The Marks of a Worker.

Bro. White baptized 26 pedo-Baptists last year—two of them over 60 years old, and three over fifty. Bro. White is a worker—Baptist Record, from Texas Baptist Herald.

This and similar items seem to give much delight to our collaborators in the vineyard of the Lord by the way they are copied from paper to paper. Bro. White is highly commended for robbing other churches of twenty-six members in one year; if instrumental in the conversion of a single soul, it is not stated. He, at least, receives no commendation for that kind of work. If a hunter in one day kills six deer and three rabbits, and his friends praise him for his success, tell far and wide of his deeds as a mighty hunter, always mauling the rabbits that he found in another man's enclosure and not a word about the deer, there would be great danger of producing the impression that ensnaring rabbits in a gentleman's park was more commendable than killing deer that roam at large in the forests.

This fulsome and frequent praise for interfering with other flocks and robbing other flocks may make the impression upon the minds of their young ministers—if it is not already made—that it is more desirable to proselyte than save souls, causing them to fall under the Lord's condemnation as the scribe of old who would compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and not make him a better man.

And then there is danger by this course of diverting the mind, from the cross to the pool; from the cleansing blood to the typifying water. An ordinance, a ceremony, a picture may become an object of worship, an idol, just as well as an image carved in wood or stone. Be careful, brethren, that you do not lose the substance in the shadow, and cause many that are weak to do the same.

Yours,
WOODVILLE, MISS., May 9, 1884.

Rev. Dr. Deems to "Anonymous."

A CARD.

Several communications have reached me in the course of the last two years enclosing sums of money, which I have immediately put to the relief of the needy as designated by the writer, who is anonymous. In one of these notes the writer spoke of reading the Weekly World, and I made acknowledgment through that medium. Another note informed me that the writer no longer saw the Weekly World. It was dated from New Orleans and bore postmark, "New Iberia." To both of these places I have addressed "Anonymous," asking for some intimation how an answer to a question frequently repeated by the writer should be addressed. My letters were returned. I am now in receipt of another note, dated April 11, enclosing another remittance, which has been applied as directed. The writer speaks of having seen in the New Orleans Christian Advocate an article of mine on "Sailors." I write this, hoping it may reach the eye of "Anonymous," who must understand that I can not answer the question asked unless I am put in the way of reaching the writer, whose reserve I have no wish to penetrate. My desire is simply to acknowledge the remittances and reply to the query.

CHARLES F. DEEMS,
Pastor of the Church of the Strangers.
New York, April 15, 1884.

Presiding Elders.

The presiding elder is in our system of church government the Bishop's lieutenant—doing in the Bishop's absence all that the Bishop could do in his district, except ordaining deacons and elders. He takes oversight of the spiritual and temporal interest of his district and, in the absence of the Bishop, of all the traveling and local preachers and exhorters in his district. He is also empowered to change, receive and suspend preachers in his district during the intervals of the Annual Conference and in the absence of the Bishop, as the Discipline directs. He must also preside in the Quarterly Conferences, and decide questions of order and law when submitted to him in writing. So important have the Bishops regarded the office and its functions, as representative of themselves, that they have always insisted on the exclusive right to appoint the presiding elders.

Without a Bishop for each Conference, and a Conference small enough for the Bishop to visit each charge at least once a year, the office of presiding elder is indispensable to the successful working of our system. A Bishop resident in Baltimore or St. Louis could not come to the Louisiana Conference and judiciously appoint the preachers to the several stations and circuits without the information and counsel furnished by the presiding elders. The Bishop must have such assistance. Our Bishops are not confined to one State, but travel from Florida to Oregon—visit foreign lands, China and Mexico; and this travel must extend more and more.

"But," say objectors to the presiding eldership, "can not the presiding elder be the pastor of some charge in his district, and thus relieve the church of the financial burden of the support of one man in each district?" This plan would only be possible in such few districts as lie almost wholly in the limits of some large city. An extensive district, embracing several large counties and parishes, hundreds of miles in extent, would utterly preclude the possibility of a united presiding eldership and pastorate. But if an arrangement is made to relieve cities of the expense of presiding elderships, country districts will complain that unfair discriminations are made. Such complaints would make men of ordinary sensibility and self-respect unwilling to serve the church as presiding elders.

Another serious objection to uniting the presiding elder and pastor of a charge in one man is this: It puts the presiding elder in a most delicate and embarrassing position. As it is now there is little ground to suspect or charge the presiding elder with self-seeking; but if he were a pastor as well, the suspicion would almost surely arise—"He is seeking a pleasant place for himself, or he is keeping himself where he is not wanted or where some one else would be far more useful." We see not how, with our system, we can dispense with the office and functions of the presiding elder; nor do we see how the office can be united with the regular pastoral charge of a circuit or station without serious damage to such charges and great detriment to the presiding eldership, besides placing him in a delicate and embarrassing attitude. If the presiding elder is such a man as he ought to be, he is well worth to the church all it costs to support him.

From a Presiding Elder.

MR. EDITOR: One more appointment, and I complete the second round on the Winona district. I am pleased to note that there seems to be advance in every respect at almost every point. Fine revivals at several places, and a good prospect for revivals in other charges. There is a decided improvement in the Sunday-school cause. One more parsonage has been purchased this year and several new church buildings projected. We have now twelve parsonages in the district with seventeen charges, and we hope to have one more before the year closes.

We are talking Centennial all around, and hope to make a good report on that subject at the end of the year. I do not think I have seen the pastors of a district more earnest than my colleagues of this district. All are hopeful of success but those brethren who are laboring in the overflooded district. The third and last overflow for this spring has rendered them somewhat despondent. They have a hard time, and deserve the prayers and sympathies of the church.

Allow me to correct a slight error in Bro. J. W. Lambuth's communication in the ADVOCATE, May 1. He says J. C. Keener was in charge of Franklin Street Church, with the west ward attached, in 1811. J. C. Keener was at that charge, in 1813, as assistant to Dr. L. Pierce. In June of that year the great revival occurred at Demopolis, and Bro. Keener was removed by the presiding elder to take charge of that place at the Conference, and was returned to that place in 1814, Demopolis having been placed upon the list of appointments as a station. I am now the only person living of the original number who constituted the church at that place.

I was startled last week at hearing the report that I came near losing my life by taking a dose of morphine for quinine, but was very much gratified to learn from the ADVOCATE, of last week, that I was not the man. What a narrow escape our dear Bro. E. B. made! Come to our District Conference. We want to use you as others have done.

THOS. Y. RAMSEY.
DECATUR, MISS., May 15, 1884.

A Card.

Having had occasion recently to acquaint myself somewhat with the early history of Methodism in Mississippi and the Southwest, I am fully convinced that that history is as replete with all that is heroic and interesting as is the history of any other section of our great country. The average preacher to-day in Mississippi and Louisiana knows very little of the labors, trials and triumphs of our fathers; and this knowledge we need and ought to have. It would be of incalculable service to all the Methodists of the above-named States if they could become acquainted with the labors, sacrifices and privations endured by our forefathers in order to procure the heritage we now enjoy. Now, one of our fathers in Israel, Rev. J. G. Jones, has written a history of Methodism in Mississippi. That history ought to be published, and this Centenary year is an appropriate time for publishing it. My object in writing these lines is to try to stir up such an interest in the work as will result in its publication. As I understand the matter, only about five hundred dollars are needed to get the work published. Five hundred dollars is a mere bagatelle to the three Conferences interested—Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana. (It should be borne in mind that Louisiana was in early days included in the Mississippi Conference.) In order to get the matter in some sort of shape, I make the following proposition:

Let one of twenty persons who will advance twenty-five dollars each for its publication—this sum to be paid back in sets of the work at retail prices. Are there not nineteen Methodists in Mississippi and Louisiana who will join me in this? I believe there are. If so, let them write at once to Dr. Galloway. Brethren, remember that the journal of the Mississippi Conference for all these past years was burned up last winter, and that Father Jones' manuscript contains material which can not be found elsewhere. I know whereof I affirm when I say that a history of Methodism in Mississippi can not be written without aid from Rev. J. G. Jones.

W. C. BLACK.

Notice.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood:

Bro. George Gilmore died in Clinton, La., May 10, 1884. He was a member of our Brotherhood, Assessment No. 1 must be paid within sixty days. When convenient for several brethren to remit in same letter please do so. Send by registered letter.

Address
I. W. COOPER, Sec.,
Benton, Yazoo county, Miss.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

What—Why—How.

WHAT.

What is the Loan Fund which the Board of Church Extension proposes to raise and administer? It is not, as some have supposed, a fund held in shares, and as an investment, belonging to a building and loan association, a joint stock company, a banking corporation formed upon a secular basis, and managed for profit, but it is to be the property of the church, and used and held for its extension in the earth. With its assistance are to be built church edifices designed to help on the work of the world's conversion.

Nor is it an "endowment"—the principal being invested, and the interest only being used to build churches.

But it is intended that the entire fund shall be free cash capital, every dollar of which shall be kept loaned out to churches for a long or short time, and with or without interest as occasion may require. Ample and legal security for these loans will in every case be taken, as in no other way can we keep faith with the donors and carry out our purpose.

Why.

Why should such a sum be secured? Because we need a large sum of ready money upon which drafts may be made at once to meet emergencies that are constantly arising.

Unexpected and unavoidable calamities overtake our congregations, and immediate relief must be given, or disaster follows.

Opportunities to secure eligible sites, or to purchase valuable property at a low price, often occur, and to avail ourselves of these we must have money in hand.

Loans may be made to take the place of donations in many, if not in most cases. Not a few who are unwilling to put themselves in the attitude of pensioners upon the church's bounty by accepting a gift would be glad to obtain a loan. Some have asked for donations, and when only loans could be had, have found them just what was needed.

Loans do their work, and return to our treasury, and then go again on other missions of usefulness and repeat their work, and continue thus to go and come, reproducing their blessings year after year.

How is this to be done?

1. Let our richest people be seen and urged to give in sums proportioned to their ability. We have men and women among us who ought not to be asked for less than $25,000, and who ought not to think of a smaller sum. This amount can be so used as to secure the erection of fifty churches every five years for all time to come. What a blessing would such a gift prove, and how it would enshrine the memory of the giver!

2. Named Loan Funds of $5,000 and upward, each to the number of scores, might be subscribed by people of moderate means, payable in convenient installments. These, like similar funds of the Methodist Episcopal Church, might be made to build dozens of churches before fully paid in.

3. Let everybody send a birthday offering of at least five dollars. All have birthdays this year. Honor the one hundredth year of American Methodism by giving on or near your birthday this sum at least for the extension of the church through the continent.

DAVID MORTON.
LOUISVILLE, KY., May 13, 1884.

A Methodist Heroine.

A little volume of "Sketches of American Methodists" has this characteristic notice of Mrs. Crocker, whose husband was a farmer in New Hampshire. When the Rev. D. McCall was preaching in that State she sat one day an attentive listener to his sermon. The words pierced her heart like a sharp arrow. So deep was her sorrow for sin that, on her return home, she could not restrain her sighs and tears in presence of her husband. Her grief annoyed him, and on learning its cause he said very sternly, "You shall not go to that Methodist meeting any more."

Fearing his anger she made no reply. But, while spending a day with a neighbor shortly after, she ventured to attend a meeting held near by, and was so moved that the flood-gates of her penitential sorrow were opened, and she returned to her home weeping as before. In the evening her husband, who had been to the mill, came in. Some one had told him that his wife had been to the meeting, and the sight of her tears was to his temper what a crimson cloth is to an unreasonable ox. After a volley of cruel words, he said, "You must promise me never to attend another Methodist meeting, or leave my house once more!"

This unexpected, unprovoked threat started the trembling woman. She was, to truth, dumb with astonishment. Her silence enraged him, and, lifting his arm into a threatening attitude, he fiercely shouted: "Say what you mean to do. Quick!"

"It was a crisis in the life of that weeping wife. 'What can I do?' she thought. 'What can I do?' she replied. 'I must comply with your demand, and you will give me no time to think about it, painful as it is. I must leave your house!'"

Whereupon her husband opened the door, and said, fiercely: "Go! Get out this instant!"

Fearful lest a blow might be added to these angry words, she stepped out into the pitiless storm. The cold blast, as it swept against her lightly-clad form, made her shiver. Her heart throbbed violently as she whispered to herself, "If the Lord does not pity and save me, I have none to help me now."

She threw her apron over her uncovered head, and hurried to the log barn and crept beneath the hay.

Her guilty husband's thoughts troubled him. "I have turned my wife out of doors," he said to himself. "And for what? Because she was seeking her soul's best good, as I ought to do myself. What if she should perish in the storm? What can I say to my neighbors, my children, to God, if she should die?"

Unable to endure these torturing questions, he lighted his lantern, traced her footprints to the hovel he called a barn, and, in humble tones, said: "Do forgive, wife, and come back to the house. You shall go to meeting as often as you please, and I will go with you. Do please come back home!"

You may be sure she forgave her penitent husband, and returned to the home from which she had been so cruelly driven an hour before. The man kept his promise, and their home henceforth became the abode of Christian affection.

Mr. Spurgeon on "Growing Old."

Under the heading, "My Fiftieth Year, and Growing Old," Mr. Spurgeon discusses the question whether men and preachers grow less useful after fifty, considering it with special reference to himself. Not satisfied with such negative evidence as is implied by his immunity from friendly investigations the effects of increasing age on other men. No one, he says, can deny that there is such a thing as "the tameness at forty, and the going to seed at fifty," and he indorses from personal experience the opinion of "a by no means censorious brother" that "very little examination will convince the most skeptical that an appalling percentage of preachers are dull, dry and tiresome."

In the case of preachers and, indeed, of some politicians the peculiar danger of advancing years is length of discourse. "Two honored brethren," he writes, "have lately fallen asleep whose later years were an illustration on their friends. To describe one is to depict the other. He is so good and great and has done such service that you must ask him to speak. He will occupy only a few minutes. He will occupy those few minutes, and your meeting will die out under his protracted periods. Your audience moves; all interest is done; your meeting is a failure, and all through a dear old man whose very name is inspiration. The difficulty is not to start these grand old men, but to stop them when started; they appear to be wound up like clocks, and they must run down."

Though "the who is a superior at sixteen" may, to quote Mr. Spurgeon's expressed metaphor, "be asleep at sixty," there is another view of the effects of age, and there is as usual a proverb—"Soon ripe, soon rotten"—to support it. In careers which do not specially demand the enthusiasm and bodily strength of youth many of the most distinguished men have "flourished" at or after their fiftieth year, and the names of Darwin, Beaconsfield and Moltke at once suggest themselves among modern veterans, not to mention those ancient worthies who are so often disinterred by the elderly from the pages of Cicero De Senectute.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1884.

FROM THE EDITOR.

BY WILLIAM DOWLING.

What is this that comes from Eden,
Clad in garments dyed with blood,
Travelling in strength and freedom,
In apparel like a God?
"I have tried the press alone,
Of the people there were none,
Now has come my day of vengeance,
New revelation a year is gone,
Engaging a full deliverance
From the bondage of their sin.
Hail in vain without the light,
I have conquered by my might."
Great Jehovah, strong deliverer,
We, the ransomed of thy grace,
Will adore thy name forever
For the rescue of our race.
Earth and heaven join in song,
Halleluia to the Lamb!

Retrospective.

EIGHTH PAPER.

At the urgent request of an affectionate mother, who had visited her four-year-old son, living in the State of New York, I took a vacation during the summer of my second year on the Wilkinson circuit to pay her a last visit. Dr. Winans and some of our local preachers kindly consenting to fill my regular appointments during my absence. Bro. Parker Smith, a planter, living near Woodville, who was in delicate health, was to me an agreeable traveling companion.

Taking leave of my family about the first of July, we left for New Orleans to go to the northern lakes. On arriving at New Orleans we found the Grand Turk, a new, commodious and splendid steamer, advertised for her first trip to St. Louis, on which we took passage. Allow me to say that some incidents occurred while en route which many years have not effaced from memory, and which may be appropriate in these Retrospective Papers.

In the first place I will modestly remark that since I was licensed to preach the gospel, in 1842, I have endeavored to act the preacher, but in my person may not look so much the preacher as always to be taken by strangers for one. Hence it was no surprise to me, while the Grand Turk was steaming up for a start, and while promounging the cabin for exercise, that a gentleman with quick step approached me, saying: "Captain, what is your fare to St. Louis?" I informed him that I was not the captain of the boat, but presumed he could arrange the fare with the clerk in his office. He politely left me. Before leaving the wharf he had a large number of passengers on board, comprising pleasure seekers, merchants, planters, sportsmen and, so far as I knew, but our preacher. As the steamer was leaving the shore I went aloft to the reeving deck to take a view of the receding city, and found many others there. While taking observations a gentleman approached me, saying: "You are the captain of a brig lying at—wharf?" No, sir, said I, you are laboring under a mistake; I am not captain of any brig. "Excuse me," said he, "you know that captain very much." Who next and what next? thought I. In a short time afterward I noticed a well-dressed Irishman, as he would pass by, looking intently at me; after a little while he stepped up to me and said, with his native brogue: "If I am not very much mistaken I have seen you in Ireland; you are a Catholic priest." Said I, you are very much mistaken; I have never been to Ireland, neither am I a Catholic priest. Said he: "I can not be mistaken, sir; I have seen you in Ireland, and you are a Catholic priest." Well, sir, said I, if you know me better than I know myself you can have your own notions about it. With this he twirled, walked off, and looked as though he believed I had denied my country and cloth. Soon after the persistent Irishman left me a Mr. McCanahan, of St. Louis, engaged me in conversation. He was plain and unassuming, and had the appearance of an honest business man. He informed me that he had shipped a lot of leaves to New Orleans, and was on his return home. As we were to travel together for several days, we became somewhat intimate. The next morning I missed him from the breakfast table, also from the dining. Thinking that something serious might be the occasion of his absence, I rapped at his stateroom door, and was admitted. I found him quite sick, and proposed to procure suitable medicine if it could be had on the boat. He declined taking any medicine, and said he would wait until he reached home.

At Bayou Sara several passengers came aboard; among them I recognized Dr. Mathews, whom I had not seen for several years. I made his acquaintance in Madison county, Miss., in 1840. At that time he was a Protestant Methodist preacher in good repute. Several ladies and gentlemen passengers came to the cabin. I looked in vain for Dr. Mathews. I went in search for him among the deck passengers, and found him sitting pensively seated on a berth. He recognized me, said he was in trouble, and it was possible, I might render him assistance. Said he: "I am on my way to St. Louis, and have my daughter along. She is going to visit her grandmother, who lives a few miles above the city. While in New Orleans we engaged our passage on the Uncle Sam; leaving our trunk, with some money, and other valuables in it, on board, I thought I had ample time to walk a little and view the city before the hour of the departure of the steamer. When we returned the boat had just left. Soon afterward the Sultana left for St. Louis. We went aboard; after a while I explained matters to the clerk, and offered my watch (which he took), until we could reach our destination and get my trunk from the Uncle Sam. He declined taking my word and the risk, and put us ashore at Bayou Sara, among entire strangers, telling me that I could get the watch by paying eight dollars. This is the first St. Louis boat coming up, and I for we will be put ashore again. Will you assure the captain that the money will be forthcoming for our passage, and pay some attention to my daughter, while I remain as a deck passenger?" I told him I would see what could be done to relieve him.

I learned from him that since I had met with him he had lived in one of the northern counties of Mississippi, had engaged in politics, and was not at that time in the ministry. I left him somewhat hopeful with regard to his present embarrassment. While passing through the gangway I was stopped by an Irishman, a deck passenger, who informed me that the rule was that no cabin passenger was allowed to visit the deck and return without treating to a bottle of whiskey. I gave him to understand if the rule was general I must be made an exception, as I neither drank whiskey nor furnished it for others to drink. Said he, rather gruffly: "Can't make you an exception; give me a half dollar and I will get it." Dr. Mathews noticed that I was stopped, and came forward and told the Irishman to let me pass, as I was a friend of his. "No," said Paddy, "he can't pass without complying with our rules." I insisted that he should step aside, or he might have to account for his rudeness. About this time a large man, who was keeping a lively stable in St. Louis, came down on deck to see his laundress. Finding the gangway blocked, he inquired into the affair. After I explained matters to him he doubled his large fist, and said to the lover of whiskey: "Get out of the way, and let the gentleman pass, or I will knock daylight out of you." He stepped one side, and I to the cabin. More about Dr. Mathews, his daughter and the sick man in my next.

MARSHALL, TEXAS.

The Salvation of Infants.

MR. EDITOR: A demand for a better understanding of this subject will continue until it is relieved of the misstatements and inconsistencies which environ it as we find it at present. I suppose complete satisfaction with doctrine is no more an indication of spiritual health than satisfaction with practice. The history of the church demonstrates that which is affirmed by the word, that progress in doctrine keeps pace with progress in practical holiness. It is true Mr. Spurgeon avers that he has not changed a hair's breadth in doctrine since he began his ministerial career, but John Wesley, who in our view was nearer a normal type of Christian manhood, saw his errors, and forsook them. The ultimate in doctrine will be reached only with the ultimate in practical holiness. In this struggle for truth there will be collisions. It is, as Dr. Deema says, the dead and motionless alone that comes in contact with no one. That which moves, especially if in a straight line, in this crooked world collides with something else. Yet there is no need there should hurt or harm, even in feeling, in what should be an earnest, conscientious search for light and truth.

It occurs to me that the wide misapprehension that prevails in this question is the assumed position that there is something so special in the natural and spiritual state of infants as to require for them a different salvation from that of older persons. One of our leading authors declares infant salvation to be an "incomprehensible mystery." Another, who stood first as a logician and profound theologian, taught that infants have no moral character, and I find one of your late correspondents teaching that infants are justified not by or through pardon, but because they have never sinned. Such declarations by such men indicate how difficult it is to find a basis for a special salvation in the "word of God." The truth is the Bible regards the human family in all essentialities as a unit. The line of accountability, of which we frequently hear, has no recognition in the "inspired volume," at least not after birth. It reveals to us but one salvation and one condition of salvation—"faith in the Lord Jesus Christ." The Jew and Gentile who in extreme individual case stood as wide apart, in a spiritual sense, as is possible with the human race, are saved by the same plan, the difference being only of degree, and not of kind. The simple yet invariable and all-comprehensive terms of the gospel exclude the possibility of even a single exception to their application. "The just shall live by faith." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned."

"Without faith it is impossible to please him." "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." These make clear that the only state of union and favor with God is a "state of faith." Where there is faith God and man stands united; where it is wanting they stand disjointed or apart. There is but one fact that determines the necessity of faith, and that is that the subject is a human soul, for faith, as the condition of salvation, grows out of the very nature of man and his relation to God and his government. Whatever apparent difficulties (for they must be apparent only) there may be in the exercise of faith by the infantile mind must give place to the potential away of these fundamental, immutable principles that subsist between the creature and the Creator. The outgoings of the soul after God are as inherent, as spontaneous and as irrepressible as that of the body for breath; and whether there is little or more of volition and understanding in this process, it matters not, the act, the result is the same. It is the apprehension and appropriation of the supernatural and spiritual by the human.

And this is that wonderful work, the Scriptural term for which is faith. The feeblest endeavor, in this primary stage of life, to receive the spiritual, even an unresisting submission to what the theologians call "prevenient grace," though it borders near the involuntary and is devoid of what is ordinarily called intelligence, yet reason, philosophy and Scripture unite in authorizing us to call such effort, or rather such yielding to the communications of the divine kingdom, by the term "faith." To say faith can be exercised only after a certain development of the mental man or the acquisition of a certain amount of knowledge, and no one can tell exactly what or how much must be known, is to exalt the function of intellect in the act of faith beyond what the Scriptures allow. For it is written: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Besides Peter, in giving us the graduated schedule of the elements of Christian character, places faith first on the list, and knowledge as something to be added. Knowledge is certainly a great auxiliary to faith, but can hardly be said to be an indispensable antecedent. If so Peter did not err according to facts in the case. Again, it may be said with all safety and all certainty that in a normal state of the human soul faith is the easiest of all acts or states, and the first it is capable of performing, and under the gracious enablements of the atonement the infant soul approaches it if it does not reach the capabilities of primitive, normal life. Though to believe may and does become the hardest of all things to the sinner of many years and neglected opportunities, yet in this great and awful change he can but see the disabilities imposed, and the transformation wrought by persistent, unforgotten sin. It is very true that this capability of faith implies a capability of sin, and here the "written word" comes to our relief, for it declares expressly: "The wicked are estranged from the womb: they go astray as soon as they are born, speaking lies."—Psalms lxxviii, 3. And to Israel, in Isaiah xlviii, 8, the Lord said: "Thou wast called a transgressor from the womb." Besides, it is undeniably evident that in a nature where there are elements of sin, though they are not dominant, yet we emotion, desire or act can be wholly exempt from sin, and consequently they need the pardon that comes through the atonement of Christ. So infants are not saved because they have not sinned, for the "book" declares "all have sinned," but they are saved by grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. For the apostle settles the question: "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."

JOHN W. HALL.
OFFSHORE, Mississippi.

From Dover Parsonage.

MR. EDITOR: I was very much pleased at reading a letter, in last week's ADVOCATE, from a neighbor "heroine of the parsonage," Mrs. B. W. Cooper. It rejoices me greatly to know of the good fortune of our ministers' families, and I hope Sister Cooper will accept my fervent congratulations at receiving such tender and appreciable expressions of kindly feelings from her good neighbors. Having heard much of Benoit Methodism, I did not "wonder at the generosity and kindness of the people" when I learned that turkeys, hogs, birds, cakes and jellies had found their way into the parsonage larder. I sincerely hope that my fortunate friend will not, in the exuberance of her gratitude, suppose that her case is without a parallel in the history of all the parsonages of the land. An inventory of gifts received at the Dover parsonage since our occupancy of it would be entirely too lengthy for publication, for it would embrace almost everything in the line of wearing apparel, as well as edibles, both substantial and dainty. Our Christmas dinner (turkey and delicacies) was cooked and sent us ready for the table. Besides that we received two living turkeys for use during the holidays. Our good friends did not wait for Christmas, however, to gladden our hearts with their tokens of loving kindness, nor did they cease their kindly remembrances when Christmas passed and was forgotten. They began early last year, and a stream of strong current, bearing precious things, has poured in upon us till now. Mr. Adams has just returned from one of his churches with a huge basket full of good things. I will not mention the contents for fear of exciting the "desire of the flesh" of the queen of "Point Lookout." The Baptists vie with the Methodists in showing us kindness, and families without church relation seem eager to make our stay in their midst pleasant. We shall ever gratefully remember the kindness these good people have lavished upon us, and pray that the Rewarder of good will richly recompense them.

In point of compactness our work here marked and painful contrast with Benton circuit. The compactness and inconvenience of Dover circuit are known to all who know the work. Every church but one is nearer some other pastor than its own. In consequence of this there is not, there never will be, indeed there never can be, that esprit de corps necessary to that identity of feeling and concert of action indispensable to vigorous and successful circuit work. The pastor must take strong hold upon the affections of the people, else he fails and every interest of the charge wanes. Dover's pastor drives by two other parsonages (Benton and Yazoo City) in his circuit travels, and by way of revenge (very pleasant revenge, however) frequently feasts upon the delicious chickens at the Benton parsonage. He says that he is very glad those chickens are not devoted to missionary purposes. Mr. Adams has a dread of these homes where "missionary chickens" are raised; eggs and fried chicken are too scarce for him there.

Our chief affliction at present is the gnats. Unnumbered millions of them are flying in provoking and painful stinging swarms about us constantly; both eyes watch and both hands fight them. When will the end come? We are awaiting it with all the patience we can possible exercise. If they continue much longer all patience will be gone, and the chickens too, and then what will my good neighbor, Sister Cooper, do for fried chicken for the preacher guests?

We are having some little success in our labors; more in the line of infant baptism than any other. Indications are favorable for a gracious revival during the year. We are hoping and praying for it.

JULIA T. ADAMS.

DOVER, MISS., APR. 30, 1884.

From the Work.

MAYERSVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Possibly a few words from this section may be of interest to your readers. Last Saturday and Sunday our second quarterly meeting was held at Skipwith: Dr. C. G. Andrews, our presiding elder, seemed to be encouraged with the reports. Through the earnest efforts of Mr. Alex. Bunn, and the liberality of the kind people here, our church, which was blown down two years since, has been rebuilt, and is out of debt. We think it is very nice and suitable for this place. It has been painted both inside and out, and we hope to have it furnished by next Conference. We now have two very interesting Sunday-schools on the work, and hope to organize another at the next appointment soon. Two Juvenile Missionary Societies have been organized, and are working tolerably well. About one-third of the collections, including the pastor's salary, has been raised. There seems to be interest manifested all over the work.

Allow me to say just a word in reference to the people here in the swamp. The most of them have a very high regard for religion and a minister, though there is not a superabundance of experimental religion. There are a great many things done that should not be, but in this there are not exceptional. Everywhere I go I find a hearty welcome from saint and sinner. The indications are favorable for a revival at each appointment. Pray for us, that the presence of the Lord may be with us.

MARK D. MOORE.

MAY 7, 1884.

BIG CANE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We have many things for which to be thankful. Not more than many others, but to the inherent word home has a peculiar significance and influence that none but he can enjoy to the same extent. After two moves and three months en route we are thus situated in the village of Big Cane, where the people have bought a cozy little house and three acres of land for their preacher's home. Here his bliss might be complete but for the overflow. The marks constantly indicate that when the wind blows and the floods come his foundation should be "higher" than mansions made with hands. Our Sunday-School Convention met May 3. Three schools were represented—Evangelist, Holly Grove and Big Cane. The orators of the day, Mr. James M. Gober and Mr. Ezekiel Mixer, acquitted themselves with honor. The music, rendered by Miss Lelia Havard, was excellent. The responsive reading filled our hearts with thankfulness. Dr. S. P. Ward was elected delegate to the Mansfield convention. We announced that there would be a meeting of the ladies on Wednesday, the seventh, at which time they met and organized a Woman's Missionary Society, electing Mrs. A. Collins, president; Mrs. Ada Whitley and Mrs. Alice Marrow, vice-presidents; Miss Lelia Havard, secretary; Miss Mattie Plinder, treasurer; Miss Rena Hart, corresponding secretary. We have received eight members into the church. There is an increasing attendance of the class meetings. At the close of one of our class meetings we heard the remark that the old days have come again. May we ever keep the "old paths" in regard to the class meetings.

S. H. WHATLEY.

MAY 8, 1884.

Marriages.

RISER-MALLORY.—At Wetoka, Ala., May 18, 1884, by Rev. H. N. Ledbetter, Mr. B. B. Riser and Miss Adella Mallory, both of Talladega county, Ala.

HEWITT-COX.—At the residence of Mr. N. P. Johnson, on Bayou Bonne Idee, April 21, 1884, by Rev. R. S. Tabell, Mr. Charles F. Hewitt and Miss Emma L. Cox, all of Morehouse parish, La.

Obituaries.

MARSHALL.—On February 29, 1884, Bro. HENRY J. MARSHALL passed to his reward on high, and I now send you, at the request of his sorrowing companion and partner of his joys and sorrows in this life, a short sketch of his life and account of his death.

He was born in Warren county, Miss., 1834, and moved when a child to Carroll county, Miss., where he was reared to manhood. He was the son of Reuben and Rachel Marshall. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and had held various offices in the same. He was a great and good man. Too much can not be said in his praise.

It was the writer's privilege to be his pastor one year, and I can say from experience that he loved the church; he loved God's ministers; his house was their home whenever they wished to make it such. His care and concern for his pastor was unbounded. But this is not all. He loved and delighted in the service and worship of God. Surrounded by and being thrown in the company of a great many godly associates, he kept himself "unspotted from the world."

The circumstances attending his death are very painful, and are as follows: He was employed in the planing mills of Messrs. Persons & Wesson, Bogus Chitto, Miss. On February 23, 1884, while he was passing his time in a space of two and a half inches, causing it to be terribly smashed and bruised. But his most serious wound was an internal bruise in his lungs. He walked home from the mill, and went to bed satisfied he would never get up again. He lingered until February 29, when he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. He told his weeping wife not to be troubled about him; if he died he felt he would "go safe," and that God would take care of her and the dear ones he had given them. They tried to get him not to talk that way, but he would not let them. All who knew him loved him, and came to see him and render any assistance they might be able to give in this trying hour. Said his wife, in her letter to the writer: "I will hear him talking, and, on asking what he wanted, he said he was talking to One superior to me." Oh, stand, ye men who fear not God, and see how a Christian can die! Jesus had come again to receive him unto himself. Blessed hope! His father-in-law went to him a short time before his death, and aroused him from a stupor and told him to trust in God. He said, "Yes, sir," and called upon God to accept him for the sake of his dear Son, Jesus.

Thus he passed away, with his head upon the Master's bosom. For the promise is: "He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." He leaves a sorrowing heart-broken wife. They loved each other more than words can tell. He also leaves three boys aged from about eight to fourteen years. May they grow up to be just such men as their beloved father was, and be a comfort and solace to their widowed mother.

Never did I see a happier family than this was. Why they should have been thus torn asunder is one of the mysteries which we can not comprehend now, for we see only through a glass, darkly; but after awhile, dear ones, you shall know the reason, why your hearts are thus pierced with sorrow. "God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain." Dear boys, live so as to meet your father on the other side. Disconsolate widow, look up! He is not lost, but gone a little while before. He has joined the shining ranks, and, my dear wife, will be permitted to come again and conduct you over the Jordan, hear your spirit home and present you before the throne. May God help you to be faithful, is the prayer of

S. J. CUTTON.

MCGEE.—Mrs. MARY S. MCGEE, wife of Mr. J. B. McGee, and daughter of Mr. Peter and Mrs. Sallie Lowry, was born in Fayette county, Ala., December 5, 1827; moved with her parents to Winston county, Ala., in 1830; was married to Bro. McGee, December 14, 1851, and died at his residence, in Choctaw county, Miss., February 21, 1884.

She professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1851. She was baptized in her childhood by Dr. Kannon, at Hargrove's Camp ground, in Pickens county, Ala. She was raised by deeply pious parents who taught her the great principles of our holy Christianity, and impressed upon her young mind the importance of the new birth. Her father and mother were true and earnest Christians, the purest and best of Christians. Her mother has been an invalid for about forty years, which called forth those excellent qualities of heart which Sister McGee possessed. She loved her aged father and invalid mother with true and warm filial love. She was the mother of eight children, all of whom survive her. She was always obedient to her parents, kind and devoted to her husband, and loved her children with a true mother's love. Having been brought up in the doctrines of the Methodist Church, and being genuinely and soundly converted to God, she joined this church and over afterward attended upon its ordinances, supported its institutions and loved its doctrines. Since there has been a camp ground at Salom, where Sister McGee resided, Bro. McGee has visited every year, and was always ready to bear his part of the burden and fatigue of tending, thereby extending her sphere of usefulness. She was always in her place at Sunday-school, at Salom, in the Bible class, and ready to recite her lesson to her teacher and brother, Rev. N. M. Lowry. She did not believe that any one could get too old to study God's word and attend Sunday-school if they were able. She greatly rejoiced in the success of her own church, Sunday-school and Christianity generally. It was a great pleasure to her to have her son and his family visit them. She will never be forgotten by the preachers who have traveled the Louisville circuit. But she was not only good and kind to the preachers and families; but she was good to all. She had the mind that was in Christ. She was not permitted to talk any for several days before she died; but she lived right, and we know she died right. She died of measles, which she always said would kill her if she ever had them. May the Lord bless and sustain Bro. McGee and family who deeply feel their loss, and bring them without the loss of one to meet Sister McGee where we believe she has gone.

A. J. FOSTER.

IRWIN.—Mrs. LUCY W. IRWIN, relict of the late John L. Irwin, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. Harvey Shannon, at Ocean Springs, Miss., May 20, 1884. She was the second daughter of the late Newton Vick, Esq., the founder of the city of Vicksburg, and sister to Col. J. W. Vick, Mrs. C. H. Marshall, Mrs. Anderson and the late Mrs. Dr. Lane—all venerable landmarks of this historic city, and prominent as the planters, fosterers and supporters of Methodism. Sister Irwin was in the eighty-first year of her age, and had spent almost her entire life in the city of Vicksburg. She saw it grow up from a wild "Indian trading post" to its present beautiful proportions.

She was an intelligent and deeply spiritual Christian, having been a devoted and eminently useful member of the Methodist Church for more than sixty years. She loved the church, and she manifested her love by the uniformity with which she attended upon its ordinances, the liberality with which she supported its institutions, the faithfulness with which she observed its rules and the emphasis which her whole life gave to the purity of its doctrines.

She was a sufferer from asthma a great portion of her life, and for several years, preceding her death she was quite an invalid; but her pious heart, with increased lustre under these bodily afflictions. As she drew near the end of her pilgrimage God was pleased to give her expanding faith frequent glimpses of the promised land, and sweet Tabor communings with sainted kindred spirits. Her end was grandly triumphant. Her last Bible quotation was, "I reckon that the suffering of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us."

Her remains were brought to Vicksburg for interment in the cemetery where sleep so many of her loved ones. Her funeral at the Crawford Street Methodist Church, where she had so long and so devoutly worshipped, was largely attended by kindred and friends, in whose memory her name is the synonym of the most beautiful and positive Christian life. A now pulpit and elegant life will soon be placed in our church purchased with her last bequest for the purpose.

H. S. WOODWARD.

LEIGH.—Another lovely child has been taken from the fond embrace of her family to join the angel band. JENNIE CRETCH LEIGH, daughter of Cassius Leigh and Irene H. Smith, was born June 8, 1881, and died in Simpson, La., of croup, March 22, 1884.

Little Jennie was lovely in life, but lovely in death. Her father, under the Master said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me." He has taken her unto himself. Dear parents, live so that you may meet her again.

H. O. WHITE.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"There is no gain
"so certain as saving
"what you have."
Why then destroy valuable garments by using common and impure soaps upon them? Prof. Gent of the University of Pennsylvania, says: "I find the 'Ivory' to be a very 'superior soap.' It 'gives a fine lather,' and it can safely be 'used upon any fabric.'"

PHOTOGRAPHS.

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURN'S

Photographic Parlors.

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal hotel and almost directly opposite the City Hall.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY.

There will be no obligation winter.

We make every kind of portrait known to art, from the miniature for the pocket to the life size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon or Oil.

Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged and the likenesses faithfully preserved.

FREE

Send to MOORE'S BUSINESS UNIVERSITY

For Illustrated Circular. 25th Year.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
SOUTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. JADAM, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1884.

In the Wall street financial flurry, which came near rivaling the famous Black Friday of 1873, we regret to see that Mr. George I. Seney is the principal victim. He has been a liberal benefactor to educational and eleemosynary enterprises, and doubtless would have given yet more largely if prosperity had been attended. But an angel couldn't venture into the speculative whirl of the stock market without getting his wings soiled and clipped. It is the old story of the dove among the pots.

We read with rare interest the chapter from Bishop McTear's forthcoming book on the Relation of Methodism to Negro Emancipation and Evangelization, published last week in the Nashville Advocate. It condenses all the literature on the subject, gives a setting to certain history heretofore overlooked or misinterpreted, and deduces conclusions as striking as true. After carefully studying the whole chapter we most entirely agree with the Bishop that by the providential annulling of the emancipation enactments of the Christiana Conference, Methodist, as a broad and beneficent power, was saved to the Kingdom of heaven and to the world. Otherwise it would have been cut off from the people it had blessed, and would speedily have degenerated into a harrow, fretful combination for social reform, "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." The chapter forcibly summarizes the great evangelical work of Southern Methodism among the people of color.

The great plans of God, while carried on by human instrumentalities, are not dependent upon individuals. Prophets and apostles may pass away—here and there a trusted leader may prove a traitor—but the church of God will still prosper. Like the sun rising in imperial majesty through the heavens, unawed by storm clouds and warring elements, the church will pursue her shining course though her members be few and feeble and all hell may oppose. No weapon formed against her shall prosper. The armories of Satan have no instrument of death that can slay her conquering march. Ocean knows no tempest that can shiver and dismantle the old ship of Zion. Over the highest and angriest hillow she will surely ride. Our chief men, our trusted counselors—the leaders of our bannered hosts—may be called away, yet Zion will put on new vigor, while others brave and strong arise to take their places and shout to the battle.

The London Spectator, in an article on the Cincinnati riots, gives the United States the palm for encouraging or permitting murder over all civilized nations. The statistics quoted show that in this country murder is the cause of death to 820 persons out of every 10,000,000, while in England the proportion stands 237 to every 10,000,000; in Italy, 504; Spain, 533; Russia, with its Nihilism, 523. We quote as follows from the Spectator:

It is in the rule requiring juries to be unanimous that the root of the present evil, so far as it is a result of the judicial mechanism, is to be sought, and the citizens of Ohio may deem the adoption of the Scotch system too revolutionary. They may, however, not be so shocked by a proposal to send any lawyer who bribes a jurymen to perjure himself for life, and that proviso would hurt no innocent man, and act as a most healthy check upon corruption.

The following, from a Northern exchange, is respectfully commended to all Methodists who take so many papers that they are unable to subscribe for an Advocate:

Any Methodist who does not regularly read some of our official papers is blind to the interests of his church. We have asked men recently what religious papers they were taking. One said: "Well, I take the Chicago Times for myself, Fashion Book for my wife, my boy gets the Saturday Night, and, of course, we read the town paper." Now, we believe that none of these, judged by reputation, can be called a religious paper. Every man ought to be posted as to current events. The news is necessary. Of course there is a choice as to which of the great dailies shall enter the home. But it ought to be understood by every parent that the publication of a sermon or two, sometimes orthodox, sometimes full of heresy, will not "hide a multitude of sins," that the discolored reports of some Sabbath discourse does not act as an antidote to the soul-poison administered by the column during a whole week.

The Sunday Morning Apron.

At a recent District Conference we heard a striking incident related by a brother in a discussion on Sunday-schools. The special point of emphasis was the attendance of pupils, and how to secure punctuality and regularity. On that subject, and as illustrative of what might be the habit of every family, the brother told of the plan adopted by a good sister in one of his former pastorates. She had quite a household of children, and was burdened with much of domestic hard labor. Yet she was never absent from her place in the Sunday-school, nor were her children tardy or irregular. Punctual and faithful, she was a support to the pastor and an inspiration to the school. When inquired of as to her plan, she said her rule was to provide on Saturday for Sunday, so that very little cooking was done on the Lord's day. Then early in the morning every child was dressed in his "Sunday clothes," over which, for protection, a large apron, specially made, was worn until after breakfast. By this means she redeemed the time spent in most families in the second dressing and special preparation for Sunday-school. We thought the incident full of practical suggestion and worthy of all acceptance. If adopted in every home there would be a larger average attendance of pupils and a much needed accession of mothers, either as teachers or members of classes. The staple apology among housewives for not attending Sunday-school is the time and exhausted strength expended in getting the children ready. By the time that labor is done it is too late for themselves to make even the most hasty preparation. To all such we commend the Sunday morning apron. It is both an example and a lesson.

The Sunday morning apron indicates forethought for Christ. The good mother anticipated the duties of the morning, and by a capital device provided against their disappointing her presence in the sanctuary. Her religion was not an impulse, but a fixed, joyful principle. She did not wait for the spur of the hour to hurry up the children's toilets, but quietly plied her brain and needle beforehand, that mother and little ones might together enjoy the worship of the Lord's house. It is not wise or well to postpone our thinking for Christ until a duty is upon us. The hazy bustle common in many homes on Sunday morning is evidence of little forethought. Better that hurry and flurry than the Sunday-school should be neglected. But better still if the forethought of the big apron had have redeemed the morning of its worry and secured a quiet in harmony with the sweet day of rest. And such previous preparation will of itself be a means of grace. Those aprons were made for the Master. Every stitch taken and needle threaded kept fresh in mind the blessed Redeemer. For his service she was then serving, and thus the day in which an apron was made was only next in glorious experience to the day for which it was made.

The Sunday morning apron evidences a true appreciation of sanctuary work and worship. That mother was not indifferent to the Lord's house. It was her mount of glory—the place where the soul was fed and the light of heaven shone round about. She did not think it just as well to "remain at home and read a good book," as the manner of some is, but esteemed attendance upon church service the highest privilege. So to secure for herself and children such a spiritual boon, she invented the morning apron. We honor the faith that becomes inventive. It is phenomenal in our time, but commendable and possible to all. Let it be emulated until it becomes the common experience of the church.

We give below a circular now being used and distributed by a pastor in the Mississippi Conference. It is a capital suggestion for each member this year to double the subscription of an ordinary year as a Centenary offering. An amount from each one will aggregate a large sum:

FOR BENEVOLENT CAUSES.
BYRONOED CIRCUIT.

This is the one hundredth year of organic Methodism in the United States. Let us, therefore, make a special offering to God, as an expression of gratitude for our continued prosperity as a church. Let every one at least double his contribution of last year.

ASSESSMENTS.
Foreign Missions
Domestic Missions
Conference Fund
Church Extension
Militar Education
Total

Please return this circular as early as possible with your subscription, to be paid by the first of November, 1884.

D. P. BRADFORD, Pastor.

The Northern Methodist General Conference.

This is a Conference of talkers as well as workers. There is no end of debate on any and every question. This makes the reading of the Daily Christian Advocate rather tedious, albeit some of the speeches are most eloquent and able.

The most protracted and animated discussion thus far was on the report of the Committee on Episcopacy fixing the residence of a Bishop in India. Several days were consumed in debate, all of which was on a high plane, and it took wide range. The vote was taken by separate houses, and the report was defeated for want of a concurrent vote. The ministerial vote stood 144 ayes to 110 nays, and the lay vote 59 ayes to 81 nays. By a large majority the Conference decided to elect four Bishops. The action of their Centennial Committee in arranging for the Christmas Conference was approved, and the Bishops were authorized to appoint representatives to that body on the ratio of one delegate to every fifteen thousand members, with an additional delegate for fractions of half or more of this number.

On Tuesday night of last week the great church extension anniversary was held in Arch Street Church, resulting in a collection of $51,000. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Kynett, Bishop Foss, Dr. Buckley, Gen. Fisk and Chaplain McCahey, the latter lifting the collection. Dr. Kynett remarked that if the audience would give $30,000 he had a friend who would give $20,000 more. Subscriptions poured in, and $51,000 was raised. The Rev. J. G. Miller, of Nebraska, was the liberal donor of $20,000. He is certainly better off than brethren in these parts, and more comfortable than Goldsmith's village parson, who "was passing rich on forty pounds a year." We commend his good example for generous emulation this Centenary year.

On Wednesday night the fraternal delegates from England and France were received—the Revs. Robert Newton Young and Sylvester Whitehead, from England, and Rev. Jean Paul Cook, from France. Mr. Young's address we have read, and it is a masterpiece of stately and sustained eloquence. The memorial service on Wednesday in honor of the deceased Bishops and General Conference officers of the past quadrennium was most impressive. Memoire of Bishops Levi Scott, Jesse T. Peck and Erasmus O. Haven, and of Drs. E. Q. Fuller and George W. Woodruff were prepared and read by selected friends. At the close of the service the venerable Dr. D. Curry made some remarks, from which we quote a few sentences: "If we can say each good thing of those who have departed, ought we not to be prepared to say some of those things of the living? I think we are over-rotic toward the living, who may often be under circumstances where a word of sympathy and cheer would be helpful. I am glad that I belong to such a company. I am glad that our people die well, and they die well because they live well."

Thursday was the royal day of the session, being the time fixed for the election of Bishops. The following were elected, there being five ballots in all: Dr. W. X. Ninde, President Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.; Dr. J. M. Walden, senior Book Agent at Cincinnati; Dr. W. F. Mallen, presiding elder of Boeton district, and Dr. Charles H. Fowler, one of the Missionary Secretaries.

On Thursday night the fraternal messengers from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter and Senator A. H. Colquitt, delivered their address in the Arch Street Church. Of that occasion we have as yet no report. On Friday the election of General Conference officers proceeded, resulting as follows: Book agents at New York, J. M. Phillips and Rev. Sanford Hunt; book agents at Cincinnati, Rev. Earl Cranston and Rev. W. P. Stowe.

Other offices have been filled as follows: Missionary secretaries, Rev. Dr. J. M. Reid and Rev. Dr. C. C. McCabe; secretary of Church Extension Society, Rev. Dr. A. J. Kynett; secretary of Freedman's Aid Society, Rev. Dr. R. S. Rust; secretary of Sunday-School Union, Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent; editor Christian Advocate, New York, Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley; editor Quarterly Review, Rev. Dr. D. Curry.

Rev. J. J. Billingsley, of Acadia, La., writes us a private letter in which he refers to pastoral matters as follows: "The people have built a most delightful parsonage since my arrival, in which we are comfortably housed. We are expecting also to build a Centenary church here this year. I believe that we will have the prettiest and most attractive house of worship in North Louisiana."

A Pastoral Scene.

There are other more heroic and tragic passages in the history of Paul, but none so tender and beautiful as his conference with the Ephesian elders. In the prayer he offered, and farewell words spoken, he exhibited the tender attachment of a true pastor for his flock. Paul had other friends, but none he loved so much as those at Ephesus, for there he spent his longest pastorate. After all the pastor has the royal place in the church, for he gets nearest the heart of the people. There are ties of different tension and tenderness that bind hearts together in this world. There is the love of husband and wife, parent and child, brother and sister and friend for friend. Those are natural expressions of the soul. But the warm, fervent attachment born of Christian sympathy and faith, though possibly not so demonstrative, is pure and beautiful and divine. We love each other because Christ loved us. While the Christian heart goes out for God's people there is a peculiar tenderness and nearness in the attachment for those with whom we are associated in spiritual labor. We love that for which we have labored. In all the garden there may be richer flowers, but none to our eyes so beautiful and sweet as the modest ones our hands have planted and tended. There may be handsome children, but none fairer and lovelier to a mother's eyes than her own brown-haired babe that slumbers on her breast. So there were no children of God so dear to the apostle as the members of the churches he had planted and served. And now as duty called him away, and as he felt he should never see them more, his love found expression in prayers and tears. The busy, stirring scenes and sharp trials of other years would never efface the glowing memories of Ephesus from his heart. From that overflowing, apostolic heart he wished them the greatest possible blessing. How often such scenes are enacted and such experiences mournfully enjoyed among our Methodist pastors. They go freely to other appointed fields of labor, but with blessings for beloved brethren left behind.

A Day Among Friends.

We spent a few hours in Vicksburg on Friday last, and looked in on the Southern Presbyterian General Assembly now in session in that city. It is a fine looking body of men, quite like a Methodist General Conference. We regretted not hearing the sermon of the retiring moderator, the venerable Rev. Dr. Pryor, of Virginia. Though past his four-score years, he is phenomenally vigorous and preaches with the vehemence of voice and gesture characteristic of the early Methodist pulpit. He is an active member of the body, and keeps a keen eye on every matter of business. The moderator, the Rev. Dr. T. D. Witherspoon, of Louisville, Ky., we met some years ago, and had the pleasure of hearing on a commencement occasion at the University of Mississippi. He has fine scholarship, is an eloquent preacher and superb pastor, is a popular author, and makes a well-poised, courteous presiding officer. The most spirited debate of the morning session we attended was on the disposition of a report on the diaconate. A deacon in the Presbyterian Church, it will be remembered, has the same functions of a steward in the Methodist Church. He is a fiscal officer—formerly set apart by the imposition of hands to "serve tables." One old elder from a distant State pleaded for the publication of the report, and in the course of his remarks paid a glowing tribute to Methodist zeal and enterprise. He said: "With all our machinery, our ruling elders and deacons, one Methodist circuit rider can do more than a whole church." And that only accords with those glowing words of Dr. Chalmers, which have passed into a proverb: "Methodism is Christianity in earnest." We pray that the church may never forfeit her claim to such a tribute, but with the growth of years display even more apostolic fervor and power.

On Saturday the fraternal messengers of the Northern Presbyterian Church were welcomed. They are the Rev. Dr. H. A. Nelson, of Geneva, New York, Rev. Arthur Mitchell, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Judge G. A. Shields, of St. Louis, Mo. Their addresses were cordially received, and they produced a profound impression upon the Assembly and the general community. During the hour a fraternal telegram was reported from the Northern General Assembly, in session at Saratoga, to which an appropriate response was made.

Our pastor, Bro. Woodward, and Dr. C. K. Marshall were interested visitors at the Assembly session. We were glad to learn that work will soon begin on the Methodist Church, remodeling and beautifying it after some approved plan.

A few short calls on friends, concluding with a bountiful and elegant lunch at the parsonage, quite consumed the time up to two P. M. Then we departed for Bolton to meet a lecture engagement at night. Pastor Bradford is pushing the work under his care with accustomed vigor. He has made many improvements on the parsonage, and now rejoices in a cozy, comfortable and capacious home. His entire pastorate is harmonious and prosperous, and from it we prophesy a good centennial offering.

The New Orleans District Conference.

This body met in the St. Charles Avenue Church on Thursday last, Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D., presiding elder, in the chair, S. K. Russ was elected secretary. There was a full attendance of the pastors, but, as usual at District Conferences held in cities, the laymen were not numerous. It is good policy and good philosophy to hold these Conferences with the village and rural churches. The attendance will be larger, the local influence more profound and pervading, and the disciplinary business conducted with more interest and profit. Reports from the pastors indicated prosperity as to spiritual growth, financial development and Sunday-school work. We are obliged to the Conference for a cordial and unanimous endorsement of the editorial and business management of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and the pledge to increase its circulation.

Rev. B. Carradine, Rev. J. A. Ivey and J. G. Parham were appointed a committee to memorialize the Board of Management of the World's Exposition on the subject of closing their gates on the Sabbath. We hope like action will be taken at every District Conference in our patronizing territory. The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: W. H. Foster, T. J. Carver, J. D. Nettles, B. O. L. Rayne. Alternates: W. B. Thomson, S. K. Russ.

Some Weighty and Timely Suggestions.

We make an extract from the address of the Bishops to the General Conference at Philadelphia. The suggestions herein have application to our own Methodism and latitude:

The success of the church must ever depend: (1.) Upon an earnest, indefatigable and consecrated ministry; (2.) Upon a devoted and active co-operating membership; (3.) Upon the rich baptism of the Holy Spirit which God has promised to his true servants. We have reason to thank God for the efficient ministers whom he has raised up and given to his church—men consecrated to his service; and we believe that no class of men in the world have given clearer proof of devotion to the cause of Christ than the great body of our itinerant ministers. We cannot, however, ignore the fact that in almost every Annual Conference there are men who have been admitted on insufficient evidence of fitness for the ministry, and who have not proved real service to the church. We most earnestly commend to the church a more thorough examination and trial of candidates for the ministry. The few who fail affect the reputation and standing of the whole body. While not sought for by the people, they often claim, because of their years in the ministry, a right to the more prominent appointments, and, failing to secure them, complain of the church and of its authorities, and spread a spirit of dissatisfaction throughout the church. Our observation is that where the ministry is holy and aggressive the churches prosper, whether in our rural districts or in our cities; but when men remain in the ministry simply to retain positions and to receive support, and mechanically perform the duties of their office, churches fall. Not only is care needed in admissions to the ministry, but there should be some way in which inefficient ministers might be more easily retired, that the Conferences might be able to receive active and promising men who are offering themselves for the work.

At a conference of foreign missions, held in London recently, the following resolution was adopted, and the chairman was directed to send a copy of it to all missionary societies:

This conference, while cheered with the progress of missionary work, has been deeply pained in the course of its proceedings with the evidence brought before it from various sources, by gentlemen in the Indian civil service and by missionaries of long experience, of the systematic propagation of infidel literature issued at the present time from England to India, Japan and other countries; so much so that it appears that students taking degrees at our government universities in India receive gratuitously a supply of degrading infidel literature from our own land. Thus the knowledge of the English language, provided by our government educational establishments, is made the means of introducing evil instead of good. It seems that the time has fully come when those interested in the great work of our missionary societies should supply all these students with an exposition and declaration of Christian truth and the solid basis on which Christianity rests.

Taking Religion in Capsules.

We have some teachers and preachers in this country, Jesuitical revivalists, who offer religion to the people in homeopathic doses in gelatin capsules to hide the bitterness of repentance—a godly sorrow for sin. Some of them have, by some new chemical process peculiar to their theological laboratory, discovered a sulphate of religion from which the disgusting and offensive element of repentance has been extracted. Others retain this element, but exhibit the dose in capsules so it will not be offensive to their patients. These doctors and their new nostrums, or with the old medicine for sin-sick souls in capsules, are in demand, particularly in some communities and by certain classes of people. Repentance for sin is the offensive part of religion. If it were not for this more people would be willing to take religion. In order to popularize religion and make it palatable these doctors have invented new ways of administering it. It is almost impossible for one to know when a patient swallows a dose exhibited in these one grain capsules. It is an easy going case. No tears are shed, no wry faces made, no effort, no agony, the tiny pellet is gulped down with scarcely an effort at deglutition. This sulphate of religion with repentance taken out, or the old specific for sin in capsules, would be a great improvement if it were as effective as the old way of administration. Unfortunately the effects are not what they ought to be. There is no godly sorrow for sin, no turning away from it. It produces a sort of religiousness rather than pure religion. Some of the patients are partially reformed without any radical transformation. The branches of sin are cut off and the strongest shoots are chopped down for a time, but the roots of sin form a mat over the entire surface of the soul. The new process looks more to the repression of sin than to rooting it out of the heart and life. It helps to make gentlemen and gentle women, but develops little Christlikeness in those who take religion in this form. This sulphate and capsule process makes some violent and vicious sectarians who would shed other people's blood for the maintenance of denominational peculiarities, but it develops few, if any, Christian men and women who love God and hate sin.

Religion with the element of repentance extracted, or hidden in a capsule, may be more palatable to godless men and women than the old article, but it is every way less effective in saving the human soul from the reigning power and dominion of sin. Conviction for sin and turning away from it with loathing and hatred of it lie at the foundation of all genuine devotion to God. This kind produces an awful agony, a great struggle, a consciousness of the need of Divine help, and it leads to faith in God. Out of it there comes a crucifixion of the flesh with the affections and lusts thereof, a turning away from sin of all kinds and in every form, an earnest longing for holiness of heart, and a fixed purpose to live and die for God. In some parts of our country there is, I am sorry to say, a tendency to lower the gospel to the measure of the people. We ought to hold up the standard and urge the people to come to it. We ought to come to the measure of the stature of grown men and women in Christ, our Lord. An earnest conversation in the past few weeks with some who were urged "just to stand up and confess Christ," the common capsule, revealed this fact: They were willing to conform to all the external observances of religion, but they must be excused from the internal graces; they could not—no man could—love his enemies or bless them that cursed him or pray for them that despitefully used him. Inordinate affection, lasciviousness, evil concupiscence, lust, hatred, envy, and wrath was perfectly natural, and hence they could be retained and indulged in the heart, but they must not be allowed in open acts, because this would disgrace the church and put the party in a bad light before the world. They say "sin is an act, and nothing is an act but that which is overt." This new sulphate of religion stupefies the soul and deadens the conscience to the existence of sin in the heart. We should reaffirm with unction and power the doctrines of conviction and repentance, turning away from sin internal and external.

OLDEROY.

A copy of the Port Gibson Reville has been received, containing the address delivered on decoration day by Hon. J. D. Shields, the remarkable by Gen. Dabney H. Maury and a memorial poem by Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt. For some years our brother has occasionally invoked the muses, but on the occasion above he had a special and rich measure of the divine affluence.

The Opelousas District Conference met on Thursday last at Lake Charles, Bishop Keener presiding.

Dr. D. D. Whedon has been editor of the Northern Methodist Quarterly Review for twenty-eight years.

We acknowledge the courtesy of an invitation to attend the commencement exercises of Huntsville Female College, June 1. Rev. A. B. Jones, president.

Charles O'Conner, of New York, the great lawyer and statesman, died last week at his quiet Nantucket home. Most of his property goes to the Roman Church.

Presiding Elder B. S. Rayner desires us to state that his address is Hattiesburg, and that he is occupying the Seashore district parsonage—a roomy, neat, comfortable building just completed.

The Iowa Prohibitionist says that twenty-five saloon keepers in Dubuque have determined to quit the business of liquor selling. Others, in secret meeting, determined to fight the law to the end.

The bill granting a loan of $1,000,000 to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition has passed both houses of Congress. This places the success of the great enterprise beyond a peradventure.

Rev. Edward Guard, a distinguished Irish Wesleyan minister, died recently, lamented by the whole connection. He was a brother of the eloquent Dr. Thomas Guard, who died in Baltimore a year or two ago.

Gov. McJannet was inaugurated Monday at the capitol grounds in Baton Rouge with imposing ceremonies. The other State officers were sworn in at the capitol.

A report of the Greenville District Conference, received too late for this issue, will appear next week. It resulted in a glorious revival in the town of Greenville. At last accounts thirty-five had been added to the church.

A note from Bro. R. C. Callaway brings the sad news of the death of Rev. W. C. Green, a superannuated member of the North Mississippi Conference. He died in great peace at his home in Calhoun county, on the ninth instant.

A handsome new church at Columbia, Miss., Rev. J. W. McLaurin, pastor, will be dedicated on the third Sunday in June. We regret exceedingly that another engagement will prevent our attending the interesting ceremonies.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, writing from Shreveport, La., says: "We are about on my circuit. Nearly all under, and water still rising. Still we are circulating the Advocate. Have placed it in nearly every family of our congregation."

A wife-awake pastor thus writes of a recent Advocate editorial: "After Lent—What?" is the best thing I have ever read on the subject. I would that it could be carefully read by every one who makes any pretension to religion."

There were 318 Mormons landed last week in New York. Half of these were English and Welsh, the other half were Scandinavians. They were accompanied by seven Mormon missionaries who were returning home from a proselyting tour.

Carrollton circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. H. E. Smith, pastor, has "cleared the decks," and the collection yet to be taken at one appointment. The collection at Carrollton exceeded the assessment for the entire circuit. This is one result of the revival reported from this place in April.

The trustees of Aberdeen Female College, Aberdeen, Miss., wish to employ a principle to take charge of the school at the opening of next session, in September next. The school is just closing a very prosperous term. Address Rev. R. P. Mitchell, Aberdeen, Miss.

Our esteemed neighbor, the Rev. Dr. H. M. Smith, of the Southwestern Presbyterian, celebrated his silver wedding on Friday the sixteenth instant. The doctor and Mrs. Smith received a cordial letter of congratulation with some more substantial tokens and souvenirs.

The Press Association of Mississippi met in nineteenth annual session last week in Jackson. There was a large attendance, and the hospitality of the capitol city was unbounded. The annual oration was delivered by the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, on "The Ethics of Journalism." Col. J. J. Shannon, of Meridian, was elected president for the current year. A committee was appointed to prepare a code of ethics for adoption at the next meeting.

The Rev. Wm. Taylor, the well-known missionary of independent methods, introduced a resolution in the General Conference last week affirming that "It is lawful and right to get people converted." It arrested attention and caused many a delegate to do some serious thinking.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the anniversary exercises of Franklin Institute in concert with the United Literary Society of Centenary College. Rev. B. Carradine delivers the annual address. Centenary is closing a prosperous term, with a graduating class of six excellent young men.

Col. J. F. H. Claiborne, the historian of Mississippi, died in Natchez, on Saturday last, at the age of seventy-seven years. He was a conspicuous figure in the politics of the early South-west, and through life was a profound student, facile writer and cultured gentleman. He passes away lamented by a great State.

The Texas Jubilee Advocate has come to hand. It is a sixteen page folio, with wood-cuts and sketches of the Southern Bishops dead and living, and a few others prominent in Texas Methodism, also cuts of several prominent churches in the State, and a mass of valuable matter, historical and statistical, religious and secular. It is edited by Rev. H. S. Thrall, and his paper indicates much painstaking labor.

Accompanying some highly appreciated "copy" which came too late for this issue, Bishop Parker writes us a private note, dated Langrange, Texas, May 16, from which we reproduce the following: "I am thus far on my round, and in very good preservation. I leave here on Monday, the nineteenth instant, for Waxahatchie District Conference and then on, hoping to call at home, a few days, by June 10. Peace and prosperity be with you. Love to all the brethren."

Some of our missionaries in China have been quite sick. Bro. Mingledorff, at Nantziang, had measles, complicated with bronchitis, which came near taking his life. When he began to convalesce his little son, Willie, and Miss Dora Rankin were stricken with the same disease. That was Miss Rankin's third attack of measles. For skillful medical attention and relief they are indebted to Miss Dr. Rieksnyder, of the Woman's Union mission, Shanghai. She made the trip at night and alone with two coolies, in a wheelbarrow, from Shanghai to Nantziang, a distance of sixteen miles.

The New Orleans District Sunday-School Union celebrated its thirty-eighth anniversary last Sunday afternoon at Carondelet Street Church. W. H. Foster, Esq., the president, and founder of the Sunday-School Union, presided. The brilliant audience filled to overflowing the spacious auditorium, and the programme of exercises was most admirably carried out. President Foster made a statement concerning the Sunday-school work of the district, which was most encouraging. There are nineteen schools in successful operation connected with the Union, which is an advance on other years. With all the difficulties confronting, that is a creditable showing.

The editor had a sad duty to perform last week in attending the funeral of one of the nearest and best friends of his life—Mrs. Sarah H. Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. We have known her in all the relations of daughter, sister, wife, mother, friend and Christian, in each of which she illustrated the rarest virtues. A more charming Christian home we have never entered than hers, nor did ever pastor have a more sympathizing, loyal parishioner. As a Methodist her convictions were singularly clear, and her experience as a Christian grew brighter and brighter until the perfect day. It was the regret of all that her brother, the Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews, did not reach the city until after the burial. A more extended notice will appear soon.

The New York Independent pays this just and noble tribute to the greatest fact of modern times:

American Methodism is, without doubt, the greatest religious fact, whatever conclusions may be drawn from it, of the age. Its constituency, in this the centennial year of its organic life, is larger than was the entire population of the United States in 1781. It counts almost four million members, and may claim to have almost, if not quite, one-third of the American people under its influence. It has not attained to its present vast proportions by immigration, like the Roman Catholics, but by the faithful propagation of the gospel of love and life. It has got the gospel of love and life, and it has pressed its character upon them and pressed its national heart as no other church has been able to touch other churches in a fact of power, of growth, of inspiration, of vast influence.

Books and Periodicals.

HOME SCENES, Selden R. Hopkins. New York: 229 Walnut street, 60 BROADWAY.

This is a new candidate for public favor. The initial number is substantial, neat, well filled and skillfully edited. It has an open commendation and a healthy expression. The 112 pages are full of good tidings. Dr. Talmage, Robert Collyer, Dr. Lewis, Dr. Starr and Prof. Tving are among the contributors. Twenty-five cents a number. Two dollars and fifty cents a year.

AN HOUR WITH MISS STREATOR. By Fanny. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co.

This is a stirring little book by one of America's most popular writers. Sunday-school workers can not read these pages and be "at ease in Zion." It can be had, for a few cents. Such books ought to cover the land, then will it bring forth and bud.

"OUR OWN CHURCH SERIES." By Rev. J. H. Vincent. New York: Phillips & Hunt.

This is a series of nine tracts in Dr. Vincent's most forcible style, and on living subjects. They are bound in neat, heavy, bridle covers, and in two colors. They can be had for four cents each.

The Popular Science Monthly, for May, is on our table. The leading article is by Herbert Spencer on "The Sins of Legislators." It contains some points applicable to our side of the sea. Some other subjects in the special table of contents are as follows: The Beaver and his Works, An Experiment in Prohibition, Love of the Astronomer, Christian Agnosticism and The Morality of Happiness. There is a portrait of Mary Somerville with an admirable sketch of her career. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 1, 3 Bond street. Single number, fifty cents.

The English Illustrated Magazine, for May, is on our table. The leading article on "Law-Making at Nottingham," is most excellent and handsomely illustrated. Since hearing our friend, Dr. C. K. Marshall, describe his visit to Nottingham we have coveted just such an article. Other capital papers are the following: The Industries of the East of England, A Woman's Keepsake and An Unsolicited Journey Through Cornwall. Fifteen cents a number. Per year, $1.50. New York: Macmillan & Co., 112 Fourth Avenue.

Electra, for May, is on our table and has been read with a great deal of pleasure. The young ladies who edit it certainly know how to send out a first-class periodical. They have recently purchased "The Ladies' Pearl," edited by Rev. S. P. Chestnut, Nashville, Tenn., and heretofore subscribers will receive the consolidated magazine. Address Miss Isabella M. Leyburn, publisher, Louisville, Ky. Price, $2 a year.

The Art Amateur, for May, contains, among other good things, eight pages of designs for china painting, metal work, wood carving, etc. The Industries of the East of England, A Woman's Keepsake and An Unsolicited Journey Through Cornwall. Fifteen cents a number. Per year, $1.50. New York: Macmillan & Co., 112 Fourth Avenue.

St. Nicholas, for May, is one of the most attractive numbers of this always interesting magazine that we have yet received. Old and young have enjoyed it. Published by the Century Company, New York. Price, $3 a year.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickinson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

SEND $1 BILLS.—We wish our patrons to bear in mind that in payment for subscriptions we do not desire postage stamps, and that they should be sent only or fractional parts of a dollar. A dollar bill is much more convenient and safe to remit than the same amount in one, two or three cents stamps. The actual risk of remitting money is slight; if properly directed not one misarrangement will occur in one thousand. Inclose the bills, and, where letters containing money are sealed in presence of the postmaster, we will assume all the risk.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

"Look at America, my boys," said a Kerry philosopher, "that place, my boys, look at 'em," shouted a listener. "My brother is doing it; he was of the learning millions, and he's doing a job of work for two dollars a day, and he's his car too, he's got it!"

COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC is admirably adapted for females in delicate health. Children; no others. Of druggists.

The conversation was about bishops, and one fervent dame said: "How good the dear Bishop of Peterborough is! What a good man!" Instantly a gentleman replied: "There is no merit in that. Bishops ought to be so. They get thousands of letters for being good, while we are expected to be good for nothing—and most of us are."

Those who think that nothing good can be produced at home will not take the New Law, Remedy, though its endorsements are legion, and always increasing. Such ought to see some of the testimonials.

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP Remedies the skin.

It has been used with great success in London, 50 cts.

A gentleman observed to Dr. Johnson that there was less vagrant poor in Scotland than in England, and as a proof of it said there was no instance of a beggar dying in the streets there. "I believe you are very right, sir," says Johnson, "but that does not prove from want of vagrants, but the impossibility of starving a Scotchman."

Bad coughs cured by HALL'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR.

PICK'S TROTTING DRUGS cure in one minute.

Dr. South, once when preaching before Charles II., observed that the monarch and several of his attendants had fallen asleep. Presently one of the latter began to snore, whereupon the bishop took up his sermon and exclaimed: "Lord! I am sorry to disturb your repose, but let me entreat you not to snore so loud, lest you awaken his majesty."

"My dear Miss A., this ring, which I would ask you to accept of me, is emblematic of my love for you. It has no end." "Thank you, very much, Mr. R.; it curiously resembles my love for you; it has no beginning."

For sufferers from Cerebral Diseases, in symptoms, difficulties, helps, advice. Send stamp—Dr. Whittier, St. Louis, Mo. (latest edition). State case your way.

"Well," said the first girl. "If I were Miss Mac-Fast I wouldn't marry that repulsive Mr. Thimbleleg. He's a perfect scoundrel." "Oh," said the second girl. "She wants to get married; and she won't give up the ghost."

CONSUMPTION CURED.—An old physician, retired from practice, having placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested his wonderful cure in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. ROYCE, 118 Packer's Block, New York, N. Y.

"Ah! Pat, I understand you were bitten by a dog yesterday. Do you know if he was mad?" "Mad, is it? Faith, what right had he to be mad? Shame 'twas myself that was mad interfering."

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

"Now, then, Patrick," said the merchant to his new office boy, "suppose you go for the mail." "Yes, sir; and what kind of mail will you be wanting? Bullion mail or salt mail?"

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon Sts., New Orleans, has a good Torteau-Francois wood piano for $125; an elegant new 7 1/2 octave wood piano for $200 each; an elegant new piano for $250, or $200 a week or $250 a month, for the first year; another elegant piano, formerly $400 for $200 each. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low prices. The Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Decker, Hardman, Werlein, Hale, Schenck, Steinway and Cable pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Sterling and Day State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Instrument stock of sheet music and musical books. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange, or part payment for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent by mail on request.

We would again call the attention of subscribers to Agents that in making remittances to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

The following is from Philadelphia Par. One of our advertising patrons, writes: "The Christian Advocate we consider best advertising medium in the South. At least have found it so."

The following is from Texas: "Do not discount our advertisement in the Advocate. It has brought many letters in the last few weeks."

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resort. It has been rebuilt with steel rails, has adopted the standard gauge and a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, accommodations, and accommodating officers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address at last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

To those of our subscribers, not contented to a money order office, we would say, please inform by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or not.

Business Notices.

TESTIMONIAL.—This is to certify that I have been traveling in the State of Mississippi for the Hurlington Litchfield Lumber Co., of Hurlington, Tex., for nearly one month, during which time I have sold very near 1,000 bottles of their celebrated medicine, and giving entire satisfaction to every one who purchased of me. Again, every bottle I sold, I told the buyer if it did not do us, we claimed, to return the money and I would find the money. Not one has yet been returned. But the golden opinions and very best testimonials are received every day. God bless the discoverer.

J. L. WALTON, Agent. Bolton, Miss., March 13, 1884.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tuberculosis. Consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit than to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and K. H. TRUAX, New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MANFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANFIELD, DUNSTON PARISH, LOUISIANA.

The twenty-ninth Annual Session will begin on the 12th of September, 1884.

Manfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is locally accessible from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana. The college is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Conference. The buildings and grounds are extensive and all the facilities for instruction are provided. The College last year had nearly a hundred boarders and sixty pupils in Music, thirty in Art and one hundred and twenty in all.

Board and tuition, per term, $25.00. Additional use of instrument $25.00. Tuition charges in Art Department and Modern Languages, F. N. BRADY, President.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per month, made selling our fine books and Bibles. Write to C. McDuffy & Co., P. O. Box, Boston, Mass.

ACREAT MUSICAL MARVEL.

SHONINGER'S

Cymbella Organs and first Class 7 1/2 Octave Upright Rosewood Pianos with a Chime of 30 Bells.

Established 1850. Warranted 10 Years.

Send for Catalogue. Prices, and full Information to B. SHONINGER, PIANO CO. NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.

MONEY SAVED

By BUYING THE HARDMAN PIANO.

THE most desirable Upright Pianos made and equal to any square or square grand in the points of tone, quality and action.

OVER 30,000 Hardman Pianos now in use, and not one has ever attracted an adverse criticism. Acknowledged to be the best piano in every respect, since the only piano which will stand in all the tests.

ONLY the very best and latest materials and workmanship used, and every piano fully and conscientiously guaranteed.

PRICES of Hardman Pianos are far below those of all other strictly first class Pianos. Comparison will prove this. They are delivered, freight paid, with Fine 2nd, Cover and Music book.

For Catalogue, Circular and Manufacturers' Book Bottom Cash or Installment Prices, address

LUDDEN & BATES

Southern Music House, SAVANNAH, GA.

PIANOS!

P. WERLEIN'S,

135 Canal St. and 18 Bourbon St., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Oldest House in New Orleans!

Thoroughly Reliable.

THE Elegant New Piano, rosewood, 7 1/2 octave, for $700.00. 7 octave rosewood piano, and under, $125. Will take it back in exchange for new piano within three years.

One Elegant New Piano, price $250 at $2 per week, or $2 per month, until paid.

The Elegant Piano, formerly $200, now, for $100 cash.

A Large Assortment of First Class Pianos and Organs, corresponding to low prices.

Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Hale, Hardman, Werlein, Decker Bros., Berlin, Cable and Schenck Piano and Organ and Mason and Hamlin, Sterling, Day State

Immense Array of the Most beautiful Style Pianos.

My Guarantee goes with every instrument sold and secured by my customers.

Brass Instruments, Strings, and other, in great abundance.

Immense Stock of sheet Music, including all the New Music, Popular Songs, etc.

Will give you all year and piano is worth it.

MY PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

Glad to exhibit my stock. Send for free catalogue. Call or write.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOUISIANA STEAM Sash, Blind and Door FACTORY.

280, 301, 303, 305, 307 Grevier Street.

NEW ORLEANS.

ROBERTS & CO. Proprietors.

Sash, Blinds, Doors, Mouldings, Planing and Milling, New Orleans, etc., always on hand, or made to order.

Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty.

BRANCH OFFICE: NO. 52 CARONDELET STREET.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

The Short Line.

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS.

To All Points.

North and East and in the Northwest.

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE.

Double Daily Solid Through-Express Trains with Pullman Palace Cars.

FROM NEW ORLEANS TO

Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga and Cincinnati.

Freight and Passenger Depots.

Press street and Levee.

Freight and Ticket Offices, 34 and 36 St. Charles street, N.O.

H. COLLIER, General Freight Agent.

W. F. WILSON, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

Queen and Crescent Line, Cincinnati, Ohio.

BARNARD BROS., Gen'l Frt. and Pass. Agt., N. O. and S. E. R. R., New Orleans, La.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Old Reliable Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO Mobile, Montgomery, Pensacola, Nashville, Louisville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Savannah, St. Louis, Jacksonville, Fla., Lynchburg, and Washington, D. C., IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHEAST AND EASTERN CITIES.

Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common streets, where Sleeping Car accommodations can be secured.

C. P. ATMORE, Gen'l. Pass. Agent.

J. H. SMITH, Ticket Agent.

J. T. HARRAHAN, Gen'l Superintendant.

JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen'l. Pass. Agent, New Orleans.

O. M. DUNN, Sup't. N. O. and S. E. R. R.

Subsequent Events.

THE LAST EYES THAT FOLLOW GREAT DEPARTURES—A MINISTER'S MANNER OF MEETING THEM.

Continued from page 1.

On the 11th of May, the funeral of the late Rev. J. C. Ayer, D.D., was held at the First Baptist Church, New Orleans. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., and was attended by a large number of the friends of the deceased. The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

The funeral was a very impressive one, and the services were well conducted. The Rev. J. C. Ayer, Jr., D.D., in his address, spoke of the life and labors of his father, and of the great work he had done for the world. He said that his father was a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God. He said that his father had been a man of great faith and courage, and that he had been a true servant of God.

THE TRUE NATURE OF A "COLIC."

Years of study and observation have forced me to the conclusion that the disease which manifests the symptoms popularly supposed to indicate that a cold has been caught, is in all instances a genuine colic, and is caused by indigestion, and forms the first stage of all the so-called "illnesses."

Whatever interferes with digestion, or depraves the vital organism in any manner, body is a source of disease, and a continuation of disease-producing habits must inevitably result in periodical or occasional "colics," the severity of which will depend upon the degree of the transgression. Among the causes of this impure body condition are: (1) impure food, (2) excess in diet, and (3) impure air. Our homes, offices, shops, hotels, court-houses, churches, and, with rare exceptions, all living-rooms, private or public, are insufficiently or not at all ventilated, and, except while in the open air, a very large proportion of our people live in an atmosphere vitiated by being breathed over and over again; they are starving for want of oxygen, and are being poisoned by carbonic acid. In default of sufficient oxygen the best of food can not be transformed into pure blood, and the waste products of the body are not eliminated, but are accumulated in the system, and the carbonic acid is eliminated freely in an impure atmosphere. We have, then, serious "interference with digestion and depuration," whenever we remain over in a single hour of the day, in an "atmosphere" that is not so pure as the atmosphere of the great body of air without. The only outlet for restriction in oxygen is restriction in diet and exercise; but a combination of this character would produce enfeeblement of the system, though if a proper balance were maintained, there would arise no feeble symptoms such as we are considering. We have plenty of people living in unventilated rooms who, so far as exercise is concerned, live a well-balanced life; but seldom do these, any more than the robust and active, practice any sort of voluntary restriction in diet, and the quantity of food—meat and lack of appetite being the only safeguards. Persons of this class are great sufferers from colds.—Dr. C. E. Page, in Popular Science Monthly.

WASHINGTON IRVING'S DESCRIPTION OF OUR CLIMATE.—But while the equable English climate agreed with Mr. Cropley's health, it did not make him forget the charm of the changeable climate of his native land, with its many vicissitudes, which are too often made the subject of repining. For if these vicissitudes annoy occasionally by changes from hot to cold, from wet to dry, they give us—in the Northern Atlantic States, at least—one of the most beautiful climates in the world. "They give us," says Washington Irving, "the brilliant sunshine of the South of Europe, with the fresh verdure of the North. They float our summer sky with clouds of gorgeous tints of fleecy whiteness, and send down cool, refreshing showers, and the painting of our landscape is kept in green. Our seasons are all poetical; the phenomena of our heavens are full of sublimity and beauty. Winter with us has none of its proverbial gloom. It may have its howling winds, and thrilling frosts, and whirling snow-storms, but it has also its long intervals of cloudless sunshine, when the snow-clad earth gives radiated brightness to the day; when at night the stars beam with intensest lustre, or the moon floods the whole landscape with her most limpid radiance; and then the joyous outburst of our spring heralds the return of the sun, and brings, resplendent with vegetation and vociferous with life—the splendor of our summer; its morning voluptuousness and evening glory; its airy palaces of sun-gilt clouds, piled up on a deep azure sky; and its grandest temple of almost tropical luxuriance, when the forest lighting and the howling thunder valley from the battlements of heaven and shake the sultry atmosphere—and the sublime unclouded glory of our autumn, magnificent in its decay, withering down the pomp and pride of a woodland country, yet reflecting back from its yellow forests the golden serenity of the sky—surely we may say that in our climate 'the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork; day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night uttereth knowledge.'—The Manhattan.

PRAYER.—Prayer is an act which seems to be so prepared in the frame of our nature, to be so congenial to our dependence, so suited to our spiritual necessities, so adapted to every man's known wants and to his possibilities of wants unknown, so full of relief to the soul, and of peace to the mind, and of gladness to the heart; so productive of confidence in God, and so reciprocally proceeding from that confidence, that we should think, if we did not know the contrary, that it is a duty which is scarcely required to be enjoined; that he who had once found out its necessities, and that there were no other redress for them, would spontaneously have recourse, as a delirium, to what he had neglected as a common duty; that he would think it a hardship not to be allowed to thank him for them; that the invitation to pray to his benefactor was an additional proof of divine goodness; that to be allowed to praise him for his mercies was itself a mercy.—Hannah Moore.

QUESTIONS FOR CHRISTIAN PARENTS.—Do you say grace at the table? Do you have family worship daily, reading the Scriptures and praying? Do you teach your children, as soon as they are capable, to pray daily, on rising in the morning, as well as on retiring at night? Do you either take or send your children to Sabbath-school? Do you require them to go to hear the preaching of the Word? Are you so careful of their spiritual and religious training as of their physical and mental? In a word, are you training your children for God and eternity? You ought to be able to answer "yes" to each of these questions. Will you not ask God to bless and help you to do your duty towards the souls he has committed to your care?

Christ says "let no man take thy crown." Passion snatches it from the brow and tramples it in the dust. Peter lost his crown when in a passion he drew his sword and cut off the ear "of the servant of the High Priest." He immediately forsook his Master and never was his crown restored till he penitently three times avowed his love for Christ by the Sea of Galilee. A passionate Christian is a crownless one.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and H. J. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of a dangerous fever. His child is now in the country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that a simple remedy can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two cents stamps to pay for the paper. This also cures Night Sweats, Nauseas at the stomach, and will break up a fever. Cold in twenty-four hours. Address: Craddock & Co., 102 Race St., Philadelphia, naming this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Prominent Minister Writes. Dr. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from indigestion or dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Prominent Minister Writes. Dr. Moxley—Dear Sir: After ten years of great suffering from indigestion or dyspepsia, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

From Two Prominent Ladies. I have not been able in two years to walk or stand without suffering great pain. Since taking Dr. Moxley's Lemon Elixir, I can walk half a mile without suffering the least inconvenience.

Mrs. R. H. Hildreth, Griffin, Ga. Dr. H. Moxley: After years of suffering from indigestion, great debility, and nervous prostration, with great nervous prostration and debility, and deranged kidneys and circulation, I have been cured by four bottles of your Lemon Elixir, and am now a well man.

REV. C. C. DAVIS, Elder M. E. Church, South. No. 28 Tenth St., Atlanta, Ga.

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending May 20, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	92
Good ordinary	102
Low middling	112
Good middling	122
High middling	132
Full middling	142
Full good middling	152
St. Louis middling	112

SUGAR.

Inferior	34	41
Common	44	42
Good common	54	52
Fair	64	62
Good fair	74	72
Fully fair	84	82
Prime	94	92
Strawberry Prime	104	102
Choice	114	112
Seconds	124	122
Yellow clarified	134	132
White clarified	144	142
Unclarified	154	152

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	31
Fair	36	31
Choice	46	38

RICE.

Choice	64	62
Prime	54	52
Fair	44	42
Good fair	34	32
Common	24	22

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5.00	6.00
Minnesota bakers	7.00	—
Extra fancy	6.37 1/2	—
Winter wheat patents	7.00	—
Choice	5.50	5.80
Fancy	5.00	6.15

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3.40	3.50
Corn meal	3.15	—
Corn	3.30	3.60
Hominy	4.00	—

GRAIN, ETC.

Wheat	70	71
Yellow	—	—
Mixed	60	70
Oats	45	45 1/2
Barley	1.02 1/2	—
Choice	22.00	24.00
Prime	20.00	21.00

PROVISIONS.

Pork	17.25	—
Prime	16.50	—
Ham	16.00	—
Choice breakfast	114	12
Shoulders	74	—
Sides, clear	92	—
Sides, clear rib	94	—
Hams	13	13 1/2
Sugar-cured	13	—
Shoulders	64	—
Sides, clear	—	—
Sides, clear rib	—	—

FISH.

No. 1, in hbls.	14.25	—
Half hbls.	7.75	—
No. 2, in hbls.	13.75	—
Half hbls.	6.25	—
No. 3, in hbls.	13.25	—
Half hbls.	7.00	—

GROCERIES.

Coffee	94	114
Choice	12	13
Java	22	23
Western dairy	21	—
New York dairy	21	—
Country	17	20
Choice	84	—
Tea	50	1.00
Fair	25	50
Coal, cases	18	—
Coal, bbls	13	—
Cotton seed	45	50
Lard	50	—

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES	—	—
Western	12.00	14.00
Country	2.00	2.75
Carrots	20.00	—
Onions	3.00	3.75

BALING STUFFS.

RAISING	104	—
2 bbls.	113	—
RAISING TWINE	134	—
2 bbls.	143	—
2 bundle	1.80	—

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY	4.00	1.50
Chickens, Western	3.00	4.00
Chickens, Southern	3.75	4.00
Young	3.00	3.00
Turkeys, Southern	12.00	15.00
EGGS	11	12
Western	12	—
Local	20	—
Lake	19	—
Louisiana	9	11
Burly	—	—
Green salted	73	—
Dried salted	11	—
STAVES	50.00	80.00
Oak, kegs	75.00	110.00
Oak, barrels	50.00	140.00
Oak, charcoal	25.75	26.50
Oak, hoghead	75.00	—
HOOP POLES	40.00	—
Hoghead	20.00	—
Barrels	12.50	—
Half barrels	—	—
FEATHERS	12.00	14.00
Cotton seed	25.75	26.50
Wool	42.00	—
Muriatic acid	8	—
Sulphuric acid	24	—
Bone black	84	—

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

PITTSBURGH, May 14.—A west-bound freight train collided with the gravel train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad one mile east of Connellsville between 9 and 10 o'clock this morning. A number of laborers, variously estimated at from twenty to twenty-five, were killed, and many were injured.

New York, May 14.—The scene on the Stock Exchange was one of intense excitement this morning. There was a rush to sell stocks, partly on account of brokers being unable to meet engagements.

Before 10:15 Nelson Robinson & Co., and Goff & Randall announced their suspension. Before long one failure after another was announced until five stock firms had suspended, and the Metropolitan National Bank closed its doors. Its president, Geo. F. Seely, has been one of the most prominent speculators of the Exchange and rated high.

Secretary Foster says the break is due to reckless speculation of a few men. He will do everything in his power to prevent stringency. He stated that there is plenty of money in the country. "I do not anticipate any extensive panic. The situation is not as weak as people suppose. I shall do weak as people suppose. I shall do everything in my power to restore confidence."

The Sun to-morrow will say: "Yesterday's panic in Wall street was essentially a panic among the stock gamblers and nothing else. It did not proceed from failure of credit in the market, but from the withdrawal of credits in the market, and ended in stock speculations, and went no further. To be sure, merchants will be inconvenienced by its results, but not for long, and as soon as the week will be cleared away business will resume its regular course."

New York, May 15.—The Metropolitan Bank has posted a notice that bank examiners having made an investigation, the bank will resume business at 12 o'clock.

Receiver Davis reports the liabilities of Grant & Ward far heavier than at first supposed, at $14,501,532. The collateral held by creditors are between $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, leaving the unsecured indebtedness between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

P. M.—The failure of Fisk & Hatch has been announced. The firm of Fisk & Hatch is composed of A. S. Hatch and Harvey Fisk.

Vicksburg, May 15.—The opening of the Presbyterian General Assembly, South, at present in session in this city, occurred in the church building of that denomination this morning.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The bill appropriating $1,000,000 in aid of the World's Industrial Exposition at New Orleans was reported to the Senate today, with amendments providing additional guarantees, which were promptly accepted by Director General Burke. The bill passed the Senate unanimously and was immediately concurred in by the House.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 15.—A special from Cheraw, Cheraw county, says: Last night Deputy King took a posse of ten men from Cheraw and proceeded to W. B. Cash's plantation, about nine miles south of Cheraw. Finding that Cash was in the barn, he surrounded the building, firing his men instructions not to fire unless in self-defense.

At 4:30 a. m. W. B. Cash came out of the barn, armed with a double-barreled shot gun and a Winchester rifle. As soon as he was ordered to halt he opened fire upon the arresting party, who immediately returned the fire, which resulted in the killing of Cash, whose body was literally riddled with rifle balls. Samuel Lee, who a few years ago murdered a young man, but escaped punishment by reason of a legal technicality, was arrested under Cash's house, armed, from whence he fired several shots at the posse, but he was soon silenced by a bullet through the leg. He was arrested and brought to Cheraw this afternoon and committed for trial.

The only person in the arresting party hurt was W. H. Hilton, who had one finger shot off by Cash, the ball instantly being turned aside by striking the barrel of Hilton's rifle, thus saving his life. Old man Cash has not yet been heard from. It is expected, however, that he will attempt to avenge his son's death.

Vicksburg, May 16.—The cut-off at Cole's Creek point shortens the distance from New Orleans to Vicksburg fifteen miles, and is now the main channel, the largest steamers and towboats going through; the John W. Cannon having gone through without difficulty. The water around the bend is now almost without current. It is reported that after the cut-off the water at Waterproof fell three feet. The new bed is 400 feet wide.

SARATOGA, May 16.—In the Presbyterian General Assembly a committee for presentation of fraternal greetings was ordered to telegraph the Southern Presbyterian Assembly at Vicksburg, the Methodist Conference at Philadelphia, and the Cumberland Presbyterians.

McKeesport, Pa., May 16.—The General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church met at 11 o'clock this morning.

BALTIMORE, May 16.—In the African Methodist Episcopal General Conference to-day Bishop Payne delivered an interesting address on the reconstruction and redemption of Africa. He said the slave trade in Central Africa still went on; that people were driven across the country like cattle and shipped from the coast.

CHICAGO, May 18.—The daily News Quinley, (Ill.) special says: Meagre particulars have been received here of a cyclone which started this afternoon in Missouri township, four miles south-east of St. Louis. The point of starting the buildings and fences on two well improved farms were wrecked, and some blooded stock was scattered. Fortunately no one was hurt. It is feared much damage was done further east.

Plan of Episcopal Visitation for 1884.

Conference	Date	Place
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP CHANDLER.
Dover	July 21	Dover
Northampton	Aug. 21	Northampton
Southampton	Sept. 21	Southampton
Worcester	Oct. 21	Worcester
London	Nov. 21	London
Exeter	Dec. 21	Exeter

SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP MITCHELL.
Westchester	Oct. 21	Westchester
North York	Nov. 21	North York
South York	Dec. 21	South York
East York	Jan. 21	East York
German Mission	Feb. 21	German Mission
St. John's	Mar. 21	St. John's

THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri	Sept. 21	Missouri
Western Missouri	Oct. 21	Western Missouri
North Carolina	Nov. 21	North Carolina
Mississippi	Dec. 21	Mississippi
Baltimore	Jan. 21	Baltimore

FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP HARBOR.
St. Louis	Sept. 21	St. Louis
West Virginia	Oct. 21	West Virginia
Arkansas	Nov. 21	Arkansas
Little Rock	Dec. 21	Little Rock
White River	Jan. 21	White River
Louisiana	Feb. 21	Louisiana

FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PIERCE.
Indian Mission	Sept. 21	Indian Mission
Tennessee	Oct. 21	Tennessee
North Alabama	Nov. 21	North Alabama
South Carolina	Dec. 21	South Carolina
Florida	Jan. 21	Florida

SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky	Sept. 21	Kentucky
Louisville	Oct. 21	Louisville
Illinois	Nov. 21	Illinois
North Georgia	Dec. 21	North Georgia
South Georgia	Jan. 21	South Georgia

SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP LEVY.
Holston	Oct. 21	Holston
Virginia	Nov. 21	Virginia
North Mississippi	Dec. 21	North Mississippi
Memphis	Jan. 21	Memphis
Alabama	Feb. 21	Alabama

Bishop McVie has charge of the missions in China and Japan.

Bishop Keener has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop Granbery has charge of the missions in Brazil.

As men have seen cities in a mirage on the desert, where only drifting sand could be found, so of revivals of religion. There may be the appearance without the reality. False lights have been kindled on the surface that flash out as phosphorescent gleam and fade into darkness deeper than the gloom that gave them birth. A genuine revival is the living, abiding life—a spiritual coming of the reality in the painted flames.—Methodist Recorder.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Crockery, China and Glass Ware

General Furnishings for

HOUSE, HOTEL AND STEAMBOATS.

For Country Dealers

Package Nicely Assorted.

GROCERY WARE

YELLOW WARE

GLASS WARE

TIN WARE.

Sole Agents for

Coal Oil Stoves and Garden Pumps.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Woodville District Conference will be held at Woodville, beginning on Thursday, July 21, 1884, at ten o'clock A. M.

The Sunday-School Conference will be held at Mansfield, La., June 12-13, 1884. Thursday, June 12, nine A. M.

1. Devotional Exercises and Organization.

2. The Sunday-School Idea in the Bible, by Rev. J. A. Parker.

3. Verbal reports from pastors and Sunday-school workers, with special reference to destitution and difficulties.

4. General discussion of Sunday-school interests in the Louisiana Conference.

The exercises interspersed with singing or prayer at the call of the presiding officer.

Two o'clock P. M.

1. School-room Work Illustrated and Explained, by Mrs. J. A. Parker.

2. Music, Its Uses and Abuses, by Prof. Black.

3. How to Teach an Infant Class, by Warren London, Esq.

4. How to Manage a Class of Boys, by Mrs. Wm. J. A. Parker.

5. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

6. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

7. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

8. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

9. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

10. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

11. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

12. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

13. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

14. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

15. How to Teach a Bible-Class, by D. W. N. Cunningham.

Quarterly Conferences.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

HOUER DIST.—SECOND ROUND.

Tulip circuit, at Salem, June 17, 18.

Acadia circuit, at Mt. Moriah, June 24, 25.

Sparks circuit, at Bear Creek, June 24, 25.

Saline circuit, at Lake Village, June 24, 25.

Farmerville circuit, at Farmerville, June 24, 25.

Home circuit, at Home, June 24, 25.

Rockwell circuit, at Rockwell, June 24, 25.

Winfield circuit, at Winfield, June 24, 25.

Miner circuit, at Miner, June 24, 25.

Miner circuit, at Miner, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

Haynesville circuit, at Haynesville, June 24, 25.

A Home Production.

GOODWIN'S EUREKA

It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum, it has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure Powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 179 Girod street, by Mrs. A. Goodwin, widow of the late P. M. Goodwin, who has been handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Girod street, New Orleans, La.

YEAST POWDER

It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum, it has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure Powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 179 Girod street, by Mrs. A. Goodwin, widow of the late P. M. Goodwin, who has been handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Girod street, New Orleans, La.

YEAST POWDER

It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum, it has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure Powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 179 Girod street, by Mrs. A. Goodwin, widow of the late P. M. Goodwin, who has been handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Girod street, New Orleans, La.

YEAST POWDER

It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum, it has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure Powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 179 Girod street, by Mrs. A. Goodwin, widow of the late P. M. Goodwin, who has been handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Girod street, New Orleans, La.

YEAST POWDER

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 22.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1452.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. PHILIP R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GUNFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

BOOK OF LIFE.

Over and over again,
No matter which way we turn,
We always find in the book of life
Some lesson we have to learn.
We must take our turn at the mill,
And the sun and the summer rain
Must do their part and perform it all
Over and over again.

We can not measure the need
Of the truest of doves,
Or check the flow of the golden sands
That run through a single hour.
But the morning dew must fall,
And the sun and the summer rain
Must do their part and perform it all
Over and over again.

Over and over again,
The track through the meadow flows,
And over and over again,
The ponderous mill-wheel goes.
Once doing will not suffice,
Though doing be not in vain;
And abiding faith is once or twice
May come if we try again.

The path that has once been trod
Is never so rough to the feet,
And the lesson we once have learned
Is never so hard to repeat.
Though sorrowful tears may fall,
And the heart to its depths be drawn,
With storm and tempest, we need them all
To render us meet for heaven.

Letter from China.

Mr. Editor: From Vicksburg we passed up the Mississippi river and into the Ohio in a beautiful little steamer. At Cincinnati we changed steamers. From this on we often found our progress obstructed by sand bars; but to my astonishment the steamer was actually walked over these sand shoals by means of great beams of wood. One afternoon late quite a large party came aboard, and all seemed full of life. We supposed it was a party taking an excursion North, and possibly a bridal party. There was a young couple who seemed happy and full of life. There was also an aged couple who seemed very sedate, and to me the lady looked sad and thoughtful. They were all strangers to us. In the evening, as the steamer was ploughing up the river, with beautiful scenery on each bank, Mrs. Lambuth and myself took our seats by the guards near our state-room. We sang together in a low tone of voice the missionary hymn. We thought of loved ones we had left behind us and of the fare well meeting we were to attend in the city of Richmond, Va., and our thoughts went out to that far off—then to us unknown—heavenly city where spiritual darkness reigned, and to which land and people we were going. While singing this glorious and soul-stirring hymn we were wholly unconscious that one whose soul was filled with missionary zeal and love for the Saviour sat near, listening with deepest emotion to every word. From the time we had left Vicksburg we had found but one person who expressed any sympathy for us or the work in which we were about to enter. This was a lady, an entire stranger to us, and one whose life had been hedged in and beset with many crooks and sorrows.

From the time we sang this hymn the elderly lady of this party was as anxious to know who we were as we were to know who they were. The next morning early, when going on deck, I met the colored boy who was traveling with them. I asked him if his master was traveling North. He replied, "No, sir," and left me at once.

no doubt fearing some evil should befall him. Very soon the elderly gentleman came on deck and engaged in conversation with me. He asked me if my name was Belton, from Alabama. I answered in the negative, and told him my name was Lambuth, from the Mississippi Conference, and that I was on my way to a farewell missionary meeting in Richmond, Va., and then on to China. I had not finished the sentence when he grasped me by the hand, and said: "My name is Kelley. Come in; I want to introduce you to my son and his wife—who are also on their way to Richmond to attend the missionary meeting, and then on to China." It was then we learned who this elderly lady was who had been so much interested in hearing the missionary hymn. It was dear Sister M. L. Kelley. Father and mother were on their way to New York to bid their son and his wife their last farewell. It brought true joy to our hearts to know that her son and daughter would be fellow-travelers with us all the way to that distant heathen land. Yes, she had given her only son because "she loved Jesus more." From that day until her death—fully twenty years after—her soul was filled with missionary zeal, and her constant desire to have the gospel preached to the heathen never became less, but increased. Just three months before her death she gave up her eldest granddaughter to come to this far off heathen land to work for the salvation of dying women because "she loved Jesus more." No one did more for our China mission, and in the darkest day of our mission she was our firmest and truest friend. To-day we have a son and she a granddaughter who work side by side with us in this vast empire of darkness where there is not one missionary to a million of people. Although we shall never on earth be cheered again by that dear mother's counsel, yet we look in glad anticipation to that time when the blessed Saviour shall find our work done, and shall through robes of grace give us a welcome to his glorious kingdom—in heaven where our dear sister and mother dwelleth a glorious one ever with the Lord.

It was indeed a happy meeting for Mrs. Lambuth and myself, and from that time we felt at home with our new friends bound for the same loved work. Our hearts went out in thankfulness to God for his goodness to us, and we could but feel "our lines had fallen in pleasant places." We passed up the river to Pittsburg and here visited the glass factory, and we felt well paid for our visit. I forgot to mention that Dr. Green, of the Tennessee Conference, was in this party on the way to Richmond.

After changing to a smaller craft, we fell in company with several gentlemen on their way to Richmond to attend the missionary meeting. Among the number was Dr. Summers who, when he found out who we were, met us very cordially, and with a hearty shake of the hand, said, "I am glad to meet you, my young brother and sister." Eying Dr. Kelley and myself for a moment, he said: "You and Kelley will never do to go to China. Belton is the man to go to China; he would make two of you." Well, I thought that was a strange sort of a reception. I had never met Dr. Summers before and knew nothing of his peculiar style and blunt manner of speaking.

We did not meet with Bro. Belton until we reached Richmond. He was much larger than Dr. Kelley or myself, and looked as though he would be able to endure any amount of hard work. Our home while in Richmond was with Sister Hayes. Little did we think then that our dear sister would have taken such a prominent part in the great work of evangelizing the heathen women of China. It was a great pleasure to us in 1850 and '81, while in the United States, to be with her in many missionary meetings and to share again the hospitalities of her home in the city of Baltimore.

Dr. Early, Dr. Wightman, Dr. Lee, and our much-loved secretary, Dr. Schou, and many others, were present at our missionary meeting in Richmond, on the last Sunday and Monday in March, 1854. Centenary was crowded to overflowing, and Dr. Wightman was in the chair. The words of Dr. Schou on that occasion can never be forgotten by us. He said: "This occasion is one of deep interest to me and the whole church. We are assembled to take final leave of these brethren and sisters who are soon to leave their homes and native land to go to distant China to proclaim the gospel. The occasion is inspiring. Shouts follow the warrior as he goes to the field of carnage. Applause is bestowed upon the votaries of science who devote themselves to its elucidation. But here are men who seek not fame or fortune, but with sublime self-sacrifice go to far off lands to labor for the good of souls. Men talk of heroism; but here to-night is the grandest sight that 'angel ever saw'—the female missionary parting with all her loved ones and giving her life to God and his work." The congregation then sang, "From Greenland's icy mountains," etc. After this Dr. Wightman introduced Dr. Kelley, who spoke. Then I was introduced, and then Bro. Belton—each giving a short address. The address of Bro. Belton was most affecting. His mother opposed his going to the last. His father at last gave his consent, but said, "I have buried five or six dead children, and now I am called to bury a live one." Bro. Belton, in his address, said: "I bid you all farewell. I go to China never to return." At the conclusion of these addresses Bishop Andrew delivered a solemn and impressive charge to the young missionaries, and their wives, concluding with an affectionate farewell. The good Bishop, as he pronounced this good-bye, gave his hand to each and laid it on their heads as they invoked the Divine blessing. The congregation then sang, "Men of God, go take your stations." Yours in Christ,

J. W. LAMBERT.
SHANGHAI, CHINA, April 18, 1884.

Church Music.

In this centennial year Methodism, or Methodists, seem to be on the outlook for progress and improvement. We must not fail to scan the spiritual side of our progress. Very few Methodist congregations would consent to have a preacher sent them who was not religious; neither would they accept one of another denomination. The music of a church is an important part of worship. It must have the Holy Ghost to inspire it in order to be profitable. Since the introduction of the organ and melodeon but little attention has been paid to the spiritual status of the performer—many times non-professors; many times persons of other churches; many times persons of no piety and sympathy with the service. Many times there are vain and foolish persons in the choir behaving in a most unbecoming manner. Is it any wonder that our churches have grown cold and formal? Many times a baritone and a shame to Methodism and the ministers and stewards who allow it; many times operative and halfhearted to disgust. I speak plainly, but truthfully, as all religious, God-fearing people must acknowledge.

Let the knife of reform be put in and cut off this fungi, and put spiritual performers at your organs and in your choirs who are meek and quiet of spirit, who pray as well as sing and who are in subordination to the church authority, and we shall see a wonderful development of piety and godly blessing.

We appeal to the general superintendents, to our presiding elders and preachers to come emphatically to the front on this question and stamp it out. Better close your instruments if you can not get religious musicians. Let the laity lift up its united voice for reform. This scientific, operative, worldly music will paralyze and freeze out the piety of any church, and if you try to make a change, they become offended and sow seeds of discord and ruin in the church.

Will not the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE improve on these suggestions and give the weight of his pen, brain and piety in aiding to remedy this mighty evil?

A METHODIST.

The Privilege of Penitents.

BY REV. M. C. GALLOWAY.

That true penitents can be received into the church, and admitted to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and to all the means of grace on gospel principles, before they receive any evidence of their acceptance with God, is a doctrine both scriptural and comfortable, and yet there are those who censure the Methodists very severely for adhering to it. They admit that baptism is the only door through which any one can be received in the church, but contend that no person can properly receive this holy ordinance who has not been converted. In this they vary from the plain teaching of the Bible and practice of the apostles, as will appear from the following texts:

1. "Now when they heard this they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the brethren, Men and brethren, what shall we do?" This question was asked by persons who were convinced of their sins, under the preaching of the apostles, on the day of Pentecost. "Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." This answer of Peter shows how perfectly the teaching of the apostles agrees with the teaching of the Methodist Church as to the qualification for church membership. It also shows how very far the system of some Calvinistic teachers differs from the gospel system.

2. When Philip had preached at Samaria, and baptized many both men and women, Peter and John went down and "prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost, for as yet he was fallen on none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." Observe they were baptized into the church, but were not converted, as no one can be converted and not receive the Holy Ghost.

3. Simon believed the preaching of Philip and was received into the church by baptism; after which Peter said unto him, "I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity." Query: Was Simon in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity when he was baptized or did he get converted before he was baptized and afterward fall from grace? The former seems to be the most reasonable, though any one is at liberty to accept the latter conclusion.

From the texts mentioned above it is evident that God has made it the privilege of all true penitents to become members of his church; therefore men should be careful not to deny them this privilege, lest they be found fighting against God.

Greenville District Conference.

Mr. Editor: The Greenville District Conference convened in Greenville, S. C., May 7, 1884, and adjourned on the twelfth. Great prominence were given to religious services. The first half hour of the session was spent in a prayer meeting, and sermons were preached every day during the session at eleven o'clock A. M. and eight o'clock P. M., with an hour's prayer meeting every evening beginning at five o'clock. I have never attended a more religious District Conference. The Lord was present to bless his people from first to last, and his power was gloriously manifested in the salvation of many precious souls. The preaching was clear, pointed and in demonstration of the Holy Ghost. There was no effort at display, but was just as it should have been this Centenary year of organized Methodism. The people were being saved.

About thirty had joined the church up to the time of our leaving. In the absence of Bishop McTearle the presiding elder, Rev. John W. Price, presided to the delight and satisfaction of all. Perfect harmony prevailed. The pastors were all present except Rev. N. R. Hamer, of Jones-town and Magnolia, and he was detained by the floods of great waters. Several came partly by "dug out." One brother paddled through the overflow thirty miles to get to the landing, sat up half the night to catch a boat, and then glided one hundred and eighty miles down the "Father of Waters" to reach the seat of the Conference. Our preachers thus far have had a hard time; but they are a noble set of self-sacrificing, uncomplaining men who are ready to suffer as well as do the Master's will.

Reports were rather meagre; but if everything is favorable from this on, the Greenville district will report a clean record at Conference and, in addition, a very creditable Centenary fund. Already the "decks have been cleared" by Greenville station, and a new beginning on her Centenary collection. Nearly every pastor reported the collections, as ordered by the Annual Conference, being raised with a prospect of success. The presiding elder needs very much two or three more preachers to help develop this wonderful valley. The following were elected delegates to the next session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference: George F. Maynard, Judge W. R. Trigg, Capt. C. A. Winter and Rev. George C. Stovall. Alternates: S. C. Blanchard and Dr. D. C. Montgomery.

The hospitality of Greenville was never surpassed. Bro. Standifer we left in the midst of a glorious revival—pressing the battle to the very gates. He is assisted by a warm-hearted, appreciative, noble set of men and women. Surely our God will give them a grand victory.

H. C. MOREHEAD, Sec.

"Jesus Blessing Babies."

As Bro. Angus Dowling has written in the ADVOCATE, of May 13, about Jesus blessing "the little children," he might render further service by elucidating the subject more fully. He stopped his explication right where people differ on the question for lack of clearer understanding. He says, "What he (Christ) did by putting his hands upon them, his ministry do by the application of water in the name of the Trinity." Will Bro. Dowling please explain briefly why "his ministers" "apply water" instead of "putting their hands upon them and blessing them" as the Saviour did?

Of course he wrote, I presume, for the benefit of those who are not clearly satisfied as to the propriety or duty of infant baptism, and if he will stop and consider a moment about it, he may see that his pen may do yet more good by further unfolding the subject, explaining why "water" was substituted for "hands" in the rite of "blessing the little children," and showing what relation the Saviour "blessing them" bore to the custom of the patriarchs blessing their children. I hope Bro. Dowling will favor us with another article on the subject about which there is such strenuous difference of opinion.

MAY 22, 1884.

From Bastrop, La.

Mon. W. H. Goodale and wife, of Baton Rouge, have just paid Bastrop a visit. On Thursday night Bro. Goodale delivered his lecture on "What Next?" before the Woman's Missionary Society. Owing partly to the weather, and partly to sickness in the community, his audience was not large; yet there were present many of our most intelligent and cultured people and, though necessarily lengthy, his very instructive and eloquent effort was listened to with wrapt attention.

On last night a large audience assembled at the Baptist Church to hear Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, corresponding secretary of the State Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. Frank Vaughn, president of our union, presided with dignity and grace, and was ably assisted by the vice-president, Mrs. John S. Handy. After singing and a fervent prayer by Bro. Goodale, Mrs. Goodale was introduced by the president and at once captured her audience, and held it to the end by her strong, needed thoughts, couched in chaste, beautiful language, and spoken in a clear and earnest manner. As Mrs. Goodale finished, there came forward Miss Jennie Cason—one of Bastrop's most beautiful and charming young ladies—and, in the name of our local union, presented the speaker with an elegant bouquet. Then the president asked the writer hereof to say something to the people. He did so in a few words of exhortation, and then requested Mrs. Vaughn and Mrs. Handy to go through the audience and seek signatures to the pledge. A number of temperance recruits were secured by them. Mr. Goodale, being called to the front, made a most brilliant and effective address. After a collection, singing and the benediction the large audience sought their homes—every one of them doubtless convinced of the necessity of being active workers in the good cause.

MAY 17, 1884.

Revival at Columbus.

The following note from Rev. J. H. Scruggs gives the latest news from the wonderful revival in Columbus, Miss. It surely was a time of refreshing. May a like Centenary baptism fall upon every congregation in Southern Methodism!

Mr. Emridge: Our meeting closed on Wednesday night, of last week, with a thanksgiving service. I am unable to give you the precise number of conversions; but I think I can safely say there were 80 or 85. I received into the Methodist Church, last Sabbath, 36, and will have a class of six or eight more next Sabbath. Some have joined other churches, and others will; some will not join any church now. There were forty or fifty unconverted when the services closed, and we were reluctant to leave them; but the congregation and preachers were broken down. The revival in the churches surpasses anything I have ever seen, and I have never known Christians of all denominations to work so harmoniously. We have organized a young men's meeting for religious services. There were 55 present on Tuesday night, of this week, and the hour was a delightful one. The songs were spontaneous, the prayers fervent and the talks well pointed. I have never known a greater move among the young men of any community, and we shall try to keep them organized and in the field for Christ.

The Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Corinth, E. G. Kilgore, of Columbus circuit, J. N. Boon, of Macon station, and Bro. McAlpine, of the Presbyterian Church in this place, assisted in the work. Each did a noble part and received a rich blessing in his soul. The results of this meeting will be seen many days hence, for it was a revival of spiritual power. The Holy Ghost fell on the people, and they told of the love of God in their souls.

MAY 23, 1884.

According to the statistics in the Jubilee Texas Advocate, Southern Methodism has grown in the Lone Star States follows, by decades:

Year.	Trav'g Preachers.	Mem's.
1840,	19	1,743
1850,	86	10,480
1860,	241	30,661
1870,	239	34,772
1880,	466	80,333
1885,	617	88,704

Woman's Missionary Society, of Louisiana Conference.

Do not forget the meeting at Mansfield, on June 7-9, next. Have all auxiliaries complied with the call of the president, Mrs. M. W. Read, and elected delegates to attend the meeting? The interest in the cause is growing. Seven auxiliaries have been organized since Conference. A full attendance is desired, and a very interesting meeting is anticipated.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITEWORTH, Treasurer.

—Experience tells us that each man most keenly and unerringly detects in others the vice with which he is most familiar with himself.—P. W. Robertson.

—What I admire in Columbus is not his having discovered a world, but his having gone to search for it on the faith of an opinion.—Turgot.

"Conference at New Orleans last year, a few days after his eighty-seventh birthday. Lingering in our hospital in Louisiana until the severity of his illness had broken up his health, he died in March he left us in the short and easy way of making his journey more comfortably, but on the way "the angels of God met him" and he literally died in the arms of his eighty-two years of age. At a time on the way he was taken ill of the pulpit, and he never recovered. In announcing his text and could not proceed, and never recovered. From the pulpit, this throne of power on which he was translated to the kingdom of glory, inheritance above. These his last moments were to us and to the world one of the sayings of Methodism, and he said to us from the Father's, "while "God buries his workmen carries on his work." We shed a deep regret over the great loss of this faithful and long-remembered man, who we did not see in our singleness, how their places in filled, we have a calm trust in wisdom to manage the affairs of this church, and we return from this and give our prayers to God and hold the same as the Spirit firmer grasp, that we may be sustained by the record and memory of their lives to do more effective work upon the ranks of the enemy of our Lord.

"We take pleasure in reporting that our branch of Methodism is serving in a good degree the interests of our finer system in all its branches. The general superintendency came down to us from Abner McKendree, at the time of his death, to his place of honor and responsibility.

in these words are crystalized into solid facts of experience, and we know them because they are parts of ourselves. We shall hold fastly the stone-masonry for sin in this world, until Christ has come, and the everlasting life through his resurrection, and that by his death and resurrection every human soul has been lifted to a condition where salvation is possible. The New Theology, as it is called, has given us no trouble, and we have no afraid of ourselves, or of a robust God after death, the certainty of which is so exceedingly doubtful; and as for "the tiger hope," which some of our outside friends are talking about, they do not want any larger hope than the gospel of Christ presents, and the stronger hope is an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which extendeth into that within the veil." The Methodist preacher, having heard the call of the Divine Spirit, and feeling that that call has "separated him into the gospel of God," he preaches the words of the commission that is put in his hands, that his life-work is to proclaim the doctrines and precepts of the word of God, and to illustrate their meaning by the great facts of redemption. The preaching of the services of his Methodism, that he himself and all himself wholly dependent on one thing, and draw all his feel that, if he uttered upon any other work, he would be discrediting the Spirit's call and dishonoring the glory of the work of preaching the gospel and needling. He is preaching the word of God and attaining the crown of life—the church—whose credentials he carries. The true preacher feels like Nehemiah. He is doing a great work—the greatest of all works—when he is preaching out of an earnest and believing heart the words of the word of God and showing forth the meaning of his redemption. He is preaching on that which his Lord began, and he is carrying it on under the influence of the same Spirit. For this reason he can not come down to ordinary matters, and at the same time, in the presence of his presence. That approach of his presence is his best blessing in his greatest security, and he results in the last words of Jesus—words uttered when all heaven was astir with preparation to receive and glorify the Son of God—that his presence is promised to those who go and preach. Hence, our preachers, as a rule, stand in our pulpits and point the people to "the old paths, where is the good way." We held to the doctrines of the Methodists and preach them, in the Methodism, and we have handed down to us by our fathers, in a formulated statement, because we read them in our holy Bibles and verify them in the experiences of our hearts. We still hold to the Bible as the word of God, and believe most heartily in an experimental knowledge of the religion of Jesus. We believe that a man with a discarded Bible is but little better than an educated heathen. And a man with a Bible and without a faith is a most miserable man. We think God that we are both and believe both. We reveal himself to our intentions, and because we believe, then he reveals himself in our hearts, and then "we know, in whom we have believed." It is a most practical fact that our preachers live in practice that part of our constitution which binds us to diligence to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's word. Those who are familiar with the New Testament record do not guess at the results of preaching when the barren facts of the word of God. You know that when the preachers are the Rahabans, "good men and of a result is, Holy Ghost and faith, and to the Lord."

The people and the forefathers preaching of the doctrine of the New Testament nourish our people and they grow strong and that strength overcomes all influences others, when day these that are added to us day when we were closed being as unnumbered the heats of our souls after their families we found them to be 420,000 men. In 1731, 60,000 deacons the number went to 173,000 souls. According to statistics of last year we nurse of 114 per cent. This last year, we submit this as a remarkable fact. The ratio of increase in our membership is also of very much larger than that of the country. For several years there has been faith and liberality, and the result in our various mission fields are being cultivated with good success and many are opening for our entrance. Stretching down in the great South-west we have our American West India mission, and still farther down the Atlantic the Missionary Conference of the Republic of Mexico. Missionary operations have been started in the city of Havana, on the island of Cuba, and across the equator we have a growing work in the vast Empire of the West Indies. Among the efforts of ours in the West Indies, we are doing some good work for the Master. You know something of the success of our Brethren Laurin and Allen and their zealous coadjutors in the Chinese empire. We do not, brethren, have the opportunity of these pugnacious efforts of ours in other parts of the world, the colossal operations you are carrying on in the mission field. We heartily congratulate you upon the wide-spread influences which you are putting forth upon the world by your powerful missionary machinery, and rejoice in our missionary work. While we do this, and do it in the spirit of that gospel which prompts "to rejoice with those that do rejoice," we may be excused if we also rejoice in the fact that here and there in earth our humble efforts of ours in the various battle fields tropics to honor of him under whose glorious banner we all are fighting. Our preachers, by their arduous and hortations, and our editors, by the strong leaders of our ranks, and our laymen and women, are not large, but cheerful, gifts of our endeavor, not merely to kindle the missionary fire in the hearts of our people, but to pour upon the fire the oil, "the beatu oil of gladness," that "the world may be glorified in us," and, until every man, woman and child shall see by its light that a missionary religion is the religion worth having. Into the grand work our women are entering with all the zeal and earnestness, persistence which our Father in heaven has sent them, and we would the flowers that beautify a Southern soil and make fragrant a Southern atmosphere. Coming into organized existence six years ago, they now have thirty-two Conference Societies, 5,000 auxiliaries, 34,000 members, and a total of nearly $30,000. They have five different missions, they have twelve missionaries in their employ, and thirteen schools in successful operation. We, of the South, at last learned to read our New Testament with eyes that saw the risen Christ with the good news, that garden where the lost hope of the world was recovered, and by the light of that empty tomb upon which Christianity has staked its life, the Christ said, "I am with you," and I say unto them, I am with my Father and to you I say, and to my God and your God." It means nothing, that the first hope that ever looked upon a Saviour's form was a woman's. That the first ray of the new revelation was a woman's voice. That the first hope and love from a risen Saviour was a woman's church was sent to the world. These things mean a deal more than we have time to tell on this occasion. It looks as if that there is incalculable power in woman's work and an untold variety of her helpfulness in all intellectual, social and moral and religious crises. God has been trying for ages to tell us this, and it is only in these days that I have taken about a year to learn the meaning of one word in the second chapter of Genesis. The best omen for the success of the gospel of Christ which we see to-day is the fact that the Evangelical Church has taken the women of the world and organized them for gospel work. If any one is fearful that they will and thus bring disaster upon the work of Christ and wreck the "old Zion," upon the reefs of imprudence and disorder, let me inform you that one to the grand work they are doing all over this land in the temperance, under the leadership of Miss Frances E. Willard. Our Bishop said, not long since, "I was surprised at two things—first, that women were doing so much, and brought more fully into the mission work; and, secondly, that the woman in the church did not take of it."

[illegible]

We have been trying to run this with only a part of the machinery in place, and with but one wheel you know of another Vanderbilt who is scanning the Southern States, and tell him of this movement, and let him know that we are prepared to communate the Centenary of the organization of the first Methodist Society in the world? We have also the oldest college for women in the world; that college, generally, are reported to be intended, and the thing said, that Scotland was the first time. I am glad to say, too, that we have not yet examined the "college fetich," and I hope we never will. There is great want in many parts of our country; there is great deal of ignorance and want, but the Christian denials, and the Southern States, and their straitened circumstances will allow them to supply that want and educate that ignorance, in the new world, and the history of the are throwing upon the shoulders of vision has been greatly enlarged we contemplate the place in his dom which Christ has set apart for children. Ben Franklin has perhaps, "take care of the poor and the pounds will follow," and the words are truly better illustration, it has to-day in the world churches are doing for the children. In this framing, beginning with covenant and carried forward by instructions of the Holy Spirit, and Sunday-schools, and thousands of men and women, have from the

 the church. We are glad to re-steadily increasing and enlarging in this department. We have schools, 65,000 teachers, 2,500,000 and last year baptized 250,000
 Nor have we entirely neglected the necessities of our own col-people, though in some quarters have that reparation. When the end order of things began, we were able to help them. We were not to help ourselves. We were not to help ourselves, as they did,
 and he prospers before they did,
 and our people began to throw a dreadful burden of actual want began to plan to help our "Brother Black." Those who adhered to church, at their own suggestion, helped to build that organization is the prosperous ones, numbering cording to last statistics 125,000 country. Being raised together therefore knowing each other's in-characteristics, social instincts, actions, emotions, and we knew the appropriate church organization the best for each. And though are flourishing under that organi-we still help them to build and school-houses as far as we able and aid them in organizing the necessities of the present. We sometimes feel that as sinners, is no difference between us and for all have sinned and come glory of God." And as we "God gave them the same gift as unto us, and he will make no unto him; purify thy heart
 by faith."

Taking advantage of your inex-hible patience, we report to you the preachers and people and the entering heartily into your work, we have put forth as a church author-during this Centennial year. The sign of this special work is a acknowledgement of God's significance as manifested to us in the endeavoring to raise up a new millions of people to be applied church extension and missions. We do not believe in capabilities of Methodism have exhausted by the strain of even dred years, nor that the limit of knowledge has been reached, and know, and that we have done much and that thousands upon sands of blood-bought souls through her instrumentality gathered into the garner of have an unbounded field in to increase in each generation years ago, and we grow old and and enter to their graves, but whose whole superannuated upon the great commission of can neither grow old nor less in in the earth. On the Mount of alone our Lord, and he said our Lord, the old deed of which brought us now to him because forth his disciples to take possession of his name. And this last of his has ever been the whence all inspiration comes and command, lowered, and the last command, through the ap-

[illegible]

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and faint creases. A dark, irregular stain is visible near the bottom center of the page. The right edge of the page shows the binding of the book.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1884.

In an old church record book in Southampton, England, there is this entry: "Mr. H. and his wife called by Divine Providence to London; the church suffers no loss by their removal." We have known a few such cases when not simply resignation was expressed, but a joyful doxology was sung.

The Centenary meeting at Carondelet Street Church, on Sunday last, was a notable occasion. Bishop Keener preached a masterly sermon, which we hope may be heard by many congregations in our Southern Methodist year. The synopses reported in the Times-Democrat is inspiring reading. The collection exceeded a thousand dollars, and the spirit of the meeting was most delightful.

Mayor Stephens, of Cincinnati, was visited last week by a delegation of city ladies, with a petition signed by 2,700 persons praying for a better enforcement of the Sunday laws. The mayor responded pleasantly, spoke of the difficulties, but promised due diligence in the matter. City officers are responsible for Sabbath desecration. The unmanly plea of lack of support in public sentiment is no apology for dereliction. A right and impartial enforcement of law will create or purify public sentiment.

The movement toward Christianity in Japan is a marvel if not a miracle. The nation is coming to Christ almost in a day. All classes, the highest and lowest, are breaking away from their ancestral worship and the vagaries of Confucianism. The chief officers of the cabinet are studying Christianity, and this former court teacher of Confucianism reads the Bible regularly. In a course of study recently prescribed for all the Shinto priests the Bible and "Martin's Evidences of Christianity" are included. There is reason for Bishop Keener's fear that "Japan will be converted before the Southern Methodist Church can get there."

On our third page this week will be found the able and appropriate fraternal address of Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is characterized by great dignity and taste, with passages of unusual eloquence. Dr. Carter took leave of the Conference on Monday, the nineteenth instant, in these words: Dear brethren, in taking leave of you we wish to say that we have heartily appreciated your cordial reception of us; that we have enjoyed your hospitality; that we have been much interested in your deliberations, and that we wish you "God-speed" in all your work of faith and labor of love.

A telegram to the Daily States from Baton Rouge says that Representative Hunter wants to be understood as favoring all lotteries. "Any lottery that will put up $40,000—$30,000 for the school fund and $10,000 for the charity hospital at Shreveport will receive his vote." Such high moral statesmanship is well calculated to deepen the already shameful stain upon Louisiana's fair name. He belongs to that numerous class eminently worthy to stay at home and remain forever innocent of the experience of a legislator. Righteously opposed to that iniquity, the Louisiana Lottery, because of its monopoly, he would arrest or destroy it, by opening the flood-gates. Such moral casuistry is significant and suggestive.

In a very vigorous and eloquent speech before the Southern Baptist Convention the Rev. Dr. J. L. M. Curry uttered these words: "I believe that a handful of regenerated persons in the farthest island or under the shadow of the remotest mountain can institute as true, as orthodox a church as ever existed." That is a significant statement from a distinguished Baptist. It is not after the order of the landmark, nor did Dr. Curry think so, as witness the following: "I committed treason, I believe, last year at Waco, because I did not believe in apostolic succession. I say now that I do not believe that any man can trace a succession of Baptist Churches from the apostles till now." And all broad-minded students of ecclesiastical history sustain the declaration. But where is the high church landmark?

The Quincentenary of John Wycliffe.

On the twenty-first instant, in the city of London, the festivals in commemoration of the five hundredth anniversary of the death of John Wycliffe, the earliest English reformer and translator of the Bible, were begun. His death occurred at Luttrell, December 31, 1384. The meetings began thus early that the remaining months of the year might be spent in gathering funds and erecting suitable memorials to his great name and achievements. It was quite significant and appropriate that the first festival services should occur in St. Andrews' Church, Black Friars, for that building stands on the very site of the monastery where the Pope's bull against Wycliffe was read. The Bishop of Liverpool preached an able sermon on the occasion, in which he urged all Christians to rally around the principles Wycliffe so boldly proclaimed. At a Conference at the Mansion House the Lord Mayor presided—and delivered—a glowing address. Prof. Burrows, of Oxford University, speaking on the occasion, said: "If Oxford displayed no sympathy with the objects of this Conference its very stones would cry out." Various suggestions were made as to the form the memorial should take. One proposition was to further endow the theological halls of Oxford and Cambridge, and in addition provide that Wycliffe's works should be republished and given wide publicity. This will bring up afresh for study the career of one of the great epochal men of the world. The German philosopher, Goethe, once uttered these words, which have passed into a proverb: "There are many echoes in the world, but very few voices." Wycliffe, in the boldness of his originality, rising superior to, and moving forward in advance of, his age, may well be claimed as one of the voices, loud, clear, authoritative, and musical as the silver trumpet of God. We study him as one of Heaven's ordained models of profound consecration, manly principle and heroic achievement.

This and like anniversaries keep in perpetual memory not simply honored names, but rather the great principles with which those names are bound in immortal wedlock. And this is well in the whirl and rush of our modern, utilitarian life. Its tendency is to beget an indifference to and depreciation of the past. Everything is absorbed in the immediate and momentous present. The study of typical characters in the historic past, and the principles that gave them greatness, revive in us that which we are losing, true reverence, and inspire us with hollower ambitions. We are thus taught the eternity of truth and its sure triumph over all sin and error, however long it may be "crushed to earth."

They teach us, furthermore, that virtue will have its true measure of reward. God has no uncrowned kings in this world. In earlier or later life, or else after death, as in the case of John Wycliffe, he will make the earth honor his chiefs. To the close of life Wycliffe was bitterly persecuted, and even the quiet of his tomb was invaded by the ruthless hands of a base fanaticism. Thirty years after his death, by order of the Council of Constance, his bones were dug up and cast upon a dung-hill. But this did not appease heretical rage. Thirteen years after, Pope Clement VIII ordered his body to be burned and the ashes cast into the Swift, a branch of the Avon. But now the world honors and crowns him with glory. After five hundred years his name is as fresh and fragrant as the magnolias of our Southern clime. Disowned and dishonored by his own generation, the centuries have been vocal with his praise. Even his own parents dishonored him. His name does not appear upon the family record. Doubtless because of his heresy, they desired it never to be known that he had a blood-claim upon their family name. But to-day—his life and labors studied by the light and experience of five hundred years, when men are yet proud of blood and noble ancestry—to-day, any family would esteem it a distinguished honor to link their relationship to the once despised heretic, but Heaven-commissioned "morning star of the Reformation." And this teaches us that there can be no higher connection than the aristocracy of heroic principle and sublime faith. There may be a time of lonely trial, but triumph is sure. And the heavier the cross the brighter will be the crown. Names once cast out as evil, are to-day written in letters of shining gold and spoken with reverence by the grateful lips of the world. A little cheap present notoriety is the greatest enemy to true nobility of character.

On the occasion of this quincentenary we bespeak a study of that early day. At another time we will trace the career of Wycliffe, and consider the character, measure and influence of his labors.

Bishop Thompson's Diocesan Address.

The address of assistant Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson, of the diocese of Mississippi, to the diocesan council at Columbus, May 7, was warmly commended by his brethren. Three thousand copies of the Church News, to contain said address, were ordered to be purchased for the council for distribution. It has been published in full in the Times-Democrat, and has gone out to its large constituency. The address is rather an exhaustive review of the condition of the diocese, dwelling at length and with force upon its neglects, wants, embarrassments, difficulties and derelictions. The Bishop is painfully conscious of the weakness and comparative failure of the church, and, though garlanded and concealed with the flowers of rhetoric, makes of his address a whip of small cords, with which he lashes the faithful very soundly. If such a Christianity is developed as he outlines, all Christians will rejoice. On the severity of clergy he utters some words of real eloquence and power. We extract as follows:

"The workers are so few." Yes, they are. The scarcity of clergy is a cry ascending from every diocese. Not the scarcity of clergy seeking "good parishes." There are plenty of them hanging about the skirts of abundance, of luxury and worldliness, ready to be rich men's hirelings for an easy life. But clergy who were ordained ad oram, whom God set apart from the world and put his yoke upon, to live and die for a grand cause, who were branded in their ordination with the King's signet at red heat, till the world was scorched out of their hearts and they went out, driven by the awful purpose which had seized them, and scorched by the white flame from before the throne, "to toil and watch and wait out all their days." These clergy are scarce. They always were. But what power, as of the right arm of Jehovah, they wield when they do appear among men!

And then the Bishop urges the church to make this "a fireside question"—dedicating and training sons for the ministry. Clergy of the character and lofty spirit described in the extract above can only come from homes of singular unworldliness and profound piety. Of such only are prophets and apostles born. Unless, therefore, the Bishop first expels worldly conformity from the church, he can not expect his exhortation to bear much fruit. Who are the leaders and promoters of sinfully folly in all our larger towns and cities? God does not call his "vessels of honor" from such associations. While commending the ability, practical force, spirit and trend of the address, one or two things stand out, and demand criticism.

Though applauding the zeal of other denominations which he admits "shames" their own, he says: "But I know, as a matter of fact, that the war of sects has driven large numbers to stand aloof, and that only the faith historic can attract or hold them."

Now, while overlooking the taste of calling other Christian denominations whose "zeal and success shame us" as "sects," and their emulation as "the war of sects," we question the Bishop's "fact." We have no idea that a single man or woman in Mississippi has been "driven to stand aloof" from Christ for any such reason. Alas! what would have become of the thousands who are Christians, and whose "zeal and success shame us," had it not been for the warring "sects"? There would have been a famine of God's word, and the vast population of the commonwealth, would have perished with "cleanness of teeth." After fifty-seven years the diocese has three Bishops and about sixteen clergy to furnish the gospel to a million and a half of people. Then if other denominations have wrought so zealously and bravely through all these years, while "the church" has done comparatively nothing, why should their labors be characterized as "the war of sects?"

On the subject of the colored people and their religious instruction, the Bishop speaks with warmth and positiveness. We agree with his utterances as to the importance of the work and the sin of neglect. The following, however, must be taken with allowance and explanation:

I think I have seen enough in my work in the diocese to make me believe that there is a field for the church among the colored people of this State, and that in fact we hold that which is their sole hope morally—a Christianity of training, and not of mere emotion, of duty and obedience, and not of nervous spasms. One now and then meets a pious negro man or woman, trained in the church's ways, in a devout church household of the old time, and he sees how far the calm, settled, high-principled religion of faith and duty has marked its subject off from the common mass of his race who profess a religion which knows none of God's commandments. The finest type of negro character (and it is a high type of character absolutely,) is found among those who were reared in the homes of churchmen, and who, as children, were prepared for confirmation by some pious churchwoman.

Though "their sole hope morally," the Bishop admits that they have not a single congregation among them in the entire State. Alas! what a responsibility. The church has their "sole hope," and absolutely withholds it. All that writing about "mere emotion" and "nervous spasms" tends to cheapen the idea and necessity of experimental religion in the minds of the people. And, if so, it is doubly dangerous. As to "the finest type of negro character" the Bishop describes, trained by "pious churchwomen," they are scarcely discoverable. The "pious churchwoman" before the war employed or allowed a Methodist missionary of the Southern Methodist Church to preach to her negroes and catechize the children. We applaud the Bishop's zeal in desiring to provide the negroes with "their sole hope morally," but we have not faith to prophesy large results. As in the past, both races will have to depend on the nearing seeds for the gospel of the Son of God.

The Northern Methodist General Conference.

After our report of last week the elections of General Conference officers proceeded as follows: Editor Western Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. J. H. Bayless, on the third ballot, defeating Dr. F. S. Hoyt; editor Northwestern Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. Arthur Edwards, present incumbent; editor Central Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. B. St. James Fry, present incumbent; editor Northern Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. O. H. Warren, re-election; editor Pittsburg Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. C. W. Smith, defeating Dr. Alfred Wheeler; editor California Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. B. F. Crary; editor Southwestern Christian Advocate, Rev. M. W. Taylor; editor German Apologist, Dr. William Nast.

On Wednesday the report of the Committee on Episcopacy, recommending the election of a missionary Bishop to Africa, was adopted, and the Conference proceeded to the election. A number of nominations were made, but the choice fell upon Rev. William Taylor, a local preacher, and lay delegate of the South India Conference. Mr. Taylor has long been a conspicuous figure in American Methodism, and is a Virginian by birth. He was born in Rockbridge county, Va., in May, 1821, and entered the Baltimore Conference in March, 1843. In 1849 he went to California as a missionary, and his labors were attended with marvelous results. Too restless and unique in his spirit and methods for restraint by any law, he traveled through the United States, Canada and all English-speaking countries of the world, doing the work of an evangelist. He organized the South India Conference, and established self-supporting missions in Burmah, India and South America. If at the age of sixty-four he undertakes this work, attended with so many perils, he will emulate the courage and zeal of Dr. Coke, "the Foreign Minister of Methodism," offering himself as a missionary to the English Conference after passing his threescore years.

The following resolution introduced by Rev. T. B. Neely, of the Philadelphia Conference, was passed after some debate:

Resolved, That we reaffirm the doctrine of the fathers of our church that the Bishopric is not an order, but an office, and that in orders a Bishop is merely an elder or presbyter.

The mover supported his resolution with a vigorous speech, in which he affirmed that such a deliverance was necessary in order to arrest a tendency in the church to speak of the episcopate as a third order. So well known is that doctrine in Episcopal Methodism that such a resolution is no more necessary than a re-affirmation of the twenty-five articles or a re-adoption of the general rules.

The report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, presented to the General Conference by Bishop Harris, showed 3,235 auxiliaries and receipts during the past four years amounting to $504,584.54. That certainly was a grand quadrennial achievement. Quite a debate sprang up on the proposition to license women to preach, and, as in all things radical, New England led the forces. But the skillful thrusts of Dr. Buckley and the conservative strength of other able debaters visited them with an ill-fated Waterloo.

The caste question, which some thought would be the great exciting issue, was very gently disposed of in adopting a report from the Committee on Freedman's Aid. It leaves matters in status quo, and the question of mixed schools or congregations to be determined by local surroundings.

On the Border and Elsewhere.

BY BISHOP PARKER.

Leaving New Orleans on Monday, Corpus Christi is reached Wednesday night by supper time. The route is west to San Antonio, about five hundred miles; south to Laredo, on the Rio Grande, one hundred and fifty miles; and east to Corpus Christi, about one hundred and sixty miles. The country from San Antonio to Laredo I have only seen by moonlight, as the trains run both ways in the night. But it appears, for the most part, to be an uninhabited region, devoted to stock, covered with mesquite, and almost destitute of water. The Neuses and Medina rivers are crossed; exactly where I do not know. At some of the remote stations the peculiar howl and bark of the coyotes were heard. At San Antonio, starting south, there is the odor of garlic, and the talk is about cattle, the price of wool and the condition of the pastures. It is not cotton and corn, but grass, that seems to concern the people.

The whole Rio Grande region was dry, exceedingly, at the time I was there; no rain for many months, and the pastures were brown and bare. The country through which the road to Corpus Christi runs was suffering much, and the large stock raisers were shipping thousands of cattle by rail to the better watered sections in the northwest. This country is almost without tillage. The soil is, much of it, fertile, but without rain it is useless to plow, and, in any case, grass is considered more profitable than the cultivation of the soil. The scenery from Laredo to Corpus Christi is like all this border-level, as a rule, but sometimes rolling and covered with cactus and mesquite. At this season the cactus blooms are varied and beautiful, of different tints, from delicate straw or amber to rich vermilion and pink. The cactus is a providential provision for this hot and parched region, as it flourishes in the severest droughts, blooms in the dust, and, when the grass utterly fails, cattle, sheep and goats can live upon it. It also yields a useful fiber, and the young and tender shoots are sometimes cooked and eaten. The fruit is sometimes made into jelly and preserves, and in this form is said to be exceedingly palatable. So far from being considered a disadvantage, the cactus is valued. It is the stockman's reserve. When everything else fails, he is sure of the cactus.

And the almost omnipresent mesquite that covers the pasture lands of Texas and Mexico is not without its uses. The mesquite grass is said to grow best in its shade; it bears also a very nutritious bean, on which all domestic animals fatten, and the dryer the season the more prolific is the crop. It is a wood that never decays, and hence the favorite fence post; as fuel it makes the hottest of fires, and when worked up for wagon wheels is never known to shrink. On the road to Corpus Christi many immense flocks of sheep may be seen, also droves of horses and herds of cattle. And, to give further variety to the scene, an occasional herd of deer comes in sight, likewise antelope, and the lively and unique mule-eared rabbit.

Corpus Christi bay was not placid as last year, but agitated by strong gales. The town does not grow. Our Mexican Mission District Conference at this place was well attended—the meetings had unction and life, and here in the cradle of our border mission the first baptism still lingers. The dust of Alejo Hernandez sleep in the cemetery here, and measures were taken to erect a suitable monument to his memory. Our company left for Laredo in the midst of one of those sand storms which reach their highest perfection in this region of drought, and dust. It seemed at times as if the cars would be lifted from the track. The train was behind lime, and there was no preaching that night at Laredo. Was this an exception to the rule about "an ill wind"? So far as this writer was concerned, the result was accepted with resignation. Laredo has improved during the last year. It has not grown larger, but is more solid, and looks more like an American city. The Seminary, under the care of the Woman's Board of Missions, is doing finely. The Mexican girls sang for their visitors, and were manifestly cheerful and happy group. This school is doing much good, and these Mexican girls will be social and religious missionaries throughout northern Mexico. There must be enlargement here to meet a rapidly increasing demand. Miss Holden and her assistants are doing good work, and should be generously sustained. The school stands like a lighthouse on a dark and perilous shore. I found Bro. William Headen at his home in Laredo, ever the fast and helpful friend of our border work. I am under special obligations to him and his excellent family for a considerate hospitality and many valued favors.

Another Mission District Conference at San Antonio. A good time we had. I rather like preaching through a good interpreter such as Bro. Sutherland is. It is a very restful way of preaching, but I should think, rather hard on the translator, as he must be on the stretch of attention all the time. The preacher, through the interpreter, picks up some Spanish, but the Mexican brethren evidently have no exalted opinion of my attainments in their native tongue. Their singing is specially fine, and all, from the child up, sing.

San Antonio is growing fast, now claiming about thirty-five thousand inhabitants. Many superior residences and commercial buildings are going up, the street railway system is extending to all parts, and there is a water supply from the head of the river. The stores are very fine, and no city in the United States has better stocks of staple and fancy goods.

There is considerable trade with Mexico, it is a great financial center for the stock business, it is the chief wool mart of the Southwest; there is a large business in hides, and it is a great health resort during the winter months. Whatever the cause, San Antonio is the metropolis of west Texas, an international, cosmopolitan city, and advancing rapidly in population and wealth. The Mexican element, formerly in the ascendancy, is now largely overshadowed by the American. The San Antonio river runs through the heart of the city, and is crossed by a number of fine iron bridges. It is still beautiful, picturesque in places, affording some exquisite vistas, but it is becoming foul with the drainage and sewerage of the city. In a sanitary point of view, the river is a problem. Probably it will some day be walled up and converted into a sewer and covered drain. Our new church on Travis Square, a handsome stone edifice, is not yet finished, but it is likely to be completed by October. Our congregation is worshipping in the basement, a most airy and cheerful audience room, and elegantly furnished. A good Sunday-school room, it is also a pleasant place to preach in. Sunday night it was my privilege to preach at the Tenth Street Mission Chapel, where I found a plain people, excellent singing, and the audience packed as closely as sardines.

Del Rio is a new town, claiming twenty-five hundred inhabitants, about one hundred and sixty miles west of San Antonio. It is on the Sunset, or Southern Pacific railway, and a mile and a half from the Rio Grande. The city is widely scattered, and is said to be growing slowly. During my visit the town was dry, the light glaring, the wind high and the dust plentiful. There is here a wonderful spring, not unlike that at San Marcos, but not of equal capacity. It is said to discharge fifty thousand gallons per minute, and flows away, a considerable river, until it reaches the Rio Grande. This spring supplies the town and the railroad station, and by a system of ditches is utilized for irrigation. It makes this desert, in spots, "to rejoice and blossom as the rose."

A day here, a sermon at night in the schoolhouse, and we return some thirty or forty miles to Eagle Pass Junction, where we take the Central Mexican railway to Eagle Pass, thirty miles distant on the Rio Grande. At Eagle Pass the road crosses the river, and has reached a point in Mexico beyond Monclova, in all perhaps one hundred and twenty miles. Eagle Pass claims two thousand people. The population is largely Mexican, and many of the streets are almost entirely of adobe, thatched, and looking like rows of hay ricks. The Jackal is, I suppose, the most primitive order of Mexican architecture, the walls of upright posts, or watted sticks plastered with mud, roofs thatched, one or two rude doors and no windows. There are, however, some solid, handsome and pleasant looking residences, and brick or stone stores and hotels. With all this mixture, many of the views were so quaint, novel and Oriental that I wished for an artist's pencil and skill to portray them.

Here the Monclova District Conference was held. The most of the work lies across the river in Mexico, and occupies a most interesting territory. We have no church edifice here of any sort, the Americans worshipping in the courthouse, and the Mexicans in a hired house. Preaching every week day to the Mexicans and two sermons at the courthouse on Sunday.

Our Mexican work seems to be doing well, rather better than last year, and there are effectual doors opening in all directions. The American work in these border towns is trying to the preacher, and the results are in the future. El Paso, Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Fort Davis and Laredo

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 23.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1453.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Wholesale and retail prices of papers and books.

All papers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

HOW? WHEN? WHERE? WHY?

You ask me how I gave my heart to Christ?
I do not know.
That came a yearning for him in my soul,
So long ago;
I could not see the world as it was,
I sought for something that would satisfy;
And then, and then—somehow, I seemed to find
To him my broken heart and all my sin.
I do not know.
I can not tell you—how?
I only know
He is my Saviour now!
You ask me when I gave my heart to Christ?
I can not tell.
The day, or the hour, I do not now
Remember well.
It must have been when I was all alone,
The light of his forgiving Spirit shone
Into my heart, so dim and dark with sin;
I think I think I think I think I think I think
I do not know.
I can not tell you—when?
I only know
He is dear since then!
You ask me where I gave my heart to Christ?
I can not tell.
That sacred place has faded from my sight,
As yesterday;
Perhaps he thought it better I should not Remember where. How I should love that spot
I think I think I think I think I think I think
I do not know.
I can not tell you—where?
I only know
He came and blessed me there!
You ask me why I gave my heart to Christ?
I can not tell.
It is a wonderful story; listen, while
I tell you why
My heart was drawn, at length, to seek his face.
I was alone, I had no resting place,
I was of how he loved me, with a love,
Of depth so great, of height so far above
All human ken,
I longed such love to share,
And sought it then,
Upon my knees in prayer.
You ask me why I thought this loving Christ
Would lead my prayer:
I knew he died upon the cross for me.
I called him there!
I heard his dying cry, "Father, forgive!"
I saw him drink death's cup that night live,
My heart was bowed upon my breast in shame,
He called me—and in penitence I came.
He heard my prayer!
I can not tell you how,
Nor when, nor where;
Why I have told you now." —Churchman.

An Incident in the Life of Col. Claiborne.

The name of J. F. H. Claiborne has long been a household word in Mississippi. He was brilliant and famous as a college student. He was elected to the State Legislature before he had attained his majority; he took his seat in Congress when he was barely eligible. As the competitor of Prentiss in the famous election case he became known throughout the nation. At one period he was widely known as a journalist. Years ago he entered the arena of authorship—"The Life of Dale" being, I believe, his first publication. Recently his history of Mississippi has given him a more lasting fame. There was a universal regret throughout the State when it was known that the manuscript of his second volume of the "History of Mississippi" had been destroyed in the conflagration that consumed his famous residence, Dunbarton. All hearts have gone out toward him in loving sympathy during the weary months of affliction that have followed that hour of calamity.
It was my privilege to visit him during his last illness. He was hopeful of his recovery, but patient and resigned to the will of our heavenly Father. He was profoundly grateful to God for having so wonderfully prolonged his life. (He had a hemorrhage more than forty years ago, and his life had been suspended on a very little thread ever since.) He commenced often with God in prayer, trusted in Christ for salvation and expressed himself as having no fears of death. He related to me the following incident:

"His mother was a Methodist and a great admirer and warm personal friend of Dr. Winans. She had neglected to have her children baptized until he (J. F. H.) was about fourteen years old. She then invited Dr. Winans to baptize all her children at once. When the time arrived quite a number of persons assembled at her house to witness the ceremony. Dr. Winans baptized the younger children as infants; but when he came to J. F. H., he required him to make the responses for himself. In answer to the question, 'Dost thou renounce the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world,' etc., the youthful candidate responded with an emphatic 'No.' The doctor paused a moment, and then interrogated him as to his reason for making such a response. The reply was, 'Because I don't want to tell a lie.' Of course that ended the ceremony. The colored said that at the time he felt that it would be improper for him to answer the question in the affirmative, as he had not resolved to be a Christian; but he added, 'I have no doubt it was the work of the devil.' He also said that it had always been his purpose to unite at some time with the church of his mother, and that he had been prepared for years to take upon him, in good conscience, the vows which he then refused to take. It had, however, been inconvenient for him to do so, his residence being quite remote from any church. He engaged me to baptize him in case he recovered sufficiently to go out, but had an aversion to joining the church on his deathbed. Hence he died out of the church, though I have no question of his meekness for 'the inheritance of the saints in light.' —W. C. BLACK.

Missouri Letter.

The New York Independent pays this just tribute to Methodism in a recent issue: "American Methodism is without doubt the greatest religious fact, whatever conclusions may be drawn from it, of the age." Its constituency in this the centennial year of its organic life is larger than was the entire population of the United States in 1781. It counts almost four million members, and may claim to have almost, if not quite, one-third of the American people under its influence. It has not attained to its present vast proportions by immolation like the Roman Catholics, but by the faithful propagation of the gospel of love and life. It has got hold of and lifted the masses and impressed its character upon them and touched its national heart as no other church has been able to touch it. It is a fact of power, of growth, of inspiration, of vast influence.

These words chime in with Joseph Cook's recent declaration that "if this country ever goes to the bad, Methodism will be largely responsible for it." We are doing a good deal of boasting this centennial year, and I do not know but that we are somewhat extensible for it. Our policy of silence and forbearance in the past has been construed by many as an expression of weakness, and there is some satisfaction in letting the world know our true strength. After preaching a centennial sermon recently, in which I gave our numbers and our relative strength as compared with other churches, a prominent layman came to me privately and wished to know if I had not made some mistake in my figures; and when I assured him that my figures were accurate, he said he had no idea before of the real strength of Methodism. Other denominations have boasted so much that it is difficult to make even our own people believe that American Methodism is one-third larger than the Baptists, four times more numerous than the Presbyterians, seven times as many as the Campbellites or Disciples, ten times the number of Congregationalists, and eleven times that of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Our actual communicants exceed the Roman Catholics, and our Methodist population will nearly double itself.

The Methodist Episcopal General Conference promises to be as conservative as was ours two years ago. The proposal to establish episcopal residences in India, Europe and Africa, looking ultimately to the autonomy of the Methodist Episcopal missions in those countries, is the only radical measure so far introduced. This was defeated by the majority of the clerical members being in favor of it. Dr. Curry is I see very strongly in favor of letting the self-supporting mission churches "set up housekeeping for themselves." There is much to be said on both sides of the question, but I am not in favor of an overgrown ecclesiasticalism. "A world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church and a possible session of the General Conference under the dome of St. Peter's" is more sentimental than practicable or desirable.

Our city was considerably affected by the financial flurry of last week. The failure of Donnell, Lawson & Simpson, of New York, caused the suspension of the State Savings Bank, of this city; our largest financial institution, carrying seven hundred thousand dollars of deposits. St. Joseph has the reputation of being the wealthiest city of 45,000 inhabitants in the South of West, and this is the first serious failure she has had for years. She numbers her millions by the dozen and has fifteen or twenty wholesale houses whose capital is unlimited. If her piety was only in proportion to her wealth, her citizens would be happy people.

The season of District Conferences is upon us in Missouri. Bishop Wilson is devoting the months of May and June to us, and has already held three of our Conferences. He is, always a welcome visitor in Missouri, albeit he gave us a lively "stirring up" last fall, from the effects of which some of the preachers have not yet recovered.

We had a very pleasant Conference for the Plattsburg district, last week; at Cameron. Most of the preachers reported the decks clear. Our missionary collections are already largely in excess of the total last year and, better than all, we have had over five hundred conversions in the district up to the present time.

Our Conference sustained a great loss in the death of Rev. T. J. Gooch, presiding elder of the Mexico district. It was to me a personal bereavement, as our relations had always been intimate and he was a brother beloved in the gospel. He was a warm-hearted, genial Christian gentleman; a good preacher and a man of fine executive ability. How strange that such a man should suddenly be cut off in the prime of life and in the midst of a career of great usefulness! But God knoweth best and doeth all things well.

We will give your Bishop Parker a very hearty welcome in Missouri. Can not the editor of the ADVOCATE come with him and look on a live Western Conference? He would find at least one Louisianian up here, and possibly more. Let him think about it and conclude to pay us a visit.

M. B. CHAPMAN.
St. Joseph, Mo., May 27, 1884.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDG. JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Centennial of Methodism.

Bishop Keener's sermon delivered in Carondelet Street Church, on Centenary Day, the fourth Sunday in May, and synoptically reported in the Times-Democrat. The opening hymn was the 766th, beginning:

"Glory to God, whose sovereign grace
Hath animated senseless stones;
Called us to stand before his face,
And raised us into Abraham's sons."

Text: "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people; and they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest. For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."—Hebrews viii, 10-12. The following is a reportorial synopsis of this masterly effort:

We this morning contemplate but a part of a very large audience engaged in contemplating and in estimating, as far as possible, the principles and doctrines which underlie our Methodism. When I say our Methodism I refer to American Methodism, to American Episcopal Methodism. We have the opportunity of contemplating it from a point where not forty centuries look down upon us, but where after one century we can measure this great movement in the providence of God.

I may not be able to take in a full and comprehensive view of the subject, but allow me to say, in the language of the New York Independent, that American Methodism is one of the greatest facts of this century, and that one-third of all the people in the United States are directly or indirectly under Methodist influence. This great mass of the people has not accumulated from emigration, but by the power of the preaching of the word and its doctrines, which have entered into the homes of the people, enlightened them and lifted them with peace. The Northern Methodist Church has 10 colleges, while we of the South have about seventy. Our brethren of the Northern Church build on an average of ten churches a week, while the Southern Methodists erect new churches at the rate of one per year. But I will not burden you with statistics; I will not speak of our 10,000 Sunday-schools, or of what our press is doing in various ways. My object shall not be to bring before you so much the great fact of Methodism as of its marvelous growth. We now have 5,000,000 communicants, 25,000,000 adherents and 20,000 itinerant ministers, and all this is the work of the last century. It becomes us to pause and consider this our system. Beginning in an atmosphere of peace, and hardly noticed at its commencement, like a spark of fire on one of the great prairies of the West, it has spread until the whole horizon of the church of God is aglow with its presence.

You may be sure, said Bishop Keener, that it was the result of great forces which preceded it. It was not, however, by originating great principles, but by recognizing great principles in actual existence, that Methodism came to be the expression of one of the greatest powers since the apostolic age. In view of this we call your attention to the principles which, so far as their relative statement is concerned, were evolved, formulated and adopted by the Church of England—a Church full of intelligent, orthodox power, in whose homilies they had been so well formulated, that Wesley continually appealed to the Church of England in proof of the doctrines which he preached.

Said the eloquent speaker, There must be some wonderful inspiration of power in Methodism to make it leap forward, as did the man whose ankle bones had been strengthened. We might say that it was the dispensation of the Holy Ghost. In religion, as well as in natural science, God can wait. Just think how long he waited for Newton and Kepler to reveal the true laws of the universe and the full glory of the heavens. So the Lord has left some of the greatest forces of the development of us. We are not mere material substances; we are working by no mere natural necessity. God recognizes our individuality, and it is in vain that he does so much to elevate humankind if humanity does not enter into his plans. Look how long he waited for Luther! And God is just as much rejoiced to see a great man take charge of a great principle and die for it if necessary, as he was to see Abraham, or Abraham was to see God.

This dispensation of the Holy Ghost the apostle philosophically defines the period of the new covenant. We are not under the law, but under the grace of God's elect that he might serve him faithfully and with love, not in a relation of fear to him. With the coming of Christ, says Paul, came a better dispensation: the entire priesthood was changed, and all the offerings engrossed in one eternal victim, and not that only, but we are given a better covenant, better promises—a promise that he will put his laws into our minds, write them on our hearts; that he will be our God, and that we will be to him a people. This is the new covenant that will never be changed. It is God's pledge to pardon, to be present in man's heart, to accept and receive man into organic union with himself. Can anything be grander than this? This is the revelation of this dispensation of the Holy Ghost, and it was the recognition of this doctrine that produced the Methodist sunburst in the Protestant church-life of the eighteenth century.

God waits a long time for a man to realize his designs. Do you know that Wesley came over to this country with almost apostolic zeal; that he preached to large numbers of people in Georgia for two or three years and yet accomplished nothing? He went back to England, and three or four days after he had landed he met a man, and after some conversation with him a remarkable change took place. He went and spoke to the same class of people he had labored among in Georgia, and almost as soon as he preached many were converted. Is it not wonderful after preaching for so many years without results that after a change of views he should have such success?

It was, therefore, the recognition of the doctrines involved in the covenant that this is to be attributed. It shows that man shall have a supernatural evidence within him of the truths preached to him; have Christ in him, a hope of glory, a sense of God's pardoning favor. Mr. Wesley had been very near this all these years; he had dim views, and thought they were clear ones; he considered faith as merely founded on evidence. But after meeting Peter Bohler, who said to him: "You have no faith that enables you to feel personally that Christ died for you. You may believe in a general way, but unless you have that wonderful peace and joy that comes from a pardon of sin, you have not the right kind of faith." The next thing that Wesley learned was that he could not work himself up into such a faith; that it was only when he said, like the father, "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief," that he could feel that peace which is the gift of God. We must pray for that faith which works by love. Another point that was settled was that conversion was not lingering, but instantaneous. Peter Bohler told him to search the word, and he would find that the longest conversion there was St. Paul's. All others were cut to the heart instantly and cried out, "What must I do to be saved?" Peter Bohler named several persons who could prove this, and they testified that the faith of God came as "lightning from heaven."

We have, as it were, said the reverend Bishop, the exact text of the moment when Methodism began. Mr. Wesley tells us that early on the morning of May 24, 1738, as he was reading the Bible, he was especially struck with the passage, "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises that by these ye may be partakers of the Divine nature." Later in the day he read these words, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." In the evening he went into St. Paul's Cathedral, and heard there the anthem, "Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O God!" After leaving St. Paul's he went reluctantly to a prayer meeting in Leadenhall street, and here it was, at a quarter past nine in the evening, that he felt his sins forgiven. As a wonderful providence, his brother, Charles, was converted a few days before. A few days afterward Mr. Wesley, hearing of some men who were to be hung for larceny, went with his brother to try the effect of the new doctrine on them. The first person they tried was a negro, and soon he and five or six others were converted to God.

But Methodism went on, like the stream that began at the touch of the wand of Moses, the servant of God, and the children of God kept in company within its refreshing banks. Methodism has moved on with an impulse as grand as the movement of a planet for an hundred years, and as Webster once said, "Thank God that the past is at least safe." St. Paul says, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." The spiritual dispensation is the offer of Divine sonship to every man. We have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we say, Abba, Father. When God sends forth his Spirit into the hearts of men, they are actually his sons. You can believe in the grandeur of this conception, if you do not believe the fact of it—that God constitutes all believers heirs of God, and elevates them to the fellowship of the Father and the Son. Can anything surpass this? No man can call such a proposition insignificant. Is there anything in the laws of nature, or of society, or of statesmanship, or of the human heart, that can be compared to such an offer to constitute you a son of God? And it is an offer that can be tested. A few years ago there was a great deal of talk about the efficacy of prayer by praying for rain upon a certain wheat field at a certain time. But if this should have happened, would any one believe it? Every one would have numbers of instances and arguments to prove that it was not the result of prayer. But of this great proposition every one can prove the truth, whether he be as wise as Bacon or as ignorant as a Hottentot. You may conclude because you are honest, pious, go to God's house, and, adding altogether, may put yourself into a reverential state of mind, yet you are all the while gathering witnesses of your own spirit; but "the Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the sons of God."

When I had been seeking religion, said Bishop Keener, after nine days there came a lull in the struggle, and the power of God came to me with forgiveness of sins. It is the doctrine of Methodism that God's Spirit justifies the ungodly and pardons man, not salutes. If you have any doubts as to the Divine authority of the Scriptures, it is because you do not do the will of the Saviour and address yourself to the duty of seeking God.

The recognition of this doctrine is what has given Methodism its power and spirit. These men went forth with fire in their bones, with doctrines deep enough to warm the hearts of God's children, to give man relief from sin. Do you believe that if religion had been a hard, dry science, men would have touched it after the first century or that men would have gone over the country enduring much privation to preach the gospel? This is one of the sublimest evidences you can have of the truth of the system. Man finds joy in it; he has new views of life; there is nothing in the universe that does not give him some new hint of the glory of God. Religion is a blessed joy, and that is why Methodism went along. It sought expansion—sought it where it began, in Great Britain, Ireland and Wales; it came to America, spread along the Atlantic coast, from thence to the Alleghenies, to the Rocky Mountains, and the Pacific; from the silver lakes of the North to El Paso del Norte of the South. Still it was not satisfied. It spread to Mexico; from England it spread to Australia, to the Society and Fiji Islands, which had a century ago were inhabited by cannibals. Now in the latter there are 120,000 households that have family prayers. It is working its way in New Guinea, in the Himalayas, in China and in the Steppes of the North; is proclaiming the goodness of God, and we will probably never be satisfied until we get on the plains of heaven and join the 144,000 singing praises to God. Bishop Keener said that the secret of its success was that because the church recognized the dispensation of the Holy Spirit, the Lord recognizes the church. As long as it teaches that if men do not repent they will perish, and so soon as they do they will be saved, will we continue to conquer. As long as it holds to the covenant of God it will be an eternal Methodism. You ought to rejoice that God offers pardon and sonship on such easy terms, and that you can be sure you have them without asking anyone else.

Said the reverend speaker in closing: I feel that if it had not been for Methodism I would have come very short in my knowledge of God.

A correspondent of Zion's Herald thus refers to the exciting race in the General Conference between Drs. Fowler and Vincent, members of the same annual conference, for the Bishopric:

As these two men sat side by side in the same delegation, it was possibly an exhibition of the most delicate and embarrassing relations seen among brethren for many a General Conference. Once it seemed that Dr. Vincent would be elected; then Dr. Fowler's vote rallied again. Dr. Fowler rose once to withdraw his name, and Dr. Vincent would not permit it, and then Dr. Vincent rose for the same purpose, and Dr. Fowler would not permit it. Dr. Fowler was the child of destiny, and he followed Dr. Walden "to his own place." In four years—we will see.

Good Words.

God only is the creature's home,
Though rough and straight the road;
Yet nothing less can satisfy
The love that longs for God.

—Christ saves us by pouring into us his own life, which is love. When Christian love is formed within us, it has killed the roots of sin in the soul, and fitted us to be forgiven, and to enter the presence of God.—James Freeman Clarke.

—Both wit and understanding are trifles without integrity. The ignorant peasant without a fault is greater than the philosopher with many faults. What is genius or courage without a heart?—Oliver Goldsmith.

—The desire of power in excess caused angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall; but in charity is no excess; neither can man nor angels come into danger by it.—Bacon.

—Honor the Lord with thy substance with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst with new wine.

—We must choose between the romance of man and the mysteries of God. God only reveals himself through many a veil, but those veils are not falsehoods.—Guzot.

—As the sea bird sleeps calmly on the bosom of the ocean billow, so in all trying circumstances sweetly rests the soul that is stayed on God.—Rev. J. E. C. Sawyer.

—No man can be brave who considers pain to be the greatest evil in life, nor temperate who considers pleasure to be the highest good.—Cicero.

—The bread of life is love; the salt of life is work; the sweetness of life is poetry, and the water of life is faith.—Southern Churchman.

—Out of free religion has grown free irreligion; and out of infidel liberality, immorality.—Joseph Cook.

—There is a past which has gone forever, but there is a future which is still our own.—F. W. Robertson.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

BY MISS ALICE M. SMITH.

Who makes the tiny flowers that grow,
The rippling brooks that gently flow,
The cooling winds that softly blow,
And fan the weary traveler's brow:
Our Father in heaven.

Who makes the gentle summer's rain,
Fall to the earth with sweet refrain,
Cheering the drowsy and golden grain,
And freeing all from dust and stain:
Our Father in heaven.

Who sends the snow in feathery showers,
To cover domes and stately towers,
The humble eave and fairy towers,
And hide from view the lovely flowers:
Our Father in heaven.

Who taught you, little bird, to sing,
And make the woods with music ring,
To sing about an overcast wing,
And build your tiny nest in spring:
Our Father in heaven.

Who made the golden sun so bright,
The stars that shine with twinkling light,
The silver moonbeams, soft and white,
To cheer us in the darkest night:
Our Father in heaven.

"Wherefore Let Him That Thinketh He Standeth, Take Heed Lest He Fall."
—1 Corinthians 12.

In the ADVOCATE, of May 8, there is an article from H. Walter Featherston, in which he rebukes "J. W. M." for his gloomy fears and at the same time gives us some very encouraging statistics—facts of which we are proud. We are told that "pride cometh before destruction." Let us take heed, therefore, lest we become pulled up. Bro. Featherston in the old tract "Targets Bro. 'J. W. M.'s' grammar, and then talks of the ignorance, as a class, of the Methodist preachers of 'former times,' and this accounts for, no doubt, the very few 'bright lights' of those days, and then states that such is not the case now. What has that to do with the power and holiness of the pulpit of 'former times?' Allow me to say that while ignorance under some circumstances may be a sin, yet grammar is not holiness. It does not necessarily follow that because the preachers of to-day are more 'book learned' than they have more of the power of God. Some of the apostles were unlearned men, yet the people 'took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus.' Now, personally, I know nothing of the 'former times,' and I am aware that, as a rule, history nations only the 'brighter lights.' We are apt after reading it to overrate the power and holiness of the people at that time. But if this has the effect to lift the standard higher for us, such history is certainly beneficial. The poet speaks thus of our fathers:

"They've scaled the mountain high,
They've crossed the rushing stream;
On every hill their banners fly,
Their warlike weapons gleam.
We reap the bounties they went to sow Broadcast a hundred years ago."

This little stanza suggests this thought: If the statistics which Bro. Featherston has given us are the roapings of the good our fathers sowed, what is the nature of the seed we are sowing for others to reap a hundred years from now? Considering the advantages and numbers to-day, is not more required of us than those of the 'former times?' And if we would put forth the same effort proportionately, could we not make a better showing than we do? I want to say, Amos to what Bro. 'J. W. M.' has said; for I hold if his article will cause the preachers to examine and more fully dedicate themselves to the Lord, it will have accomplished good. Where is the man, considering his advantages, who can boast of his attainments in grace? I suppose there are not many preachers of to-day who are not ready with St. Paul to say: Not that I have already attained; but, 'forgetting those things which are behind, let us press toward the mark of the prize of our high calling.' I know that we have good, earnest, orthodox preaching in these days. But there is something wrong. Bro. 'J. W. M.' is right; it is not accompanied with power and the demonstration of the Spirit.

We hear of none of the great men of our country and time trembling upon the throne of their power like Felix of old when he was reasoned with of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come. We hear of none of the common people crying out, 'Men and brethren, what must we do to be saved?' It is very seldom that we hear of a bright, happy conversion like those which occurred under the preaching of Wesley, Whitfield and others of the 'former times.' The demonstrations which we have now are something on this order: Some rich person now and then, in a patronizing way, joins the church, or after an earnest, stirring sermon one or two young men or women may go up and in a very formal manner assume the solemn vows of church membership; and the next time we hear of them they are in some ball-room, billiard-saloon or theater, and we do not arraign them as in 'former times,' but we allow them to go unrebuked, and thus testify to them that we did not expect any better of them. Is it unreasonable that this should result in keeping many out? They feel that they can be and are just as good as some who join the church, and also that there are no benefits derived from church membership.

Something more than preaching the word is necessary. 'Ye are my witnesses,' said the Master. We need the power of godly living to accompany the preaching. If those who join the church would practically demonstrate that there is such a thing as a change of heart, sinners would believe and seek it; and if people would seek—we have the word of God for it—they would find; and if they find, we will have the same demonstration as in 'former times.'

Bro. Featherston asks, 'Is the church of God, upon whom rests the ordaining touch and with whom is the pledge of the Eternal God, dying out?' No, sir; a thousand times, No! The church of God will go on conquering and to conquer; but it is not absolutely necessary that it should work under the name of Methodism. I pray that Methodism still may continue to be a favored branch of God's church; but, as some one has said, 'whenever we fail to do his work, God will raise another who will.' 'God buries his workmen and carries on His work.' Let the church revive the use of the Discipline, and thus demand a higher and more powerful life of her members.

There are times when we almost grow 'weary of well doing' and are ready to 'slant by the way.' Then it is that we can thank God for such men as Bro. Featherston—men who can look on the bright side and encourage us. But while we rally round the shout of victory raised by them, let us also give due weight to the solemn warning of such men as Bro. 'J. W. M.'

THOS. P. DARR,
JACKSON, MISS., May 10, 1884.

"They That Feared the Lord Spake Often One to Another."

I have just received a letter from an esteemed brother minister whose Christian experience may be similar to some others. With the hope that it may be helpful to some one, I give it here together with my reply:

"I spoke to you, my dear brother, about my despondent feelings, and, as they still, in some measure, continue, I earnestly ask an interest in your prayers that I may be delivered."

"The cause of these things I know is pest unfaithfulness; but, oh! how hard it is after frequent falls to get back into the sensible place and favor of God. Sometimes these feelings have almost driven me to black despair. I had, as I went to the quarterly meeting, an experience of the love of God to such an extent that I felt an almost complete victory over the fear of death; and that if I was solicited to sin, and Jesus stood by, assuring me of pardon one minute after my sin, I would rather die than to commit it, for it seemed to me that such would be my grief for having done it that that minute would grieve me to death. And now, my dear brother, it may seem strange to you and others that after such a manifestation I could any longer doubt, and yet—such is the power of darkness and unbelief over my soul—even since that time I have been tempted to doubt that I am in the covenant of grace. I ask you, therefore, my dear brother, to hold me up mightily in your prayers, and especially that you write to me and, if possible, speak a word of comfort to an afflicted brother lest I utterly fall in my distress."

REPLY.

DEAR BROTHER: Your note of the thirteenth instant is before me. I have read it with much interest, particularly that part of it which refers to the subject of our last conversation. It is within the range of my experience, and I presume so with every one, that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." The chastening and scourging differs perhaps in every individual case: with some it is bodily affliction; with others, mental or spiritual; and still others, both. But come they will. While this is true, there is another power—"the prince of the power of the air"—that often comes to us as an angel of light and would deceive, if possible, even the elect by suggesting to them that God is afar off—that he has withdrawn himself from us. The question which he keeps prominently before our mind is, "Where is thy God?" The only answer to him is, "Get behind me, Satan."

I can heartily enter into sympathy with you, although I cannot understand thoroughly your experience. It does, however, my dear brother, seem to me that there is danger in remaining under a cloud of darkness too long. Christ said to his disciples: 'Ye now have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice; and your joy no man taketh from you.' No; not even Satan himself should be allowed to take this joy from us. I, myself, am often 'in heaviness through manifold temptations,' but I try to assure my heart and lay it upon him who 'was in all points tempted as we are.' A presumptive spirit the good Lord abhors. There may be courage, cheerfulness and hopefulness quite consistent with lowliness and the deepest humility. I can not believe that our Christian experience is always uniform. There are 'times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.' Such a season you enjoyed on your way to your quarterly meeting; such was the joy of the disciples on the day of Pentecost. That it should continue always so would induce us to forget that this world is not the place of 'rest to the people of God.' Darkness and even despondency is not uncommon after such an experience. St. Paul went to the third heaven, but he did not remain there. 'He came back to preach to his brethren, for which we rejoice. He saw things there unutterable. God gives us glimpses of his unspeakable love to better prepare us for the work of the ministry. I have here endeavored to write in the spirit of prayer and Divine guidance. Should you find anything to give you comfort here, I shall greatly rejoice. Pray for me. I am faithfully, Yours in Christ,

S. S. MOORE,
FRANKLIN, LA., May 15, 1884.

Rationale of Christian Atonement.

BROTHER D. G. W. ELLIS in the ADVOCATE of May 8, in a dignified and flattering notice of my essay on the above named subject in the April number of our Quarterly, intimates a wish that I explain one or two points where he thinks more elaboration is needed. This is fair and honorable. How can an author know how his argument strikes people unless somebody tells him? I hold myself always ready to explain, as far as I may be able, anything I write publicly, if I be called to the point.

Bro. Ellis says I "failed to stress the doctrine of satisfaction to the claims of the violated law." And no doubt many others think so. This was intentional, and not an inadvertent opinion.

It will be noticed my essay in the Review was not a general discussion of Christian atonement, but only a rationale of it; that is, an attempt to ascertain how far the subject may be practically disposed of on rationalistic principles which shall accord with revelation. How far I have succeeded in this others must judge. There are many things about Christianity not subject to rational inquiry. How would a man look trying to make a rationale of creation? or of any of the divine perfections? or of the tri-unity of the Godhead? Or, in reply to some writers on atonement, of supposed personal, individual, separate and continuing negotiations between the Father and the Son in adjusting their rights and demands as between each other? We may reason about things in the enclosures of human thought; but clearly outside those lines, who shall affirm and dogmatize?

The claims of a wicked law as between the sinner and the Maker, is easily understood; but as between two independents, negotiating parties in the Godhead, who can discuss it rationally?

Just at this Bro. Ellis inquires, "What is to be done with the countless acts of disobedience prior to the cure?" I answer, they are forgiven, simply forgiven without any equivalent on his part. Not forgiven without a Saviour and his atoning sacrifice, but with a Saviour and his sacrifice.

He says the Review fails to show "how God can be just and at the same time the justifier of the ungodly?" That is the very thing intended to be entirely omitted. Right here is where I think writers on this subject fail. This quotation from Romans is frequently erroneously made. God is not the justifier of the ungodly. Paul did not say so. He is the justifier of the believer. And how he justifies the believer, being himself perfectly justified, how he can do it without an equivalent, on the ground of simple faith in Christ, I have no means of knowing. We are not invited to a seat in that council, nor are its records exhibited to us. We are plainly told and may therefore readily believe, that he does it, but how, on what legal or judicial principles, it is vain for us to enquire. Debates on this question, how numerous and voluminous as they are, end exactly where they begin. It is like the vain inquiry, how resurrection is performed, and many other questions touching the means and processes of infinite agency. They lie beyond the domain of human reasoning. How did God make a woman out of a piece of man? How was divine incarnation performed? How matters were satisfactorily adjusted between the Father and the Son touching the question of pardon, or how a dual or trine agency in such a matter became necessary at all, and many such like questions, may do for the amusement of theological speculators, but I think sober Christians would do well to confine their investigations to things revealed. Take the word as stated and pass on in silence.

The essay in the Review is an attempt to get rid of interminable arguments of this sort, and to present such practical features of the atonement as we are interested in without raising these outlandish issues. There are many inferences of a logical or quasi logical character which may be raised from biblical expressions which we are not capable of handling.

Bro. Ellis says: "But if he means the atonement was in no sense a satisfaction to justice, I pause, and wait for further proof. This expression, 'satisfaction to justice,' is quite fashionable, and easily copied. Exactly what the meaning is, always, is not so easily stated. It is not a biblical expression, and in what 'sense' it might be used may not be very clear. I have no doubt but God is essentially just, and therefore that everything pertaining to the pardon of sin was 'satisfaction' to God and according to the highest justice. But, as indicated in the essay, justice is an abstract principle and not a person. In the above expression I supposed that Justice is personified, and then the plain meaning would be, that God was 'satisfied' with the arrangement by which sin is pardoned. This cannot be doubted. God is satisfied according to justice.

I do not see how my argument in the Review could be construed to teach 'the heresy of natural conversion.' I intended to stress the opposite very strongly; but it seems it is considered loose just there. Perhaps a re-reading and notice of the illustration of the oak and the vine, might dissipate that idea sufficiently.

Again Bro. Ellis says: "He is not particular to explain the process of conversion." Well, really, I do not know that conversion has any process. I see process in a man's life and experience, but what process conversion itself has or may have, I do not see. While I suppose that conversion is always the same in all persons, I see the effect of it in the converted person, both outwardly and inwardly, immediately and more remotely, as various as human temperament and disposition are various.

Finally, if I have succeeded somewhat in exposing the fallacy of negotiations of a commercial or rectoral character between the Father and the Son in the atonement, then I have met my highest hopes; for then and in that case, I have shown a rationale of atonement entirely above and outside of such commercial treaties. But, as is said, that there are many things pertaining to the general subject not stated in the essay, is very true. That would require an extensive writing.

After seeing Bro. Ellis' suggestions I have thought this much of explanation might be useful to some.

YAZOO CITY, MISSISSIPPI,
R. ARNEY.

Conference Brotherhood.

MR. EDITOR: At our last conference in Natchez there was an effort made, to organize an association. I believe mostly among the young preachers. I see they call it the Brotherhood, the object of which is to assist the families of preachers who die in the regular work. Of course it is a very laudable thing. I gave them my name and a dime—that was all they asked—but I never heard anything more of it until the other day I saw a notice calling upon all members to send five dollars for the relief of Bro. Gilmore's family, as he was a member of the association. That is all right, but who are members? I don't know whether I am one or not, while I believe there ought to be such a thing, and I see that in some other conferences they have something of the kind, yet I have one or two objections to it. One is I do not know it to be in any tangible form. No body knows anything about it. Another is the sixty days. The very preachers, it is designed to help, that is the poor preachers who are kept out on poor, hard circuits, can't get the money this time of the year, because the people who they serve have not the money, as such they will fail and forfeit. They can't help themselves, as I know from personal experience. I may not be so situated this year, but I have been and may be again. Now if they will give until conference that will do. I do not want it to fall through. I am interested in it, and getting more so every year. I tried to get into one in the Kentucky Conference where they take in lay members as honorary members, and have it so as to enable persons when dying to leave money or property to the organization. I like that very much, for I have been distressed ever since the war lost I did and leave my wife absolutely penniless, and is it not sinful to do so? Well I have tried several ways to get out of that trouble, but have failed. I have paid out several hundred dollars to insurance companies and now I have their dead policies but no living one. But brethren let us go to work in earnest and make this Brotherhood an honor and a blessing so when we are dead and gone some poor preacher's wife and children will bless us.

A. N. NICHOLSON.

From Natchez.

MR. EDITOR: Since I last wrote you the congregation at Wesley Chapel has been surely silted. Scarcely a person worshipping there has escaped the prevailing diseases—measles and mumps—and in some families the distress has been very great. In some households there is gloom, and hearts are aching for loved ones who are not, for God has taken them. On Tuesday, April 29, was buried Geneva Jones, a little orphan, aged 11, a member of our Sunday-school. Gentle and affectionate she was beloved by her teacher and classmates as well as by others who knew her. Wednesday, May 7, we laid to rest Mrs. Lurana F. Davis, a member of the Baptist Church; her end was peace, for in God was her trust. She was a step-daughter of Joseph and Harriet L. East, and formerly of Copiah county. Saturday, May 10, we carried to the grave little Amelia Copeland, aged about 7 years, and on Tuesday, May 13, Robert Ripley Copeland, aged about 2 years—the children of the late R. R. Copeland, of Rankin county. And on the 12th we also buried Mrs. Narcissa Bankston, wife of Dr. B. M. Bankston, recently from Brantley county in Claiborne county. Mrs. Copeland was in her forty-first year, and left twelve children to mourn her departure. She was resigned to God's will, and although her sufferings were very acute, they were borne with the patience which comes from trust in our Heavenly Father. She had borne heavy burdens and now great sorrows and tribulations. Death came and took her to the better land.

One or two cases of a serious character remain, but they are all well and resting in their places in the factory and at church. We begin a series of services to-morrow on which we invoke God's blessing. We cannot do much at Wesley Chapel towards raising the $2,000,000 for the Centennial fund, but we expect to do something towards gaining the 100,000 converts during the present year. Mrs. Juliana Hayes, president W. P. M. S., of our church, was with us last Sunday. At Wesley Chapel she organized an auxiliary society of 17 active and 3 honorary members and 1 life member. Her visit was a benediction.

Natchez, May 24, 1884.
T. L. NELLEN.

Obituaries.

OSBORN—JOHN W. OSBORN was born, February, 1805, in Jefferson county, Miss., and died at his residence, in Franklin, La., March 15, 1884, in his eightieth year. He came to Louisiana in 1812, and spent the residue of his life in the same State and parish. He was married to Miss Mary Ward in 1812, by whom there were born several children, most of whom crossed death's cold stream before him, and some remain on this side of the river still, walking in the way they were led by him whose departure they now mourn.

In 1840 he was deprived of the only child, a son, of his whom he so tenderly loved. He was married the second time, 1841, to Miss Cynthia Corbett. In this marriage the writer has often enjoyed the pleasure of witnessing the model husband and wife. There were several children by the last marriage, but the only one who is living, our departed father and brother, raised a highly respectable family, who will doubtless honor his name and cherish his memory.

Bro. Osborn joined the Methodist Church in 1839, and was a devoted and zealous member of our branch of it since the "separation." He was considered a pious man. During 1877 there was a considerable move made in the section in which he lived on the subject of sanctification. On one occasion, while conversing on that subject, he said to me: "I do not feel at liberty to make any stir about sanctification. It is the one doctrine of our church that I have most, and to this I am now inclined. I know I am here, but why I can not tell." Weeping and slapping his hands, he exclaimed: "I have had my armor on for years. My summons home at any hour will not surprise me."

Our dear father in Israel has laid aside the Christian's armor, breathed his life out sweetly in Jesus, and received the "Well done!" obtained the crown of rejoicing and waves a palm of victory "in the Christian's home in glory." In his death Franklin parish, La., has lost one of her best and truest citizens; the grief-stricken widow, faithful husband; the children, a kind father; the church of which he was so long an honored member, one of its brightest ornaments; and ministers of all denominations, and especially of his own church, a tried and devoted friend and brother. May the bereaved family and numerous friends rejoice that by his death they are richer than they were by his pure life!

J. M. M'KEE.

DAVIS—MRS. LURANA F. DAVIS was born in Jasper county, Ga., October 19, 1806, and died at the house of her brother, Judge Thomas A. Walker, in Jacksonville, Ala., March 23, 1884. She was married, in Shelby county, Ala., to Thomas J. Davis, November 21, 1822. Soon after her marriage she connected herself with the Methodist Church, and continued a faithful and earnest member of it through all the remainder of her long life. In 1840 she removed with her husband and family first to Claiborne parish, La., and subsequently to Natchez, Natchez and Natchez parishes. Mr. Thomas J. Davis was a devoted member of the same church, and for many years a church leader. Mr. and Mrs. Davis were among the pioneers of Methodism in the newly-settled portion of Louisiana to which they first moved, and the house of Bro. and Sister Davis was for years the headquarters of the self-sacrificing ministers who carried the gospel into the wilds of Claiborne parish and established Protestantism in the French town of Campt.

The weary missionaries of the gospel of peace always found a resting-place in the hospitable home of the Davises, and a beautiful table, and left with a God-speed on their errands of mercy. Counsel, money, homes—whatever was necessary for the good work was to be found at Bro. Davis'. The social life of this man, with cheerful hospitality and great hospitality, devoted much of her time and means in entertaining and encouraging the laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. Losing her husband and two children in 1849, she struggled on through trials and tribulations with the hope of the family supported by her energy and faith, perpetuating her love for the memory of her husband by continuing the good work they had labored in together.

Finally, full of years and full of faith, she was called to her reward, having been tenderly nursed in her last illness by her only remaining child, and daughter she had already endeavored to her in her new home. She was buried in Selma, Ala. The funeral service was performed by the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—Rev. T. F. Mangum. She lived a Christian and we loved her sorrow in hope that we will see her again "in a brighter, brighter world above."

err, too good to be unkind, we rest our faith on this, and are willing to wait an explanation of this, as well as many other acts of Divine wisdom of a like nature, till we stand before the throne, when all these things that are shrouded in mystery shall be explained in the light of eternal day. May the sanctifying grace of God be meted out to this bereft!

OLIPHANT—MRS. CAROLINE OLIPHANT, the only daughter of William and Mary Edwards, was born in Henry county, Tenn., March 30, 1829, and died at her residence, March 3, 1884, aged forty-four years, eleven months and twenty-four days. She was married to John D. Oliphant, May 14, 1849; joined the Methodist Church, summer, 1853, where she remained until the summer, 1873, when she joined the Baptist Church in Keosau, and had lived a consistent Christian.

She left behind one devoted son and two daughters to mourn her loss. She was a kind and affectionate mother. She had that dread disease—consumption, and was confined to her home for two years. She was suffering without complaint; but, alas! it was a sad hour among her dear children and friends when the jewel left the casket. It was a triumphant hour when the angelic host opened the gates of paradise to admit that spirit and home among the blessed, the unfolding wreath of immortality.

Thou art not dead, No! for with thee it was not death to die. Thy spirit hath burst its prison fetters and now soars away to those realms of joy. Even now thou roamest at will through the unsundered bowers of paradise, where the unfading flowers bloom, where stars are ever bright and skies are clear. No voice can ever call thee back again; no tears can bring thee back to earth. Thou wilt not be forgotten. No! not thy virtues, like the perfume which lingers around the flower after it has faded, will ever serve to bring thee to mind. No time can ever efface such a bright image from memory.

A. FULTON.

BURGESS—MRS. LORAINA JONES BURGESS was born in Athens, Lumpkin county, Ga., May 25, 1830. She was the child of a godly and pious family, and in her sixteenth year she was converted to Christ at Greenwood, La., March, 1849. She was married by the beloved pastor, Mr. J. M. Burgess, to Mr. Lovett A. Burgess, December 18, 1872.

She was amiable and lovely in all relations as a friend, a child, a sister and a wife. In her last afflictions, though a great sufferer, she was divinely sustained, and realized the fruition of the blessed promise—"My grave is sufficient for thee;" and when her pastor, Bro. Burnett, at Lumpkin, Ga., said to her, "Sister Burgess, you are almost home," she replied, "Not a doubt doth arise." Thus in a cloudless heaven the sun of her life went down in a peaceful slay.

She leaves a father, a mother, a sister, a husband and sweet little daughter, Annie, to mourn their great loss. In eighteen short months, my dear Bro. Jones and wife have been called to mourn the loss of three lovely children to whom they were looking for cheer and comfort in life's declining years. It is sad, and would be insupportable so but for God's sustaining grace, and by his grace a blessed and endless reunion among the saved and glorified. May Almighty Goodness comfort, sustain and bring them to glory!

J. D. WALKER.

"Like as it were a moth that fretteth the garment," so will the free alkali, to which many powerful soaps owe their strength destroy your clothing. Professor Silliman, of Yale College, says, "The Ivory Soap is of remarkable purity . . . as a laundry soap it has no superior."

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sent to any one who can not get it of their dealer. Write to the manufacturer.

PHOTOGRAPHS!

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURN'S

Photographic Parlors.

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal hotels and almost directly opposite the City Market.

You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever.

We make every kind of portrait known in the art, from the miniature for the pocket to the life size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon on oil.

Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged to the likeness faithfully preserved.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY JUNE 5, 1884.

MY SHEPHERD.

"He leadeth me!"
And so I need not seek my own wild way
Across the desert wild;
He knoweth where the soft, green pastures lie,
Where the still waters glide,
And how to reach the coolness of their rest
Beneath the calm hillside.

"He leadeth me!"
And though I be by rugged, weary ways
Where the thorns spring sharp and sore,
He knoweth where the soft, green pastures lie,
Where the still waters glide,
And how to reach the coolness of their rest
Beneath the calm hillside.

"He leadeth me!"
I shall not take one needless step through all,
In wind, or heat, or cold;
And all day long he sees the peaceful end
Through trials manifold.
The fair hillside, like some sweet surprise,
Waiteth the quiet fold.

—Word and Work.

The Goose Pond Sunday-School.

An address by Master George Foster at the anniversary of the New Orleans District Sunday-School Union.

DEAR FRIENDS: We have met to-day to celebrate the thirty-ninth anniversary of the New Orleans District Sunday-School Union, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

For nearly forty years you have been gathering in the pleasant spring-time, from your various homes and school-rooms, to celebrate this day of annual festival.

I say you, for though in the rapid roll of time's swift chariot many changes have taken place, yet the schools remain much the same as thirty and more years ago. Here at this central point is Carroll, the successor and representative of Poydras and Gravier streets, yea crowned with honorable recollections of the old goose pond where the chosen people of early Methodism congregated to instruct the children and hear the gospel of free grace preached, standing toward the rest of us as the leader and mother of us all. Clustering close around are schools of later date. Here are Felicite, Dryades Street, Louisiana Avenue, St. Charles Avenue, Parker Chapel and Werlein Hall, send forth their quota; Algiers and Gretna have crossed the flood and are present to greet you; Craps Street and Moreau have taken a goodly Sabbath day's journey to be in their place; Johnson School from the Interior, Soraparn from the front, and Carroll from our upper border, though distant, cheerfully respond to the call. All are here, each to do his duty, and act his part in this union celebration.

We greatly rejoice on the return of this annual festival day, when heart beats in unison with heart, and eye kindles to eye, and the faith of each is strengthened to good and noble efforts. This is a year of anniversaries—centennial anniversaries. On the fourteenth day of December next, in this city, will be opened the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition in memory of the day the first bale of cotton was shipped from this country to England, the beginning of an international trade which has since greatly influenced and controlled the commerce of the world.

In December next the gathering tribes of American Methodism will assemble in the city of Baltimore to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of organized American Methodism. A grand and glorious jubilee will it be. Already are the people being stirred and aroused throughout the entire breadth of this American continent. The history of this hundred years is marvelous; we contemplate it, and wonder, and adore, and in the language of the song of Moses, we exclaim in humble gratitude: "Who is like unto thee, O Lord? glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders!"

If we take the telescope of history and look along down the horizon of a hundred years, we shall discover that even then, and before her fully organized history began, the Methodist Church looked well to the moral care and culture of her children. The Bishop and the preacher were then the teachers of the children, and in the pastoral visits of those days the children of the family were not forgotten, and the preacher appreciated the love and esteem of the children as among his best and brightest laurels.

Bishop Asbury, bachelor though he was, never forgot the children, but delighted himself in instructing them in the truths and teachings of the gospel. There is now yet living, within the bounds of the Baltimore Conference, an active, working, Christian woman, who, when a child, was taught the commandments by Bishop Asbury. In 1779, five years before the Baltimore Conference, the question of teaching and training the children takes practical form, and it is made the duty of every preacher to see to it.

At the Conference of 1784 a forward step is taken in the cause, and six years after, in 1790, the term Sunday-schools is formulated, and for the first time appears in the official records of Methodism. This is the language their hearts send forth: "Let us," says the Conference minutes of 1790, "labor on the heart and soul of one man, to establish Sunday-schools in or near the place of public worship."

The Council, composed of the Bishop and presiding elders, are constituted a supervisory board, over the whole Sunday-school work, and that same

Council, as the most competent and responsible persons in the church, are instructed to prepare proper school books for teaching the children "learning and piety."

"The Methodist Episcopal Church," says Rev. Dr. DePuy, "was the first American church to recognize the value of Sunday-school instruction, and the first to establish such schools in any American community."

As early as 1827 the Sunday-school Union, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was organized and domiciled in New York City; the influence of which has been far and wide, not only to the supply of books required in the work, but through the use of funds distributed in the aid and support of needy schools, and it is not too much to say that the Methodist Church was not only the first to appreciate and organize Sunday-schools, but has always been foremost in supporting and maintaining Sunday-school instruction of the children in and out of the church.

Proud as we may well be of the work and labor of our early ancestors the history of Methodism in New Orleans is not unworthy of our consideration, especially in the Sunday-school department.

Very soon after the introduction of the American element into the population of New Orleans the Protestant movement began, and as early as 1805 Methodist missionaries were sent to this city, and temporary places of worship were occupied for several years by such men as William Whims, John Macafee, and that grand, godly man, Benjamin M. Drake. It was through his influence the first permanent Methodist Church of New Orleans was built, on Gravier street, close in the rear of the spot where our grand Cotton Exchange now stands, and in this church was organized the first Methodist Sunday-school of the city.

Robert C. Armstrong, a popular young merchant, and an active Christian worker, was appointed superintendent, and here they had a large, flourishing and successful school, with a corps of faithful, zealous teachers, of whom still remaining among us, we make worthy mention of William Sherry, Mrs. William Deacon, William Garrison and John C. Henry. Other schools and churches soon followed, and it is well to note, as a point of practical interest, that all our Methodist Churches in New Orleans have been the result and outgrowth of mission Sunday-schools.

Felicite Church is the result of a log-house Sunday-school and the flat-boat Sunday-school, of whose faithful co-workers but a very few remain.

The labors of that veteran Sunday-school superintendent, Capt. R. S. Robertson, aided and assisted by his faithful pastor, Rev. Dr. Watkins, founded the Sunday-school which was the initiative of Moreau Street Church.

Louisiana Avenue was the work of that most indefatigable worker who organized and carried on a Sunday-school in his own house for two long years, till he had built a church on his own grounds, into which to transfer the school; I mean the humble, but faithful, and by all revered "Richard Keen."

St. Charles stands proudly and grandly a monument to the large hearted and noble Christian liberality of its builder, Rev. R. W. Rayne; but the gathering impulse and inspiration which moved forward to the erection of this temple to the worship of Almighty God, go back to Cadiz street, and through Cadiz down to the little Sunday-school, organized in 1851, by that apostle of Sunday-schools, Rev. J. D. Parker, and last but not least in energy, push and Christian zeal, is more recently: first, the school, and then the church, Parker Chapel. And thus will history, teach us to the end of the chapter. What then may we gather from history on this occasion to cheer, and encourage, and stimulate us to new efforts, new deeds of devotion in the cause of Sunday-schools?

Let us gather up the points we have noted in our rapid ramble over the past and place them in order:

1. The Methodist Church was first to appreciate and utilize Sunday-school instruction, and it has ever been among the foremost to build up and extend their usefulness. Thank God for the influence of early Methodism. We are, my friends, in the regular apostolic succession, "Feed my lambs," is the Master's injunction.

2. Sunday-schools are not only the nurseries of the church, they are the forerunners of the church. Let us, therefore, renew our efforts, and dot this whole city over with Sunday-schools, they will constitute the strongest church extension society you can find.

3. We owe the position we occupy today, as a Christian people, to the toll and labors of those who have gone before us.

Let us cherish our noble heritage, renew our zeal, enlarge our hearts, extend our borders, and make this anniversary year the beginning of a new century, in which God's blessings shall rest upon a higher consecration and deeper devotion to his cause.

The Methodist Stewards—Different Kinds.

MR. EDITOR: Much is now being said and written on the stewardship of the Methodist Church both ways, pro and con, and this is as it should be, for whether we think it or not, it is a fact that a successful itinerant ministry is based and bottomed on the stewardship. A failure here dishonors or locates the itinerant ministry of our church, and thus robs her of men of talent and power by hurrying them within the narrow limits of a circum-scribed sphere. If men can not support their families while in the itinerant work of the Methodist Church they must go to the wall sooner or later, and alas! it comes with many of them sooner than either they or the church expect. It is a fact known and read of all observers that by duress of financial straitsness in the failure of the church to support the preacher ministering to them, thousands of those men of God have been compelled to locate in order to secure a living for themselves and families. If any one doubts this statement let him read up the history of Methodism in the United States and he will never doubt it again. But why is this? Is the Methodist Church, South, financially unable with nearly one million members—to give an adequate support to the itinerant ministry, who have sacrificed everything of an earthly character to preach the gospel to them? I can not believe it. I do not believe it. I believe the reason to be in an inefficient stewardship; in a stewardship that either can not or will not conscientiously do the important work assigned them. And I fear that it is not because they can not, but because they will not. But in order to set this matter in as clear a light as possible, let us look at the different classes of stewards who figure on the roll of official numbers, and (1) we have the partial steward.

I mean the steward who is governed by feeling instead of principle. Such a steward is very active in supporting a favorite preacher; but sadly negligent in looking after the wants of one for whom he has no particular admiration. If the preacher, sent to him by the Conference, should happen to strike his fancy, or is the one applied for, he will seek to have a liberal salary allowed him at the stewards' meeting, or the first Quarterly Conference, and besides will use all diligence to have the amount paid in full, and that promptly, i. e., at the appointed time agreed on by the stewards. In addition to which there will be poured into the preacher's home many acceptable, if not valuable, presents as well as commendable reminders of his appreciation, and tokens of good will on their part towards their favorite. But let a preacher chance to be sent to them that they do not know or do not want and immediately they begin to talk of hard times, short crops, restriction, the necessity of economy, and other kindred and familiar topics to a Methodist preacher; showing at once to him that he is not the man they prefer, and the man that they do not intend to support. He understands from said experience what such a prologue means, and disheartened to commence with begins the year with the feeling that he will not be to say the least of it, surfeited with attentions, and encouragements of a nominal character from his official board.

Now, it can be readily seen how a man, or a board of stewards of this kind, can starve a preacher out. Because he did not get the preacher he wanted—he gets snifled, and stubborn, and cross, and "vents his spleen" on the preacher by not doing anything, or very little to meet the necessary expenses of the preacher. He makes the innocent to suffer, and "muzzles God's oxen," and thereby lays a stumbling block and an impediment in the way of ministerial success. But, says the reader, is it possible that such men ever become stewards in the Methodist Church? I answer, take the following case as an illustration:

"Mr. A. was a leading steward, and had settled opinions in regard to the next preacher, asking for one whom he knew could not be disappointed without a flagrant violation of itinerant arrangements, and predicting the destruction of the society if his wishes were denied. They could not be granted of course, and a stranger was sent. Mr. A. was delegated by the society to make the collections, and pay all expenses as they occurred. But, hoping to bring his prediction to pass and punish the Bishops for their impudence in non-compliance with his independent predilection, he asked for no money, and paid none for three or four months. Finally, the pastor saw through the plot and determined to expose it; so he requested the church to excuse him from further service, basing his request on the ground of their incompetence to support a married man. This, of course, brought Mr. A. to give an account of his stewardship, and revealed the fact that he had asked no man for a dollar, and that he had not paid the preacher one cent himself. To settle the question of competence before voting on the subject an indignant church ordered a paper to be laid upon the table and requested every one to subscribe what he would give. Nearly the whole amount was put down in a few minutes, and, of course, the pastor was retained. But fortunately that steward never recovered from his disgrace, and had the mortification of seeing that one church multiply into five stronger ones, almost in sight of his unimposing location, to say nothing of others in the suburbs."

Here is the case, and I fear that duplicates of it could be multiplied in kind at least, all through the church. Simply because the Bishop and his cabinet saw fit not to comply with one man's request—the nominal man of the board of stewards—and because he had it in his power to do so, he took advantage of his official position, and made the innocent pastor and family to pass through the fire of financial straitsness and want. Being put into one of the most important positions of the church, he ought laboriously and prayerfully to have used it for the support of the minister and the best interest of the church; whereas instead of pursuing this mainly and Christian course, he took the opposite and prostituted his religious trust into a base measure for gratifying and pampering the wicked prejudices of a still more wicked heart. Thus he converted his delegated power—and how great the power is, many a preacher knows too well—into a means of inquisitorial torture, bringing about the inquisitorial dungeon, and not much better fare than the inquisitorial bread and water.

Of course, such a man is out of place in the stewardship. If he is unwilling to sympathize with and aid any preacher that may be sent to the charge in which he holds his membership, then he should step aside and let some one else fill his place. If he can not or will not overcome his prejudices, and is out of harmony with the Methodist plan of ministerial supply, it is better for him to vacate. For if he does not, as opportunity may arise, he will abuse his official power to the hurt and ill of the innocent—even of those who are looking to him for what they will never get—viz: the hire and well earned wages of ministerial labor. For such a man to be a steward in the Methodist Church is to be a steward in the church's shearer's knavery; and I hesitate not to say, that if it should become necessary, the Pharisaical traitor, should be turned out of an office which he is wickedly holding, for the base purpose of defeating the known and only objects of it.

What I want to say and emphasize with as much point as possible is, that as long as a steward in the Methodist Church remains such, it is no part of his business to take any steps that will gratify a morbid state of his likes and dislikes. He has no right to punish his minister and family—for his one year at least—because he doesn't happen to be the preacher that he wants, or the one that he made special application for. If he does not intend to make the same, hard efforts for his support, that he would for some one else to whom he was fondly attached, then let him quietly withdraw from the stewardship, and let some one else do the work. Or if he remains in the stewardship, he certainly has no right to take judgment into his own hand, and punish the innocent sufferers without judge or jury, by making no efforts for their support. This was a wicked thing, and deserving of most heavy censure. But on the contrary, favorable or no favorite, let him do all he can for the support of those who are sent to minister to him and his sacred things, remembering that they are the Lord's servants, and that the laborer is worthy of his hire.

RECTUS.

PREACH CHRIST.—The business of the Christian minister is to preach Christ. He will most successfully counteract the propagandists of infidelity by the faithful proclamation of the truth "as the truth is in Jesus." Let him abstain from ridiculous denunciations of the spirit of free inquiry. On the other hand, he should resist temptation to pandor to the prevalent latitudinarianism under the pretense of adapting his teachings to the spirit of the age. The preaching of the cross will never cease to be foolishness. One rock, however, he should be careful to hold. He should beware of presenting Scriptural truth in an unsensational manner. Minds already wavering between faith and unbelief may be repelled by the crude and unguarded manner in which evangelists deliver their message. We may apply to each of the great truths of the gospel the advice with which an eminent writer of our own church closes his exposition of the doctrine of the incarnation: "While the formula that we confess defines it well for the theologian, it is false, false, and false for the layman. Let all Christians alike be to be found in the words which the Holy Ghost gave them." We would remind those whose zeal for the Lord is apt to take the form of heresy-hunting, of the Master's own warning: "Nay, lest ye root up also the wheat with them." To any man who may be struggling with temptations to unbelief, we would say, "Go with your burden of doubt where you went with your burden of guilt. Take it to the foot of the cross. Christ may not see fit to solve your difficulties; he may not feel fit to perplex you with the key to the perplexing you; but he will be faithful to his promise: 'Ye shall find rest for your souls.'"—London Methodist.

Religious Intelligence.

The missions in South Africa, of the Free and United Presbyterian Churches of Scotland have voted unanimously to form a union as one ecclesiastical body, if the home churches consent.

A petition signed by 231 missionaries in China was presented to the British Commons recently, praying for the discontinuance of the opium trade.

The First Congregational Church of Hartford, Conn., is making preparations to celebrate its 250th anniversary on October 11th and 12th.

The State of New York, according to the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has 24,834 retail liquor dealers and 46,572 tobaccoconists.

Some of the Methodist mission schools of high grade for boys and girls in the city of India are full to overflowing, and are obliged to stop advertising and enlarge their accommodations.

The income of the London Missionary Society's Indian dominions amounts to some $7,000,000. That of the Bible and Tract Society over $2,000,000.

In Berlin for 700,000 Protestants there are 20 churches and 27 ministers, or a church to every 40,000 inhabitants.

Our Young People.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

LITTLE BABY HOOD.

BY MRS. L. CHARY MADLEN.

A fair page in my album,
Has two names understood,
And then just underneath,
Is "Little Baby Hood."

Wee winsome, nameless baby!
May your mother slow the way,
With watchful eye and prayerful heart,
Lest your little feet should stray.

I asked my little woman
To write the baby's name,
She laughed and said it had none,
But that would do the same.

You know my little woman,
Was the little mother good,
Who wrote her own and husband's name,
Then "Little Baby Hood."

I knew this little woman,
When a little babe, herself,
And now she is a little wife,
And has this little elf.

And when she was a little girl,
I knew her very well,
And often came to see me,
And oftentimes she would tell

Me all about her troubles
And all about her joys,
When she grew a trifle older
She talked about the boys.

Yes, talked about the boys,
And thought it best of fun;
And then she took to loving them,
But now she loves but one.

And that one is her husband,
She says "he's very good,"
And tells me of his goodness,
And "Little Baby Hood."

Buss Uncle.

When I was about eight years old my home was in Cincinnati, the largest city of the West. One day my mother went away from home, leaving myself and a brother two years older to keep house. We were both suffering from hoarseness, and could not speak above a whisper. A while after we had eaten our cold dinner, we heard some one knock. We both ran to the door and there stood a strange man. He was dressed differently from any one we had ever seen before. His coat was long and cut away towards the back. His hat was white and very large. His hair and beard was long and white, and he looked so solemn and venerable we were awed. He shook hands with us and told us he was our mother's uncle. We asked him in and gave him a chair. He then asked us where our mother and father were. My brother spoke as loud as he could, and told him they were both away from home. But he could not hear him. So he said: "Do not be afraid of me; I am hard of hearing. Speak loud and I will hear you then." Brother tried again and failed. Then he turned to me, and said: "Come here, alsey, tell me your name and where your mother is gone? I will not hurt you." At the same time he pulled me toward him. I tried to answer him but could only whisper. Then he seemed to feel hurt and asked us a number of questions. He told us we should try to "entertain strangers," for that was enjoined in the holy book, and he was sorry to find his niece had not taught her children that lesson. He said he was a Methodist preacher, and had come from New England to see my mother's family.

We were in a state of excitement not to be envied, and the minutes lengthened to hours seemingly. I said to my brother, "O what will we do?" He was brave, and whispered back, "Just hold out, mother will come soon."

We dared not laugh. His solemn niten and searching eyes prevented that. All I thought of was mother's mother. O mother mother never come. At last, after what seemed an age to us, she came, and they had a joyful meeting. After the greeting he said, "Your children were afraid of me, and I could not make them speak loud enough to make me hear." Mother explained and then he said: "O was that so? I am sorry I scolded them." Reaching his hands towards me, he said, "Come here and buss uncle." Then I was still more unoppressed. What did "buss" mean? I had never heard the word before. But he gently drew me towards him and kissed me, and put his hand on my head and said in a solemn manner, "May the Lord bless this child as long as she lives."

My brother had left the room at the first opportunity, and when I went out he said, "Sister, did you buss uncle?" I said, "No, he hugged me."

When supper was announced they all stood up around the table while he, with uplifted hands asked the blessing, and sometimes he sang a verse or two. My mother said he was a great preacher. He staid several days and preached often. His name was Joseph Mitchell, and he, with John Taylor, Lorenzo Dow, and John Murray Ballard, were all converted at the same time and place under the preaching of Rev. John Wesley. The first three named became preachers, and afterwards John Taylor and Lorenzo Dow left the Conference and preached independently; but they did a vast amount of soul-winning for Jesus. J. M. Ballard was the son of a Methodist preacher, (one of the first in America) and my grandfather. He was deeply pious and always prayed that "God would bless his children and his children's children unto the tenth generation." One of his grandchildren (a preacher) is now at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church sitting at Philadelphia. And one has been spared to write this little sketch of one of the earliest Methodist preachers, and she will never forget the time he laid his hand on her head and asked "God to bless this child as long as she lived." God has blessed me all my life. He blessed me with afflictions and mercies, and I rejoice that I live to see the "Glorious things spoken of our Zion" in this great Centenary year.

MRS. L. CHARY MADLEN.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I have no father, brother or sister; but I have a mother whom I love very much, because she tries to teach me the way to heaven. I try to be a little Christian. I joined the church nearly two years ago. We live in the country and only have preaching every two weeks. Our preacher's name is Rev. J. H. Smith. He is a good man, a good preacher, and we all think a great deal of him. I will answer some of the little folks questions. "Lady," I found in the Bible four times. 11 John 1, 1, 5; Isaiah xlvii, 5, 7. Moses burnt the calf Aaron made; ground it to powder, sprinkled it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. It is found in Exodus xxxii, 20. Joseph and Nicodemus buried Jesus in Joseph's new tomb. It is found in St. John xix, 38-42. Ismael was Abram's first son. It is found in Gen. xvi, 15. Now I will ask a few questions: Where is "conflict" first mentioned in the Bible, and who was put in it? What is the first commandment with a promise? Whose rod was it that brought forth buds, bloomed blossoms and yielded almonds in one night? Who interpreted Balaazar's dream? Your friend,

MATTIE S. HUNSON.

LAFAYETTE, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me another short space in this delightful column. I wrote you last September, and as my letter escaped that frightful and much dreaded waste-basket, it encourages me to make another attempt. We have such a nice large Sunday-school at Forest Grove. I am in the Intermediate Quarterly, and like it ever so much better than I did last year. There are ten in our class, and we generally know our lesson well. You know I would not be bored and interesting if we did not. We have had a great deal of rain this month. It is cloudy and dreary-looking nearly all the time. The shrubs and trees are getting their bare branches covered in pretty robes of "living green," and the lovely flowers are showing their sweet faces once again, and I think it would be delightful if the sun would only shine a little more to enliven things up somewhat. It is very cool to-day, I don't believe I have heard a bird chirp. Maybe they are afraid old winter has come back, and they are hiding away. I will close by asking a question: What was the name of Adam and Eve's third son mentioned in the Bible? I remain with much love to you, kind editor, and all the little friends.

N. LELLA P. SPURILL.

OF OMAHA, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: As I have seen so many little letters from little girls and boys, I thought I would write to you. I am a little girl seven years old. I have four little sisters. I am going to school. I study the second geography, spelling book, reading and arithmetic. Mrs. Payne is my teacher. I love her very much. My father is the principal of the school. I am going to give a dollar to the church at Oxford for a Centenary gift, and of my own money. Now I want to answer Mary Evans' question: It is Jonah's gourd, and it is found in Jonah iv, 10. Now I want to ask my little friends a question: Who was the first king of Israel? Why was he made king? How did he die? Your little friend,

JENNIE H. NEWELL.

GENADA, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: Here I am again! I was the proudest little boy when I saw my letter in print. I think the children should be very grateful for so much space in your valuable paper. You must be very kind to give so much time and attention to reading so many little letters, especially if the children write themselves. As so many of the children are writing about what they do for the missionary cause, I must tell you what my brother Tommie did. Year before last he collected and carried to conference at Crystal Springs, ten dollars, (eighty cents of which he gave himself.) Last year he sent thirteen dollars by our pastor, Rev. H. P. Lewis.

A. HANFELD SMITH.

PEARL RIVER, MISSISSIPPI.

MR. EDITOR: I live near Catahoula Lake, which is from three to seven miles wide, and twenty-five miles long. The scenery is grand in the spring and summer to see the stock grazing; and in the fall and winter we have the wild duck, goose, peewee and sea-gull. I must tell you about our preacher, Mr. Bahrr, who is a favorite with all who know him. I wish you could meet with him. We have three months' school. Our teacher is Mr. Rhinehart, who is beloved by all of his pupils. I wish you could come out and spend a week while fruit is ripe. Respectfully,

ORLEAN COLLINS.

RHINEHART, LOUISIANA.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters from this little place, Polkville, I will write one. My papa is a preacher. He is at home this year. His health is very bad, and has a super-numerary relation, but thinks he will be able to take a circuit next year. Dear editor, we love the Advocate, and love to read the little girls and boys letters. I would say more, but I fear that basket. I will answer Dora Wimberly's question. It is found in Deut. xxix, 18; Prov. v, 4; Jer. ix, 15, and also in other places.

Your little friend,

OZZIE H. L. EVANS.

POLKVILLE, MISSISSIPPI.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY JUNE 5, 1884.

The Bible used on the occasion of the consecration of the new Methodist Bishops at Philadelphia is the same used by John Wesley when he consecrated Dr. Coke.

Dr. Talmage preached last Sunday on the unpardonable sin, taking the ground that the sin was only possible in apostolic times, but that "it is a very terrible thing ever to say anything against the Holy Ghost." Exegesis is not the fort of the great Brooklyn preacher.

The abolition of a state religion in England seems to be inevitable, and the sooner the better. The Archbishop of York, who is in a position to know, says that "no one can now hesitate to say that disestablishment is at least a possibility, and may very soon become actual."

Bishop Keener left on Friday evening last for Jackson, La., to attend the commencement exercises of Centenary College. We look for a cheering report from there, and greatly regret that District Conference duties deny us the pleasure of that annual festival of mind.

The following we reproduce from an exchange without note or comment, only to ask, wherein missionary zeal abroad should command more self-denial than missionary zeal at home?

No member of any Baptist church in Mexico either smokes or chews tobacco, not because the church forbids it, but because their missionary zeal will not allow them to use money for mere indulgence while the diffusion of the Gospel needs it so much!

The papers teem with grateful and eulogistic references to the recent great discovery in medical science of M. Pasteur. He has discovered a method of modifying this hydrophobia poison so as to produce a disease which bears the same relation to hydrophobia that the vaccine pustule bears to small-pox. The virus of a rabid dog is weakened by successive transmissions through several animals until it becomes harmless. It has been fully tested, and his discovery is without doubt one of the wonders and blessings of this century.

John Joseph Lynch, "Archbishop of Toronto," has written a letter from "St. Michael's Palace," to a Mr. Higgins, urging him "to sustain the Mowatt government." He says: "If Catholics do not wish to vote for Mr. Drury, then they need not vote at all. I would be ashamed of Catholics changing their politics for mean purposes; and some so-called Catholics are doing so, and playing into the hands of the Orangemen. Alas! there will always be traitors." Just so. And yet there are friends hereabouts verdant enough to deny that the Romish clergy ever interferes in party politics. The above is only one of many straws indicating the course of the gale.

Our correspondents and friends will be kind enough to give the following patient attention. We have never rejected an obituary notice. Some are necessarily delayed because only a certain space can be given to that department. The great length of a few, delay all. Brethren get impatient, feel aggrieved, and writs to know if the obituary has gone to this waste basket, accompanied with all sorts of pious expletives and ominous intimations. No obituary has ever gone to the waste basket. Other communications are often delayed because of their excessive length or the exigencies of the week. For instance, the admirable fraternal address of Dr. Carter last week, occupied one entire page of the Advocate. Our readers expected it and were well compensated in its perusal. But other articles, including the children's department, had to be delayed. Again we are asked to remail manuscripts if not accepted, and stamps are enclosed for return postage. That requires time which cannot always be commanded. It would be better therefore for correspondents to make a copy of their communications. And finally, if our brethren, from whom we are always glad to hear, would regard the "soul of wit," articles would more readily appear, and give greater variety, sparkle and freshness to our columns.

A Missionary Secretariat.

Our esteemed confrere of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate in a recent issue chose a statement of Dr. Kelly's in the Advocate of Missions as a text, from which to express some clear convictions as to this office work of the Board of Missions. He argues in favor of a missionary secretariat—an office from which bulletins of thrilling intelligence shall be issued to the Church, and prompt, constant communication be maintained with the various missions. This he insists would be wiser policy than the old and present ones of the Secretary and Treasurer visiting the annual conferences—becoming indeed, and only as he phrases it, "general traveling agents." We have great regard for our brother's judgment, and a profound admiration for his missionary zeal. And with some suggestions in his article we are in hearty sympathy, but with others we cannot quite agree.

Of course there can be no difference of opinion as to the necessity of adopting the best, and most approved, business methods. If there is deficiency or dereliction in this regard anywhere, reform is speedily and imperatively demanded. The missionary interests of our Church have grown to such dimensions, that their administration must command great care, tact and talent. Promptness, accuracy, discreetness, discrimination, comprehensiveness and the mastery of details are all essential and in daily demand. The business, in all its departments, should be as thoroughly systematized as the largest and most successful commercial house, insurance office, or banking institution. All official correspondence and every transaction of the office should be a matter of record and open for the inspection of every member of the Board. Nothing should be a question of memory. It is unreliable either as letter-book or letter-file. Improvement upon present office methods is desirable, no doubt the Secretary and Treasurer would gladly accept suggestions.

But as to these officials not attending the conferences and visiting the churches, we do not agree. It is the policy of all denominations and has worked admirably with us. Their presence in the conferences, as the special representatives of this great department of our work, kindles enthusiasm among the preachers and strengthens the connectional bond. Other preachers may have greater ability in the pulpit and mightier magnetism on the platform, but their work is of a character and influence not to be accomplished or approached by any non-official. One of the most vigorous and eloquent speeches in the recent General Conference of Philadelphia was in favor of electing three secretaries. They were wanted not to do desk-work merely, but to kindle enthusiasm in the entire church with pen and tongue. A few of the larger conferences might forego the occasional visits of these officials without declension of zeal or connectional loyalty, but the large majority almost require them. All denominations endeavor to select for the missionary secretariats men of true zeal and marked ability as platform speakers. It was the phenomenal eloquence of Dr. Durbin that fired the missionary heart of American Episcopal Methodism, and made that magnificent society of our brethren in the North a possibility. These gifts are needed outside the office and before the people. If not, such talent should not be taken from the pulpit. If office-work alone is needed and no "traveling agents" wanted, any ordinary book-keeper can do the work.

But finally, though it ought to have been firstly, this is a question of administration that should have been candidly and thoroughly considered in the recent meeting of the Board. "A Paddy's hint" from anyone, on so important a matter, should not suffice for an exhaustive discussion and a clearly defined conclusion. But as it was neglected or evaded for any cause or motive, its agitation should be adjourned to the next meeting. We can see how it may lead to embarrassments and complications. Office-work is essential, but field-work is important.

We are indebted to the author, Rev. W. P. Lovejoy, of the North Georgia Conference, for a copy of "A Short History of Methodism in the United States, with Special Reference to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." It contains sixty pages, and is sold, in paper covers, for twenty-five cents. The style is terse and strong, and the pamphlet a good contribution to our centennial literature. Some errors here and there should be corrected in a future edition.

The Northern Methodist General Conference.

The closing days of the conference as usual, were most fruitful of important legislation. When delegates are restless and anxious to leave for home, then the most important reports are acted upon with little consideration and with "indecent haste." And this remark applies with full force and effect to our own great legislative body.

After considerable discussion the question of lay representation in this Annual Conference was referred to a commission to report at the next General Conference. A very harmless temporary disposition of a great question.

Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Committee on the State of the Church, presented a report on marriage and divorce, recommending that no divorce be granted except for adultery, and any one divorced for such reason, if he or she be the guilty party, cannot be married again by any minister of the Church. It further provided that a commission be appointed to confer with the Governors of all the States to endeavor to secure the enactment of uniform laws on the subject. So menacing has become that question especially in New England, that some such action was recommended by the Bishops. Uniform legislation in the several States will do much to arrest the terrible evil. The committee reported, declaring it the policy of the Church that no member should be excluded from any congregation or school on account of race, color, or previous condition.

The conference also adopted that part of the report providing for a committee of correspondence in the interest of prison reforms. Strong resolutions were passed in the interest of Sabbath observance, and a special resolution as follows:

Resolved, That this General Conference respectfully urge upon the managers of the World's Exposition, to be held in New Orleans, beginning next November, to close the gates of entrance on Sabbath, during the continuance of the Exposition.

Representing the voice of a million and a half members, and a Methodist population of nearly six million, citizens of the United States, we hope this request will have respectful consideration.

The Committee on Book Concern made a report showing remarkable financial success in the two houses at New York and Cincinnati. The total assets are $2,650,946.23. Total capital, deducting all liabilities, $1,017,449.80. Total profits for the quadrennium $382,115.86. In addition the two houses have paid a dividend to the annual conferences amounting to $45,000.

Report of the Committee on delegates expenses shows the General Conference to be quite a costly gathering. The expenses amounted to $29,046.91. Amount collected from the conferences $24,603.86. The deficiency of $4,438.05 was paid by the book agents. Other doings of the Conference we cannot now record for lack of space. The adjournment took place on the evening of the 29th ult., with a pathetic address by Bishop Simpson and a fervent prayer by Bishop Wiley.

A Missionary Problem.

Only second in importance to a clear, scriptural missionary spirit in the church, is the question of a wise administration of mission affairs both home and abroad. Every agency that secures an awakened conscience and liberality on the subject in the church, is to be encouraged and fostered. But with us there must be careful legislation, lest a rivalry and independence of organizations should lead to hostility and serious hurt. We have given heart and hand and voice to the woman's movement. It marks an epoch in the history of Christianity. But we do not hesitate to state that its tendency in some churches to independence and rivalry, has excited serious apprehension. For this reason we most heartily approve the recent action of the Northern Methodist General Conference in revising the constitution of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Article VIII on its relations to the missionary authorities of the church, we transfer to our columns:

1. This Society shall work in harmony with and under the supervision of the authorities of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The appointment, recall and remuneration of Missionaries, and the designation of their fields of labor, shall be subject to the approval of the Board of Managers of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church; annual appropriations to Mission fields shall be submitted for revision and approval by the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

2. All missionaries sent out by this Society shall labor under the direction of the particular conferences or Missions of the Church in which they may be severally employed. They shall be annually appointed by the President of the Conference or Mission, and shall be subject to the same rules of removal that govern other Missionaries.

All the work of the Woman's Society in foreign lands, shall be under the direction of the Conferences or Missions and their Committees, in exactly the same manner as the work of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Superintendent or Presiding Elder having the same relation to the work, and to the person in charge, that he would have were it in charge of any other member of the Conference or Mission.

3. The funds of the Society shall not be raised by collections or subscriptions taken during any of our Church services, nor in any promiscuous public meeting, nor in any Sunday-schools; but shall be raised by such methods as the constitution of the Society shall provide, none of which shall interfere with the contributions of our people and Sunday-schools for the treasury of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the amount so collected shall be reported by the preacher in charge to the Annual Conference, and be entered in a column among the benevolent collections in the Annual and General Minutes.

The Cotton Centennial.

We are indebted to Hon. Carlton Hunt, of Louisiana, for a pamphlet copy of his speech delivered in the House of Representatives May 8, 1881, in support of the bill granting a loan of $1,000,000 to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition at New Orleans. He took occasion in the progress of the discussion to recall some interesting history in relation to the growth, manufacture and commerce of cotton. The following extract cannot fail to command readers:

Before the Christian era, India had begun to supply cottons to Persia, parts of Arabia, and all the eastern portions of Africa. The Phoenicians traded in these fabrics for centuries, and Egypt was acquainted with them.

After the conquest of Constantinople the Turks introduced the culture of cotton into Macedonia, and in the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth centuries cotton manufactures began to flourish in Spain, where the chief market was Barcelona. During the same period of time this manufacture was spread all over the southern shores of the Mediterranean.

Travelers to Africa found in the interior that cotton is indigenous there and is woven into garments. Manikind was sunk lowest in ignorance and in all its deplorable consequences at the eleventh century, about the time of William the Conqueror, but from that era the light of knowledge began to reappear. A. D. 1110, on the revival of learning at Cambridge, paper made of cotton was commonly used in writing. In 1498, after the voyage of Vasco de Gama to the West Indies and around the Cape of Good Hope, the Portuguese made large importations of muslins and other cotton goods into Europe. But the earliest notice of cotton as an English article of trade is met with about the end of the fifteenth century, and it appears that cotton was naturally included in the commerce of the Mediterranean Sea.

Cotton-seed, was planted as an experiment in Virginia in 1621. "Cotton-wool" is named in the earliest books and pamphlets of Virginia. At first the culture grew northward rather than southward. A. D. 1734 cotton was first planted in Georgia and the Carolinas, and in 1742 in Louisiana. In 1774 several bags were exported from Charleston, and in the year 1770 three bales were shipped from New York to Liverpool. At the period of the Declaration of Independence traces of cotton were to be found in Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

In 1791 the cotton crop of the United States was only 2,000,000 pounds and as late as 1795 the few American factories then in existence still imported foreign cotton, the imports being 1,000,000 pounds. Cotton was now fast becoming one of the richest staples of the Southern States. It appears, however, that it was not until after the Revolution that the culture of cotton was conducted with a view to export. As late as 1781 an American ship which exported eight bags of cotton into Liverpool was seized on the ground that so much cotton could not be produced in the United States, and I find it stated as a matter of history that the first regular exportation of cotton from Charleston in 1785, when one bag arrived at Liverpool, per Diana, to John and Isaac Teasdale & Co. In the same year twelve bags from Philadelphia and one from New York were received at that port. These events occurred, it may be said, one hundred years before the date now proposed for the national and international Cotton Exposition at New Orleans.

The green or short staple kind was that principally cultivated before the revolution. The black seed, or Sea Island cotton, was introduced into Georgia from the Bahamas about 1780, and the same year Mr. Madison predicted that the United States would become a great cotton-producing country.

For the five years following 1785 the receipts in Liverpool of American cotton amounted respectively to 6,109,389,842, and 81 bags, estimated at 150 pounds each, or 1,440 bags, weighing in the aggregate 816,150 pounds.

Cartwright in 1774; of the mule "jenny" by Compton in 1775; the improvements by Arkwright and others in carding, drawing and roving, were finally crowned by the adaptation in 1783 of the steam engine, the unrivalled contrivance of Watt, to the spinning of cotton in Manchester. In 1785, Bell invented cylinder printing, and the use of acid in bleaching was introduced at Glasgow in 1786. The year 1793 was made ever memorable in the cotton trade by the invention of the saw-gin by Eli Whitney, a citizen of the State of Massachusetts.

Eloquent Words of an Octogenarian.

The venerable Dr. Theodorick Pryor, who has far past his four-score years, this moderator of the last Southern Presbyterian General Assembly, preached according to custom the opening sermon at the present Assembly session in Vicksburg. It was at once appropriate and eloquent, and delivered with the fervor and vigor of young manhood. Standing, of necessity, quite on the verge of the grave, with a long career of toil behind him, his words have a thrilling significance and power. He pleaded for consecrated preachers—and the enthronement of pure, spiritual evangelical preaching as the need of our times. The following closing sentences have the quiver of a phenomenal eloquence, and will make every preacher feel like girding himself afresh for his high calling and only work:

Paul's love of preaching was not just a feeling; it was the great controlling principle of his life. He speaks not of himself as Paul the teacher, or Paul the ruler, but as Paul the apostle sent to preach.

Not only in Paul's day, but in the days of the Reformation, it was preaching that shook the power of Rome to its foundations. In England, in the eighteenth century, when Erastianism and formalism seemed to rule, it was the preaching of Whitfield and Wesley that aroused the nation. So in this country it was the preaching of Edwards and of Tennent that brought forth the spirit of revival. So in this land there is need of a noble army of preachers.

Principal Cairns, in a recent address, told of the promise of a brighter day at hand for Scotland; and it was because of the growing disposition there to concentrate effort on preaching.

Dr. Plummer's last letter to me, contained these words:

Oh, let me pray for Zion, let us pray for Zion, let us preach for Zion, let us preach.

Brethren, my hearts desire is, that this spirit may prevail in our Church. Brethren, it does not matter much where we work in this world. As Henry Martin says, The road to heaven from India is just as short as from England. When these gray hairs of mine (as soon as they will) shall lie in the grave, the only inscription I ask is, Theodorick Pryor, a sinner saved by grace, an humble, earnest preacher of the Gospel.

We are indebted to the Rev. Dr. L. S. Burkhead, of the North Carolina Conference, for an excellent little volume of his just from the press, entitled, "The Mode of Baptism—A Catechism for Children, Larks and Small." It contains 140 pages and can be had of the author at New Berne, N. C., for 35 cents. We commend the Catechism as a vigorous, satisfactory and satisfying discussion of a question which so vexes the souls of our Baptist brethren. The argument is concluded as follows:

1. We have labored to prove that word baptize, as used in the New Testament, is a generic word, and cannot be limited to the meaning of "immerse only."

2. That the chain of "immersional succession" is not a chain at all, but merely a few casually formed links.

3. That no single case of baptism recorded in the New Testament, can be demonstrated beyond reasonable doubt, a case of immersion.

4. That the "immersion theory" cannot defend itself above ground, and when it enters the tomb, or goes under water, it stays under and can never have a resurrection.

5. That the "immersion theory" is not a doctrine of the Bible, but a mere opinion of men which cannot be established by testimony and, hence, cannot justify its advocates in attempting to unchurch all other Christians.

6. No such an assumption should be permitted to separate the friends of Jesus Christ at the Lord's Supper, or in the great work of bringing the world to Christ.

In referring to the bill which passed both houses of Congress making a loan of $1,000,000 to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition at New Orleans; the New York Times utters some significant words, which we most heartily commend to our legislators at Baton Rouge. It says:

What a pity it is that this good people of Louisiana cannot, in return for this favor granted by the taxpayers of the whole country, stamp out that pestiferous nuisance, the Louisiana State Lottery Company, before the opening of the great fair! Every other State in the Union has declared the lottery business unlawful by statute or Constitution, but the authorities of these States are forced to wage continual war against the agents of the Louisiana Company, who also insolently defy the authority of the National Government. The debasing and ruinous effects of this great nuisance that has its home in New Orleans and will undoubtedly plunder thousands of those who visit this exhibition, are felt from one end of the country to the other. The people of the nation could well afford to make the loan a gift if in return the State would outlaw and suppress this pest, which it supports now by special legislation.

All Seek Their Own.

How strangely varied are the views of life and especially of successful life! A man's ambitions, passions or appetites—sometimes his humors and state of health—are the glasses through which he looks upon the world and sees it in either the colors of the rose or as blue as indigo or as contorted as the lava beds of Iceland.

Yet there is a certain uniformity of coloring and twisting out of shape. Men almost universally when setting take the measure of successful life by the acquisitions, and not the giving out of light or advantage to others. Men do not say, "How many men have received positive benefit from me and at my expense!" but they generally grudge that they have been losers on all such occasions. If the world has gained without fraud from him it is counted lucky to his misfortune; and if by fraud he regards the world as revelling in his gotten good, while he is a helpless and unaided victim of trickery and misfortune.

It is also remarkable how prone men are to think that the world is in a better condition to be benefited provided themselves are in good condition to share largely in the benefit. Few are the men whose heads do not grow light enough for them to believe that the world has become wiser if it has discovered that they are among its wisest or best inhabitants, hence they are seeking their own—eager to appropriate everything within reach, no matter how much to the discomfort of all else.

This is an age of aspirations and aspirants. There is not much of the spirit of the martyr however. If we judge by the disposition to gaze either power, or position or wealth, there is far less than appears to be. There is much the spirit of adventure. Men will risk their lives in many things. Courage, determination, readiness to suffer to the death can be found everywhere. But there are very few who pray.

"Keep one little and unknown loved and prized by these alone."

That is the very thing most do not want. Thousands would be found ready to die on a moment's warning if they could be assured of immortal fame; but if the world's contumely be threatened all are as cowardly as hares.

Among our preachers he is considered the lucky one who gets a fine station, good parsonage and ample salary. Not 'if the preacher's mission be true. Where you can get the most good, not get most. I felt myself sorely rebuked not long since by this sentence in a letter answering one of inquiry by me as to what I could do in the country where my correspondent lived: "If you are hunting a country which is needing good done you can hardly find a better place to go to; but if you are hunting a place that can do you good I think you are off the track." The preacher was starved out, but institutions of evil flourish. Was not this sort of a place Fletcher wanted? And did he not find it? And did he not make it better? And would it not be in order for some of us this the Centennial year to emulate the example of this latter day St. John, and seek the places that want men who are willing to spend and be spent in the cause of man's elevation from degradation and redemption from sin? How many are the places that are the openings for doing good and suffering hardships, but very poor in pounding their preacher?

T. A. S. A.

The time of holding the Brookhaven District Conference has been changed to June 26. See notice on eighth page.

A note from Rev. J. S. Oakley, pastor of our church at Starkville, Miss., brings intelligence of a fine revival in his charge. Bros. Boon and Kilgore are assisting in the good work.

We are glad to learn from Bro. J. D. Parker that the last dollar of indebtedness on "Parker's Chapel" has been paid. That is a beautiful little temple, and the work there is growing steadily.

The Rev. J. J. Ransom, our missionary to Brazil, is in the United States. We know not the purpose of his coming. He was at home two years ago. He speaks cheerfully of our Brazilian work.

The trustees of Palme Institute will meet in Augusta, Ga., on June 27, and not on the eleventh instant as heretofore published. For various reasons Dr. Evans thought it best to postpone to the twenty-seventh. All members are urged to attend.

The catalogue of Centenary College, printed in the ADVOCATE office, is a model of neatness and good taste. It shows a total attendance of ninety-four students, with a fine senior class of nine. The next session opens September 1, 1884.

Rev. Dr. Riddle, pastor of Centenary Church, San Francisco, announces that he is comfortably housed in a new, commodious and delightful parsonage. Just why all our churches do not provide homes for their pastors is to us an anomalous piece of ecclesiastical financiering.

The new Methodist Bishops are distributed as follows: Bishop Nide, Topeka; Bishop Wahlen, Chattanooga; Bishop Mallalen, either New Orleans or Ansin, as he may select; Bishop Fowler, San Francisco, and Bishop Warren changes his residence from Atlanta to Denver.

A marked copy of the Opelousas Courier has been received, giving a graphic and interesting account of the editor's visit to the Jersey farm of Rev. T. J. Hough, situated within a few miles of Opelousas. We are glad to learn that our brother is regaining his health and that he is so delightfully circumstanced. His home must be, indeed, "a thing of beauty."

Bro. Seriggs sends another bulletin from Columbus, Miss. "The revival fire still burns in Columbus. There were two conversions last Sabbath evening in my office; both grown men; one forty years old. There were six accessions to the Methodist Church last Sunday, and more to follow. We will go to fifty before the harvest is over. At our girls class meeting last Sabbath there were thirty in attendance."

The last issue of the Southwestern Christian Advocate announces the retirement of Rev. L. P. Cushman as editor. He is succeeded by Rev. Marshall W. Taylor, a colored man from Kentucky. Bro. Cushman has been active, zealous and vigorous in his work, positive in his convictions and courteous in discussion. On some questions we have widely differed, but our journalistic relations have been altogether pleasant.

The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly, at Vicksburg, determined to adhere to the position taken by the last Assembly in regard to the mode of correspondence with other denominations, and sent a letter of fraternal salutation to the Northern Assembly at Saratoga. Letter-writing is rather formal, and white paper is not the best conductor. After all that is said about the "gush" of fraternal addresses they do no inconvertible good. Their results can not be tabulated in any national or ecclesiastical census, but they are none the less real and valuable.

Bishop W. R. Nicolson, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, has not forgot his Methodist training. He was once a Methodist preacher, and stationed at our leading church in New Orleans. We were not surprised to read the following in an exchange: "At a recent celebration of the holy communion in the Reformed Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, on April 13, Bishop W. R. Nicolson, the rector, invited a minister of the Presbyterian Church and a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church to participate in the administration."

Mr. Daniel Willis, one of the veteran, pioneer Methodists of the Southwest, died, at his home in Clinch County, on the twenty-third ultimo, in the eighty-first year of his age. He had lived in that county since 1806, and no man ever bore a more stainless name. In official and in private life he preserved a singular purity of purpose and displayed the lofty virtues of the Christian religion. He was the paternal grandfather of the editors' wife. A few weeks ago we together visited his home, and never in life have we witnessed a more perfect triumph of faith and peaceful waiting for a crown. With a mind of unimpaired vigor and clearness he talked much of the Methodistism in the Southwest, his own joyful experience, and his exultant watching for the Master's coming. One of the Lord's noblemen has fallen on sleep.

Rev. S. M. Thames, presiding elder of the Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, announcing his District Conference at Courtland, July 3, adds this inspiring note: "We are in the midst of a glorious revival of religion in Grenada; eighteen or twenty at the altar last night; several conversions, and the interest increasing. We will expect you at our District Conference. God bless you and the dear old ADVOCATE."

Books and Periodicals.

TIP LEWIS AND HIS LAMP. By Paddy. Publishers: D. Lathrop & Co., Franklin street, Boston. The plot of this book is splendid, and it is written in such simple, yet beautiful language, that it can fall to be intensely interesting both to young and old; it should be read by every one, but by Sunday-school teachers especially, as it contains many valuable suggestions for them.

CENT'S SUMMER. By E. B. Hollis. Publishers: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., 13 Astor Place, New York. This is a charming story which shows how good can be done by a good Christian young lady in one summer. It is a book doubly interesting to girls who are trying to be working Christians, and we recommend it highly to all.

LIVING FOUNTAIN. Chlesgo: S. W. Smith. This is a new collection of songs for Sunday-schools, and from our limited examination we judge it is of a high order. The hymns are by the best writers of the age, and the melodies are marked with simplicity and beauty. It is full of vigor and deep feeling. It is claimed by the author as an exceptional merit that the tunes do not run too high for the children's voices. It contains 192 pages and sold for thirty-five cents. A sample copy to any pastor or superintendent, twenty cents.

The Manhattan Illustrated Magazine, for June, is warmly welcomed. It has put out a bright summer dress of new style and pattern, and is in every way improved. Both as to its inner arrangements and outward adorning the Manhattan now ranks among the best and choicest of our monthlies. The illustrations are not surpassed in any magazine, and the articles in tone and ability characteristic of the highest modern culture. An American Sinfio in Florence is the leading paper, which is followed by a critical study entitled "The Drawings." Retrospectives of the American Stage is a disconcerting article in a high degree. The July number will have a portrait of the Earl of Dufferin, the English statesman, and a sketch of his career. The Manhattan Magazine Company, Temple Court, New York City. Yearly price, $3; single number, twenty-five cents.

The Philat Treasury, for June, is the second number of the second volume of this superb monthly. From the first issue it has grown steadily in public favor, and we have nothing in saying that its merits increase with its popularity. Its plan and general make-up are different from other philatelic publications, and in some respects an improvement upon all. The portrait, sketch and sermon of Dr. John H. Barrows, the brilliant young Presbyterian pastor of Chicago, add to the interest of this number. There is also an able sermon from Bishop Huntington delivered at Cornell University. All the departments, and notably the editorial, are admirably filled. New York: E. B. Treat, publisher, 55 Broadway. Single copy, twenty-five cents.

The Century Magazine, for June, comes with the freshness and fragrance of early summer. The fruits of St. Gauden's statue of Robert Richard Randall, the founder of Sailors' Snug Harbor. There is also a sketch of the harbor by Franklin H. North, with a number of capital illustrations. The leading article is by S. G. W. Benjamin, and is entitled "A French-American Report." "An Average Man," by Robert Grant, is concluded. "Mr. Sawyer," by our home author, Mr. George W. Cable, is continued, and grows in interest. An exceptionally fine article is on "Commerce in the Colonies," by Edward Eggleston. The department of Open Letters is much enlarged and well filled. The Century Company, Union Square, New York.

The Homiletic Magazine, for May, has come to hand. Our readers will know the general estimate we put upon this able monthly, and therefore can appreciate our opinion of its merits when told that this number is the best yet. The leading article is "Seeking Lost Children," by Dr. James Bennett. A vigorous, fresh discussion of a much used text. There are other shorter discourses from the ablest English divines. Another clerical synthesis is begun in this number on the "Basis of the Immortality of Man." The expository section is full of good things. New York: A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 900 Broadway. Price, thirty cents.

The North American Review, for June, has an attractive table of contents. The subjects and writers both command respectful interest. Harboring Conspiracy is treated by Prof. Henry Wadsworth in a vigorous and practical way. Other papers are as follows: Lords of Industry, by Henry D. Lloyd; The Struggle for Immortality, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps; Sociological Fallacies, by Prof. W. G. Sumner; The Rise and Fall of Autocracy, by President William; Wait, Wait, by Walker Kennedy; and a symposium on Expert Testimony. New York: No. 30 Lafayette Place. Subscription, $5; single number, fifty cents.

Popular Science Monthly, for June, is on our table. Herbert Spencer has a second paper on The Sins of Legislators. Evolution and Dissolution of the Nervous System is an able article on a very practical subject. "Geography and Attention in this age of railroad legislation. The Polo and Wire Revell, Stethoscope, etc., make up a valuable as well as a readable number. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 1, 3 and 5 Bond Street. Single number, fifty cents; yearly subscription, $5.

The Southern Cultivator. From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1884.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANT.
Denver.....	July 21.....	Denver.
Montana.....	Aug. 21.....	Stevensville.
Columbia.....	Sept. 3.....	Dayton.
Pacific.....	Oct. 8.....	Santa Rosa.
Los Angeles.....	Oct. 22.....	San Bernardino.
SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP McVIE.
West Texas.....	Oct. 27.....	San Antonio.
Northwest Texas.....	Nov. 5.....	Waco.
North Texas.....	Nov. 12.....	Sulphur Springs.
East Texas.....	Nov. 19.....	Longview.
German Mission.....	Nov. 27.....	Heimtown.
Texas.....	Dec. 3.....	Galveston.
THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri.....	Sept. 17.....	St. Louis.
Western.....	Sept. 24.....	Council Grove.
Southwest.....	Oct. 1.....	Jefferson City.
North Carolina.....	Nov. 26.....	Wilmington.
Mississippi.....	Dec. 17.....	Yazoo City.
Baltimore.....	March 11.....	Salem.
FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP BARBORE.
St. Louis.....	Sept. 10.....	St. Louis.
West Virginia.....	Oct. 8.....	Greensburg.
Arkansas.....	Nov. 19.....	Van Buren.
Little Rock.....	Nov. 26.....	Little Rock.
White River.....	Dec. 29.....	Batesville.
Louisiana.....	Jan. 8.....	Shreveport.
FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEEFE.
Indian Mission.....	Sept. 17.....	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee.....	Oct. 8.....	Nashville.
North Alabama.....	Nov. 23.....	Talladega.
South Carolina.....	Dec. 17.....	Charleston.
Florida.....	Jan. 8.....	Gainesville.
SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky.....	Sept. 10.....	St. Sterling.
Louisville.....	Sept. 17.....	Louisville.
Illinois.....	Sept. 24.....	Nashville.
North Georgia.....	Nov. 26.....	Atlanta.
South Georgia.....	Dec. 17.....	Savannah.
SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEEFE.
Holston.....	Oct. 22.....	Bristol.
Virginia.....	Nov. 12.....	Lynchburg.
North Mississippi.....	Nov. 23.....	Memphis.
Alabama.....	Dec. 17.....	Opelika.

SEND $1 BILLS.—We wish our patrons to bear in mind that if payment for subscriptions we do not desire postage stamps, and that they should be sent only or fractional parts of a dollar. A dollar bill is much more convenient and safe to remit than the same amount in one, two or three cents stamps. The actual risk of remitting money is slight; if properly directed not one misarrangement will occur in one thousand. Enclose the bills, and where letters containing money are sealed in presence of the postmaster, we will assume all the risk.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

II. Dudley Coleman, manufacturer of the champion "Maid of the South" corn mills and celebrated Coleman Plantation Cotton Presses. The "Maid of the South" was taken all the first prizes at every exposition and agricultural fair, from Mexico, Ga., in 1855, to the present time. They are made of iron, and have given entire satisfaction wherever used. Mr. Coleman's guarantee goes with his famous plantation cotton press to fulfill all that is claimed for it. Before purchasing send for catalogue and price list of these articles, and a full line of steam engines, sugar mills, saw mills, and machinery of all kinds. 7 and 9 Perdido St., New Orleans, La.

The heaviest suspension yet.—The Brooklyn Bridge.

The Harter Medicine Co., St. Louis, Mo., commence this week their advertisement of Harter's Iron Tonic. While this medicine is the most successful and most prominent in the United States, their medicine is still more so, and thousands and thousands of people who have been cured of their various ills by the use of it, would rise up and testify of its merits if they could be reached. We know of no medicine that we can so safely recommend to our readers.

It will hereafter be known as the Submarine Bank, and its former president will be president of it.

The weak, worn, and dyspeptic should take COLMAN'S LIGHT BEEF TONIC. Colman's takes no other. Of druggists.

"That is a clothes shave," lisped Haywood when he examined his Chatham-Street suit.

If your druggist is so far behind the times and every body else that he does not keep the New La. Remedy, send to the city for it. It can be ordered through any drug-house or any commission merchant. Depot, 151 Julia street.

A New Jersey boy picked a cartridge with a pin. He is now learning to shoot marbles with his left hand.

For pimples, use GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP.

HILL'S HAIR AND WHISKER DYE, 50 cts. PEEK'S TOOTHACHE DROPS cure in one minute.

Pope says he doesn't believe it pays in the end to get your landlord to make extensive repairs. Putting new wood into an old building is like putting new cloth into old raiment. The rent is made worse.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

"It is said that it costs a thousand dollars to raise a boy. Is that true, pa?" "In some cases, perhaps." "What cases?" "Well, it is true when the father don't have but a thousand dollars."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate please keep this in remembrance.

The garden season is almost here, and the husband of the woman who throws stones at the house is getting himself into a position to dodge.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon Sts., New Orleans, has a good twelve-rowed piano for $125; an elegant new 7 1/2 octave rowed piano for $200; an elegant new piano for $250, or $250 a week for 13 weeks; for the first year; another elegant piano, entirely new for $300 cash. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low prices. The Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Decker, Hamilton, Werlein, Hale, 8 hammer, Bohning and Golden pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Sterling and Ray State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Immense stock of short music and musical instruments. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange, or put in payment for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free estimates are sent to any address.

The following is from Philadelphia Pa. "One of our advertising patrons, writes to us: 'The Christian Advocate we consider best advertising medium in the South. At least have found it so.'"

The following is from Texas: "Do not discount our advertisement in the ADVOCATE. It has brought many letters in the last four weeks."

To those of our subscribers, not content in a money order office, we would say. Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or not.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Keenall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer route. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating facilities.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and then connect via through.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, pleasant and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured, to the patient, by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. L. TRUX, New York.

TESTIMONIAL.—This is to certify that I have been traveling in the State of Mississippi for the Billington Lightning Lament Co., of Bryan, Tex., for nearly one month, during which time I have sold very near 1000 bottles of their celebrated medicine, and giving entire satisfaction to every one who purchased of me. Again, every bottle I sold, I sold the owner full value as we claimed, to repay the cost and I would not find the money. No one has ever been returned. But the good medicine and very best testimonials received every day. God bless the discoverer. J. L. WALTON, Bogalusa, Miss., March 13, 1884. Agent.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

FOR RENT. At Biloxi, Miss., a newly-erected residence, containing five rooms, finished, situated on the beach between the light-house and the Camp Grand, April 1.

JOHN E. MORRISON, Biloxi, Miss.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE

—TO THE—

NORTH and NORTHWEST,

Via N. O. and N. E., and Mobile

and Ohio Railroads.

Pullman Sleepers on both routes. Close connections made at ST. LOUIS, ST. LOUIS, with all diverging lines.

Excursion tickets on sale to the Summer Resorts of the great Northwest.

Trains leave New Orleans at 11 A. M. and 10 P. M. The N. O. & N. E. route has a special train to St. Louis without stopping.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Baggage Houses on this line are unexcelled by any in the country.

For Maps, Time Tables, etc., call on or address

General Agent M. and O. R. R., Brainerd and St. Charles streets.

G. JORDAN, Gen. Manager, Mob. & Ala.

CHAS. J. WALLER, G. P. A., Mobile, Ala.

MECHANIC'S TRADER'S

Insurance Company.

14 CARONDELLE STREET,

New Orleans, La.

Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks.

AT LOWEST TARIFF RATES.

GEORGE H. FROST, LLOYD R. COLMAN, President, Secretary.

F. C. GILLESPIE, J. M. CRAWFORD, Asst. Sec. and Fire Ckr., Marine and River Ckr.

R. C. SHORRIDGE, Collector.

TRUSTEES: J. R. Allen, J. D. Britton, T. J. Carver, E. J. Cullen, H. T. Cullen, H. Dudley Coleman, O. Elmer, J. M. Frankland, C. G. Galt, J. Davidson Hill, Jas. Holloway, J. L. Joyce, Laurent Lussigneaue, T. L. Mucun.

LOYD R. COLMAN, Cashier.

CLOSING EXERCISES: WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE, BROOK HAVEN, N. H.

June 9-12. Annual Examination. June 10, 8 P. M.—Contest in music for gold medals. June 11, 8 P. M.—Entertainment by Primaries. June 13, 8 P. M.—Exercises in Recitation. June 15, 11 A. M.—Annual sermon, by Rev. R. S. Woolward. 8 P. M.—Anniversary of Christian Association. Address by Rev. W. R. Ransom.

June 16, 10 A. M.—Exercises by the Senior Class. 3 P. M.—Annual meeting of Board of Trustees. 8 P. M.—Anniversary of Alumni Association. 8 P. M.—Grand concert.

June 17, 10 A. M.—Commencement exercises. Annual address, by Hon. Charles E. Hooker. 7:10 P. M.—Socials.

Public cordially invited. Ministers who expect to be present will please to notify me.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE, MANSFIELD, LA.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

COLEMAN'S

"Maid of the South"

GRIST MILLS.

Have been in the Ala. lot since 1859. They have taken FIRST PRIZES at all Competitions wherever exhibited, including MACON, GA. and CRYSTAL PALACE, NEW YORK CITY, in 1855.

The "Maid of the South" Grist Mills

— HAVE —

Solid French Burr Stones, Iron Bridge Trees, Improved Center-Lift Attachment

And other VALUABLE ADVANTAGES over any CRIST MILL made.

They have the best record of any MILL in the mill field.

They are

STRONG, DURABLE, SIMPLE.

Made of the VERY BEST material and sold under a FULL GUARANTEE.

All sizes carried in stock for immediate shipment.

Active, responsible Agents wanted where these MILLS are not already represented.

Address the manufacturer.

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN,

Foundry and Plantation Machinery,

9 Perdido Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

PRESSES & BALING COTTON

"Get the Best!"

COLEMAN'S

Wrought Iron Screw

PRESSES

Are guaranteed to press 100 lbs. of Cotton weighing 500 POUNDS.

SIMPLEST,

STRONGEST AND

CHEAPEST.

Thousands of them in use. Manufactured and sold by H. Dudley Coleman, New Orleans, La. See List.

For one hour or more, use COLEMAN'S

Simple Screw Press, $150.

OR COLEMAN'S

Independent Screw Press $165.

For water power or steam power, use COLEMAN'S

FRICTION-GEARED POWER PRESS.

Of which THREE SIZES are made. Namely:

9 ft. 10 in., 11 ft. 6 in., 14 ft. 6 in.

The two larger sizes having SCREWS OF FIVE INCHES DIAMETER. All screws are of wrought iron, and are of the best quality.

Extensive improvements attached to these presses, came into use to give the utmost satisfaction. Active, responsible Agents wanted to sell these presses and commission wherever they are not already represented. Address the manufacturer.

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN,

FOUNDRY AND PLANTATION MACHINERY,

9 PERDIDO STREET,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

THOS. J. CARYER, W. L. BAKER.

CARVER & BAKER,

Cotton Factors

AND—

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

44 Perdido Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

INSURANCE

When the system has been perfected, so that the disbursements do not properly perform their office, relieve them of the burden, and give time for re-organization. The best plan is the best plan for the best plan. It will give strength and security to the best plan. Even the nurse will find it a relief. For more information, call on or address the manufacturer. Send to WOOLWORTH & CO., Cashier, New York, for pamphlet.

No More Numerous Dances.

It has been reserved to our swains to furnish materials for the greatest couch and bedding strap extant for all throat and long coughing, the New La. Remedy, Capitate ne neck, ad a delicious Home references by thousands. Life Tonic, infallible for chills.

Home Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

ESTABLISHED IN 1839.

F. BELDEN

WHOLESALE DEALER IN

HATS,

TRUNKS,

FLOWERS,

UMBRELLAS,

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending June 3, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2
Ordinary	10 1/2
Good ordinary	11 1/2
Low middling	11 1/2
Middling	12 1/2
Good middling	13 1/2
Fair	14 1/2
Calveson middling	15 1/2
Mobile middling	16 1/2
St. Louis middling	17 1/2

SUGAR.
Refined	34
Common	44
Good common	44
Fair	44
Good fair	54
Fully fair	54
Prime	54
Stripped Prime	54
Choice	54
Seconds	54
Yellow clarified	64
Gray clarified	64
Choice white	64
Granulated	64

MOLASSES.
Syrup	26
Prime	26
Choice	26
Fancy	26
RICE.
Choice	64
Prime	64
Good	64
Fair	64
Ordinary	64
Common	64
No. 2	64

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 50
Minnesota patents	7 00
Extra fancy	7 00
Winter wheat patents	5 40
Choice	5 40
Common	5 30
Fancy	5 30
CORN PRODUCTS.
Green meal	3 80
Corn meal	3 75
Grits	3 80
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn	77
White	79
Yellow	79
Mixed	79
Oats	45
Western	45
Texas rust-proof	45
Barley	93
Choice	21 00
Prime	22 00
PROVISIONS.
Pork	17 60
Mess	17 50
Prime mess	16 50
Ramps	16 00
Bacon	11 1/2
Choice breakfast	12
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2
HAMS	13 1/2
Sugar-cured	13 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT	6 1/2
Shoulders	6 1/2
Sides, clear	8 1/2
Sides, clear rib	8 1/2
FISH.
MACERALS	14 25
No. 1 in hbls	7 75
Half hbls	13 75
No. 2 in hbls	6 25
Half hbls	13 25
No. 3 in hbls	7 00
Half hbls	7 00
GROCERIES.
JOFFEY	94
Rio, choice	11 1/2
Cordova, choice	12
Java, choice	12 1/2
BROWN	20
Western dairy	20
New York dairy	20
Country	20
LARD	8 1/2
Choice	50
Fair	25
OLDS	13
Coal, cases	13
Coal, hbls	13
Cotton seed	45
Lard	80
VEGETABLES.
JARBALES	12 00
Western	12 00
Country	12 00
POTATOES	1 75
Louisiana	2 50
KIDNEY	20 00
Choice	2 50
Country	2 50
BALING STUFFS.
11 b	104
12 b	112
BALING TWINE	134
11 b	134
12 b	134
13 b	134
14 b	134
15 b	134
16 b	134
17 b	134
18 b	134
19 b	134
20 b	134
21 b	134
22 b	134
23 b	134
24 b	134
25 b	134
26 b	134
27 b	134
28 b	134
29 b	134
30 b	134
31 b	134
32 b	134
33 b	134
34 b	134
35 b	134
36 b	134
37 b	134
38 b	134
39 b	134
40 b	134
41 b	134
42 b	134
43 b	134
44 b	134
45 b	134
46 b	134
47 b	134
48 b	134
49 b	134
50 b	134
51 b	134
52 b	134
53 b	134
54 b	134
55 b	134
56 b	134
57 b	134
58 b	134
59 b	134
60 b	134
61 b	134
62 b	134
63 b	134
64 b	134
65 b	134
66 b	134
67 b	134
68 b	134
69 b	134
70 b	134
71 b	134
72 b	134
73 b	134
74 b	134
75 b	134
76 b	134
77 b	134
78 b	134
79 b	134
80 b	134
81 b	134
82 b	134
83 b	134
84 b	134
85 b	134
86 b	134
87 b	134
88 b	134
89 b	134
90 b	134
91 b	134
92 b	134
93 b	134
94 b	134
95 b	134
96 b	134
97 b	134
98 b	134
99 b	134
100 b	134

SUNDRIES.
CHICKENS, Western	4 25
Young	3 00
CHICKENS, South'n	3 75
Young	1 75
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
MEATS	14
Western	14
Southern	15
WOLLS	20
Lake	18
Louisiana	18
BURRY	13
HIDES	7
Green salted	7
Dry salted	10 1/2
STAVES	50 00
Oak, logs	75 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, clare	50 00
Oak, hoghead	75 00
POLETS	40 00
Hoghead	20 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 00
PARLORS	12 00
Meal	25 75
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	8
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	34

BALING STUFFS.
11 b	104
12 b	112
BALING TWINE	134
11 b	134
12 b	134
13 b	134
14 b	134
15 b	134
16 b	134
17 b	134
18 b	134
19 b	134
20 b	134
21 b	134
22 b	134
23 b	134
24 b	134
25 b	134
26 b	134
27 b	134
28 b	134
29 b	134
30 b	134
31 b	134
32 b	134
33 b	134
34 b	134
35 b	134
36 b	134
37 b	134
38 b	134
39 b	134
40 b	134
41 b	134
42 b	134
43 b	134
44 b	134
45 b	134
46 b	134
47 b	134
48 b	134
49 b	134
50 b	134
51 b	134
52 b	134
53 b	134
54 b	134
55 b	134
56 b	134
57 b	134
58 b	134
59 b	134
60 b	134
61 b	134
62 b	134
63 b	134
64 b	134
65 b	134
66 b	134
67 b	134
68 b	134
69 b	134
70 b	134
71 b	134
72 b	134
73 b	134
74 b	134
75 b	134
76 b	134
77 b	134
78 b	134
79 b	134
80 b	134
81 b	134
82 b	134
83 b	134
84 b	134
85 b	134
86 b	134
87 b	134
88 b	134
89 b	134
90 b	134
91 b	134
92 b	134
93 b	134
94 b	134
95 b	134
96 b	134
97 b	134
98 b	134
99 b	134
100 b	134

SUNDRIES.
CHICKENS, Western	4 25
Young	3 00
CHICKENS, South'n	3 75
Young	1 75
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
MEATS	14
Western	14
Southern	15
WOLLS	20
Lake	18
Louisiana	18
BURRY	13
HIDES	7
Green salted	7
Dry salted	10 1/2
STAVES	50 00
Oak, logs	75 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, clare	50 00
Oak, hoghead	75 00
POLETS	40 00
Hoghead	20 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 00
PARLORS	12 00
Meal	25 75
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	8
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	34

BALING STUFFS.
11 b	104
12 b	112
BALING TWINE	134
11 b	134
12 b	134
13 b	134
14 b	134
15 b	134
16 b	134
17 b	134
18 b	134
19 b	134
20 b	134
21 b	134
22 b	134
23 b	134
24 b	134
25 b	134
26 b	134
27 b	134
28 b	134
29 b	134
30 b	134
31 b	134
32 b	134
33 b	134
34 b	134
35 b	134
36 b	134
37 b	134
38 b	134
39 b	134
40 b	134
41 b	134
42 b	134
43 b	134
44 b	134
45 b	134
46 b	134
47 b	134
48 b	134
49 b	134
50 b	134
51 b	134
52 b	134
53 b	134
54 b	134
55 b	134
56 b	134
57 b	134
58 b	134
59 b	134
60 b	134
61 b	134
62 b	134
63 b	134
64 b	134
65 b	134
66 b	134
67 b	134
68 b	134
69 b	134
70 b	134
71 b	134
72 b	134
73 b	134
74 b	134
75 b	134
76 b	134
77 b	134
78 b	134
79 b	134
80 b	134
81 b	134
82 b	134
83 b	134
84 b	134
85 b	134
86 b	134
87 b	134
88 b	134
89 b	134
90 b	134
91 b	134
92 b	134
93 b	134
94 b	134
95 b	134
96 b	134
97 b	134
98 b	134
99 b	134
100 b	134

SUNDRIES.
CHICKENS, Western	4 25
Young	3 00
CHICKENS, South'n	3 75
Young	1 75
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
MEATS	14
Western	14
Southern	15
WOLLS	20
Lake	18
Louisiana	18
BURRY	13
HIDES	7
Green salted	7
Dry salted	10 1/2
STAVES	50 00
Oak, logs	75 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, clare	50 00
Oak, hoghead	75 00
POLETS	40 00
Hoghead	20 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 00
PARLORS	12 00
Meal	25 75
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	8
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	34

BALING STUFFS.
11 b	104
12 b	112
BALING TWINE	134
11 b	134
12 b	134
13 b	134
14 b	134
15 b	134
16 b	134
17 b	134
18 b	134
19 b	134
20 b	134
21 b	134
22 b	134
23 b	134
24 b	134
25 b	134
26 b	134
27 b	134
28 b	134
29 b	134
30 b	134
31 b	134
32 b	134
33 b	134
34 b	134
35 b	134
36 b	134
37 b	134
38 b	134
39 b	134
40 b	134
41 b	134
42 b	134
43 b	134
44 b	134
45 b	134
46 b	134
47 b	134
48 b	134
49 b	134
50 b	134
51 b	134
52 b	134
53 b	134
54 b	134
55 b	134
56 b	134
57 b	134
58 b	134

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 24.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1454.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Single copies, 10 cents.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FRANK B. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY,
REV. C. S. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. BULLIVANT, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CARMON.

AN ANSWERED PRAYER.

BY MARIANNE FARMINGHAM.

"O'er me a message of quiet."

"I asked in my morning prayer,

"For the turbulent within me

"In more than my heart can bear,

"And the storm that will not cease,

"And the world of the world is on me—

"Thou only canst give me peace."

I opened the old, old Bible

And looked at a page of psalms

And the words of my trouble

Were echoed by the summer calms;

For the words that have helped so many,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

And that have made me so true,

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLAWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HURRICUT.

THURSDAY JUNE 12, 1884.

Dr. John A. Broadus, the distinguished Baptist minister and author, says truly that "eloquence lies as much in the ear as in the tongue. The proportion of good preachers is as large as the proportion of good hearers."

Dr. Wier, presiding elder of Columbus District, writing from Starkville, says:

Good revival work going on in Starkville in both the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches. A number of professions to date. Meeting still in progress.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee has just decided the law to be constitutional which makes it a felony to keep a gambling-house; and one Garvin, who permitted himself to be a "test case," goes to the penitentiary for one year. Next time he will let somebody else "test" a law's constitutionality.

Dr. Buckley returns to his editorship of the New York Advocate in a characteristic salutatory. He very frankly says that he "desired a reelection. Neither during the quadrennium nor the General Conference did he utter a word inconsistent with that desire." We are delighted at his reelection. He is a manly man and a superb editor.

There are now eighty Methodist Chapels in London that will seat 1,000 persons each, and as many more of smaller capacity. The anniversary of the Wesleyan Metropolitan Chapel Building Fund was held May 7 in old City Road Chapel, when the announcement was made that fifty-four chapels would be erected, and to this end $150,000 had been promised. Great is the vigor and enterprise of Methodism in the city of its birth.

The National Republican Convention has met, transacted its business in a boisterous way, and adjourned. The Hon. James G. Blaine, of Maine, was nominated for President of the United States, and the Hon. John A. Logan, of Illinois, for Vice-President. The Democratic Convention will meet next month and make nominations. Thence until the "melancholy days of November" we will have the usual campaign of slander.

Rev. J. M. Huggins, of Coffeeville, Miss., writes that his church at that place has "cleared the decks." He observed Centenary day with an effective and able sermon from Rev. P. J. Newell, president of Grenada College Institute, on the characteristic features of Methodism. The pastor concludes his note as follows: The Coffeeville circuit is improving. I think. Our presiding elder looks well to all the interests placed in his charge. I am doing all I can for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The people like it wherever I have been able to introduce it.

We find in The Churchman, of New York, an appeal for the diocese of Mississippi signed by "W. M. Green, Bishop," and "Hugh Miller Thompson, Assistant Bishop." It recounts the imminent needs of the field and calls for speedy help. As we are so often told by the enthusiastic Churchman that the Church is about to absorb all others, and they claim to be the only true, apostolic, covenantal children of God, it may be interesting to know what they have achieved. They make loud pretensions and much noise for so small a body. We very much fear that the "warring sects," about whom Bishop Thompson spoke in his diocesan address, will still have to furnish the people the gospel or else let them starve. In all the commonwealth of Mississippi they haven't one-third as many as kept Elijah's faith in Samaria. We extract the following from the "appeal":

There are only eight so-called "self-supporting" parishes in the diocese. Salaries in these are small. There is not a single diocesan institution. There are twelve church buildings without even the occasional services of a clergyman. Several of them are going to decay. We have no rich men among us; no parish of any strength.

The Board of Missions can allow and we are deeply thankful for this help) only sixteen hundred dollars a year for our white work, and two hundred dollars for work among our six hundred thousand negroes. Our white field is so destitute, that we have no heart to touch the other yet, for empty churches must be first restored to use.

"Anxious-Bench Religion."

The above are the words reported to have been employed by Bishop Thompson in characterizing a type of religion against which he warms with zealous warmth. They speed a recent sermon on a confirmation occasion. He insisted on a religion of obedience and training, as against a religion of emotion—or, to speak it softly, an anxious-bench religion. The right reverend gentleman in that characterization intended to caricature a large class of Christians and discount the spirit and methods that have marked their heroic history. It is a little significant, however, that while a distinguished prelate on this side of the sea is inveighing against the anxious-bench religion of the "warring sects," such great evangelical spirits in the Church of England as Bishop Ryle, of Liverpool, emphasize the great doctrine of a conscious conversion and the witness of the Spirit. At a recent convocation of Bishops, several of the "Lord's spiritual," spoke eloquently of the depth and power of the salvation army movement and warned their brethren not to repeat the Church's folly in its attitude to the Wesleyan revival. The Church in these lands enjoys no such evangelical leadership. And under its present guidance, it is very much in the condition of the Episcopal Church in Canada, so graphically described by a correspondent of the London Guardian. He is a son of the Church, and therefore wrote with pain and sorrow. He said, until quite lately, "the necessity of personal conversion to God was practically never heard of among high churchmen" and that the results of their labors compared with other churches was "as the gleanings of grapes when the vintage is done." And no wonder. No church can prosper that does not insist upon a personal, conscious conversion, and stress it with unction and power.

But what is this "anxious-bench religion" that luxuriates episcopal facetiousness? Is it an error and an evil against which apostolic warnings should be leveled? Does it, obscure a true knowledge of God, and obstruct a scriptural development of character? These questions can only be answered by looking at the results. If the lives and labors, the zeal and faith, the gifts and graces, of those who accept and approve "anxious-bench religion," compare unfavorably with the Bishop's "religion of obedience and training," we may well pause and seriously ponder the question. But what are the facts? The highest types of piety, the largest liberality, the noblest catholicity, the most cheerful self-denial and the truest apostolic zeal, beyond question and by general agreement, are found amongst those who enthroned conscience, personal conversion—a religion of experience—an "anxious-bench religion."

An "anxious-bench religion" is Bible religion—a conviction of sin, a godly sorrow for the same, the prayer of faith and the consciousness of pardon. The Philippiian jailer was on the "anxious bench," when he exclaimed, "Sirs what must I do to be saved?" And his great apostolic prisoner—teacher himself was kneeling at the "anxious bench," when, "trembling and astonished," he cried, "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" There were true repentance and saving faith, and in each case profound emotion gave an "anxious" tone and swifter wing to prayer. The blind man near Jericho had "anxious-bench religion," and though upbraided by some of the Lord's followers, continued his "anxious," pleading until darkness gave way to glorious light. And so every example of spiritual healing in the Bible manifested a like experience. And on the day of pentecost when the multitudes with great unction were praising God for his pardoning love and witnessing Spirit, there were some who did not stop with ridicule of their "anxious-bench religion," but charged them with being "full of new wine."

An "anxious-bench religion" is the need of our times. It was the religion of pentecost that made the millennial arches of heaven ring with praise. It was the religion that converted the persecuting Saul of Tarsus into Paul the great apostle. It was the religion that transformed the sin-stained woman into an angel watcher at the grave and a weeping worshiper at the cross. It was the religion of apostles and martyrs of whom the world was not worthy. It was the religion of Martin Luther, who shook Europe to its very foundation, and of John Wesley, who became the providential leader of "the greatest fact in modern times." And this religion—this "anxious-bench religion"—is the urgent and imminent need of our day. Therefore while Bishops ridicule, let all the people remember that without such religion there is no salvation.

A Faith of Singular Simplicity.

We know of no more striking instance of simple faith than Joshua illustrated at Jericho. He was a man of great gifts, of large attainments, and of phenomenal self-reliance, all fitting him for successful leadership; but with these he united the confidence, trustfulness of a little child. His was a typical faith. He displayed an energy and put forth effort, as though success depended upon himself, and yet he felt and acknowledged entire dependence on God. Of Him he asked daily counsel, and from Him he received the wisdom that made his name the magic synonym of victory and power. No sooner had Israel passed through the divided waters of Jordan and stood upon the land of long promise—the land to which Abraham journeyed—the land where the bones of Isaac slept—than he built a memorial of stones and addressed the people in words of devout thanksgiving. But most beautiful and instructive was his obedience when commanded of God to capture Jericho by simply marching around its walls, blowing rams' horns. He had the assurance that at a certain time and signal the walls would crumble, and he obeyed with implicit faith and exactness of detail.

Without discussing the relation between the means employed and the end to be achieved, he simply obeyed. Much rather would we suppose that a man of his genius and martial spirit, would have rejected as trivial such an attempt at strategy. How could the idle blowing of horns affect the solid masonry of the great walled city? We can better imagine Joshua, the hero of Rehoboth, with gleaming sword, leading a thundering charge against the frowning ramparts, and most skillfully using the best implements of aggressive warfare. But, he simply and exactly follows the bidding of his Lord. The great General takes up the line of march without a doubt, but that the walls would topple and the city be captured. The military chieftain of many victorious fields, becomes a little child in faith and obedience.

That is an example worthy of attention and emulation. It is not for us to consider the relation of prayer to conversion, nor of preaching to salvation, but simply to do the will of God. We are to obey, and not to cavil. If God assures us that walled cities will fall at the sound of the gospel trumpet, it is ours to go forth nothing doubting, and wait to see the masonry topple to its deep foundations. The believing, obedient spirit always conquers, and never fails to see the salvation of the Lord. It is the carping, caviling, doubting spirit, that demands the demonstration of sight, that fails and falls. Better take the Lord at his word, though the end seem impossible. Nothing could be more improbable to human argumentation than the destruction of Jericho by the insignificant means employed. Faith has constantly to meet such improbabilities. It reveals and reigns in the field of the impossible. When sight fails and all strength falters, faith wins the grandest triumphs. The simple faith of Israel's military hero, will make heroic every soldier of Christ.

The Louisiana Lottery.

In defiance of a loud public outcry and the positive pledge of the now dominant party in State Convention, the Louisiana Lottery is still to feed and fatten upon the life and honor of our people. During the heated political canvass last winter the friends of the Governor reiterated and emphasized their opposition to the iniquity. And his Excellency himself also spoke in no doubtful phrase of its enormity and of his enmity thereto. But when the General Assembly meets and the proposition is made to submit a constitutional amendment to abolish it, not enough votes can be marshalled to pass the measure. Now as the Democratic party is in power, controlling more than two-thirds of the legislature, with the Governor and every State officer, it must hear the honor or wear the infamy, of fostering this stupendous iniquity. If there are legal and constitutional objections to speedy relief, they should be removed by allowing the people to amend the constitution, or if that be impossible, make a clear statement to the public why its overthrow cannot be achieved. The recent act of the legislature breaks faith with the people and prostitutes a party pledge. Louisiana stands alone in all the sisterhood of States as the foster-mother, by constitutional provision, of such a moral monstrosity. And in that regard her garments are stained with shame, and her polluting touch is deservedly shunned. The honorable gentlemen who gave their votes or voice to perpetuate the Louisiana Lottery, ought to be invited to stay at home, by a misrepresented constituency. Time and again the charge has been made that the lottery could buy out the legislature. Whether the boast be true or not, no legislative weapon formed against it has ever prospered. How long, O Lord, how long, are the people to endure this sin and sorrow! Referring to the recent action of the legislature, the Natchez Democrat speaks vigorously and pungently as follows:

This is a subject that pertains not to Louisiana alone. The silly folds of the Python are found in most of the States of this Union, and its deleterious influence is felt among other people than those of Louisiana. If the State which gave birth to the monster is still disposed to nourish its horrid progeny, it only remains for the other States, or for the Federal government, to take measures to crush it out and protect other communities from its corrupting influences by the most summary species of legislation.

Jackson District Conference.

This body met in the town of Bolton, on Thursday of last week, Rev. J. A. Ellis, presiding elder, in the chair. Bro. R. W. Bennett was elected secretary, and for readiness, accuracy and efficiency is quite a model. Most of the pastors were present, but a small number of lay representatives. This probably is largely attributable to the phenomenal rains that have prevailed in central Mississippi for some weeks, making it necessary for the farmers to take advantage of every hour of sunshine. The reports from the preachers indicated a good conservative life in the church without much aggressiveness. No revivals were mentioned, and but few conversions in the regular pastoral work. This called forth remark, and doubtless caused prayerful introspection. Friday afternoon was set apart as a special Centenary day, and the proceedings were of profound interest and great profit. The essay by Rev. R. Abbey, the distinguished author, on "The Ecclesiastical Constitution of Methodism," was a learned, clear-cut statement of our ecclesiastical economy. In these days, when we suffer discount among our members because of lack of information on this subject, such a restatement is most timely. If studied carefully, and thoroughly understood, ecclesiastical marauders would find no prey in our folds. Pretentious high churchism can stand before such truth, "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners." He was followed by Rev. A. F. Watkins in a capital address on the question "What is Methodism?" The audience greatly enjoyed the strong, terse, taking statement of Methodism's underlying, constitutional, inspiring spirit and principles. An essay on "The Statistical Results of Methodism," by Rev. M. A. Bell, was an elaborate tabulation and analysis of the mighty achievements of the church. It was a good sermon on the gospel of mathematics. Doubtless some members present were amazed at the array of figures, and found themselves a little incredulous. But they were all from official sources, and during this year need to be studied. This we do, not for self-glorification, but for consecration to better work. The past is promise of a brighter future.

Rev. E. H. Moulner read a scholarly paper on "Methodism and Education." He forcibly stated that Mr. Wesley had no regard for "the sanctity of ignorance," and recited some fresh and glowing history on the line of educational work. We thank our brother for giving his suggestive and discriminative argument to the Advocate readers. "Methodism and Temperance" was discussed by Rev. Inman W. Cooper, a subject of increasing interest throughout our entire land. He gave Southern Methodism her proper and honorable position in that ever-imminent issue. The Rev. T. W. Adams spoke on "Methodism and Missions" with vigor and fervor. We pray that the missionary spirit be exalted may dwell richly upon the later history of the church. Rev. P. A. Johnson spoke briefly and practically on "Methodism and Church Extension." An address on "Methodism and Money" was delivered by Rev. J. W. Chambers, and all felt that he plowed pretty close to the corn. That doctrine put into general practice would swell the treasury of the church, lengthen the stakes of our Zion, and hasten the dawn of millennial glory.

Another essay on "Methodism and Money" was read by Bro. E. C. Postell, one of the active and cultured laymen of the district. A man of fine education and intense convictions, his paper evidenced the chastity of the scholar and the spirit of the loyal Methodist. "Methodism and Revivals" was discussed by Rev. R. T. Davis in a way that at once gratified and enthused the Conference. He made prominent the fact that our church was called into being to revive and spread Scriptural holiness over all lands, and fidelity to that commission is the demand of our times. The programme of Centenary day was closed by this editor discoursing on "Methodism and the Press," particularly and the Centenary movement generally.

The Conference was most enjoyable throughout—a feast of fat things to all in attendance. Dr. T. A. Phillips, E. C. Postell, W. L. Nugent and J. W. Ratcliffe were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Pastor Bradford and his entire community extended the Conference most hospitable hospitality. We are specially indebted to Mr. J. E. Smith and wife for delightful entertainment in their charming home. The next Conference will be held at Soule Chapel.

Impressions.

LAND TRAVEL.

It is a very curious study—the impressions which the different modes of land traveling produce upon the mind. I have studied these impressions with some care, yet have not been able to analyze them with such distinctness as to enable me to state results accurately. After some experience in the different modes of traveling I have come to the conclusion that if John G. Saxe had ever been three days and three nights on a railway train there are at least two lines in his "Riding on a Rail" that would have never been penned. The luxurious Pullman, with its cushioned seats and its ingenious appointments for the comfort of travelers, after the first six hours, becomes a dungeon, and you feel that a sentence of condemnation, whose term is equal to the number of miles you have to go, has been passed upon you, and that all hope of reprieve is dead. No matter what enchanting glimpses of beautiful landscape fit before your eyes, no matter what shining streams sparkle in the sunlight and stretch away toward the horizon like silver ribbons girdling the earth, no matter what hoary "mountains rear to heaven their awful forms" and frown upon you from their dizzy heights, no matter what well-tilled farms, with their neat cottages, spin by, you can not rid yourself of the impression that, for a certain time, you are as much and as hopelessly a prisoner as if your feet were fast in the stocks in a dungeon of the Bastille. The locomotive may be after the latest improved style, the man whose hand is on the throttle may be the safest on the line, the road may be steel-tracked, and you may glide along without a jostle, your companions may be cheerfully communicative and all your surroundings may be calculated to inspire you with agreeable emotions, yet you feel that you are in prison, and, like every other prisoner, you mentally resolve that if "Providence will help you out of that scrape you will never do so any more." The main argument in favor of railway traveling is that it saves time. This argument is good in the case of a freight train only. I do aver that every hour spent on one of these "lightning express trains" is an hour lost. A man can see nothing satisfactorily; he can hear nothing but the intolerable roar of the moving mass; he can read nothing with profit, and as for clear, close thinking, that is out of the question altogether. The man who has no objection to being practically dead for a few days may enjoy traveling by rail, but to the man whose intense vitality keeps his nervous system widely awake traveling by rail is an immense bore.

In contrast to the railway train there is the wagon. This mode of traveling has some manifest advantages in its favor. Its great age recommends it. It is white with antiquity. When you board a wagon, drawn by two patient, sure-going oxen, you feel at once that you are in the line of succession from patriarchs and kings of the olden times. If you are a reader of the Scriptures your memory suggests to you that wagons were first used by the Israelites to transport the ark and sacred utensils of the tabernacle from Sinai to the promised land, and this memory produces a sort of semi-reverence for the wagon, and you feel that this mode of travel has been almost sanctioned by the Lord himself. And, then, the traveler has his breath with him all the time. If he wants to examine the landscapes he has time enough to use his eyes and his field-glass to great advantage. Opening his ears, the happy note of every bird, the chattering of the squirrels, the lowing of the herd, the barking of the watch-dog, all find an entrance to the brain, and produce impressions whose pleasantness drives away the tedium of his slow-going team. If he wants to read he can do it with a zest and pleasure which will print the thoughts in indelible characters upon his mind. Clear, close, analytical thinking comes to its perfection under the inspiration of this mode of traveling. So manifest are its advantages over the railway coach on the score of comfort that one of our Bishops once said that if he had to make a trip around the world, and the thing was possible, he would go around in an ox wagon. But the people nowadays are in too much of a hurry, and the wagon is fast receding into that great lumber room—the past.

The mode of traveling which commands itself to every man and woman and child is that which is done on the back of a strong, clear-limbed, nimble-footed horse. This mode is specially adapted to the whole man. It is a refreshment to the physical man and an exhilaration to the mental faculties and an inspiration to the moral emotions. The very animation which this exercise imparts to the nervous system tones the mental powers to a high key, and thought is thereby winged for some of its most glorious flights. The fable of Pegasus and Bellerophon has some foundation in the effect which this exercise has upon the mind. The preacher who thinks he has made a good bargain when he has exchanged his saddle horse for a buggy has made a very great mistake. More grand sermons have been made on horseback than anywhere else. We are continually lamenting the fact that our preaching is not "in the power" that characterized the preaching of the fathers, and may not the new modes of travel have something to do with this question? Methodism won its most brilliant victories and directed its most skillful evolution when its "headquarters were in the saddle." Above all the modes of travel, commend me to a good fox-trotter whose ordinary gait is five miles an hour. I intended giving some "impressions" of men, but my space is full!

Centenary College Commencement.

These exercises began on Sunday, June 1, with a sermon by Rev. S. Halsey Werlein, of New Orleans. The sermon was most carefully prepared for the occasion, and most impressively delivered. Fine thoughts and eloquent passages abounded. The Board of Trust met on Monday, Bishop Keener presiding. His zeal is unabated and his hopes are more sanguine than ever. The decided improvement in the college buildings was remarked upon with delight by all the friends of the college. The inner part of the grand center building has been repaired, the broken panes all replaced and the sash hung upon weights and pulleys. The wood work has received fresh coats of paint, new chandeliers and bracket lamps are pendent from walls and ceiling, and a bright new carpet graces the stage. Thirteen rooms in the west dormitory have been newly fitted up during the session. The whole appearance suggests an air of thrift and success that is truly refreshing.

The preparatory exhibition on Monday night was short, and consisted of well selected pieces. One, who is quite familiar with the history of the college, remarked that it was the most tasteful preparatory exhibition he had ever seen there. Principal Norworthy is to be congratulated upon his success.

The exercises of the delivery of pins and diplomas in the Union Literary Society, on Tuesday morning, was enjoyable. Bishop Keener's ex tempore address fairly coruscated with sparkling truth and with classic history of men and women belonging to that age which is yet pre-eminent for oratory. Hon. W. Fergus Kerner, Judge of the District Court, an honored graduate of the class of 1850, delivered an address to the alumni. T. Samboia Jones, Esq., the poet elect, sent up a justifiable excuse in lieu of his poem.

On Tuesday night three young men from each society contested in oratory for a beautiful gold medal offered by a faithful friend of the college, who modestly prefers that his name should be withheld. The young orators all did well. The committee of award, consisting of five gentlemen, found it difficult to make the decision, but when it was announced that Mr. John Cheston King, of Jackson, La., was the honored youth it seemed to meet with almost universal approbation. Rev. B. Carradine, of New Orleans, addressed the societies and the audience; his subject was: "The American Boy." Unfortunately Mr. Carradine's voice was utterly unable to fill the difficult hall. Only a mere handful of the vast audience heard the address. Alas! for those who did not hear, as the effort from first to last was just full of wit and wisdom, of pathos and of explosive humor. A rare treat for the hearers, suggesting rare gifts in the lecturer.

On Wednesday, at nine A. M., an exercise was held in the Franklin Society Hall similar to that held in the Union, on Tuesday, and quite acceptable to the people, as the frequent applause indicated. The following young gentlemen pronounced their theses and had conferred upon them the honors of the college, viz.: George E. Greene, Jackson, La.; Ernest E. Brown, Natchez, Miss.; J. Winston Cooper, Jackson, Miss.; Anna L. Ponder, Natchez, Miss.; John Thomas Cason, Bastrop, La.; Andrew J. Murf, Shreveport, La.; James B. Binney, Waterproof, La.; Horace D. Kimball, Minden, La. The two first named received the degree of bachelor of arts, the others that of bachelor of science. The first honor was borne off by George E. Greene, the second by Mr. Ernest E. Brown. President Rush's baccalaureate was well delivered and full of practical thought.

The Board of Trustees, by the concurrence of the faculty, conferred the degree of doctor of divinity upon the Rev. David Morton, secretary of Church Extension Society, Methodist Church, South, the degree of doctor of arts in course upon Rev. W. Chambers, of the Mississippi Conference, and the degree of doctor of arts pro causa honoris upon T. Sambola Jones, Esq., of Baton Rouge.

Bishop Keener, in the address at the close of the exercises, which he made for the purpose of encouraging and reassuring the people, took higher ground and projected grander things than usual. He called for voluntary contributions for repairing the remaining rooms of the Seminary, and received six hundred and seventy-five dollars in cash and twenty-five dollars in kind. The Board of Trustees authorized President D. M. Rush to travel through the pastoral charges in the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences soliciting Centenary donations. Centenary College. What a sacred duty will be represented, what a worthy object upon which to lavish generous thank-offerings!

C. G. ANDREWS.

The following resolutions have been adopted from Mobile, and are appropriate tribute to a valuable citizen. Mobile's loss is the gain of Crescent City. In addition to above Bro. Baker was presented a solid silver pitcher and plate costing $150.

The regular service of the St. Charles Street Methodist Sunday-school, Mobile, June 1, 1884, the following was unanimously adopted:

With sorrowful hearts we recognize the loss of our beloved and faithful minister, Bro. W. L. Baker, called by business engagements to another city. Bro. Baker, elected superintendent of this school in January, 1883. Owing to depression consequent upon the aged condition of affairs, the school at that time numbered less than one hundred. Immediately upon his election Bro. Baker threw himself into the work, and, being a man of intelligent zeal, strong common sense, sterling integrity, sound judgment, fine executive ability, a warm, loving heart and personal magnetism, he so inspired his own intense earnestness, those connected with him in the school began a course of most unparalleled success, soon attaining the distinction of still being among the leading Sunday-schools of the South. And feeling deeply indebted to Bro. Baker for what he has done for us, we, the undersigned, feel constrained to follow him with our sympathy and love, and will pray our Father to give him success in his undertakings, and pour upon him his richest blessings.

Resolved, That we commend him to the merciful arms of our Father, and that we shall strive to follow in his footsteps, and to be as faithful and successful as he was. Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished Bro. Baker, and that they be published in the Advocate and Alabama Christian Advocate.

A. O. DANNEH, Sec'y.

Sunday School Convention.

In this writing we have been endeavoring to decide on the time or place for holding the Mississippi Conference-Sunday-School Convention, however, to be able to do so, we will make the announcement in the Advocate, and to secure attendance of the preachers.

W. L. NUGENT, Jackson, Miss., this writer at Enterprise, Miss.

Last session of our Conference for making out complete reports of the Sunday-school work in each pastoral charge, and in the hands of members of the board in each district to be presented among the pastors. We will please prepare their reports for Sunday-school day at the district conferences, and then send them to me.

J. M. WEEKS.

At a centennial mass meeting in Baltimore recently $32,000 was raised for a college for young women.

Dr. Wheldon, the venerable ex-rector of the Methodist Quarterly Conference, is in extremely feeble health.

The dedication of the new church at Columbia, Miss., has been postponed to the fourth Sunday in this month.

Dr. Thimms is on another lecturing tour. He lectured at Memphis yesterday on "The Bright Side of Things."

The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly, at Vicksburg, reaffirmed the action of 1871 denying the validity of Roman Catholic baptism.

The Texas Advocate comes in a new dress, but we fear that the aged Methodist of the Lone Star State, with failing eyes, will sigh for the old face again.

The first theological seminary established in this country, the Reformed Dutch, at New Brunswick, celebrated its one hundredth anniversary two weeks ago.

Rev. B. S. Rayner, presiding elder of the Seashore district, made a pop-call at our office on Monday last. He reports general prosperity in Zion throughout his extensive borders.

Miss Mollie Elliot, of Franklin Street Church, Mobile, has been accepted by the Alabama Conference Woman's Missionary Society and recommended for work in the foreign field.

A private note from Dr. J. B. Cottrell brings the grateful tidings of his improved health. He is abroad in the lecture field, attracting large audiences by his sparkling and ready eloquence.

Bishop Mallallen, one of the newly-elected Northern Methodist Bishops, has decided to make New Orleans his home instead of Austin. We learn that he is expected in the city this week.

Greensboro, Ala., is waking up to the importance of sustaining her Southern University of honored history. If all Alabama will unite on that enterprise the glory of the latter house will soon exceed the former.

Dr. Hendrix writes that the Centenary collection in the village church at Fayette, Mo., exceeded $7,000. It will reach $8,000, to be divided almost equally between foreign missions, church extension and education.

It will be seen in our highly-appreciated notes from Centenary, by Dr. Andrews, that the college did itself the honor to confer the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. David Morton, our enterprising and able church extension secretary.

It was an interesting scene when Rev. William Taylor, missionary Bishop-elect for Africa, was presented for consecration by Rev. Marshall W. Taylor, a colored man on one side, and Rev. Dennis Osborne, a Eurasian from India, on the other.

Dr. Latert, of the Richmond Christian Advocate, spent some days in Philadelphia during the General Conference, and wrote up the great sanhedrin in characteristic style. Some of his observations were evidently intended to have a double back-action.

Dr. Alfred Wheeler retires from the Pittsburg Christian Advocate with some choice farewell words. He has made a dignified, able, scholarly editor. We can only wish for his successor that the paper may be kept up to the same high standard of excellence.

Accompanying a notice for the Advocate the Rev. J. Barcroft, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes that his health is improving. He says: "For twenty years I have been cooped up in towns; now I am on a circuit in the country, and hope by Conference to have renewed my youth."

Bishop Smith, of Kentucky, the presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, died last week, in the twelfth year of his age, at the residence of his daughter in New York City. He was the first Bishop of the Kentucky diocese, and exercised his office for fifty-two years.

The Mobile & Ohio road is now known as the Meridian route, running a double daily train via the New Orleans & Northeastern road, making close connection with the North and Northwest. For a period of twenty-five years the Mobile and Ohio has, for safety, speed and comfort, maintained a first-class reputation. In all that time no serious accident has occurred. From a personal knowledge of this road, extending over many years, the writer can testify of its superior management. The special attractions on this route are the superb eating-houses, located at Meridian, Artesia and Elvies. In point of elegance they are equal to the first-class hotels of any city in the Union.

A recent Quarterly Conference of Shearn Memorial Church, Houston, Texas, passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That the earnest thanks of this church are due and are hereby tendered to Mr. P. P. Werlein, of New Orleans, for his generous gift of a handsome Mason & Hamlin organ for the use of our church.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction will be made for postoffice orders or registered letters.

GARVER & JAMISON.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the Advocate. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the Advocate.

GARVER & JAMISON, Publishers.

A merchant who died suddenly, not long ago, left on his desk a letter he had intended mailing to a correspondent. An Irish clerk, finding it, put it off after adding the postscript: "Since writing the above I have died."

Life is too full of trouble for the child, and a splendid mother and inventor. With a cure of your child, if you will. "No sir! you can't put the wool over my eyes in that way."

He: "Julia, I do wish you would write home." She: "I told you before we married that I wouldn't. He: "Oh, come now; I'll give you a letter home if you will." She: "No sir! you can't put the wool over my eyes in that way."

SAXITRINE, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures. Cough, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Eczema, etc.

A poet asks, in a few simple verses, "Who will plant flowers on my grave?" An editor answers: "We can't give names; but we can assure him that if he had published the lines every subscriber to this valuable journal would feel it incumbent upon him to act as a committee of one on planting."

The weak, worn, and dyspeptic should take COLMAN'S LIGHT BEER TONIC. Colman's, sold in bottles. Or, druggists.

When you fret and fume at the petty ills of life, remember that the wheels which go round without creaking last longest.

For pimples, use GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP. HILL'S Hair and Whisker Dye, 50 cts. HILL'S TONIC CURE DROPS cure in one minute.

A gentleman was congratulating a friend the other day on his recent marriage. "Yes," said the latter, thanking him for his pleasant words, "I'm married and I'm right on there is nothing like it, and you don't get the right one I suppose there is nothing like it."

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

One morning, as a gentleman was sitting out of doors at a farm-house with some children, a number of cows were driven by on their way to the pasture. "See, children," said the gentleman, "see the udders that give you your fresh milk." A small lad turned to the gentleman, and, with the utmost earnestness, said: "That ain't where we get our milk. We get it from the milkman."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

A bent pin on a chair is an indication of an early spring.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the Advocate.

"Mamma, the old hen is sitting." "Say nothing, my child." "But setting and right." "Don't contradict. I know better than you. The old hen is sitting." "All right. She's setting on the fence."

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon Sts., New Orleans, has a good 7 octave rosewood piano for $125; an elegant new 7 1/2 octave rosewood piano for $200 cash; an elegant new piano for $250, or $200 a week or $500 per month, for the first year; a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low prices. The Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Decker, Hardman, Werlein, Hale, Schomaker, Behning and Gable pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Sterling and Bay State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Immediate delivery and promptness in exchange, or part payments for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent to any address.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say: Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the Advocate or not.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resort. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

For all points in Texas and California (take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent) via Houston.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, and general debility. The most useful, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured by its use than by any other preparation. It is sold by all druggists, and E. H. TRUAX, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SITUATION WANTED.

A young man of good moral character, and who will graduate at the University of Alabama in June, and who will be prepared to take charge of a series of High Trade, desires a situation. For particulars, apply to Mr. J. C. DuBoise, Secretary of University of Alabama, 100 DuBoise, South Hill, Ala., and Gen. L. Hawkins, Enterprise, Miss.

PLEASE SANT rooms, moderate price, 188 Thalia St., near St. Charles.

COMMENCEMENT

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE. Friday night, June 13.—Exhibition of Primary Department.

Sunday, June 15.—Commencement sermon by Rev. Felix R. Hill.

Monday night, June 16.—Junior Exhibition.

Tuesday night, June 17.—Alumni Celebration.

Wednesday night, June 18.—Alumni Concert.

Thursday night, June 19.—Graduating Exercises.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

PORT OLSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Friday, June 13, 8 P. M.—Exhibition of Primary Department.

Sunday, June 15, 11 A. M.—Commencement sermon by Rev. T. S. West.

Monday, June 16, 11 A. M.—Annual meeting of Board of Trustees, 8 P. M.—Exhibition of Collegiate Department.

Tuesday, June 17, 10 A. M.—Commencement Day exercises of the Graduating Class. Annual address by Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D. 8 P. M.—Annual concert. Presentation of Medals.

T. C. BRADFORD, President.

CLOSING EXERCISES

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE, BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

June 9-17, 1884.

June 9-13.—Annual examination.

June 13-15.—Contest in music for gold medals.

June 15, 8 P. M.—Entertainment by Primaries.

June 15, 8 P. M.—Exercises in Recreation.

June 15, 11 A. M.—Annual session, by Rev. R. S. Woodward, 3 P. M.—Anniversary of Christian Association. Address by Rev. W. H. Sims.

June 16, 10 A. M.—Essays by the Senior Class, 3 P. M.—Annual meeting of Board of Trustees, 8 P. M.—Anniversary of Alumni Association, 3 P. M.—Grand concert.

June 17, 10 A. M.—Commencement exercises. Annual address by Hon. Charles E. Hooker, 7 to 11 P. M. Socially.

Public cordially invited. Ministers who expect to be present will please to notify me.

H. F. JOHNSON, President.

A Champion Book

FOR BOYS.

"Gildersoy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.

Send seventy-five cents to the author

E. G. PORTER,

Verona, Miss.

By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

AGENTS WANTED to whom 100 per cent.

profit is allowed to introduce the

CHEAPEST ALBUM

ever sold. Contains places for 100 photographs. Is handsomely bound with gilt titles and edges, 9 1/2 in. by 6 in. Retail price $2.50. Wholesale price $1.50. Complete Album sent for examination for $1.25. Can be returned if not satisfactory. Sent at sight. 14 numbered circulars FREE. Address

FORNIE & HENMAN, Cincinnati, O.

FOR RENT—A House, a newly-erected residence, containing five rooms, furnished, situated on the beach between the high house and the Camp Ground. Apply to

JOHN E. MORRISON, Biloxi, Miss.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE

—TO THE—

NORTH and NORTHWEST,

Via N. O. and N. E., and Mobile

and Ohio Railroads.

Pullman Sleepers on both trains. Close connections made at BRIMLEY DEPOT, ST. LOUIS, with all diverging lines.

Excursion Tickets on sale to the Summer Resorts of the great Northwest.

Trains leave New Orleans at 11 A. M. and 10 P. M. The 10 P. M. train daily has sleepers (brought to St. Louis without change).

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Ending Houses on this line are unexcelled by any in the country.

For Maps, Time Tables, etc., call on or address

H. W. GILLENPECK,

General Agent M. and O. N. R., Gravier and St. Charles streets.

G. JORDAN, Gen. Manager, Mobile, Ala.

CHAS. J. WALLER, G. P. A., Mobile, Ala.

MECHANIC'S TRADER'S

Insurance Company.

14 CARondelet STREET,

New Orleans, La.

Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks,

AT LOWEST RATES.

GEO. H. FROST, LLOYD R. COLEMAN,

Secretaries.

F. C. GREGORY, J. M. CRAWFORD,

Asst. Secs. and Fire Clks. and Marine Clks.

R. C. SHORTRIDGE, F. A. ZIPT, Collectors.

TRUSTEES:

J. H. Allen, H. J. Levy,

J. A. Braselton, H. J. Mullin,

J. B. Carver, Robert Maxwell,

J. D. Cohn, Ed. S. S. S. S.

H. P. Colman, J. J. D. D.

H. D. C. C. C. C.

J. M. Frankel, A. N. S. S.

J. G. G. G. G. G.

J. H. H. H. H. H.

J. L. L. L. L. L.

J. M. M. M. M. M.

J. N. N. N. N. N.

J. O. O. O. O. O.

J. P. P. P. P. P.

J. Q. Q. Q. Q. Q.

J. R. R. R. R. R.

J. S. S. S. S. S.

J. T. T. T. T. T.

J. U. U. U. U. U.

J. V. V. V. V. V.

J. W. W. W. W. W.

J. X. X. X. X. X.

J. Y. Y. Y. Y. Y.

J. Z. Z. Z. Z. Z.

J. A. A. A. A. A.

J. B. B. B. B. B.

J. C. C. C. C. C.

J. D. D. D. D. D.

J. E. E. E. E. E.

J. F. F. F. F. F.

J. G. G. G. G. G.

J. H. H. H. H. H.

J. I. I. I. I. I.

J. J. J. J. J. J.

J. K. K. K. K. K.

J. L. L. L. L. L.

J. M. M. M. M. M.

J. N. N. N. N. N.

J. O. O. O. O. O.

J. P. P. P. P. P.

J. Q. Q. Q. Q. Q.

J. R. R. R. R. R.

J. S. S. S. S. S.

J. T. T. T. T. T.

J. U. U. U. U. U.

J. V. V. V. V. V.

J. W. W. W. W. W.

J. X. X. X. X. X.

J. Y. Y. Y. Y. Y.

J. Z. Z. Z. Z. Z.

J. A. A. A. A. A.

J. B. B. B. B. B.

J. C. C. C. C. C.

J. D. D. D. D. D.

J. E. E. E. E. E.

J. F. F. F. F. F.

J. G. G. G. G. G.

J. H. H. H. H. H.

J. I. I. I. I. I.

J. J. J. J. J. J.

J. K. K. K. K. K.

MISCELLANEA NEORIS

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Home Production

YEAST POWDER

It, as it always has been, a pure, unsulphurated article. Kneaded free from Ash, Has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure Powder and a home production it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 179 (Third street, by Mrs. A. Goodwyn, widow of the late J. M. Goodwyn, and handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in cask or bulk, will be promptly filled at the lowest rates. New Orleans.

TRAVELING PREACHER

We have arranged with over-Sixty able to furnish carefully prepared articles the centenary page of the
ST. LOUIS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and that every traveling preacher may see same, we propose to send the ADVOCATE the first of January 1885, to such as are now getting it on receipt of
ONLY TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, which may be sent us in postage stamp costs nothing.

This offer is to the travelling preachers of Regular subscription price $2.00 per year.
Address LOAN D. DAMEON, Manager,
913 Pluc St., St. Louis, Mo.

THE COMPLETE HOME. ARDRE WILSON book New edition—New binding. New illustrations Designed for the modern golden age. Same long Adapted to all classes, sells at 25c. Agents doing big EXCELLENT TERMS. The handsomest money to receive Apply now. N. M. GARDNER, 100 N. 3rd St., St. Louis, Mo. Also other grand new books and

TO SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

PURE DELIGHT
A New Sunday School Song Book
 By GEO. F. ROOR and C. C. CARR.
Contains New and Bright Words, Easy and Inspiring Music; Pure and Elevated Sentiments.
 One of the leading features of the book is a BEAUTIFUL RESPONSIVE SERVICE
 Especially prepared for it by REV. W. H. PLATT, F.W.H. MILLER, Esq.
 The book is printed and bound in beautiful boards. Price, 35c ea., each by mail, post-paid; a dozen by express, not re-paid. Specimen pages free.

Published by
JOHN CHURCH & CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

CINCINNATI, NEW YORK
ROOT & RONS MUSIC CO. J. CHURCH
200 Wabash Ave. 6 Union Square

For Sale by Booksellers and Music Dealers

Mrs. POTT'S
GRAND SINGING SADS IRON

GOLD HAND

ADVANTAGES

DO NOT BURN THE HAND.
DETACHABLE

WALNUT HANDLE,
DOUBLE POINTED, IRON BOTH W
BEST IN USE AND CHEA
— THREE IRONS —
ONE HANDLE AND A STAND TO A
FOR SALE BY THE HARDWARE TRAD

STANDARD SUGAR MACHIN
Known and U
The World O

Cane Mills
For Horse and Steam

Sugar Evaporator
Vacuum Pan
Steam Sugar Tank

We are the sole makers of the V. Great Western, and Niles Cane Mills. original and genuine Cook Evaporator of the Automatic Cook Evaporator. of imitations of the Cook Evaporator. The inferior in material and construction so inferior merit is low price. The genuine Cook Evaporator.

for has our Ironed thereon.

BLMYER MANUFACTURING
CINCINNATI, O.
Manufacturers of Steam Engines, Boilers, Ice Machines and Refrigerating Machines

Fast Potato Diggi

THE MONARCH POTATO DIGGER
Saves it cost yearly, FIVE OVER. In every field
anted to Dig the it
Gushes

SENT ON

60 Days'
Test Trial.

Agents Want

Write postal card for FREE elegantly illustrated Catalogue, in Six Brilliant Colors, at the cost of $3.00 to publish.

Monarch Manufacturing Co., 205 State Street, CHICAGO.

HEADQUARTERS
—FOR—
Sunday - School Supplies

Consisting in part of
GOSPEL IN M.S., single and Combined,
 With and without Music.
 Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teach Bibles (Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with glass) B
 Dictionaries etc.
 Panton Primers, First and Second Reading Boo
 Union, Spelling Books: Union Question Bo
 Catechisms: Reward Cards: Scripture Text Car Tickets, etc. Also a large assortment of books an ible for Sunday School Libraries, or private children's Bible and Family Bibles from 50
 416 Library. I want to put these in churches
 Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application
 W. L.

W. D. SKILLMAN,
Business Manager,

94 Camp street, New Orleans

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 25.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1455.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Single copies, 10 cents.
All payments in advance.

Advertisements at the rate of 10 cents per line for the first week, and 5 cents for each subsequent week.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GOSPEY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. O. E. GALLOWAY, D. D.,
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

AT MY MOTHER'S GRAVE.

BY GEORGE D. PHENTICE.
The trembling dewdrops fall
Upon the shuffling flowers; like souls at rest
The stars shine gloriously; and all
Above me, are blest?
Mother, I love thy grave!
The violet, with its blossoms blue and mild,
Waves o'er thy head; when shall it wave
Above thy child?
Tis a sweet flower, yet small
Its bright leaves to the coming tempest bow;
Dear mother, 'tis the emblem—dust
Is on thy brow.
And I could love to die;
To leave untroubled life's dark, bitter streams;
To leave thee, as I left thee, in the night,
And share thy dreams.
And must I linger here,
A lonely branch upon a withered tree,
Whose last frail leaf, unloosely here,
Waits down with thee?
On from life's withered bough,
In still communion with the past, I turn
And muse on thee, the only flower
In memory's urn.
And, when the evening pale
Falls like a shroud, on the dim blue wave,
I long to hear the night winds wail
Around thy grave.
Where has thy spirit flown?
I gaze above; thy look is lit up there;
I listen—mid the gentle tone
Is on the air.
Oh, come, while here I press
My brow upon thy grave, and, in those mild
And thrilling tones of tenderness,
Bless, bless thy child.
Yes, bless thy weeping child,
And ere the dawn—thy holiest shrine—
Thy, give his spirit, untroubled,
To blend with thine.

Methodism and Education.

BY REV. E. H. MONTGOMERY, A. M.

No organization ever had a truer conception of its mission—the mission of the church—than Methodism had in its origin. It had an eagle's eye to measure the world, and a heart to embrace it. Like the prophet on the mount of vision, it beheld the nations of the earth and comprehended their need. It had a clear conception of the two facts that all men need salvation, and that the gospel provides a salvation for them. Hence Mr. Wesley said, "The world is my parish," and he at once set at work those agencies intended to evangelize the whole world. As a subsidiary to this grand purpose, he employed every means within his reach that could serve to enlighten and bless the world. The large use that he made of the printing press is a marvel even to us of to-day. He knew the benefit of schools, and at an early date as possible he began their establishment. Mr. Wesley never believed in the sanctity of ignorance, and had no use for it. When he had no educational institution of his own to provide for, he took up a collection among the colliers for the College of New Jersey, now Princeton, which was then being established, and that great school was founded with the aid of the money and prayers of Mr. Wesley and his people. Thus early did Methodism put itself on record as the friend and promoter of education.

This is nothing strange when we bear in mind the training and attainments of that man who, under God, was its founder. It may not add anything to the measure of his fame; it may, indeed, be a small claim to make; but the claim is well founded that Mr. Wesley was one of the fullest and most accomplished scholars of his age—an age of great scholars. Buckle, in his "History of Civilization in England," lays stress on this fact—on the accurate and voluminous knowledge and great intellectual power of Wesley, Dr. Adam Clarke, and some others of the early Methodists. These were giants in those days. Methodism has ever since followed in the line of the traditions received and the impress then made. In all lands under her care the school has appeared along with the church, and each has done its beneficent work. Especially has this been the case in America and, literally, in the wilds of the land she has been engaged in the task of evangelizing and educating. It made no difference in what quarter she wrought or who were her exponents. They all were united as to the importance, the very necessity of education. To-day the Methodists of the United States, according to the census, own and control more institutions of learning of a high character than any other people. Of these the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has over seventy, and this report is not a full one, several excellent institutions known to us being left out.

The church is to be commended for what she has accomplished in the past; but, as acknowledging that she has not done all of duty in this matter, or all possible to her, the question recurs in every Quarterly Conference, "What is doing for the cause of education?" This is intended to keep a lofty ideal before the church, and to stimulate and direct to its realization. This policy of our church is in striking contrast with that of some others. There are churches preceding ours on American soil by several years whose institutions of learning are the fewest and feeblest, especially in the Southern States, and notwithstanding the fact that these churches were possessed of a large measure of wealth. This has come to pass by reason of different views as to the functions of the church. They have relegated education to the State, while our ministers and people have believed firmly that one great function of the church of Christ is to educate. On this point we have never had any divided counsels, and if there has been among us any error, it has been in the opposite direction—some claiming that this is the province of the church solely. But, mainly, the theory is that both Church and State have here a work to do.

To the State elementary education has been given over by virtue of circumstances; but the church can never consent to give up all direction of the higher education of the land. She must build up and maintain colleges and universities. There are two convincing reasons for this:—The one is that the institutions of learning controlled by the State may become godless, though this is not a necessary result. With us the State is pledged to the propagation of no form of religion; hence the grossest errors may be taught, and it may be impossible to expel such teachers from the class-rooms. South Carolina has had a sad history on this point. From the highest throne of her State College there issued for years the most corrupting stream of error and infidelity which, flowing all over the land, carried the evil influences to a whole generation. It is when such errors are seated in the teacher's chair that they are most to be dreaded. Materialism may show itself in business and in society and in politics, and then it is revolting enough; but when formulated into a creed and taught with authority it is the most hideous and fearful. It is the angel of destruction dropping the seeds of death from its black wings as it flies over all the land. On the other hand, a school maintained by the church may be made the conservator of religion and the teacher of the truth.

The other reason rendering it necessary for the church of Christ to keep her hold on the higher learning is because in this way alone she preserve her power and influence. It is said that up to the time when Macaulay framed a code for India, British influence there had nothing of permanency whatever; that if they had then retired from that land, in five years the impress made would have worn out; that the most lasting tokens of their occupancy were the empty thrones of imported establishments. Hitherto British domination had given birth neither to law or literature. Of a like fallacy would be the influence of the church which essays to accomplish anything to-day without directing the higher thought of the world. The church should make literature and science her allies; not that she is dependent upon them, but it is better to have them friends and helpers, rather than enemies.

Again, Methodism struck the right path when she acted according to the policy that education is for the people. A great difference is to be seen here. There may be much class or professional educating, and but little advancement in the world. There is no real progress until the people themselves are taught. "All depths are measured from the level of the sea." Doctors, lawyers, even priests and ministers, may be trained, and the people remain in the shadow of great darkness and the world receive but small benefit. Recognizing this fact, Methodism has done her work among the masses that there might be an advance all along the line.

At this Centenary period we should not content ourselves with a congratulatory review of the past, but go on to still greater achievement. It may not be a time for the projecting of new schools; but we should endeavor to build up those already founded and put them beyond all ordinary contingency. Our female colleges need and deserve our help, and so does our only school for boys—Centenary College. After all there is nothing so important as the proper education of boys who are after awhile to be the real rulers of the world. Centenary College by its efficiency hitherto has proven itself eminently worthy, and it should have our affection and prayers and offerings.

Pastoral Courtesy.

BY LAYMAN.

MR. EDITOR: Your editorial paragraph, commending the course of a New Orleans pastor in following up a member of his church who had removed to a distant city, was read with pleasure and approval by all who have received such pastoral attention or suffered from the lack of it. But is it not significant of an unhealthy condition of things in the church when such a natural act of spiritual oversight on the part of one having the care of souls should occasion remark, especially to the extent that the favorable notice of it in one of our Advocates should be copied into another and again made the subject of a commendatory paragraph?

I am glad, however, that Bro. Hill performed that little act of pastoral courtesy and that the ADVOCATE took notice of it; for about that time I became acquainted with a case so opposite that I needed the tonic effect of an instance to prove that our preachers do not generally neglect similar duties. This case I repeat in the hope that it may possibly quicken the zeal of some who minister to us in holy things.

A gentleman, a member of our church, and one fairly well known in his own Conference, had a younger brother engaged in business in an adjoining State—a young man of promise, but unfortunately wild, inclined to be skeptical in religious matters and by no means disposed to be communicative with his friends at home in regard to his business or spiritual interests. Deeply concerned on this account, the gentleman wrote to the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, stationed in the city in question, and asked him, at his convenience, to make the young man's acquaintance and, if possible, to bring him under the influence of the church. The letter expressed the great solicitude of the writer, and closed with an earnest request for a reply. Several months passed and, no answer being received, a second letter was written—this time to another Methodist pastor in the same city, a young man whose praise for zeal and talent is in all the churches. This also elicited no information.

Some time after this the younger went to reside successively in principal cities of two other neighboring States. The pastors of our church in these cities were also written to in turn, and nearly in the same urgent terms as before, but up to this time without effect. The last letter was mailed more than two months ago. Each of the series asked for an answer, and enclosed stamp to pay postage on the same.

Now, if but one letter had been written on the subject, its failure to accomplish the object desired would not be surprising, for one might conceive of a pastor being so occupied at some exceptional time as to overlook a request so unusual as that I have mentioned; but that this should occur four times in succession, and involve four different preachers in different States—the whole affair covering a period of nearly two years—seems a little remarkable, to say the least of it. Surely some of the letters must have been received, since not one has been returned from the dead letter office and, as I had reason to know, were properly stamped, addressed and mailed.

Does it not seem strange, Mr. Editor—not to say, hard—that we should ever ask a Methodist preacher to have a care of a friend or brother easily within his reach, and not feel assured that the request will be regarded even to the small extent of eliciting an answer?

Brethren of the ministry, suffer a word of exhortation, even if it comes from a common man. The salvation of a soul may depend upon some little attention you may show to a stranger in a strange land, and a soul turned toward righteousness—a soul "among lions"—cheered and strengthened by a grasp of your hand or any sympathetic act or word is better worth than the eloquent sermon which the brethren ask for publication or the brilliant lecture which brings down the house. But if you can not spare time to hunt up wild young men in a great city; if that flue thought must be elaborated for next Sunday's sermon; if the grand passage must be polished for the praise of the cultivated audience before whom you are to lecture during the week, take time, even if it be on Monday, the preacher's rest day—take time, let me beg you, to answer the letter of a brother who asks your interest and aid in saving a brother's soul from death.

Jesus Blessing Little Children.

BY REV. ANGELO DOWLING.

Mark says: "They brought young children to him that he should touch (epetai) them." Luke says: "They brought unto him also infants that he would touch (epetai) them." Touch is the rendering of epetai, which means join, connect. The act of Jesus shows this to be the meaning. In this connection, for he did more than simply touch them. The act of Jesus shows this to be the intention of those who brought their babies to him. Therefore he joined the babies to something! What was that something? He tells us that something was the kingdom of God. Did he then and there send them right up into glory? Did he kill them to save them? From the record, he either killed them and sent their souls up to heaven or he blessed them and officially connected them with the kingdom of God on earth—the church of God! He did not kill them; therefore he joined them into the church by an act peculiar to himself as "the Head over all things to the church." Thus the Old Testament blessing and the New Testament perfection are ratified. The Old says: "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies." The New says: "And Jesus said unto them, Yea, have we never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?"

Thus the glory of God is seen and felt in the fact that the perfection of praise is the peculiar and mighty work of babes, both on earth and in heaven; and that church on earth which rejects babes is unlike the church triumphant in heaven, and is to that degree offensive to Jesus Christ and is destined to go under sooner or later. What! shelter and protect the sheep and turn out the tender lambs to the prowling wolves of hell? What will become of that flock in the course of time? It is the part of wisdom always to obey and follow the great Shepherd and Bishop of souls.

But your correspondent, "Incognitus," propounds this question: "Why was 'water' substituted for 'hands' in the rite of blessing little children?" Because Christ commands his ministers of the gospel to use water—clean water—in baptizing infants as well as adults, although the laying on of hands is not forbidden. Both may be performed and often is in the solemn rite of dedication, or consecration, of persons to the church or service thereof. Under the great commission Christ specifies baptism: "Go ye, therefore, and teach (disciple) all nations (families), baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Let it be observed that the first "teach" in this commission means to make disciples by baptizing them. The second "teaching" enjoins the duty of giving instruction under the commands, "whatsoever," of Christ. Christ had censured his disciples for rebuking those who brought their children to him. He commands them not to forbid, but to encourage the coming of little children to his kingdom on earth. They come in by baptism. Therefore Christ commands his ministers to baptize babies as well as adults.

The apostles so understood Christ and acted accordingly. They baptized families, households, including the infants. Not an instance can be shown in the New Testament where the apostles rejected an infant after this.

Besides, it can not be shown from authentic church history that there ever was an objection offered to baptizing infants till that strange doctrine of baptismal regeneration entered into the church—till the church apostatized from the teaching and commands of Jesus Christ. Then the argument was, Delay baptism till just before death, and the baptized shall be saved.

The purpose of Christ is to save the whole life from infancy to old age and perfect the praise of God in the gift of his son.

Will "Incognitus" do me the favor to give his name in next writing.

RAMEY, ALA., June 4, 1884.

"A Centenary Thought" vs. "A Dolorosa of Doubt."

MR. EDITOR: I offer a few words by way of reply to Bro. H. Walter Featherston's criticism of an article of mine recently published. His "Dolorosa of Doubt" could not possibly have been found in my article. It was not its intention; neither did it state nor imply that there was "a decline of faith," a "decay of Christianity," a "retrogression of the pulpit" (if by that is meant a decline in talent and learning), "a growing demoralization." It was unjust in Bro. Featherston to quote these as if even implied in what I had written, and it was unkind to sort my utterances with Ingersoll's, and the contents of the ADVOCATE with what he terms the "filth and infidelity" of a San Francisco paper.

All he claims in behalf of the progress of Christianity at the present day is thus admitted in my article: "While we are studying the noble parts of our history, and contemplating the wonderful accretions of power bequeathed to us during these hundred years," etc. But I do not endorse the reflection which he makes on the Southern Methodist pulpit of half a century ago when he says, "the majority of preachers (then) were men of less than ordinary ability." It may be true if by ability he means scholarship; but if he means power to move the masses by the "foolishness of preaching," he is certainly mistaken, and the best evidence of it is the present wealth of our ecclesiastical inheritance.

Effects must have adequate causes, and if we had no thrilling records of the feats of the old-time preachers, by the results themselves we would know there must have been giants in those days. The truth is, others labored, and we have entered into their labors. Not an educational institution, nor a mission station, nor full treasury, nor any other sign of our progress, but has relations, intimate and close, to the toils and sacrifices, the wise plannings and powerful preachings of those old heroes who planted the seed that has borne all this fruit. All that I ask is that we learn the secret of their power.

J. W. M.

Our Plan of Pastoral Work.

BY CHARLES E. DEENS, PASTOR OF THE CHURCH OF STRANGERS.

The pastor must know his flock. He must see his people that he may know how to preach, and that he may instruct and comfort each soul. How is he to do this in a large congregation in a great city? The very qualities which have gathered his congregation must have drawn attention to him so as to multiply the demands the public will make upon the pastor—demands which he can not ignore without diminishing his influence as a pastor.

For some time I have followed a plan which has been of great service in my pastoral work. It may not suit others; but Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, who heard of it several years ago, made a pastor in her "Story of Arni" adopt it. Several clergymen have lately been witnesses to its working, and at their solicitation this statement is prepared.

On the roll of communicants of the Church of Strangers are over six hundred names, and that list is kept so carefully purged that we believe 250 persons are known. They must be seen. They live in a circle whose radius is about six miles. There are strangers who are temporarily in the city who have special claims on this pastor. There are outsiders who must be visited. Frequently there are several sick at a time, and miles apart. Then there are innumerable interruptions which consume time. There is church business to be dispatched. There are church charities to be dispensed. How is this all to be done? This is our plan:

To each member there is given at the first of the year a card, with his name and church number on it, ruled so that he can keep record of the communion Sundays, and spaces left for answer to the questions: "Have you visited your pastor this year?" "Has your pastor visited you this year?" These cards are collected between the December communion and Christmas. (Communion every month, first Sunday.) When collected a list is made of all those whom the pastor has not visited, and he endeavors to visit them during the year. To those who have not visited the pastor a written invitation is sent during the year, specifying the time the parishioner should call. If practicable, the pastor has a reception every week at his house, from three to six and from half-past seven to nine P. M., and he announces the day from the pulpit on the preceding Sunday. He does not have a fixed day because there are persons who have engagements on certain evenings of the year round. By varying the day all have an opportunity. Moreover, if he had an invariable day, it would preclude other things, such as marriages, funerals, preaching elsewhere, which might arise during the week. All who wish to see the pastor are without excuse if they complain that they had not pastoral attention.

On the visiting day the callers are shown into the front parlor, and there they may read or converse until each person's turn comes. They are seen in the rear parlor, each alone, or friends together, or members of the same family together, as they may choose, but each in the order of his coming.

Will they come? My memoranda shows that September 3 there were 15 visitors, and prayer was had with 12; September 11, visitors 20, prayer with 13. One week it was Monday, the next, Tuesday. It will be seen from this average that if two-thirds were church members, and 400 members would have visited the pastor. In looking over the memoranda mentioned above I find that in six hours, time having been taken for dinner, I had done pastoral work which would have required three whole days with a carriage to have accomplished. And it was done more satisfactorily. My pastoral work calls me to the poorest and the richest in New York, as the work of pastors in smaller places calls them to the extremes of society. I think I may say that in one-half the cases I feel that the time selected for the visit was unfortunate. The men are not seen by day; they are at their business; the women have their household work or social engagements. Some have visitors. Some are in boarding-houses. Some are so situated that there is no opportunity for prayer. All these difficulties are avoided by a visit to the pastor. It is known that he will be at home, that it will be no intrusion or interruption, that in as much privacy as in his own home the parishioner may have interview, counsel and the help of prayer. My people like it better and better.

This plan gives the pastor more time to visit the sick, to follow those who ought to have a pastor's care, but will not seek it. It does not take the place of the pastor's visiting his flock. From the interviews at his house he often learns the needs of going somewhere he never would have thought of. It does not do away with work, but it doubles pastoral usefulness. The reports in our church at the last annual meeting show that the pastor had made 426 calls and paid 629 visits during the year 1882.

This is the best plan for me. It is not urged upon any other pastor.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1884.

BY RAYMOND B. STEARNS.

There is a ready-made for such an hour
as we think not the South of Man, church. — Matthew XXIV, 40.

It will come, perhaps, at midnight,
When the sun is low and sweet,
By the country road and heart,
When the nation's eye looks toward
The shining heights of life,
And the cross is in the path,
Waiting for some noble strife.

It will come, perhaps, at midnight,
When the pulse of life throbs high,
When the fruit of love is ripening,
And the heart is in the path,
Then, through all the full and splendid
Of the land's manifold face,
It may be, in the evening,
Under a starry sky,
Clouds around the sunset glow,
Far and dark the shadows lie,
When we long for rest and slumber,
And come tender thoughts of home
Fill the heart with vague, and yearning,
Then, perhaps, the Lord will come.

If the only light is ready
In the morning's happy light,
In the strong and very solitude
Of the coming of the night;
If the only light is ready
In the morning's happy light,
In the strong and very solitude
Of the coming of the night;
If the only light is ready
In the morning's happy light,
In the strong and very solitude
Of the coming of the night;

New York Observer.

Bishop Thompson's Diocesan Address.

Mr. Editor: It is specially a duty from your standpoint to criticize, as you did, very modestly, yet incisively (in the Advocate of May 29), the remarkable address of "Rt. Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, Bishop of the Diocese of Mississippi." You are his peer in our esteem, being an elder in the church of God, having some, if not all, of the modern allusions to your name, and the editor of a leading church paper. The addition of a word may darken counsel, if of any effect at all, yet I make the venture.

I am impressed with what he says on the subject of the "religious instruction of the colored people." I quote him again, in part, on this point: "I think I have seen enough in my work in the diocese to make me believe that there is a field for the church among the colored people of the State, and that, in fact, we hold that which is their sole hope morally." Mirabile dictu! Surely "the church" (?) has been very slow to make this important discovery. What a comment this upon the administration of his venerable predecessor and all the company of priests and deacons associated with him for many years past. Bishop Green was certainly a most vigilant overseer of "the church" in this diocese. He was abundant in labors, and I believe a truly devout man. Then, among the "clergy" of the diocese, eye, even the more prominent ones, were and are some who claimed to have been Methodists once, and, if so, had been taught better things. Can it be that neither of these had discovered hitherto that there was a "field for the church among the colored people" in this State? Nay, verily, it can be proven by as reliable testimony as any in the land that long years ago it was apparent, as it is to-day, that this "field" was open to gospel enterprise. But the clergy of "the church" (?) were disinclined to enter and cultivate it. Holding, as the Bishop says, "that which is their sole hope morally," they held it so high, so far away, that the poor slave-never, or rarely ever, saw or heard it from their lips.

The Bishop says: "One now and then meets a pious negro man or woman trained to the church's ways in a devout church household of the old time, etc." "Now and then!" Whence came these? Were they "trained" in Mississippi? Possibly; but if so he may truthfully say, "now and then" he meets with such as he describes. Thick of it among the four millions of slaves said to have been liberated by the war thousands, aye hundreds of thousands, professing Christianity are still destitute of "their sole hope morally," which has been held by "the church" and hitherto ministered mainly, if not exclusively, to the white folks. What a fearful indictment! What plea will "the church" (?) enter? I venture that among the negroes of the "old time" who are truly pious many may be found who belonged to "church households" but who were "trained" by Methodist missionaries, not in the ways of "the church," but in the doctrines of the gospel, as contained in Capers' Catechism, and by other means suited to strive comprehension.

Just thirty-eight years ago I was sent as a missionary to the negroes on the plantations in the northeastern part of Claiborne county. My "field" embraced a large proportion of what was then one of the wealthiest and most important parishes in the diocese of Mississippi. My principal supporters were members of the Episcopal Church. It was by the written request of some of them, with others, that I was sent there. I preached to and catechized their negroes in the Episcopal Church, a privilege rarely accorded to one of the "sects." All this time there was a rector of the parish alternating between Port Gibson and the church to which I refer, holding "that which is the sole hope morally" of the negroes, but only dispensing it to the white folks.

The parish in which my mission lay was composed of some of the wealthiest, most intelligent and influential citizens of Claiborne county. Many of their posterity to-day enjoy high social positions, and are not without enviable reputation in the public walks of life. They were zealous "church men and women." Still they desired a Methodist missionary to preach to their negroes. Wherefore? Was it because they thought there was one gospel for the master and another for the slave? One gospel for the white man and another gospel for the negro? Did these people believe with Bishop Thompson that the handful of "church" people so-called, and they only, "held that which was the sole hope morally" of the slaves under their charge and yet withheld this boon from them, and feed their poor beleaguered souls upon mere husks that a minister from one of the "sects" might be able to provide for them? By the memory I cherish of their unselfish liberality in my support, the generous, noble, Christian hospitality I shared at their tables and around their firesides I feel constrained to repel the insinuation. These people felt it was due their servants to give them the gospel. Their own minister did not fancy this "field." And more than this, they felt and acknowledged that the machinery of "the church" (?) could not be operated successfully among a set of illiterate plantation negroes, and that the only practicable mode was the plain and simple one adopted by the Methodist missionary—preaching, praying, singing, reading the Scriptures, catechizing and instructing the children and grown people alike, for they were all as children, and had to be taught as such. The "clergy" of that day were perhaps of the sort the learned Bishop describes as "seeking good parishes," basking in the skirts of abundance, of luxury and worldliness, ready to be rich men's hirelings for an easy life. Of one thing I am certain, they were seldom at the couch of the poor sick or dying negro, ministering to him the "sole hope morally." If God in mercy saves my soul in heaven I expect to have, as stars in my crown of rejoicing, the redeemed spirit of many a poor negro, "trained," not in "the church's ways," but in the way of salvation through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, of the knowledge of which to them I have been the humble instrument as a missionary. When will this vespertine nonsense about "the church" cease? Can it be that the Christian world is to be perpetually annoyed while the sensible though irreligious are to be disgusted by it? Let this be the rule: "By their fruits ye shall know them."

H. J. HARRIS.

Retrospective.

TENTH PAPER.

After parting with my friend, Dr. Mathews, and receiving his promise that by the help of the Lord he would endeavor to restate himself in the favor of God and the ministry he had for a few years abandoned, and leaving the dying man in the hands of a near relative, and assisting a gentleman in finding his lost trunk, I was ready to go on board the steamboat Timoleon to proceed on my journey. A short distance above St. Louis we left the turbid waters of the Mississippi and entered the clear, beautiful Illinois river.

Having no care for the sick and no intimate friends with whom to converse I had ample time for reflection. I thought of the pastoral charge I had left for a time to the care of others, and could but hope and pray that the work of the Master would not suffer by my temporary absence. I thought I could see the hand of Providence in the occurrences already related during my short trip up the Mississippi river. I realized that there could be good accomplished outside the regular pastorate. A person who is content to pass through life disregarding the wants and happiness of others is too selfish to comply with the injunction of the Apostle Paul: "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."

Lesalle, the head of navigation on the Illinois river, was reached in due time. As this was before the railroad had stripped the northwestern prairies, we traveled by a much slower process on a canal boat to the rapidly growing city of Chicago, at that time having a population of thirty thousand. Stopping at a first-class hotel, my traveling companion (who was fond of innocent trickery), registered my name "Prof. Morse," which excited a little curiosity on the part of bystanders. They doubtless thought from personal appearance I came far short of measuring up to the personnel of my distant relative, the inventor of the magnetic telegraph.

What a wonderful country is ours! How rapidly does it increase in population and in inventive genius! The cities which a few years ago contained their ten thousand inhabitants now number their hundred thousands. The forests which were untouched by the woodman's ax, and the vast prairies which bloomed in their annual beauty and fragrance,

"Where many a flower was born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air," have been made to yield to brain and muscle, and furnish daily supplies for the millions. Is it not a sad reflection that so many "stretch their arms like seas to grasp in all the shore," while so few, compared with the many, are "laying up their treasure in heaven?" What an urgent call for more cross-bearing, self-denying, consecrated men and women to enter the fields white for the harvest, and gather at home and abroad blood-bought souls into the garner of our Lord.

To resume my narrative, after this digression, I will remark that the boats plying between Chicago and Buffalo were such as would be considered seaworthy. It frequently occurs that they encounter gales as terrific as those in mid-ocean, with less room to avoid the frequent casualties. On one of these regular packets I embarked for Milwaukee. Six miles from this city I visited a brother I had not seen since we were schoolboys. He was taken by surprise on being asked if he knew me. He said he had no recollection of ever seeing me before. He was among the first settlers in the township of Greenfield, Wis., and was cultivating land which would yield from seventy-five to one hundred bushels of corn per acre. After spending two days he accompanied me to Sheboygan, where I visited a sister I had not seen in twenty years. She was a member of the Baptist Church, and was desirous I should preach a sermon before leaving. She sent for her pastor to ascertain if it would be agreeable for me to occupy his pulpit. He wanted to know whether I was the owner of slaves. On being informed that I was he declined on the ground that members of his charge would be offended if known that a slaveholder preached in his church. A Congregational minister bearing of this denial paid me a visit, and gave me a cordial invitation to preach in his church, giving the appointment a wide circulation, so that I had a large congregation of attentive hearers. DANIEL MORSE.

MARSHALL, TEXAS.

From the Work.

GRAND, LA.

Mr. Editor: Our second quarterly meeting is over; only one steward in attendance. He, seemingly, was cast down in spirit, owing to the loss of stock, which has been fearful in this section. However, the preaching to us was a feast of fat things, causing us to reconsecrate ourselves to the service of God. Our work is yet under water. Although we can not send you the encouraging news that the decks are cleared, we can say our people are subscribing liberally to our Conference collections, and we hope to bring up a good report to Conference. We are hopeful, though surrounded by many difficulties. On yesterday we organized a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at Grand. The following ladies were elected officers: Mrs. F. J. Stinson, president; Mrs. E. C. Whittington, vice-president; Mrs. Mary C. Nelson, second vice-president; Mrs. Kate Yarborough, recording secretary; Miss R. A. Whittington, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Emma McIntosh, treasurer. We hope to organize all along the line. C. T. MUNNOLLAND, P. C.

TRYON, MISS.

Mr. Editor: Our second quarterly meeting passed this year without a storm. Our faithful presiding elder was at his post, preached two good sermons, and attended faithfully to all his duties. We had a good meeting. Two persons, Dr. Cowart and wife, joined the church. We are having revival tokens in many parts of our circuit. At Bahala Chapel we have a flourishing Sunday-school, large and serious congregations. Last Sunday we had a wonderful shower of Divine grace, a shout in the camp, and a very bright and happy conversion. Old men say they have not seen such a time at a regular monthly appointment in ten years. If ever. Oh! for a glorious revival of Holy Ghost religion all over our country. The good people of this circuit have recently expended about one hundred and sixty dollars on and around the personage.

H. P. LEWIS.

BIG CANE, LA.

Mr. Editor: Our second Quarterly Conference convened at this place on the last day of May. Aside from the usual regular business, two of our young men, members of Big Cane Society, were licensed to exhort. That speaks well for the spiritual condition of the membership at this place. We, members and pastor, were sorely disappointed by the non-attendance of our presiding elder. He came within three or four hours' ride of this place, but was prevented from reaching us by a reported overflow. We much regret this failure, because we will not have the benefit of the sacrament this year. W. V. GORDON.

Marriages.

SIGLER-SINGLETON.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Sugar Town, La., June 5, 1884, by Rev. J. J. Bell, Mr. George E. Sigler to Miss Frances Singleton.

HOWARD-JONES.—At the Methodist Church, at Winches, Miss., May 29, 1884, by Rev. L. S. Jones, Mr. F. H. Howard and Miss Fannie L. Jones.

Obituaries.

WILLIAMS—REV. JOHN W. WILLIAMS was born in Georgia, October 17, 1816; moved with his parents to Covington county, Miss., in 1818; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1836; was licensed to preach in 1842; was ordained a deacon, by Bishop Early, in 1857, and died of paralysis at his home, at Silver Creek, Lawrence county, Miss., February 23, 1884. He was twice married. His first marriage, which occurred February 7, 1839, was to a Miss Martha W. Harper, who died June 4, 1841, leaving him two children—a son and daughter—both of whom are dead. The son fell in battle in the late war, and the daughter died in childhood. His second marriage, which took place November 23, 1843, was to a Miss Elizabeth A. Holloway, who survives him to mourn his departure. By this marriage he was blessed with eight children—three sons and five daughters—all of whom (one son excepted) are living, and with one exception, are all devoted members of the church of their parents. Being a devoted Christian and an affectionate husband and father, Bro. Williams had a consoling influence over his family, and he used that influence for good. God was honored in that household, and he endeavored to bring his children to the altar of prayer and communion of the Lord. Among the last prayers he uttered were prayers for the conversion of his youngest son, and we hope are long to see those prayers answered.

The deceased was left an orphan when about six years of age, and fell into the hands of one Mr. Lottin, who was a relative of his and a man of sterling elements of character. Mr. Lottin filled the place of a tender father to the little boy when he took to raise, and the little boy proved himself worthy of all the kindness bestowed upon him by his generous relative. From his childhood he secured naturally inclined to piety. He was gentle, kind, obedient, thoughtful and good—a model boy in the community where he lived. Nor did he lose the shining virtues of his childhood as he developed into manhood. The model boy became a model young man; the model young man became a model member of the church, and the model member of the church became a useful minister of the gospel of Christ. From the day he joined the church to the day of his death no one doubted the genuineness of his religion. All had perfect confidence in him, and revered him as a true servant of God. This gave him great power in the pulpit. He was not deeply learned in human wisdom nor was he specially gifted in the use of human speech, and yet the people loved to hear the gospel from his lips; and the gospel as preached by him was honored of God in the edification of believers and in the conversion of many precious souls. His preaching was not with the enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power.

For several years previous to his death, however, he was afflicted of the body. In the fall of 1877 he had his first attack of paralysis, and from that time on to the day of his death he had, ever and anon, light attacks of the same disease, which put an end to his pulpit labors. This was greatly regretted by the people, and it was a source of grief to himself. He loved to preach, and it grieved him to be deprived of the privilege; but he bore the deprivation, as he bore all of his other afflictions, with perfect resignation. For several long, weary years his health was very bad and he suffered much; but he died and it all as one who was at ease. He felt that he was convinced that all things must work together for his good. But finally the end came, and it came just as he had long expected it would come—suddenly. During the day he had been feeling fully as well as usual; but just as the sun was going down he was seized with a violent attack of his old disease, and in a few short hours he breathed his last. As he became speechless as soon as the fatal attack came on, he was not permitted to utter any parting words, nor were such words needed as an evidence of his desire to go. His life and former expressions were a sufficient evidence of the fact. For many long, weary years he had waited for the summons, and, doubtless, he was ready when it came. Indeed, he gave a token to this effect in his last moments. Just before he became unconscious he reached out his hand to some friends and loved ones who stood around his dying couch and bade them good-by, with a calm, intelligent look which plainly said, "I am ready and willing to go," and then he fell asleep to awake in glory.

May the full assurance that the devoted husband and father loved one gave before he died comfort to the sorrowing wife and children, and lead them to follow their loved one as he followed Christ; so that ere long they may go and live with him forever in the beautiful home above!

Bro. Williams loved the church. While he loved all Christian people, and rejoiced in the success of all other churches, he had a special concern for his own church, and upon her he bestowed his most earnest prayers and labors. He had earnestly prayed for many years before he died that a temple of worship live to be a Methodist house of worship erected in the little village where he resided, and God granted him, as he did to Simeon of old, his request. Last summer he donated a lot for the purpose, and the brethren there, though few in number, and weak financially, bestirred themselves and erected a neat, commodious house of worship. So God's faithful servant was permitted to see the great desire of his heart accomplished before he closed his eyes in death. In that house, on the third Sunday in February, he joined the congregation in the worship of Almighty God, and in a beautiful little cemetery but a few steps from the church, on the calm, bright, beautiful afternoon of the next holy Sabbath, his lifeless form was laid to sleep till the morning of the resurrection. One Sabbath found him in the temple of worship on earth, and the next found him in the temple of God in heaven. J. W. McLAURIN.

Whereas, It was the will of our heavenly Father to remove from our midst by death, on February 23, 1884, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, our much-beloved brother and associate, Rev. John W. Williams; therefore, be it Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Williams this Conference has lost one of its most zealous Christian workers, a faithful and pleasant associate and a man possessing a high degree of honor and determination as to duty.

Resolved, That his loss created a void through Mr. C. M. Carmel circuit that can not be easily filled; that his devotion to Christian duty and his zeal and influence for the cause of Christ is not likely to be supplied by any who survive him.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family (of which was a most devoted husband and kind father) our profound sympathy in their sad affliction, and that we can only point them to him who is able and willing to comfort the afflicted, in whose hands we leave them.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Conference, and that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, to his church and the New Orleans Christian Advocate. J. J. DENSON, For Committee.

WEST—Died, near Uvalde, Texas, March 31, 1884, Mrs. NELLIE WEST, a mother in Israel—one of the saints of God. She was born in Washington county, Ala., January 10, 1810. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church when a girl. With her honored husband she lived many years in Wayne county, Miss., a blessing to her neighbors and a light in the church. After the death of her husband her children, being grown up and married, she removed with some of them to the West, to spend with them the quiet evening of her life. Hence she died surrounded by those she loved, and now she "lives a life unmeasured by the flight of years, and all that life is love."

As a wife, a mother, she filled her position with firmness, dignity and propriety, and "her children rise up and call her blessed." She has gone to glory, but has left the impress of her angel life—a rich legacy on all her children. She gave her sons to her country's cause, and two of them fell honored graves in Virginia. One fell called of God to the work of the gospel ministry. She gave him a mother's blessing and love in the name of the Lord. He is now a useful minister in the Mississippi Conference.

Mother West toiled and denied herself to give her children a good education and she lived to see them in mental and moral development—a rich reward. Amid her domestic duties she found time daily to devote an hour to Scripture reading. Thus in her was developed an earnest, enlightened and aggressive piety. Her live living children are all religious. She worked with a will which secured to say, "I will accomplish all myself. And then her family, prayer and faith told that her only trust was in God. She was brought safely through the dangers of Indian warfare in the early days of the history of Alabama, and was in Fort Stratton when the massacre of Fort Mims occurred.

This humble tribute to the memory of one I loved much is laid upon her grave by her former pastor, JOSHUA T. HEARD.

McGOWAN—LAURA ALABAMA McGOWAN, daughter of W. H. and L. A. McGowan, was born in Clark county, Miss., July 27, 1878, and departed this life March 30, 1884, aged six years, eight months and three days.

To the memory of few children could we have greater tributes of due honor than to that of our departed Alabama. Her many virtues at such an early age won for her the love and confidence of all who knew her. She seemed to be impressed before she was taken sick that she would not live long. She said to her mother that she was going to die, and that she wanted her little baby sister to have all of her dresses except her white dress—that she wanted to die in that one. But how hard it is to give up our little children and see them go down into the grave! Without immortality the ways of the weavers are dark; but, thank God! immortality assures us to look beyond the river. But, with the fact of the immortality of man, we still cling to our dear little ones. Yes, in affection we treasure the memory of our dear little children. But while we mourn their loss we rejoice in the belief that they safely reached a better land. This is the case with little Alabama. Loving hearts cling to the little darling while she was suffering and struggling with death; but they could only look on and watch the struggle with the little sufferer. They had no power to stay the ruthless hand of the dreadful malady. Yet, all our efforts, the little innocent man, God claims her for his own. We can only say, Thy will, O Lord! be done.

The father and mother, sisters and brothers mourn for her, but not as those who have no hope. They look beyond the tomb and to the happy meeting with the little "Bama" now a bright angel. I say to the weeping ones: Look up, little "Bama" is at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for you. J. H. HOLLAND.

Nashville Advocate please copy.

MOORE—NANCY JANE MOORE, daughter of L. W. and Margaret M. Dams, was born near Huntsville, Montgomery county, Miss., in 1847, and died March 22, 1884. Mrs. Moore joined the Methodist Church in early life and lived a very exemplary Christian life. The Master said, "It is enough; come up higher." She was married to Mr. J. W. Moore, in January, 1865, who with six children still survive her.

Sister Moore spent her last days at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. E. T. Handley, where she had every attention needed to make her last journey on earth as happy as possible. Her afflictions were severe; but with Christian fortitude and resignation she bore them well, and felt that the afflictions of this life were not worthy to be compared to the glory that should be revealed at the last day. Sister Moore was always kind and gentle in her disposition, and had as large a circle of friends as is allotted to any one in this life.

Her relatives and friends can but feel that an angel has been taken from among them. But weep not. She has gone to her happy home to be a saint with God and the Lamb forever. J. A. NUNNOUNS.

Nashville Advocate please copy.

ZUBER—On March 17, 1884, our brother, JEFFERSON ZUBER, took leave of all earthly things and went to the spirit land. He had long been a member of our church, and in his earlier years active, useful and zealous. As age crept upon him he gave way to the infirm generation, and in a quiet and peaceful way he awaited the coming of the great change.

Bro. Zuber was born November 14, 1808, in Georgia, and came as a lad to Mississippi. In 1838 he married Miss S. S. Porter, of Warren county, the daughter of the venerable and honored James Porter. She lived with him many years the happy wife of our estimable friend; then passed to her heavenly home some years before his decease. Four daughters survive to mourn the loss of a most affectionate Christian father and to realize the sad news and loneliness of orphanage. For it matters little whether a father be younger or older; the shock of such a loss at any age is deeply grievous, and we all feel again like children when we gather round the coffin of a dear parent. Adieu, departed friend; friend and brother of forty years!

Bro. Zuber died in Vickburg surrounded by his daughters who faithfully ministered to him till the last moment. His end was one of peace. C. K. M.

BURGOYNE—Departed this life, April 6, 1884, MARY EMMA, daughter of L. R. and E. O. Burgoyne, aged two years and eight months.

All her life she was a little sufferer, though most of the time able to sit around and play with the other children. The greatest love and attention was necessary, delicate as she was. Only seven months previous to the death of this little darling, the first family for seven years was that of little Ella, aged five years, and three days. She had said a short time before she died that she wanted to go to heaven; she wanted little Sister Emma to come, too, and with her father, and, indeed, the angels came and took little Emma.

She was only allowed to suffer a few hours with convulsions, when she passed away as sweetly as if going to sleep. She seemed in disposition very much like the other departed little sister, and was the only one in the family who favored her. After Ella's death little Emma became much interested about Ella being in heaven, and would speak very earnestly and often to her mother about it. Young as she was, she was faithful to kneel at her mother's knee and say her prayers.

A FRIEND.

NICHOLSON—Died, at Baton Rouge, La., on Monday, April 23, 1884, at 5:45 o'clock P. M., J. W. NICHOLSON, Jr., youngest son of J. W. and S. B. Nicholson, aged one year, six months and twenty-two days.

No record the brief, beautiful life— "As the flower of the grass," "The bright sunbeam which God gave in warm and light our hearts had awakened such good hopes and anticipations of future usefulness and honor. The full, dark eye and high forehead evincing the bright intellect, the cheerful and confident nature, making friends of all associates. He was lovely in person and disposition. But, alas! the light is gone, and darkness chills the bereaved hearts. But surely this is not the end of "that God whose ways are love." The grave holds but a sleeping form, the soul has left, none of its sister, but sparkles on high, "asleep in the arms of Jesus." We tend lovingly the little green mound, but the heart hears the words of comfort: "O sleepers, the kingdom of Heaven."

LAMPTON—EUGENE, infant son of Benjamin and Esther L. Lampton, died, in Columbus, Miss., May 12, 1884, at the age of one year, three months and twelve days.

He was a child of great beauty and promise, and the light and joy of a loving household. Truly will he be missed by his fond parents and his loving brothers and sisters. No more will they look upon his lovely little form, kiss his sweet little lips or hear the prattle of his little tongue; but they can rejoice and find comfort in the thought that their precious little darling is free from suffering and safe at home. J. W. McLAURIN.

BIVINS—Died, May 13, 1884, SALLIE BIVINS, wife of B. B. Bivins, and daughter of A. M. and Bettie Ivy. She was born May 7, 1857. Sister Bivins joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life, and was a consistent Christian. All who knew her join in saying she was a good woman. She was sick some time, but was resigned; no doubts, no doubts. May God bless her husband and three little children, and all the dear ones meet in heaven. THOMAS J. TAYLOR.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

To preserve the richness of color or delicacy of tint of your summer dresses, make suds of hot water and Ivory Soap, allow to cool until lukewarm, then wash your dresses in the solution. Ordinary soaps contain too much alkali, which in a short time bleaches the color and destroys its beauty. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says, "The Ivory Soap 'can not injure the 'most delicate fabric.'"

PHOTOGRAPHS

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURN'S Photographic Parlors, 109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal Hotel and almost directly opposite the City State.

You are cordially invited to visit our PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY.

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait known to the art in the miniature for the locket to the size in.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon &c. etc. Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged and the likeness faithfully preserved.

YALE & BOWLING, WHOLESALE DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS

17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 30 Common Streets, NEW ORLEANS

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1884.

MARTHA.

BY JULIA C. B. DORR.

Yes, Lord!—Yet some must serve:
Not all with tranquil heart,
Even at thy death feet,
Wrapping in devotion sweet,
May all apart!

Yes, Lord!—Yet some must bear
The burden of the day,
Its labors and its heat,
While others at thy feet
May muse and pray!

Yes, Lord!—Yet some must do
Life's daily task-work; some
Who faint would sing must toll
The earth's dust and soil,
While lips are dumb!

Yes, Lord!—Yet man must earn
And woman bake, the bread;
And some must watch and wake
Early, for others' sake,
Who pray instead!

Yes, Lord!—Yet even thou
Thou need of earthly care;
Thou need of bread and wine
To live, a guest divine—
Be this my prayer!

Atlantic Monthly.

Memoir of Dr. J. E. P. Hunnicutt.

Dr. J. E. P. Hunnicutt was born in Quintana county, Va., May 23, 1805, and died in Covington, La., near where he had lived from early in his life, March 6, 1884.

His father was a Quaker, but forfeited his membership by marrying out of the society. The persistent power of many of the wholesome doctrines of that worthy fraternity were strikingly illustrated in the life and character of the subject of this sketch. Indeed the length of his life, as well as the strength of his character, is, no doubt, largely attributable to the transmitted peculiarities of the Friends, modified by the spirit and doctrines of Methodism. He was not at any time of robust frame, and though most of his life the subject of bodily affliction, yet by regularity in habit, abstemiousness in diet, temperance in all things, and constant devotion to duty, his life was protracted to almost fourscore years.

When a young man he professed faith in Christ, and became a member of the Methodist Church. Every work he undertook thereafter was made subservient to the one great end of serving God and saving his soul. For more than forty years he was engaged in the practice of medicine, yet, according to his own testimony, never gave a dose to a patient which was not accompanied by his prayers for its efficacy. When a youth he was engaged for a time in a printing office. While there he acquired a remarkable accuracy in spelling which he retained through life. With the technical nomenclature of the science of medicine he was as familiar as if he had been thoroughly drilled in the Greek and Latin languages at school, and had spent his time in after years in little else than studying the terminology of his profession. He never made a charge for services rendered on the Sabbath day, and ever strived to minister to the souls as well as to the bodies of his patients.

The most distinguishing characteristics of his life and his explanation in two little words—faith and duty.
The prevailing element of his mind was reverence, and the most admirable trait of his character was dutifulness.
He unfeignedly believed the economical Scriptures to be the word of God. He read them much, studied them closely and was ready to give to any who were willing to hear a reason for the hope that was in him. He was fond of the discussion of biblical, social, literary and political questions, his mind being naturally of polemical turn, but always made the Bible the ultimate test of every doctrine and theory. Being a diligent and somewhat extensive reader of the books and periodicals of his day, he seemed anxious to guard all minds against the poison of skepticism; they were the means of convincing me that there is no real force in any argument against the essential doctrines of the Bible, a conviction which has been growing stronger in me from my childhood to this day. What he could not understand of the book of God, he could not believe; and though he could not prove it to be true, he knew that no one else could prove it to be false.
He clung to the faith of the gospel and to the church of God amid all the illuminations of infidelity. Unbelievers might doubt the sufficiency of the old scripture, declare that she had sprung aleak and would never reach the port of heaven; they might leap overboard into the sea, and fill the air around with their delusive reports of wonders there discovered till many were tempted to follow their example; but he was of those who abode in the ship, and, I believe, got safe to land on the other shore.

But if his faith was constant his obedience was unflinching. The law of God was the rule of his household. Night and morning prayers were as regular as the rising and setting of the sun.
Slaving was never omitted at family worship, in leading which he rarely used a book, having committed to memory almost all the devotional hymns of the Methodist collection. He taught and required his children and servants to obey him as their duty to God. Though not much accustomed to manual labor himself, on account of professional engagements, his theory was that every boy should be taught to labor with his hands as well as his head; hence his three sons were grain-ated at the plow handles as well as at the college; while the industrial and literary education of his two daughters were conducted with equal care. When preaching in his neighborhood occurred, as it often did, on other days than Sunday, the plow and hoe stood still in the field, that the laborers might attend the worship. He required his slaves as well as his children to attend church, believing that no man suffered pecuniary loss by taking time to pray. Nor did his children, after long training in this way, ever become tired of church going, but on the contrary have become increasingly fond of it. He succeeded in convincing his children of the wisdom as well as of the obligation of duty. His taught them that self-interest as well as law required them to do right. His motto was, "Duty belongs to man, consequences to God." Hence his constant endeavor was to do the will of God whether he could understand its reasons or anticipate its consequences, or not. Habitually trampling under foot the enthusiastic doctrine "that we are not to do good unless our hearts are free to it," he learned to love the discharge of his duty.

Though to some extent austere in his Christianity, yet he was both attractive and instructive, especially to the young, by the judicious use of an inexhaustible store of anecdote, adage and poetry. For one so stern in his views of life and duty, he was remarkably fond of poetry, anecdote, flowers and sentiment in general. He was familiar with the English poets and frequently quoted them in conversation and in argument. His anecdotes were never unclassical.

The greatest trials of his life, as well as the chief faults of his character, which consisted in transitory excesses of temper, arose, no doubt, from certain peculiar infirmities of physical constitution. His digestion was never vigorous. Oftentimes the brain clamored for nutrition which the stomach refused to supply. Great and unexpect-ably distressing were the woes of body and the agonies of mind which ensued.
These, perhaps, at times, superseded all power of faith and hope if not of love; yet his habits of gentleness were so fixed that a temporary suspension of the faith from which they sprang, had no appreciable effect upon their constancy and power.

To say that such a man was ever a leader in all the most worthy enterprises in the community in which he lived, is but to draw an obvious inference from the facts which have been stated. His liberality to the church, and his charity to the poor, were ever as great as some thought greater than his means would justify. His house was ever the home of the Methodist itinerant preacher. As a trustee of an institution of learning of high grade, as a class leader and a steward in the church, as a leader in prayer meetings and a superintendent of a Sunday-school, he did for the cause of God and humanity whatever his hands found to do. He was a member of no society but the church, never had his life insured, never would wear gold, and consecrated reluctantly late in life to have his photograph taken.

Though his construction of Scripture was strict, possibly at times erroneously narrow, yet his errors both of theory and of practice leaned to virtue's and safety's side. None would be harmful by adopting them.

Though few ever more reverently adored or more faithfully strove to please their Maker than he did, yet the dread of death was through all his life
a source of discomfort to his mind.
One, not a member of the same church,
who knew him well, said at his burial,
"He was the best man I ever knew."
Yet he greatly dreaded death. This fear was, perhaps, a physiological result of long, continued and excessive exercise of the principle of self-preservation.
Varied and oft recurring infirmities of health had so habituated him to the warring off of death that his dread of it became morbid. For years his third spirit trembled at the thought of death's approach. Yet when he came to die God, in kind compassion, hid the monster from his eyes. Death did not even cast his shadow across the way of his exit from earth. On his last day he walked about a little, not feeling as well as usual, sat in his armchair at evening, retired to bed about his accustomed hour a little feverish, kissed a little grandchild with an affectionate benediction, and slept to wake in midnight, only to let his children know by unmistakable tokens that the time of his departure was at hand.
Without a struggle, a groan, or even a sigh, he died, and seemed to know it not. He gave no sign of what he felt in that last hour. Nor was any needed.
His whole life had been a sign of preparation for death, and therefore was a silent sign of his readiness to die.
A consciousness of peace or of triumph in death is a happy terminal incident in the life of a servant of God, and is not without its evidential value, but the essential blessing in the living, as well as in the dying, is that last recorded in the holy book, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

W. L. C. H.

Ecclesiastical Methodism.

The religious and the ecclesiastical aspects of Methodism are of course very different things. The latter occupies those few pages. Ecclesiastical Methodism has but one peculiarity, and that is, that it is entirely destitute of peculiarity. All other churches are built upon some peculiarity. Methodism has none. Romanism rests on a new church built on Peter and his successors. The High Church of England and its branches in this country and elsewhere rests upon Episcopal prerogative derived through a chain of official inheritance originating in this falsely supposed new church organized by the Saviour and the apostles.
The Presbyterian Church is erected on the divine decrees and partly in the ministry; while Baptist Churches patronize, as the great oil and object, water immersion in baptism. Original Methodism has nothing whatever to do, pro or con, with any of those questions, but was a mere revival or intelligibility of religion in its simplest forms. Its origin might be dated where a few young men held an evening prayer meeting, praying for divine grace and personal conversion, raising no doctrinal or theological questions. They felt the divine blessing, and met again the next Thursday evening, with increasing numbers they met again, and again, and kept on, spreading and with still increasing numbers they kept on, meeting, adding, multiplying and dividing, they kept on.
That is all of structural Methodism.
It is peculiar in having no theological,
ecclesiastical or legal peculiarities.

But what are the great ecclesiastical bulwarks of Methodism? It has none.
It needs none. Methodism can not go in Sam's armor. It has neither the muscle nor skill suited to shield and spear, but with simple sling and stone goes forth trusting in the God of battles. Other churches are framed, and stayed, and braced, with organic architecture and legislative masonry, and by those they are protected. Methodism is a religion, not an ecclesiastical enterprise. Religious growth and progress has always heretofore been clogged and hampered too much with legislative and judicial framing. The church part of Christianity will take care of itself if prudently and judicially let alone. Religious bacteria must be solid, and deeply and sojournly founded, but the merely outward rules of religious association are in their nature changeable and temporary, and therefore better suited to tabernacles than to temple life. Nobody ever framed a constitution of Methodism.
Its needed rules of external association are few and simple, and best arranged by sensible godly men from time to time as we go along.

At Mr. Wesley's second or third prayer meeting the room proved too small for the congregation, and now what for there will be more skill next time. So they divided, and this made another leader necessary. And this very provision created farther necessities which must in turn be applied. And right on, from that day to this, the Methodists have been creating necessities by supplying existing ones.
And to-day those necessities, for more extensive pastoral labors, are greater than ever. And we govern ourselves by self-made rules as we go along.

Mr. Wesley did not send Methodism to nor establish it in this country.
Nor did he ever have more than a very little to do with it in America. He loosed it from the iron fastenings of ecclesiastical ecclesiastical, and it went itself. In 1790, not in 1776, two Irish local Methodist preachers, Philip Embury and Robert Strawbridge, came to this country, the former settled in New York and the latter near Baltimore. A few other Wesleyans came with them. They both began to preach immediately—or rather continued to do so. Mr. Strawbridge preached regularly, forming little societies here and there, until he died in 1781. Mr. Embury preached irregularly, forming some classes, etc., until 1796, when he began regular preaching and pastoral oversight, which he continued with great zeal and success until 1775, when he died greatly beloved by everybody.

While Mr. Wesley had nothing to do with the early formation of those American churches, or societies, they all acknowledge and claimed connection with him and the English societies.
At an early period we find them appealing to him to send them ministerial help. This he did as men and opportunity presented themselves.
No church formation or church organization became necessary. The preachers preached, and held prayer meetings, and visited the people, baptized the converts and the children, kept a list of members, attended the classes, etc., and the people took care of the preachers, raised money for expenses, built churches and such like things. All this is natural, and is implied in the idea of a number of persons being religious. What more of church does any body want, or did any body ever have that was valuable to Christianity, than this? Convenience dictated souls and prudent men made them.

But what about Episcopal Methodism? Very little, so far as concerns organic law. Who made it? Except the furnishing of a very small amount of material, it seems to have made it self. The story of Mr. Wesley, having learned by reading Lord King's Primitive Church, that he possessed Episcopal authority, which true enough in itself, will not do to weave into ecclesiastical science in this age. In the days of Wesley, and long after, this much of papery and high church lingered wonderfully in the church, viz., that Jesus Christ organized a new church. That false fact is now thoroughly exploded, is it not? Lord King gives a history of the acts of the churches for three hundred years, and finds that Bishops and elders by those names exercised the same functions and prerogatives in that period. Now, what does that prove about the functions and prerogatives of Bishops and elders generally? On supposition that Christ did form a new organic church for Christendom, it would prove to reasonable satisfaction, that Bishops and elders were the same by divine investiture. But if no new divinely framed church was made at all, then Lord King's history proves what we all see now and nothing else, viz., that in those days Christians regulated church offices and officers so as to best answer their local necessities. Mr.

Wesley was virtually a Bishop, not however, because of anything in Lord King's history, or because of anything the early Christians did, but because he was a minister, and had the oversight of a church. So the American churches being across the sea, he formally, solemnly and religiously anthorized, directed, requested, set apart, or ordained, if that more fashionable word be preferred. Dr. Coke to go to America and superintend the little churches there on condition that these churches by representation should receive him as their chief minister. He was formally received and elected, and that put him into the capacity of cosuperintendent with Mr. Wesley.

And was that Episcopacy? According to the best authorities it could hardly be so considered. Episcopacy meant diocesan. But, according to the use of the term in common speech, since that time it was and is Episcopacy. Our calling it by that name makes it so. That is to say, then ministerial functions we call Episcopacy, and we consider that term, so used, to be good, modern English.
Bishop is the name we apply to the functionary who exercises these powers and duties. But this terminology is not divinely prescribed.

Methodism recognizes no principles of church government, nor any fixed duties, functions or prerogatives of church officers beyond a simple pastorate that are over a hundred years old. We create offices and prescribe the duties thereof as we find it expedient from time to time. No Methodist church officer has ever had the right to ordain ministers. The duty of ordaining is now and has been heretofore confined to Bishops. And yet we are told—an error as palpable as it is obnoxious—that in our church "elders have the right to ordain." We are Episcopal, or quasi-Episcopal, and while our church impresses the duty of performing the rite of ordination on certain church officers of its own creation it holds the ordaining power, functions it holds in its own hands. The church ordains whom it will, and by such official instrumentality as it chooses to create, liable to change from time to time.

Religious Intelligence.

MEXICO.—Few persons are aware of the progress which has been made by Christianity in the Republic of Mexico within a few years. But a little while ago, it seemed the most hopelessly remote-ridden and pagan portion of non-Christian world. But to-day, the opinion of many enlightened friends of missions, Mexico is the most inviting field in the world for Christian effort. At one time, no doubt, is the fact that at the time of the French invasion and the short-lived empire of Maximilian, Romanism was acronized with civil despotism and the French-Austrian domination. The devil over-reached himself, not for the first nor the last time. The following, from a recent Missionary Herald, is very encouraging: An Almanac in Spanish, for the year 1884, issued by the missionaries of the American Board at Guadalajara, gives the following as the present result of Protestant missions in Mexico, so far as results can be tabulated: Native ordained missionaries, 40; foreign missionaries (including wives), 108; missionaries of women, 10; congregations, 18; churches, 204; members, 10,000; adherents, 27,000; Sunday-school scholars, 4,654; day-schools, 82; pupils, 3,083; churches, 45; estimated value of church property, $102,550; periodicals, 12; pages of church literature published in 1882, 370,415; theological societies, 5; students, 36.
This certainly is a remarkable record, when we remember that it is but a few years since any of the great denominations have entered Mexico with anything like an attenuated force; the Presbyterian missions, which for out-number others both in laborers and in communicants, having commenced labors in 1872.

Robert College, Constantinople, has 211 students this year, of whom 49 are in the preparatory department. Of the 162 in the college classes, 85 are Bulgarians, 63 are Armenians, 10 are Greeks, one is a Transilvanian, one a Slavonian,
one a Hebrew, and one an Englishman.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Missionary Union was held at Boston. There was raised through the year $12,443.85, and $394,813.50 expenditure, leaving a deficit of $22,369.65, a much smaller debt than last year. In Sweden, Germany, France, Spain and Greece
there are 1,682 preachers, 126 churches, and 112,122 members. The year's bat-tism was 11,711. The great work of the Union is in India, Asia, Burma, Af-gan, Persia, China, Japan and Africa, where there are 2,163 missionary laborers, 1,128 churches, and 112,122 members. There were 11,706 baptisms.

The Chinese in California last year gave $303.75 to the mission of the American Board at Hong Kong, besides $600 for the sufferers by the floods in North China.

Our Young People.

HOW TO PLEASE OUR KING.

Oh! what can little hands do
To please the King of heaven?
The little hands some work may try
To help the poor in misery—
Such grace to him be given.

Oh! what can little lips do
To praise the King of heaven?
The little lips can praise and pray,
And gentle words of kindness say—
Such grace to him be given.

Oh! what can little hearts do
To please the King of heaven?
The hearts, if God his Spirit send,
Can love and trust the children's Friend—
Such grace to him be given.

When hearts and hands and lips unite
To please the King of heaven,
And serve the Saviour with delight,
They are most precious in his sight—
Such grace to him be given.

Mr. Editor: I want to answer some of the little editors questions in the Advocate of April 17 and 21. Moses' wife's name was Zipporah. Her sons' names were Gersham and Eliezer.
Noah lived 350 years after the flood,
and was 950 years old when he died.
"What did Moses do with the golden calf?" He burned it in the fire and ground it to powder, and strowed it upon the water and made the children of Israel drink of it. "Wormwood" is found in Rev. viii, 11. Our Saviour was buried by Joseph in a sepulchre, hewn out of a rock. Abraham's first son was named Ishmael. In conclusion, I will ask the little editors a few questions: Who was David's great grandmother? Who is spoken of in the Bible that married his half sister?
Who were the only two persons of the children of Israel who were grown when they left Egypt, that ever reached the promised land? Why was Moses never permitted to reach the promised land? Who is spoken of in the Bible that plowed twelve yoke of oxen? As this is my first letter, I hope it will not be consigned to the waste-basket.

Your little friend,

MOLLIE E. SIMPSON.

THOMASTOWN, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I have been thinking a long time that I would write a letter to the young people who read the Advocate. I am only ten years old and have never written many letters. We have a Sunday-school at Cayuga. Our superintendent is Mr. Thomas Hutchins, and the name of our preacher is Rev. G. F. Thompson. My grandma has been a subscriber to the Advocate for many years. It is a welcome visitor at our house. I will answer my little friend, Minnie Roberts' question:
"There are four things which are little upon earth but they are exceedingly wise." They are the ant, the conch, the locust and the spider. It is found in Prov. xxx, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. I will ask the question, Where in the Bible is "Godliness with contentment is great gain" found? I will close with many good wishes for the young people and the dear Advocate. Your friend, DORIE M'KENZIE.

CAYUGA, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I would like to ask if E. Marshall has not made a mistake in answering Charles Stepp's question. I think the answer is to be found in Gen.
xxv, 7, 8; instead of Gen. xli, 4, as is stated by your little correspondent. I would like to ask a question: Where in the Bible can you find the words,
"the camels were coming." I live in a place where we have neither church nor schools, except among the colored population. I study at home and recite to my mother. My studies are United States history, geography, primary arithmetic, spelling, writing and ciphering. I am nine years old. My oldest sister goes to school away from home, and is a member of the Methodist Church. My younger sister is just beginning to learn. My brother is too small to study in books, but is learning every day. Your little friend,
FLORENCE YEAHOK.

YEAHOK'S P. O., Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl ten years old, and have been a member of the Methodist Church nearly two years.
I read the Bible, Christian Advocate and other good books and papers, and am trying to serve the Lord and be a Christian. We are living in the country this year, where there is neither school nor Sunday-school. I am very lively, as I have lived in town all my life until this year. I am going off to school next session. I have a missionary hen with eight chickens, and am going to send you all the money that I can make. What has become of Miss Halloran's school in Mexico since she has married? (Her sister, Miss Callie Halloran, is there and at work.—Editor.) Will some one tell where in the Bible can the words "oulons," "loeka" and "garlie" be found?

Your little friend,

CLIFFIE R. JONES.

MONTAINE, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl ten years old. Papa takes the Advocate, and we like it so very much. I am not going to school. Mamma's health is very bad, and I am her housekeeper, so I have to study at home and recite to her. I was very much pleased with Minnie Young's letter. The little Tramp has learned to sing. I have a little baby sister, and she will soon be large enough to sing too. I will now answer
E. Marshall's question: "How long did Noah live after the flood?" Three hundred and fifty years. He was nine hundred and fifty years at his death.
Your little friend,

SERRINA SCOTT.

CLAYBORNE, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl twelve years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Uncle F. N. Sweeney is our superintendent. Bro. E. B. Galloway is our pastor. We like him very much.
He takes a great deal of interest in the Sabbath-school. We organized a missionary society a few Sabbaths ago with 23 names. I earn my missionary money by helping mamma and papa.
I will answer Minnie E. Sweeney's question: "Who was the interpreter of dreams?" Daniel. It is found in Dan.
ii. I will close by asking one question:
How many sons had Jesse?

Your little friend,

JENNIE R. SWEENEY.

GRAND CHERRY, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: I am a member of the Methodist Church. The ladies of our town have organized a missionary society; five or six little girls have joined, and I among the number. I think every one should do all they can for this great cause. I will answer Lizzie D. McClellan's question: The shortest verse in the Bible is, "Jesha wept." It is found in St. John xi, 35.
Now, how old was Jesus when he died? Where was he buried?

Your little friend,

LOLU HIGMAN.

BUDRAY, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl, and will be seven years old next August.
My papa takes the Advocate, and I read all the young folks letters. I have a little sister four years old, and a little brother not quite two, but sister says he asks "blesses" at the table. We have preaching at the Methodist Church twice a month. Bro. M. J. Miller is our pastor, and we all love him very much.
I will answer L. H. Lewis' question about Jacob's ladder: It extended from earth to heaven, and angels ascended and descended on it. I will also answer Crosby (Givon's) question: Moses burnt the golden calf, then ground it into powder, put it in water and made the children of Israel drink of it. I will ask a question: Who was it whom the Lord knew face to face, as mentioned in the Old Testament?

Your little friend,

NELLIE R. FORTIN.

DECATUR, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I will answer some of the little readers' questions: The answer to E. Marshall's question: Noah lived three hundred and fifty years after the flood. He was nine hundred and fifty years old when he died. The word
"worms" is found in Exodus xxxvii, 16; also xxv, 29. The word "longs" is found in Exodus xxx, 38. "Wormwood" may be found in Exodus xvi, 24. Now
I will ask the little readers some questions: Where is the word "nest" found in the Bible? Where is "bags" mentioned in the Bible? Where is the word "wagon" found in the Bible?
How old was Joseph when he died?
Now I want to see who will answer my questions first. Mamma says that she is so glad that the editor is kind enough to publish my letters. She said that it caused me to read the Bible, and hunt out the little editors questions.

CHARLIE STAPP.

HARRISBURG, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: This is my first letter to your estimable Advocate, and I hope it will find a place in the children's column. My father has been a subscriber a long time, and I like to read the children's letters. I will answer Lella B. Singleton's question: Moses' wife's name was Zipporah. His sons' names were Gersham and Eliezer. The answer to Lella Cox's question: The word "oak" is found in Gen. xxxv, 4, 8, Joshua xxiv, 26. The answer to Lucretia E. Mason's question is: Noah was six hundred years old when the flood began, and lived three hundred and fifty years afterward. He was nine hundred and fifty years old when he died. In conclusion I will ask a question: Where is the word "stump" found in the Old Testament?

Your little friend,

MARVIN DOWLING.

RAWES, Alabama.

Mr. Editor: This is my first letter to your most excellent paper. I have read the Advocate for a long time.
Before I could read, mamma read it to me and my brothers. I enjoy reading the poetry as much as the letters from the young people. I am eleven years old. Bro. G. M. Hiltunen is our pastor.
We love him and his family very dearly. I am sorry to inform you he is at present very sick, and we are deeply grieved about him. I trust the good Lord will restore him to perfect health soon. Bro. Little is our presiding elder, and we all love him too. Tell Alice Grant, Jezebel was the wicked woman whose flesh was eaten by dogs. What five kings were hanged at Makkedah?
With many good wishes for the editor,
and success to the Advocate, I am,
Your little friend,
WILLIE LONDON CARRUTH.

CLINTON, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: As I have never written to your most worthy paper before,
I concluded to write a letter. Mother takes the Advocate. Rev. J. C. Brogan is our pastor. Rev. James A. Godfrey is our presiding elder. We all like them very much. I have three sisters, and two brothers. I am a little girl thirteen years old. I will now answer Fletcher Tatum's question: Noah's ark was made of gopher wood. It is found in Gen. vi, 14. I will also answer Eunice E. Harmon's question: The word "Lord" is found in Psalm seven hundred and twelve times. I will now ask a question: Who best down the city of Shechem and sowed it in salt?

Your little friend,

GOTAVIA A. BASS.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. R. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HONNIGT.

THURSDAY JUNE 19, 1884.

The "traveling steward" is a development on the Columbus district. He is an institution and the joy of the circuit preacher.

Vermont, New Hampshire, New York and Michigan have enacted laws requiring that all pupils in public schools shall be taught physiology and hygiene, with special reference to the physiological effects of alcohol, tobacco, opium, etc.

In an exchange, a few days ago, we met this striking sentence: "Happy are the people whose annals may be briefly written." When we consider the materials out of which the ordinary history or biography is constructed, the expression has additional suggestiveness.

The local ministry, once the right arm of the hierarchy, needs to recover its cunning this Centenary year. Exercise will strengthen long neglected sinews, and make it mighty to the pulling down of strongholds. Brethren of the local ministry, bear the trumpet call of God, and buckle on your armor for vigorous and courageous service.

In a certain town of our acquaintance the undertaker is also a saloon-keeper. In the front room are his liquors, with all the equipments of an average doggery. Separated by a very thin partition in the rear are his coffins, and not far from the back door is the cemetery. This association is suggestive. It is altogether appropriate for the man who deals in whisky to have a stock of coffins on hand. He who mixes the drinks ought to trim the casket. And, then, how suggestive the gradation! In the front room, whisky; in the back room, coffins; out the back door, the cemetery.

We heard, a few days ago, this striking tribute to the virtue of Methodist citizenship. A sprightly young attorney was employed for the defense in some ugly whisky cases. When the jury was called he remarked to his associate counsel that they would have to sift that jury. "Why?" said his associate. "They seem to be most excellent men. What is the matter with them?" He replied: "Don't you see those nine Methodists in that jury. They will convict our man sure." So by legal quibbling, manipulation, and exhausting the pre-emptory challenges allowed by the law, he eliminated every Methodist, and fixed up a jury to his notion. Result: The defendant was acquitted, the law put at defiance and a criminal went unwhipped of justice. But what a tribute to the Methodists! So well known were their convictions of right and so incorruptible their lives that crime dreaded for them to sit in judgment. But this tribute carries a responsibility. The world expects Methodists to be singularly pure and religious, and we can not allow any disappointment. In the jury-box as well as in the prayer meeting let our Methodism shine forth.

Rev. Rober Randle, presiding elder of the Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, gives us some items of church news in a private letter too good to be withheld from the public eye:

"I think that there has been an advance in church work at nearly every point and in nearly every department. At all of the quarterly meetings, on the second round, where the rains did not prevent, we had very good meetings, especially at Lake Providence, Bastrop and Floyd. At Floyd, during the eleven o'clock services, Bro. McKee made a call for the money in cash and subscriptions necessary to clear the decks, at that point, of all Conference collections, which was $100. The amount was paid in a short time, thus preparing this liberal people and active pastor for Centenary. There have been several auxiliaries to the Woman's Missionary Society organized in the district, one at Bastrop, Delhi and Floyd each, and other pastors are striving to work their congregations up to this important movement. As a district we have not done much financially, owing to the hindrances referred to above, but as soon as we are allowed to get from one point to another the work will improve on that line also. The ADVOCATE is increasing her circulation among and doing great good for us both for time and eternity."

Editorial Correspondence.

An engagement to preach the commencement sermon at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Mississippi, located at Starkville, and a Centennial address for Bro. Casey, at Brooksville, en route on Friday night, necessitated our leaving home on Thursday evening. But, alas! for our appointments and disappointments, accidents happen to railroads as well as "the best regulated families." Some breakage in the machinery of the engine caused us to lay impatiently by and watch for the morning. In thirteen hours we made ninety-five miles, missing all connections and disappointing friends at Brooksville. But delays are not an unmixed evil. They furnish opportunities for character study and profitable introspection. Secrets of one's own life are developed, hitherto undiscovered and unsuspected. And what phases of experience are revealed in our fellow-passengers—All impatient, some peevish, others ill-tempered and belligerent, yet others full of sage suggestions to engineer and conductor on the entire subject of railroad administration, and few or none maintain a philosophical cheerfulness and dignity. Some ladies wept, others got a little out of temper, while gentlemen (?) indulged in imprecations and expletives more positive than pious. And all this because of a few hours' detention and an unforeseen accident for which the railroad suffers more than all the passengers. Happy is the man who can meet delays and disappointments with an unruffled spirit, and who can employ the hours in profitable reflection.

At noon on Friday we reached Meridian, and spent the afternoon in some pleasant calls on friends. Pastor Norworthy was in bed with an acute attack of illness, from which he had greatly suffered for some days. But between paroxysms of pain he exhibited his old-time vivacity and vigor. In a little while Bro. Godfrey, the presiding elder, dropped in, looking quite improved in health from a recent visit to the mineral springs at Livingston, Ala. He hopes for permanent restoration from those invigorating waters.

Leaving Meridian at half-past seven P. M., we ran up to Artesia and spent the night. There the Mobile and Ohio railroad has one of the best conducted hotels in the South. Such a breakfast no epicurean could hope improved. Unless a man made a god of his stomach, he would not hazard the suggestion of a change or addition. Such an eating-house is helpful to godliness. The relation of good digestion to piety is not understood by the average cook. We have sometimes thought them messengers of Satan to buffet and burden us. The gospel of cookery is practically preached at Artesia. Oh! that all the kitchens might hear.

On the early morning of Saturday we ran out on the Starkville branch railroad to the Agricultural and Mechanical College, where we found Gen. Lee, the president of the college, Dr. Phares and other professors in waiting to extend a cordial welcome. We were the delighted guest of Dr. Phares, who has been associated with the institution from its inauguration. The doctor's name stands on the roll of Centenary College as its first graduate, and he had the honor of receiving the first diploma ever conferred in the State of Louisiana. So in this year, when all American Methodism is studying first things, Centenary College claims a special distinction as the mother of chartered institutions in the South-west.

The college has only been in operation for a few years, but from the first session has commanded a large patronage. So few institutions of the kind have ever succeeded that numerous prophecies were made of the speedy failure of the enterprise. The State has a University at Oxford, amply equipped and ably officered, and it has enjoyed an exceptionally successful history. It was feared, therefore, that if this college adopted a similar line of work destructive rivalry and failure would ensue. The management of the college, however, have persistently clung to the industrial theory of education, and have succeeded. The languages are not taught. English, mathematics, the physical sciences, agriculture and horticulture embrace the curriculum. All students are required to work three hours every day during the term, for which they are paid eight cents an hour. By this means several have completed the entire course at very small cost. Gen. Lee reported to the trustees this year that two boys had paid their expenses in full by this daily work. The professors also report that the students who work best, as a rule, stand highest in their classes. The large farm, gardens, orchards, nurseries, etc., are worked almost entirely by students. We saw many of them in the fields and at the barns diligently employed. The college has a fine herd of thoroughbred cattle, which is cared for by the boys almost entirely. Some of them are expert milkers—positions eagerly sought after. The buildings are large, comfortable and convenient, but without much architectural taste and finish.

The commencement exercises began on Sunday with a sermon by this editor. There was an immense congregation. All Starkville and the surrounding country seemed to have come up to the college for worship. Although the rainfall in the afternoon was almost continuous, there was quite a good congregation out again at night. On Monday the junior class delivered orations, which were much enjoyed by the audience. We regretted having to leave in the afternoon, thereby missing the annual address, on Tuesday, by ex-Gov. Coleman, of Missouri, and other interesting features of the commencement programme.

We had the good pleasure of meeting our pastor at Starkville, Rev. J. S. Oakley, and of sitting at meat with the presiding elder, Dr. T. C. Wier. Rev. W. S. Harrison, a member of the North Mississippi Conference, also resides in Starkville, and is successfully editing a capital country paper. A bronchial difficulty prevents his engaging actively in pastoral work. The Methodist and Presbyterian Churches in the town have recently been blessed with gracious revival meetings, resulting in some valuable accessions. Bro. Oakley is hard at work raising funds for a new church. The present edifice is old, uncemely and small, is of frame and looks frail. A handsome and much larger building is necessary in order to accommodate the rapidly growing congregation.

Of other things, seen and heard, we can not write in this letter, for the day of publication is at hand.

Dr. Annesley—The Father of Mrs. Wesley.

In this Centenary year, when our Methodist history and first principles are being studied afresh, the subject of this sketch deserves special mention. If, as Isaac Taylor said, "the Wesleys' mother was the mother of Methodism," we are interested to learn all the forces and associations that affected and developed her remarkable character. It has been said of the mother of St. Augustine that she "is better known by the branch of her issue than the root of her parentage." Her memory is linked not so much to the family of her father as to the undying glory of her distinguished son. Though most honorably descended, an inheritor even of patrician blood, this saying may be applied with equal force to the mother of the Wesleys. The eminent and enviable place accorded her in history will be the honor of having her, trained and consecrated to God those sons whose fame will be co-eternal with the gospel of free salvation. She will be remembered, not so much as the daughter of Dr. Annesley, but as the mother of John and Charles Wesley. Yet, though the fame of her sons have overshadowed the name of her father, from him she inherited those remarkable traits and sterling virtues that gave them greatness. Dr. Annesley was one of the giants of his day. Among nonconformist divines he was a popular preacher; wise counselor and a distinguished leader. Born in the shire of Warwick, renowned for its military heroes and as the home of Shakespeare, he was early devoted by his pious parents to the work of the ministry. So careful was their training and so profound its impression upon his young mind that from childhood he was filled with the grandeur of his high calling. To thoroughly equip himself for this life-work, he began, when a boy, reading twenty chapters a day in the Holy Scriptures, and continued the practice to the end of life. At Oxford he was noted for singular piety and phenomenal diligence as a student. Daniel DeFoe, who was his intimate friend, thus describes his early virtues:

"His pious course with childhood he began, And was his Master's peonier than his own. As if designed by instinct to be great, His judgment seemed to antedate his wit. Early his vigorous countenance began, And was older Christian than he began. The Heavenly Book he made his only school, In youth his study, and in age his rule."

He became a minister of great power and eloquence. His voice was potent in all the ecclesiastical conflicts of that stormy age. Persecuted because of his nonconformity, he displayed the characteristic energy of his family in an unwavering, manly independence. No scepter of king or heel of tyrant could fether his conscience or crush his faith. History tells us that one of his persecutors fell dead while preparing a warrant for his arrest.

Yet with the strength of the lion, he united the gentleness of the dove. Full of tenderness and sympathy, his ministry abounded in true benevolence and holy zeal. "O! how many places had sat in darkness," said the Rev. Mr. Williams in his funeral discourse, "how many ministers had starved, if Dr. Annesley had died thirty-four years since." And at last, after a faithful and fruitful ministry of more than half a century, he died in 1696, exclaiming: "I shall be satisfied with thy likeness; satisfied, satisfied!" He was devotedly loved by all who knew him well. So strong was the attachment of his noble relative, the Countess of Anglesa, that she requested on her death-bed to be buried in his grave. Cromwell greatly admired his splendid abilities, and appointed him to an office at St. Paul's. Richard Baxter pronounced him "wholly consecrated to God." The nonconformists considered him a second St. Paul.

Such was Dr. Annesley, from whom Methodism inherited much that made her early days heroic. The impress of his rare character upon his remarkable daughter, and its transmission to her more distinguished sons, developed into "the grandest fact of modern times." This memory of Dr. Annesley is intimately connected with the glory of the Methodist movement.

That Vicksburg Sugar-Bowl.

The Morning Star, of this city, our Romish neighbor, gets into quite a rage over a recent article in the ADVOCATE. We made some comments on a recent Catholic fair in Vicksburg and the voting of "an elegant silver sugar-bowl to the most popular bar-room." The Star doubts the truth of the statement, and asserts that it "requires something more than a mere declaration upon its (our) part in order to establish the fact." We do not ask so rich a boon as his acceptance of our "mere declaration" or that of any Protestant in which the faintest reference is made to Christianity or common morality. To do so would belie his Romish training. We therefore refer the irate Star to the files of the Vicksburg Evening Post. But conceding the truth of the incident our papal casuist essays a defense of the aforesaid "faithful" who rallied the sugar-bowl to the most popular bar-keeper, as follows:

In the first place, even were a silver sugar-bowl voted for and won by the owner of the most popular bar-room, there is nothing in the item to warrant the conclusion that the contest was confined alone to bar-room proprietors, and hence was not open to any and all who might have use for a silver sugar-bowl. And if this last were the case, said a bar-room proprietor were the successful contestant over restaurateurs, lunch-house keepers and others similar, as well as over other competing bar-keepers, it is only ADVOCATE morality or logic which could detect the justice of withholding the prize from the winner.

The Star acknowledges no breach of morality in conducting a raffle, and seems to think we are alike spiritually obtuse. He imagines that the purpose of our article was to deny the winner his prize, and is horrified at such "morality or logic." Alas! for such an expounder of moral and spiritual truth. He not only defends church raffles, but resents the suggestion "of withholding the prize from the winner." It was not "withholding," but offering a prize, conducting a lottery, and making winners and losers possible, that we inveighed against as offensive to good morals and dishonoring to the church of Christ.

But hear the apostle of infallibility a little further:

In the second place, it is difficult to discover how, in permitting the proprietor of a bar-room to win a sugar-bowl, even if they have done so, the Catholics of Vicksburg, in charge of that particular fair, were at all "dignified and sanctifying the whisky business." We know of no commandment, either of God or the church, which renders the whisky business of itself any more criminal than the dry goods business or the drug business or in more particular need of sanctification.

And so the Romish Church—if the Morning Star be its advocate and exponent—regards the whisky business as honorable and commendable as the dry goods or drug business. Therefore to patronize a doggery is as virtuous "of itself" as to go shopping in a millinery or clothing store. We thank God that such a standard of virtue obtains nowhere else. Even the notorious Boh Ingersoll is capable of a better moral discrimination. Rome and whisky are the greatest enemies to our best civilization.

It was the dying boast of Pericles that he had never made an Athenian weep. Christian brother and fellow-countryman, can you say as much? Has no act of yours brought the tear-stain of sorrow to a single cheek? Let us so live that our fellow-men will applaud our purity of purpose and conduct, though they may differ as to the correctness or wisdom of our judgment. We may preserve our lives from stain, if not of blame.

Our Centenary at City Road Chapel.

A meeting in commemoration of the Centenary of John Wesley's "Deed of Declaration" (February, 1784), and of the organization of Methodism in America (December, 1784), was held in old City Road Chapel, London, on Thursday, June 5. Sir William McArthur presided, and the proceedings were conducted by the President of the Conference, Dr. Riggs, Dr. Pops, Mr. Arthur, Mr. Jenkins and others. In referring to the meeting the Methodist, of London, reproduces a document of rare historic interest, which we are glad to give space in our columns also. In the Minutes of the Conference of 1785, in answer to the question, "What is the state of our Societies in North America?" it is said, "It may best appear from the following letter."

LETTER TO DR. COKE, MR. ASBURY AND OUR BRETHREN IN NORTH AMERICA.

Bristol, Sept. 10, 1784.

1. By a very uncommon train of providences many of the provinces of North America are totally disjoined from their mother country, and erected into independent States. The English government has no authority over them, either civil or ecclesiastical, any more than over the States of Holland. A civil authority is exercised over them, partly by the Congress, partly by the provincial Assemblies. But no one either exercises or claims any ecclesiastical authority at all. In this peculiar situation some thousands of the inhabitants of these States desire my advice, and in compliance with their desire I have drawn up a little sketch.

2. Lord King's "Account of the Primitive Church" convinced me, many years ago, that Bishops and Presbyters are the same order, and consequently have the same right to ordain. For many years I have been importuned, from time to time, to exercise this right by ordaining part of our traveling preachers. But I have still refused, not only for peace's sake, but because I was determined as little as possible to violate the established order of the national church to which I belonged.

3. But the case is widely different between England and North America. Here there are Bishops who have a legal jurisdiction; in America there are none, neither any parish ministers. So that for some hundred miles together there is none either to baptize or to administer the Lord's Supper. Here, therefore, my scruples are at an end, and I conceive myself at full liberty, as I violate no order and invade no man's right, by appointing and sending laborers into the harvest.

4. I have accordingly appointed Dr. Coke and Mr. Francis Asbury to be joint superintendents over our brethren in North America, as also Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey to act as elders among them, by baptizing and administering the Lord's Supper. And I have prepared a liturgy little differing from that of the Church of England (I think the best constituted national church in the world), which I advise all the traveling preachers to use on the Lord's day, in all the congregations, reading the litany only on Wednesdays and Fridays, and praying ex tempore on all other days. I also advise the elders to administer the supper of the Lord on every Lord's day.

5. If any one will point out a more rational and Scriptural way of feeding and guiding those poor sheep in the wilderness I will gladly embrace it. At present I can not see any better method than that I have taken.

6. It has, indeed, been proposed to desire the English Bishops to ordain part of our preachers for America. But to this I object. (1.) I desired the Bishop of London to ordain only one, but could not prevail. (2.) If they consented, we know the slowness of their proceedings; but the matter admits of no delay. (3.) If they would ordain them now they would likewise expect to govern them. And how grievously would this entangle us! (4.) As our American brethren are now totally disengaged both from the State and from the English hierarchy; we dare not entangle them again, either with the one or the other. They are now at full liberty simply to follow the Scriptures and the primitive church. And we judge it best that they should stand fast in that liberty wherewith God has so strangely made them free.

JOHN WESLEY.

The New York Freeman's Journal, a leading organ of the Romish Church, makes a significant admission as to the decline of Romanism in America. The statement, however, exactly corroborates the argument and statistics of that remarkable volume of Dr. Dorchester's, "The Problem of Religious Progress." The following is the statement of the Freeman's Journal:

Everywhere throughout this vast country there are to be found many Irishmen, and the children of Irishmen, who have forgotten the faith for which their fathers suffered. They came into Protestant communities; perhaps married Protestants. There was no church near them, or perhaps a church in which mass was said only once a month, or every six weeks. Gradually the habits of prayer and of Catholic thinking, which they at first possessed, slipped away. And today the children of these people would be amazed if they were told that their fathers had once been Catholics. These emigrants went into the country and the country towns. A much larger class stayed in the cities; they fared little better. The influences of their surroundings were entirely against their keeping the faith. That so many of them have kept it is a miracle.

A Financial Plan.

No subject so engages and often embarrasses the church as the needs and conditions of its treasury. How to enlist the intelligent co-operation of each member and secure from every one a Scriptural contribution has taxed and tried the genius of the best ecclesiastical financiers. Any suggestion of improvement or guide to a better way is eagerly accepted. We therefore beg pardon of our special friend, Bro. Thomas Mount, of Vicksburg, for making public use of the closing sentences of a private letter. This plan is succeeding admirably in the "Hill City," for which we heartily congratulate all concerned. We make the following extract, and append the blank form used to notify delinquents:

"My plan has always been to make as favorable a report as possible to this congregation. This encourages them, and they feel like paying. Last year we made no call on them at the wind-up, and I don't think we will have to call this year. I keep a register with all the names of the assessed members, alphabetically arranged, on the left side of this page, and opposite each name running entirely across the double page are the amounts paid each Sunday noted in squares, under the proper dates at the head of the columns. I can see at a glance how much any one owes, and at the end of every quarter I send to every one who is in arrears a notice on the enclosed printed form. Of course you know the stewards first assess the membership, and the payments each Sunday are put in the envelopes, and I enter the amounts on the cards and in my book. Then I count my cash, and add up the column in my book, and these must agree. I then debit my cash with the amount. My cash credits are taken from my receipt book, as I don't pay any money without taking a receipt—from preacher, presiding elder, sexton or organist. I also keep a ledger account with each one:

At the end of _____ Quarter, your account shows $_____ due.

By prompt payment you will enable us to meet the Church obligations. Very respectfully, Secretary Board of Stewards.

An Inquiry.

A LIMITED EPISCOPACY.

"A Judge Sibley, of Ohio, introduced a resolution fixing the Bishops' term of office at twelve years. In such a venture the learned judge is liable to be in a crowd by himself."

The above paragraph, in last week's NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, found in an editorial notice of the Northern Methodist General Conference, at Philadelphia, opens up a question entitled to more than a passing notice. Mr. Editor, or some contributor, enlighten the readers of the ADVOCATE on the points involved by satisfactory answers to the following questions:

1. Are we not taught by our church standards that there are but two Scriptural orders of ministers, deacons and elders or presbyters?
2. Does not the same authority inform us that in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Bishops are not considered as superior in orders to elders or presbyters, but simply as officers of the same grade in the ministry, delegated, for governmental purposes, to certain duties?
3. If the ordination of an elder or presbyter puts him in orders, and this order be the highest known to the New Testament, whence the necessity of additional ordination, implying, as it does, additional orders when none is intended, when conferring on an elder or presbyter the office of Bishop?

4. If, then, Bishops are not a third order, and have no more Scriptural powers and prerogatives than elders or presbyters, only as connectionally conferred upon them, why may not the term of their office be limited?

ALONZO.

MAY 21, 1884.

We make answer to our esteemed correspondent's inquiries in their order, only premising that our prophecy of the Judge's following was quite true in fact. We expressed no opinion as to the correctness or feasibility of his theory, but felt sure that he would have few or no sympathizers. To the questions we reply as follows:

1. Our standards recognize only two orders, deacons and presbyters.
2. Most assuredly.
3. There is no additional ordination. Bishops are not ordained.
4. That is simply a question of ecclesiastical state-ship. Under our present constitution it can not be done. Whether the constitution should be amended on that point is not likely to be a living issue in our Methodism during the next hundred years.

The Six-Shooter.

This is the subject of a vigorous and eloquent lecture by Rev. G. W. Briggs, of Houston, Texas. The frequent homicides in his State, and more especially the shocking tragedy at San Antonio some months ago, suggested the timeliness of such an outspoken utterance. We give place to his concluding paragraphs:

There must be reform in the duties of citizenship. The sounder citizen-ship of the country must shake itself from its selfish quiet and inuster for a revolt from the control of business politics.

1. Every man who is qualified must vote. It must cease to be regarded as the proper thing for good men to stay away from the polls and let the riffraff do the voting.

2. Every good citizen must feel it his duty to have to do with nominations. If the primaries are close corporations, those who are shut out must establish opposition primaries of their own.

3. Good political principles must cease to be represented by unprincipled men.

4. Platforms are but dust under our feet if their advocates in representative bodies are wanting in loyalty and scrupulous fidelity. Parties will appear in the light of their declaration of principles. If unworthy and unprincipled men are put forward to represent them, no flat of caucus or convention can bind a good man's conscience.

5. To support a man for office who is a moral leper is a sin against God and the country. Piety and patriotism alike lift up an eternal and thunderous protest.

When all this is done, the reign of the six-shooter is at an end. Infernal machines will drop from the body politic, like decaying fruit from a healthy tree, and this country will be what it has the right to be; the torch-bearer of the sacred flame of freedom; the vanward in the march of the progress of the world.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The District Conference.

The Louisiana district, German Conference, convened in Dryades street Church, New Orleans, June 13-14. Bishop Parker present and presiding. Though not many of the laity, all the clerical members were present. The reports from the various fields were encouraging. Several new fields in St. Landry and Caddo parishes, it was thought, should speedily be occupied. Sunday evening, June 15, was our Sunday-school Centenary meeting. The church was pretty well filled. The three Sunday-schools in this city were represented. It was a success. The proceeds of the collection were given to a needy Sunday-school in East Feliciana parish. Bishop Parker concluded the services with an appropriate address.

The New Campbell Press for the Christian Advocate.

Our new press was placed in position on Saturday. We insert the following notice taken from the Times-Democrat:

Yesterday evening there was a large gathering of printers, newspaper men and merchants in the press room of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, assembled at the invitation of L. Graham & Son, Southern agents of the Campbell Press Company, to witness a trial of an improved Campbell two-revolution book and job press which they have furnished the ADVOCATE.

The press was found to be one of the most beautiful and interesting pieces of ingenious mechanism the writer has ever seen. The advantages claimed for this machine are: Ease in getting the press ready for work, excellence of distribution of the ink, convenient position of the type bed for working at the form, evenness of impression, accuracy of register and increased speed. The sheet can be cut off at any time, and the press, and the adjustable spring movement prevents jar or noise. The press on exhibition, though one of the largest sizes made, was running with but little more noise than a family sewing machine makes. Tapes around the cylinder are dispensed with, which printers say saves a large amount of time and trouble.

The press was closely examined and greatly admired by those present, who heartily congratulated Messrs. Carver & Jamieson for their enterprise in securing, and Messrs. L. Graham & Son for their enterprise in furnishing such a splendid piece of modern mechanism.

In this new acquisition of so fine a press we congratulate not only the publishers, but our foreman, Mr. Upton, and also our patrons. The press was put in place by Mr. A. Fletcher, who came from New York for that purpose. The actual working time to put the press in place was less than twenty-four hours. Mr. Fletcher is an artist in his line, gentlemanly and skilled. If the Campbell Press Company should in future need a similar service done in this city we heartily recommend that Mr. Fletcher be sent. None could better display their machines at the International Centennial Cotton Exposition than he.

Rev. W. B. Murray, of Winona, Miss., thus writes of an interesting Centenary meeting:

We had a Centenary celebration at Valden on the fourth Sunday in May. It was an auspicious and an inspiring occasion. Rev. T. A. S. Adams was the preacher. The congregation was a good deal larger than the house, and the sermon was larger than the congregation. I wrote Bro. Adams down as a Centennial preacher of the first order.

A new Methodist Church at Mayersville, Miss., was dedicated June 8 by Dr. C. K. Marshall.

President Arthur has recommended an appropriation by Congress of $558,000 for the expenses attending the proposed government exhibit at the New Orleans Exposition.

The Montgomery (Ala.) Tribune speaks glowingly of "Dr. Cottrell's lecture in that city. A leading lawyer was quoted as describing it as 'a string of jewels.'"

On May 30, at Arcadia, La., Bro. Billingsley lifted a collection amounting to $1,200, making in all $1,500 thus far raised for the new church and parsonage. So much for Centenary enthusiasm.

The degree of doctor of divinity was conferred upon Rev. Felix R. Hill, pastor of Carondelet Street Methodist Church, by Hiwassee College, East Tennessee, at its late commencement exercises, June 9.

The water is falling, and our friends in North Louisiana will soon be able to walk on dry land. Trains on the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific railroad are now running daily from Vicksburg to Minden Junction, seventy miles west of Monroe.

We are glad to note the continued success attending the labors of Mr. Moody in London, although deprived of Mr. Sankey's assistance. Mr. Sankey has taken passage for America to repair his wasted health and give some needed attention to private business.

The Supreme Court of Michigan has just affirmed the decision of a lower court granting a physician $20,000 from a certain newspaper in a case of libel. A few more of such righteous decisions would arrest the malicious license of the press in some communities.

Bishop Parker has returned from Texas in fine health, and reports having had a good time while there. He arrived last Friday, and opened the German District Conference the same morning at nine o'clock. He preached at the Dryades Street German Church Sabbath morning.

The Rev. Dr. W. Spillman, a supernumerary member of the Mississippi Conference, has been selected by the commission of Mississippi to collect geological specimens of the State for exhibit at the Cotton Centennial and World's Industrial Exposition. Dr. Spillman has been for many years an enthusiastic student of the science of geology and a favored Southern correspondent of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington.

One of the editors of the Raleigh Christian Advocate attended a Methodist church service in Philadelphia during the General Conference. He was struck with their responsive reading, and approves it. We had a similar experience some years ago, and reach a like conclusion. He writes as follows:

Then the pastor stood up in the pulpit and announced a certain Psalm as the morning lesson, whereupon the whole congregation arose with Bibles opened at the same place. The pastor read the first verse, and then all the congregation responded by reading the next verse, and so responsive reading went on through the Psalm. We thought this was a good thing. Our service is too bare. The people are not engaged enough. And this responsive reading enlisted the congregation. It made their part of the worship more prominent and impressive. Instead of looking listlessly over the congregation, as is often the case, while the preacher is reading the Scriptures, the people are made to read for themselves.

The Jackson District Conference unanimously passed the following, for which we are profoundly grateful:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the editorial and publishing management of our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and pledge ourselves to its support, and increased efforts for its increased circulation.

Books and Periodicals.

The Universe, for June, has been received, and read with pleasure. With this number closes the third volume of this magazine. The Universe Publishing Company, St. Louis, Mo. One dollar and fifty cents a year.

Margie's Mission, by Marie Oliver, is one of the most charming stories we have ever read. It is the second number of The Young Folks' Library, published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, Mass. Those books are issued monthly at a cost of twenty-five cents each.

The July number of St. Nicholas, will contain the conclusion of "The Scarlet Tongue," the seventh of Miss Louisa Alcott's "Splashing-Wheel Stories," and several Fourth of July sketches and stories. Look out girls and boys for something unusually fine. Published by The Century Company, 33 East Seventeenth street, New York.

The young readers of White Awake in the editor's family say that this delightful magazine gets better and better with each number, and that the June number surpasses any in the line we have yet seen, and we heartily agree with them. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, Mass.

Excursion Rates to Chicago.

To accommodate those who desire to visit Chicago and attend the Democratic National Convention, the Illinois Central railroad will sell round trip tickets from all local stations to Chicago and return for one unlimited fare for the round trip. Sale of tickets to begin July 5 and continue until July 8, good to return until July 14 inclusive. A fine opportunity to see the great city.

A. H. HANSON, Gen. Pass. Agt.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

The sermons of the late Dr. Neely, being published by his widow, Mrs. Alice Neely, are now in press at the Nashville Publishing House, and will be furnished to subscribers as soon as they can be delivered. Fear of business of the Publishing House has caused the delay. Subscribers will please make a note of this.

What kind of sauce should be served with tough steaks? Circular saws.

MECHANICS & TRADERS INSURANCE CO.—This insurance company was organized in 1869, and is one of the most popular in the city. Its success has been almost phenomenal. The stock commands a high premium, and the company are doing a large and prosperous business. Their securities are promptly adjusted. Col. Coleman, the president, with his corps of accomplished assistants, are always on hand to wait upon their patrons. See their advertisement on the fifth page.

A little girl calls her good father par-excellence.

SEWING MACHINES GIVEN AWAY.—The Willcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine Company, 65 Broadway, New York, are continuing for a limited period, to give away a good two-thread Sewing Machine to needy and deserving women. These Machines have been taken by the Company from private families as part payment for their new Automatic (no tension) Machine. If required to pack or repair, a small sum is charged to cover expenses. Recommendations from pastors or others, that the applicant is needy and deserving, should be furnished in every case.—N. Y. Observer.

"What is wanted in this country," said the bride, as she examined the wedding presents, "is silver service where Life Tonic is placed."

In no case where Life Tonic was taken in the great yellow fever epidemic of 1873, did yield to any other fever—a great fact which should be universally known. It will pay to keep it in every family. Try it.

"When I die," said Mrs. Fishbacker, "I want to be buried in good, old-fashioned style, and not buried to ashes in one of these cretinous you hear of."

JOY TO THE WORLD is one of the most successful singing-books for Sunday-schools and social meetings that has been placed upon the market. It is the product of the best work of three widely known and popular authors, Prof. O'Kane, McCree, and Swaney. The book contains a number of the best hymns of the churches, those which the Sunday-school scholars should become familiar. The new tunes and songs are charming. The popularity of the "Round-note" edition induces the publishers to publish a "Character-note" edition; although a much larger book, it sells at only $1 a dozen; $25 a hundred. A sample copy will be received, post-paid, for twenty-five cents, by addressing the publishers, Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati, Ohio, or St. Louis.

"Why, Sam! How do you expect to get that mule along with a spur only on one side?" "Well, Boss, if I gets dat side to go, ain't de under one bound to keep a?"

The weak, worn, and dyspeptic should take COTTAGE LIVER TONIC. COTTAGE LIVER TONIC. Of druggists.

James, who was trying to sew a new button on his coat, murmured: "They say there's a new yacht that makes a knot an hour, but this thread makes 30 knots a minute."

For pimples, use GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP. HILL'S HAIR AND WHISKER DYE, 50 Cts. FICK'S TOOTHACHE DROPS cure in one minute.

A neighboring paper, reporting a recent social, says: "The opening piece was rendered by a male quartet." The reporter wrote it "male quartet," but the composer knew better.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon Sts., New Orleans, has a good 7 octave rosewood piano for $125; an elegant new 7 1/2 octave rosewood piano for $200 cash; an elegant new piano for $250, or $2.00 a week or $5.00 per month, for the first year; another elegant piano, formerly $300 for $200 cash. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low rates. The Chickering, Weber, Mautz, Knicker, Hardman, Wesslein, Hale, Schomaker, Behning and Cable pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Sterling and Bay State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Immense stock of sheet music and musical instruments. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange. Part payments for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent to any address.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or no.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, safe connections, and accommodating officers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most palatable and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit accorded to the patient in a single teaspoonful than in any other form. It is the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TREX, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN. SESSION 1884-85. Permanent Endowment, $700,000.

THE Academic, Biblical and Law Departments open September 1. The Medical, Dental and Pharmaceutical Departments open October 1. Free Academic Department, 168; Bible, $11; Law, $100; Medical, $200; Dental, $60; Pharmaceutical, $13. The Schools of Science are supplied with the most approved apparatus. The School of Engineering is supplied with a workshop for practical instruction. Two Post-Graduate Fellowships, worth $300 each, are annually awarded. Send from $10 to $20 per month. The Annual Register is sent on application to John W. Shipley, Secretary of the Faculty. L. C. GARLAND, Chancellor.

BARGAINS SILKS IN

Summer Silks, in great variety. Reduced to 30c, 50c, 75c, and 75c. French Foulards, in choice patterns. Reduced to 50c, and 75c—formerly 85c, and $1. Figured India Silks, light and dark grounds. Reduced to 75c—former price $1.25. Rich Novelty Silks. 24 inches wide and in large variety of colorings, at $1.25, $1.75 and $2.00. Two double—great sacrifice. Colored Silks. Plain colored gros grain silks, in great variety of shades. Reduced to 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.15 and $1.25. Black Silks. Special sale of black gros grain Dress Silks, at 80c. $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.25, $2.50, $2.75, $3.00, $3.25, $3.50, $3.75, $4.00, $4.25, $4.50, $4.75, $5.00, $5.25, $5.50, $5.75, $6.00, $6.25, $6.50, $6.75, $7.00, $7.25, $7.50, $7.75, $8.00, $8.25, $8.50, $8.75, $9.00, $9.25, $9.50, $9.75, $10.00, $10.25, $10.50, $10.75, $11.00, $11.25, $11.50, $11.75, $12.00, $12.25, $12.50, $12.75, $13.00, $13.25, $13.50, $13.75, $14.00, $14.25, $14.50, $14.75, $15.00, $15.25, $15.50, $15.75, $16.00, $16.25, $16.50, $16.75, $17.00, $17.25, $17.50, $17.75, $18.00, $18.25, $18.50, $18.75, $19.00, $19.25, $19.50, $19.75, $20.00, $20.25, $20.50, $20.75, $21.00, $21.25, $21.50, $21.75, $22.00, $22.25, $22.50, $22.75, $23.00, $23.25, $23.50, $23.75, $24.00, $24.25, $24.50, $24.75, $25.00, $25.25, $25.50, $25.75, $26.00, $26.25, $26.50, $26.75, $27.00, $27.25, $27.50, $27.75, $28.00, $28.25, $28.50, $28.75, $29.00, $29.25, $29.50, $29.75, $30.00, $30.25, $30.50, $30.75, $31.00, $31.25, $31.50, $31.75, $32.00, $32.25, $32.50, $32.75, $33.00, $33.25, $33.50, $33.75, $34.00, $34.25, $34.50, $34.75, $35.00, $35.25, $35.50, $35.75, $36.00, $36.25, $36.50, $36.75, $37.00, $37.25, $37.50, $37.75, $38.00, $38.25, $38.50, $38.75, $39.00, $39.25, $39.50, $39.75, $40.00, $40.25, $40.50, $40.75, $41.00, $41.25, $41.50, $41.75, $42.00, $42.25, $42.50, $42.75, $43.00, $43.25, $43.50, $43.75, $44.00, $44.25, $44.50, $44.75, $45.00, $45.25, $45.50, $45.75, $46.00, $46.25, $46.50, $46.75, $47.00, $47.25, $47.50, $47.75, $48.00, $48.25, $48.50, $48.75, $49.00, $49.25, $49.50, $49.75, $50.00, $50.25, $50.50, $50.75, $51.00, $51.25, $51.50, $51.75, $52.00, $52.25, $52.50, $52.75, $53.00, $53.25, $53.50, $53.75, $54.00, $54.25, $54.50, $54.75, $55.00, $55.25, $55.50, $55.75, $56.00, $56.25, $56.50, $56.75, $57.00, $57.25, $57.50, $57.75, $58.00, $58.25, $58.50, $58.75, $59.00, $59.25, $59.50, $59.75, $60.00, $60.25, $60.50, $60.75, $61.00, $61.25, $61.50, $61.75, $62.00, $62.25, $62.50, $62.75, $63.00, $63.25, $63.50, $63.75, $64.00, $64.25, $64.50, $64.75, $65.00, $65.25, $65.50, $65.75, $66.00, $66.25, $66.50, $66.75, $67.00, $67.25, $67.50, $67.75, $68.00, $68.25, $68.50, $68.75, $69.00, $69.25, $69.50, $69.75, $70.00, $70.25, $70.50, $70.75, $71.00, $71.25, $71.50, $71.75, $72.00, $72.25, $72.50, $72.75, $73.00, $73.25, $73.50, $73.75, $74.00, $74.25, $74.50, $74.75, $75.00, $75.25, $75.50, $75.75, $76.00, $76.25, $76.50, $76.75, $77.00, $77.25, $77.50, $77.75, $78.00, $78.25, $78.50, $78.75, $79.00, $79.25, $79.50, $79.75, $80.00, $80.25, $80.50, $80.75, $81.00, $81.25, $81.50, $81.75, $82.00, $82.25, $82.50, $82.75, $83.00, $83.25, $83.50, $83.75, $84.00, $84.25, $84.50, $84.75, $85.00, $85.25, $85.50, $85.75, $86.00, $86.25, $86.50, $86.75, $87.00, $87.25, $87.50, $87.75, $88.00, $88.25, $88.50, $88.75, $89.00, $89.25, $89.50, $89.75, $90.00, $90.25, $90.50, $90.75, $91.00, $91.25, $91.50, $91.75, $92.00, $92.25, $92.50, $92.75, $93.00, $93.25, $93.50, $93.75, $94.00, $94.25, $94.50, $94.75, $95.00, $95.25, $95.50, $95.75, $96.00, $96.25, $96.50, $96.75, $97.00, $97.25, $97.50, $97.75, $98.00, $98.25, $98.50, $98.75, $99.00, $99.25, $99.50, $99.75, $100.00, $100.25, $100.50, $100.75, $101.00, $101.25, $101.50, $101.75, $102.00, $102.25, $102.50, $102.75, $103.00, $103.25, $103.50, $103.75, $104.00, $104.25, $104.50, $104.75, $105.00, $105.25, $105.50, $105.75, $106.00, $106.25, $106.50, $106.75, $107.00, $107.25, $107.50, $107.75, $108.00, $108.25, $108.50, $108.75, $109.00, $109.25, $109.50, $109.75, $110.00, $110.25, $110.50, $110.75, $111.00, $111.25, $111.50, $111.75, $112.00, $112.25, $112.50, $112.75, $113.00, $113.25, $113.50, $113.75, $114.00, $114.25, $114.50, $114.75, $115.00, $115.25, $115.50, $115.75, $116.00, $116.25, $116.50, $116.75, $117.00, $117.25, $117.50, $117.75, $118.00, $118.25, $118.50, $118.75, $119.00, $119.25, $119.50, $119.75, $120.00, $120.25, $120.50, $120.75, $121.00, $121.25, $121.50, $121.75, $122.00, $122.25, $122.50, $122.75, $123.00, $123.25, $123.50, $123.75, $124.00, $124.25, $124.50, $124.75, $125.00, $125.25, $125.50, $125.75, $126.00, $126.25, $126.50, $126.75, $127.00, $127.25, $127.50, $127.75, $128.00, $128.25, $128.50, $128.75, $129.00, $129.25, $129.50, $129.75, $130.00, $130.25, $130.50, $130.75, $131.00, $131.25, $131.50, $131.75, $132.00, $132.25, $132.50, $132.75, $133.00, $133.25, $133.50, $133.75, $134.00, $134.25, $134.50, $134.75, $135.00, $135.25, $135.50, $135.75, $136.00, $136.25, $136.50, $136.75, $137.00, $137.25, $137.50, $137.75, $138.00, $138.25, $138.50, $138.75, $139.00, $139.25, $139.50, $139.75, $140.00, $140.25, $140.50, $140.75, $141.00, $141.25, $141.50, $141.75, $142.00, $142.25, $142.50, $142.75, $143.00, $143.25, $143.50, $143.75, $144.00, $144.25, $144.50, $144.75, $145.00, $145.25, $145.50, $145.75, $146.00, $146.25, $146.50, $146.75, $147.00, $147.25, $147.50, $147.75, $148.00, $148.25, $148.50, $148.75, $149.00, $149.25, $149.50, $149.75, $150.00, $150.25, $150.50, $150.75, $151.00, $151.25, $151.50, $151.75, $152.00, $152.25, $152.50, $152.75, $153.00, $153.25, $153.50, $153.75, $154.00, $154.25, $154.50, $154.75, $155.00, $155.25, $155.50, $155.75, $156.00, $156.25, $156.50, $156.75, $157.00, $157.25, $157.50, $157.75, $158.00, $158.25, $158.50, $158.75, $159.00, $159.25, $159.50, $159.75, $160.00, $160.25, $160.50, $160.75, $161.00, $161.25, $161.50, $161.75, $162.00, $162.25, $162.50, $162.75, $163.00, $163.25, $163.50, $163.75, $164.00, $164.25, $164.50, $164.75, $165.00, $165.25, $165.50, $165.75, $166.00, $166.25, $166.50, $166.75, $167.00, $167.25, $167.50, $167.75, $168.00, $168.25, $168.50, $168.75, $169.00, $169.25, $169.50, $169.75, $170.00, $170.25, $170.50, $170.75, $171.00, $171.25, $171.50, $171.75, $172.00, $172.25, $172.50, $172.75, $173.00, $173.25, $173.50, $173.75, $174.00, $174.25, $174.50, $174.75, $175.00, $175.25, $175.50, $175.75, $176.00, $176.25, $176.50, $176.75, $177.00, $177.25, $177.50, $177.75, $178.00, $178.25, $178.50, $178.75, $179.00, $179.25, $179.50, $179.75, $180.00, $180.25, $180.50, $180.75, $181.00, $181.25, $181.50, $181.75, $182.00, $182.25, $182.50, $182.75, $183.00, $183.25, $183.50, $183.75, $184.00, $184.25, $184.50, $184.75, $185.00, $185.

Christian Advocate.

No. 56 USE St. Charles St

THE

TRADE MARK

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the CATARRH of the GLASS has no equal, and can, in some cases, restore the sight, if used in time, but in a can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tire some sensation usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see in them as bright and clear as first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cool, and the result is that the optic nerve always cool, doing with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, w distracting or tire some sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS—NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.
The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, MEDICATED.

Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who may wish to procure these spectacle send for a circular containing description, price, etc., and directions for obtaining a perfect fit, and them sent by mail, by addressing

HERC. HOUSAH,
CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY
56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.

In writing mention this paper.

HERC. HOUSAH'S CATARRH

Sole Agent For

And Diseases of
HEAD, THROAT & L
Suffer labor at home. I guarantee when our op
ion. (Sufferers should r
for the cat. Herc. Hous
W. F. C. H. C. H. C. H.

[illegible]

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.-NO. 26.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 26, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1456.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

THOMAS B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
JAMES B. JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Singles, 10 cents.

Advertisements of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized by the General Conference, and Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. F. L. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KENNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GONFREVY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNTER,
REV. C. S. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. T. J. BULLIVANT, D. D.,
REV. W. F. SARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE ROSY HORIZON.
(A Tribute to Very Aged Friends.)

BY THOMAS B. GALLOWAY.

When the young day, from shadows born,
Up early waking eyes behold,
And all the jewels of dawn
Fling back the rays of rosy gold,
The golden glory of the east
Around the far horizon spread,
Till smiles of welcome from the west
Are responsive lights shed.

And when at latest day's decline
The glowing sunset spreads its hues,
And gold and rose again combine
Their matchless glories to diffuse,
Round the wide circuit of the earth
Spreads the calm lustre, far and free,
Till all the orient shines forth
In bright, responsive sympathy.

And thus do youth and age respond:
Life's morn' earth's early tints outvie,
And ev'ning's glowings far beyond
The rising of the sinking skies.
And the calm radiance of age—
In rosy love, its golden truth—
Yield a life-given heritage
To glad the rising skies of youth.

O friends of many numbered years,
Filled with the memories of the past—
Memories of joy, memories of tears,
Of smiling skies and skies of woe—
Fill the lingering hours that stretch
Through the long twilight of your lives,
And the bright loves that backward reach
Like tints the glowing sunset glows.

—The Presbyterian.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: There were present at this missionary meeting the father and mother of one young man—their only son. They had for many years given him to the Lord, and now they gave him to his work, and though it cost them many a struggle, yet it was for Jesus' sake and the salvation of the heathen. Many an eye was filled with tears at that last meeting and parting. None of us knew what was in the future for us; but the Lord said, "Lo, I am with you always; even unto the end of the world," and this precious promise has been our strength and support to this day. By his hand he has led us and kindly cared for us all the way, and has graciously verified his blessed promise. Dr. Jenkins was with us at this meeting. It was there we first met him, for we were to return with him to that distant surprise we heard that Dr. Jenkins was to be married to a young lady who once lived in Charleston, S. C. We visited the home of the mother of the young lady, and found them to be earnest Christian people. Our boarding-place was No. 7 Broadway—a place long to be remembered not because of its attractiveness, but because of the hallowed associations which are yet fresh in the memories of the past. Our landlady was very agreeable, and made our stay there very pleasant.

The good ship "Ariel," on which we were to take passage to China, was to leave in two weeks. The state-rooms were rather small, and some thought we would be crowded. We set to work in good earnest to get such things as we should need for housekeeping. While at No. 7 Broadway we were surprised and delighted to meet Dr. Taylor just arrived from China. Mrs. Taylor had been in the United States some two years, but her health not improving hastened his return. As soon as we could we visited the ship, Capt. Ayers being commander. We wandered over the ship and examined every part of it with a great deal of curiosity. Each of our party had selected their rooms before us; so that the state-room which fell to us was near the gangway and nearest the centre of the ship. It was decidedly the most comfortable room of all, and we were pleased. We had as much light as any of the rooms, more air and, being nearest the centre of the ship, we did not feel the motion so much. We learned this from experience. In two weeks everything was ready for that long voyage. Here, in this great city, we had made the acquaintance of that good man, Bro. David Terry, who added us no little in purchasing such things as we should need. We shall never forget his kindness to us. He has always been the friend of the missionaries.

On May 6, 1884, Saturday morning, about ten A. M., our ship left the wharf and anchored in the stream, near where the splendid bridge now spans the East river, and was soon taken in tow by a steam cutter. Dr. Kelley's father and mother, Dr. Baugs and Bro. Terry were aboard and went a short distance with us. Before leaving us, the missionary hymn was sung, Dr. Baugs made a few remarks and led us in earnest prayer for God's protection and guidance. There were some sad hearts on that occasion; but the time came when father and mother must bid farewell to their only child. Our sails were being unfurled and all was life and bustle among the sailors. Our friends committed us all to the care of our kind heavenly Father and then left. We watched them until distance shut them out of sight, and then we turned our eyes upon the shore of our native land until darkness shut it out entirely from our view. No one can tell with what solemn feelings we watched until the last point faded away. The waves began to rise, and we, who were unaccustomed to sea life, at once anticipated a storm. The ship began to rise and fall, and we had such a strange feeling we had never before experienced. It was an indescribable feeling. That first night at sea was a doleful one to our little band. Each one was perfectly indifferent as to what was going on around and only thought of self. One of the party wanted the captain to anchor the ship that she might get a moment's rest.

Here we were tossed upon the wide ocean, with the waves rising high and dashing furiously against our noble ship as she plunged through the foaming deep. But few of our number were inclined to take their first supper at sea. I partook heartily of my evening meal and remained up until nine P. M., when Dr. Jenkins read a few verses from God's word and in earnest prayer committed us all to the care of our heavenly Father. I retired—but not to sleep, for the sea increased in highness and the good ship tossed like a feather on the waves. My trust was in God. I knew that he was at the helm, for he commands the wind and the sea, and they obey him.

I was up by daylight, for I could not sleep, feeling anything but comfortable. I went on deck, for every window was closed above and below except the door of the gangway. Getting a little fresh air, I felt revived; but what a wild scene was presented to my view! The sea was boiling and surging as if to destroy everything upon its surface. The waves came with such a force against the vessel as to make every timber in her shake, and it seemed to me that every piece of timber would be wrenched from its socket. Jack, one of the sailors, said to me: "That's right, sir; come on deck and weather it out." I was surprised to see every man hard at work washing decks and clearing away ropes as though the sea was perfectly calm. But this is just the weather sailors like. It was clear, but the wind blowing a gale, and we were speeding rapidly on our way to our field of missionary labor. On going below the close atmosphere made me feel uncomfortable. I had a rug spread on deck, and soon Mrs. Lambuth was out in the open air, and, though we felt better, I can not say that either of us enjoyed the situation.

At eight breakfast was announced, but we concluded to postpone the hour. All day we could only eat a few hard crackers. The captain would occasionally pass by and say: "Fine breeze. We shall not be long getting to Shanghai." We were glad to hear it. We did not enjoy such a life as this. I had often heard the song, "A life on the ocean wave," and I thought it must be very fine; but our first forty-eight hours on the ocean wave took all the poetry out of that song.

Yours in the love of Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, MAY 1, 1884.

Letter from Kentucky.

BY REV. W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

NEW BOOKS.

While this is the book-making age, and the presses are busy pouring forth books of every variety of character and influence, the presence of a truly good book is hailed with pleasure by all who love truth and Jesus. We have read and re-read "Life of Andrew" with rich pleasure and profit, and it will be one of the books of the "Methodist Family Library." Two books are looked for with much interest: Bishop McTear's work on the "Centennial of Methodism," the other is the "Life of Bishop Kavanaugh," by A. H. Redford, D. D. The first work will carry with it the impress of the clear, strong thought and vigorous, concise expressions which give such excellence to the Bishop's productions whether oral or written. The book will be instructive and authoritative, and one of the gems of centennial literature. The life of Bishop Kavanaugh in its plainest presentation will attract by the simplicity and purity and devotion of that man associated with his mental force and his pulpit power. When presented as a labor of love by the author, who has expended on it his well-known industry, and his skill of arrangement as well as beauty and force of presentation, Kavanaugh's life will be one of the most attractive books of the centennial of Methodism. What a lovely gem in the sky of pure, highly valuable biography—Andrew and Kavanaugh! To read these lives endears to us our loved Methodism and that grace of God which gave to "Christianity in earnest" its power and its glory.

DISTINCT CONFERENCES.

These meetings are invested with new interest and profit in their association with the great centennial. The discussion of the origin and success, the polity and doctrines and usages of our church awakens thought, calls out investigation, leads to study and brings out more forcibly the might of Methodism, gratitude to God for his signet set on her history, and a sense of personal responsibility and pleasure in connection with her future history. Never before in our State has the great mind and heart of Methodism been more intelligently and graciously moved to duty and to Christ. Methodist history will put on a new beauty, and the appliances and agencies used in her most wonderful progress will be better understood and prized. The peculiar doctrines of regeneration, and the witness of the Spirit and true holiness will be placed in their true position as essential, indispensable requisites of spiritual life and growth. A larger, more consecrated liberality is marking the hour. Educational agencies are better understood as means of church success and true Christian influence, and position and respect.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The annual season of these "feasts of tabernacles" is on us, and the usual announcements of Bishops and other distinguished church officials are made to attract the crowd. Large expense has been employed to make the several rival establishments prominent and largely attended, and a rich variety of sources of pleasure are presented as reasons for spending a week or more in the tented grove. It would be a grand addition if the conversion of souls and the sanctification of believers by the power of the Holy Spirit were as prominent matters of desire and effort as social pleasure and recreation from business cares. If the olden time "mourner's bench," and the necessity of conscious precious pardon of sin and love divine spread abroad in the soul by the Holy Ghost, were more strongly urged, and less sugar-coated pills used, through which most of the bitterness of repentance is concealed, it might be an improvement. Joining the church, public confession of Christ by ritual service, avowed reception of creed and purpose to abide by church discipline, should never be mistaken for "the new birth"—much less be substituted for the regenerating work of the Holy Spirit attending personal, immediate, entire trust in Jesus Christ as our individual Saviour.

CONTINUED RAIN.

For more than a week we have had a daily watery visit from the clouds. Thousands of acres of tobacco are set out and the promise of wheat gladdens the farmer's heart. "How much is God's?" should be the question from each lip as the eye passes over the wealth our Father so kindly gives.

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS.

The usual annual display of genius and blue ribbons, of literary promise and parchments, is at once disturbing and gratifying to the mind and heart, both male and female; of parents and children. Kentucky Wesleyan College is still doing a good work, though limited in means of usefulness because of the want of money supply. Its friends hope that the centennial pulse-beat of the Southern Methodist heart in Kentucky will lead to more liberal offerings on the literary altar. Change in the presidency is illustrating one feature in itinerancy. President Read retires to take his place in "the regular work," so called. President Betsou returns. The M. Female College loses its president, Dr. Gould, and Dr. Evans is his successor. This college has been one of largest success in educating our daughters in the various Southern States. It is to be regretted that financial embarrassment should interfere with its grand successful history.

CARLETON, Kentucky.

Raising Dust.

What a dust some people raise every year when our women start to the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society and to the meetings of the Conference societies! They take a fit of holy horrors over the matter of expense—railroad fare, hotel bills, and the like of that. If they were members of the society, or paid anything to its funds, then they ought to know how the funds are expended, and why. But those who raise the biggest dust about this waste of money have put nothing into the treasury. If every dollar of it were foolishly spent, it would not hurt them. Those who want to know and ought to know how this money is spent can know at any time how every cent of it has gone. The accounts are well kept and they are open for inspection.

A missionary fund is a sacred fund, and it ought to be judiciously expended. We send delegates—or the women do—to attend to these things. This is the reason why they go. They go to attend to business, and not for pleasure. It is firm business, and the firm ought to pay the expenses.

No kind of business can be carried on without incidental expenses. This is just as true of religious business as of any other. If it involves the management and control of money or that which has money value, it is impossible to carry it on without some expense. Business will not run of itself. It has to be looked after and pushed.

It would pay a thousand-fold if all our women could attend the general and Conference meetings of the Woman's Missionary Society. Nine hundred out of a thousand would come home full of zeal for the good cause. The women send delegates to their meetings. All can not go; some must go. It is not right, not fair, not honest to require those who go to pay their own expenses. The local societies ought to pay the expenses of their delegates to the meetings of the Conference society, and the Conference society ought to pay the expenses of its delegate or delegates to the general meeting. When a merchant goes on to lay in goods, the firm pays the expense of his trip. The State pays mileage to its representatives. The masons, odd fellows, Pythians, and other benevolent orders, pay the expenses of their delegates to grand lodges, and the like. Some of these—yes, all of them—are sacred funds. Then why make such a dust about the execution of a general law in the case of the Woman's Missionary Society?

For the amount of business done, the amount of money involved and the kind and extent of the work carried on our women can well afford to compare expense accounts with any business firm in all the land. I know some folks who always know too much of other people's business will think me a fool for saying this; but I dare them to the comparison. There are some people who seem to think that there is a perpetual motion that ought to run the church and religious machine without a drop of oil to lubricate the joints. "It can't be did," and that's the "end on it." Yours,

GILDEROY.

"Jesus Blessing Little Children."

BY REV. ANSON DOWLING.

Mark says: "They brought (prosepheron) young children to him that he should touch them." Luke says: "They brought (prosepheron) unto him also infants." The word (prosephero) rendered "brought" is also rendered, offer, tender, proffer, as money; present, as gifts, oblation; offer up any one as a sacrifice to God. (Scholz.) The Latin of Mark is: "Offerebant illi puerulos;" Luke: "Afferebant autem ei et infantes." The word (offero) rendered "brought" is also rendered, present before one's eyes, offer, give up to. (Anthon.) Affero is rendered, bring, contribute. (Anthon.)

These words and definitions sustain my statement in a former article that the parents of these children brought them to Jesus with an intention of giving them to the church, and that the act of Jesus in blessing them shows that they were "set apart" for holy uses; also that Christ, in receiving them, received them for either the kingdom of God in heaven or the kingdom of God on earth. If he received them for the upper kingdom, then he sent them right up to glory, either soul and body or soul without the body (if the latter, he must have caused them to die); but if he received them for the kingdom of God on earth, then they joined the church. The words of Christ settle the last statement as to the truth in the matter. He said: "Verily I say unto you: Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." Receives the kingdom of God as a little child receives the kingdom of God! Then a little child can receive the kingdom of God? Whosoever does not receive the kingdom of God as a little child can not enter therein—can not enter into the fullness and richness of salvation and glory; hence the babies in the church constitute the ordained strength of God and the perfected praise of Jesus Christ, for Christ says, "Of these is the kingdom of God"—the kingdom of God is theirs.

The act of Jesus Christ in receiving the babies was in exact accord with the spirit of all the past centuries of God's dealing with his people. God demanded the babies, and it was an offense to him not to offer them. "And it came to pass by the way in the inn that the Lord met him (Moses) and sought to kill him. Then Zipporah took a sharp stone (knife) and cut off the foreskin of her son and cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me. So he let him go; then she said: A bloody husband thou art because of the circumcision." (Exodus iv, 24-26.) By neglecting to give his young child to God in circumcision Moses, the law giver, forfeited blessing and endangered his very life; therefore God sought to kill him. Perhaps his wife was to blame partly in this matter, as she would not consent to the work of God in the person of her child; therefore she was forced to do the work of her husband or lose her husband and, perhaps, her child also. Both were to blame; both offended God. As Moses and his wife gave offense to God in withholding their young child, so the disciples of Jesus offended him by rebuking those who brought their infants to him. In like manner parents offend Jesus today.

Bringing and giving their babies to Jesus Christ, those parents were in accord with the spirit and conduct of the pious mother of the Prophet Samuel, except she withheld her precious child till he was weaned before she made a formal presentation, although he was given in spirit from his birth, having been circumcised. And when she had weaned him she took him up with her, with three bullocks and one ephah of flour and a bottle of wine, and brought him unto the house of the Lord in Shiloh; and the child was young. And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli. And she said: O, my lord, as thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here praying unto the Lord. For this child I prayed, and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him; therefore also I have lent (returned) him to the Lord; as long as he liveth he shall be lent (given) to the Lord." (1 Samuel i, 24-28.) This beginning of the work of salvation in the very dawn of the life of this child resulted in one of the most distinguished characters of Old Testament saints. Worthy of imitation!

In the same spirit, and for the same grand moral result, Solomon says, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Says Dr. A. Clark: "Chanaan, which we translate, 'train up' or 'initiate,' signifies also, dedicate, and is often used for the consecrating anything, house or person to the service of God. Dedicate, therefore, in the first instance, your child to God, and nurse, teach and discipline as God's child, whom he has intrusted to your care. These things observed and illustrated by your own conduct, the child will never depart from the path of life."

Dedication in the acts of Moses and Abraham with their sons was performed by circumcision and presentation. Consecration of babies, under the gospel, is by baptism. Therefore when St. Paul says to parents, "Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," he evidently includes consecration by baptism. "Bring them up" includes from the very beginning of life. All "in the Lord!" Consecrated childhood for useful manhood! Pure childhood for successful manhood and happy and contented old age! "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise."

RAMER, ALA., JUNE 6, 1884.

I believe in a boy who has something of the man in him, and I believe in the man who has something of the boy in him.—P. S. HENSON.

—There are strings in the harp of every life which, though covered with dust, give out music when the wings of truth stir the air.

—That is a line saying of Charlock: "God never yet put out (even) a dim candle that was lighted at the Sun of Righteousness."

—We can not have fertilizing showers on the earth without a clouded heaven above. It is thus with our trials.

—Events are not in our power; but it always is wise to make a good use of even the worst.—Berkeley.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JUNE 26, 1884.

THE BLIND GIRL'S SIGH.

The stars of the twilight are dark,
No image of night can I see,
Theophile of morning awake with the sun,
No dawn for light is for me!

I hear the birds twitter and sing,
And list to the hum of the bee;
I know by the acrid of the violet it's spring,
But darkness, all darkness to me.

I know summer's fading away,
When leaves rustle dry 'neath the tree,
And winter brings snowflakes to fall on my brow,
But darkness, all darkness to me.

I tell by the touch of the hand
The mother I never shall see;
Her steps often linger beside her blind child,
I feel her in darkness near me.

O ye whose eyes open at morn,
Thank God when the daylight you see,
Give pity and help to the poor blindly born,
Whose years roll in darkness with me.

Retrospective.

ELEVENTH PAPER.

In my last Retrospective I was at Sheboygan, then a flourishing town on the western side of Lake Michigan. After making a brief and pleasant visit I took leave of friends and took a boat for Buffalo. Although it was mid-summer, I found a horrid overcast quite necessary for comfort early in the morning and late in the evening. Our boat stopped long enough at Mackinaw Straits to procure a supply of Mackinaw trout, than which no better fish are caught in those Northern lakes. While there a sign-board on a large storehouse attracted notice. In curious formed letters I read INJUN CURIOSITIES. On entering I could see nothing but the work of Indians for sale. I purchased a few rare specimens to bring home. From this point to Buffalo nothing remarkable occurred. I witnessed an exciting race between two steamboats, and saw at Detroit the remnant of a regiment of soldiers just on their return from the battlefields in Mexico, and heard some of their private soldiers abusing and threatening their brass buttoned officers, who, as they alleged, had treated them badly. We stopped long enough at Cleveland, Ohio, to take a view of the city. While leisurely walking Main street I noticed at a fruit stand a little ragged urchin was caught stealing apples. He looked meaner than do some of our full grown men who defraud the government out of thousands of dollars. Eve's descendants are fond of apples, but they should not indulge their appetite with forbidden fruit. We reached Buffalo in safety, after which a short run on the cars brought us to the world renowned Falls of Niagara. This was my first visit, rest assured that such grandeur, magnificence and unrivaled scenery my eyes had never seen, and such a tumultuous fall of waters had never greeted my ears. In viewing this sublime scene well may one adore the power and majesty of the One who causes not only the little rivulet to murmur softly along its devious course, but prepares the collected waters from rivers and lakes to speak in louder than thunder tones that "the hand that made them is divine." I will not attempt a description of the scenery and surroundings of what may justly be regarded as one of the wonders of the world, and so often portrayed by pencils of a more accurate and finer finish than this writer can command. I will only say that thirty-seven islands, of various sizes, stud the river above the falls, that it has been computed that one hundred million tons of water rush over this grand precipice every hour. I learn that the falls were first discovered by Father Hennepin, a French Jesuit missionary, in the year 1678. The buttresses of the bridge which span the river below the falls were being constructed. A wire net-work extended across the river, not exceeding three feet wide, for footmen to cross. We paid twenty-five cents for the privilege of crossing over to the Canada side, but would have paid a much larger sum to have been back before we were half way across. Looking down two hundred and fifty feet into the rolling river below was enough to frenzy the head. I only looked at the narrow plank upon which I walked. Two days after leaving the falls found me in the embrace of a fond mother.

MARSHALL, TEXAS.

DANIEL MORSE.

Home Missions.

In order to supply our home missions more effectively new plans must be adopted. The great need of these works, technically called missions, is men of experience and ability. Such men need a comfortable support for their families. How can this support be obtained? Increase the assessments. But our presbytery and people are opposed to the increase which the necessities of the case demand. How then? Let two or more of our Conferences unite upon the right man, and make him their home missionary secretary. Let it be the duty of this secretary, to discover the necessities of the people and the opportunities of the church, and then to travel from charge to charge, informing the people.

This plan, we believe, would work to the entire satisfaction of our Missionary Board, our home missions and our people. Under its operations we believe that in a few years the majority of our missions would become self-sustaining circuits or stations.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS, CAMDEN, MISSISSIPPI.

Mississippi Conference Brotherhood.

Our facetious Bro. Nicholson wants some information as to the working of our brotherhood. As to the intimation that young men organized the brotherhood, we state that about thirty members were present, and one-third of them were the leading men of our Conference. Before our organization Bro. Dominick and myself had been encouraged by such brethren as Drs. Johnson and Galloway, Noraworthy, West, Motinger, W. B. Lewis, Weems and many others I could name. The officers' work is one of love. No one receives a cent for his work. Each member pays one dime a year to help pay for postal expenses. We now have a charter. We are now resting on a solid foundation.

As to the postponement of payment until Conference, I oppose the suggestion. When a member of our brotherhood dies his widow and orphans need help at once. The sensitive, delicate, crushed, bleeding heart of the widow who has laid her loved one away feels very little like going out at once into the cold world to make a living. No, let her have time to hold, sweet communion with Jesus, and let her be cheered with the thought that she has brethren to whom she can look in the darkest hour of her life. I can assure my brethren that the work I am now engaged in is the happiest work of my life. I think I have more religion. When I think we are doing something for the orphans of our brethren who have fought the good fight of faith, and have gone to be with Jesus, my heart rejoices. Our brotherhood will bind us closer together. What heart can read the following letter, so beautiful and tender, and not thank God for our brotherhood: "Your kind note received through Bro. Little. I assure you I appreciate your sympathy. Yes, divine grace, the hope of meeting again and sympathizing friends help to bear us up when passing through the deep waters of afflictions. If I could see you I could tell you of some noble acts of kindness done by the good people of Clinton and East Feliciana circuit during my husband's illness, and manifestations of sympathy for me and the children. As for Bros. Little and Powell, they have endeared themselves to me by their kindness and faithfulness. I look forward to the hour of our separation with much sorrow and sadness. I feel that the good Lord has given me many friends in this dark hour. My husband was resigned to God's will, and committed his work, his wife and children and his all into the hands of God." Thank God for the Methodist preachers and the people called Methodist.

Our first assessment will be four hundred dollars. If any brother desires any information concerning our brotherhood let him drop me a postal.

Affectionately, I. W. COOPER, Sec.

"Crape on the Door."

When this busy world have scarce time to give a tear to the memory of a departed friend. How often do we see one sickened, and though attended with the utmost care, he dies. The lifeless clay is embosomed in mother earth with the most respectful service, while the spirit crosses the dark gulf of death to receive its judgment from the infinite bar of justice. We say farewell, old friend, and for a short time we miss him from his accustomed haunts. But soon another fills his place, and on we go in this jostling, stirring race of life, forgetting that sorrow's tear had traced our cheeks. Such is life. It is best not to retrospect in sadness, but to "go forth into the shadowy future with a brave heart and without fear." Still our hearts often beat in appropriate sympathy with the sadness of others. And do you know, my friends, I have frequently been hurrying along the streets, on selfish aims intent, when suddenly I would involuntarily slacken my pace, and raise my hat as if in reverence, for see "there is crape on the door." What solemn import this simple bow of black and white sends forth! It usually causes me to wonder who it is that has passed over the river, and my thoughts seemeth thus: Perhaps death has hushed the sweet prattling of the latest born, and has stiffened the little feet, whose playful pattering was music to the fond mother now so comfortless. Or it may be a sister's spirit has taken its flight to join the celestial choir. How she shall be missed. The delicate thread of life snapped when on the very verge of womanhood, like the half-blown rose, she fades away in her loveliness, leaving the desolate household in want of a daughter's comforting care, of sister's sympathetic confidence. Yes, there may be another, not a brother, whose bleeding heart cries out in anguish: "Why hast thou left me sad and lonely?" Or a brother in the full pride of manly vigor has been cut down. He who was to have been the stay of his affectionate parents, guiding their tottering footsteps down the declining way of life, pleasantly aiding the fond sisters in their many joyous amusements. Who will fill his place? It may be a father has been called to give an account of his stewardship, having reached man's allotted age, years full of usefulness. Mourned as a father, respected and loved, as a husband kind and indulgent, the adviser of all the household, who shall they now turn to for words of wise caution when needed. Or it may be the grim and inevitable reaper, Death, has gathered to her final home that dearest, truest of friends, the mother. Oh! I have no words to tell you of this great, this inestimable loss. Only the tears of the beloved companion, mourning for her who has been his comfort through so many harrowing trials, always happy when he was happy, and troubled when he was troubled, only the tears of the fond children, mourning for her who has always been as a ministering angel to them, attending every little want, soothing every aching brow, these alone can convey the depth of the meaning of the sad wail, "mother is dead!" Comfort them, friends; they need it all in their great bereavement. And there are other thoughts which arise as I walk on. I wonder if this person lying there cold in death remembered in life that there was a part of their being which was but a visitor of this world, that could not die, a something higher and nobler—an immortal soul. That it is but sent to this earth for a transitory trial of fitness for a grander life eternal; but an earthly preparation for a heavenly existence; that this soul will have to appear before the great supreme Judge and receive its irrevocable sentence to everlasting weal or woe. Did they overlook this important matter, and will they hear the dread mandate, "Depart to everlasting darkness?" Or did they remember that there is a divine Advocate at this great bar, who is ever willing to plead for the humble suppliant of pardon and mercy, who is ever ready to say, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do?" That it is alone through this intercessor we can hope for a judgment of reward? Oh! "ye hearts that are harrowed with care," do you remember that this same Mediator offers to quiet all your anguish, offers to give the heavy laden an eternal rest, tells you of the river of pure life, where every grief-stricken heart may find a consoling draught? Bear in mind that it is alone through this sympathizing Saviour that your aching heart can have its sorrows allayed. Oh! neighbors, treat with appropriate kindness the family who has "crape on the door." You may soon be in need of the sad reciprocity. Yes,

"Some one has gone from this strange world of ours."

No more to gather its thorns with its flowers,
No more to linger where sunbeams must fade,
Where, on all beauty, death's fingers are laid;
Weary with mingling life's bitter and sweet,
Weary with parting and never to meet,
Some one has gone to the bright golden shore,
Ring the bell softly, "there's crape on the door."

Natchez, Mississippi.

Church Dedication at Mayersville, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Last Sunday Dr. C. K. Marshall dedicated our church at this place. This is the first and only church that has been dedicated in this county. One other union church, with a lodge above, was dedicated before this war. We hope, however, that this is only the beginning of the heaven that will leave the whole lump. The congregation was not so large as it would have been had not the roads been so very bad, still it was as large as the house could conveniently accommodate. Surely some were anxious to hear Dr. Marshall, when one was present who had not heard a sermon for four years, another had not heard a sermon for fifteen years. It is sad, indeed, that persons will neglect the gospel when it is brought so near them. Do not think from this that we are a set of heathen up here; far from it. The people generally are as intelligent as you will find anywhere. The trouble is some have not the interest in such things they should have. Some of the men act as though they thought religion would do very well for the women and children. We think when they get fully convinced and enlisted this will be one of the first circuits in the Conference.

It is needless for me to say that the doctor's sermon, from Matthew 1, 21, was a grand effort, and highly appreciated by the entire audience. Oh! what a pleasure it is to be with this great and good man of God. Long may he live to work valiantly in the vineyard of his Master, as he has done for half a century. Pray for us. We are struggling hard to establish the cause of the blessed Redeemer in this part of his vineyard.

Yours in Christ, M. R. MOORE.

JUNE 13, 1884.

From the Work.

COUSHATTA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The Sunday-school, class and prayer meeting interests have grown greatly on the Coushatta circuit for the last three months. Three of the Conference collections have been taken and handsomely met. The foreign mission interest is unprecedented on the work. The temperance cause is on a boom in our town. The two churches are working in much harmony on this question. We pray to follow the example of Rapides parish before a great while. Last evening we had the great pleasure of Mrs. Y. J. Allen's presence in our church. She gave us half an hour's talk on the labors of Mr. Allen, herself and daughter in Shanghai, and of the Misses Rankin, in Nantzing, which will prove of immense value to the church. The church was crowded, and the people highly delighted to get every word of our dear, good sister. She left us shortly after service on the Steamer Whippoorwill. May God bless her for the good seed sown.

JUNE 11, 1884.

BIG ROCK CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR: As a Sunday-school scholar and a member of Big Rock Church I thought if you would allow me space in your valuable paper I would write just a short letter. I am a very young and inexperienced writer, therefore you can not expect me to write a long or interesting piece. Our church is a new church, and I think will compare favorably with any on the circuit in every respect. The Sunday-school has a regular attendance of thirty-five or forty scholars, with four or five teachers. The first Quarterly Conference, and the first one ever held at Big Rock, embraced the fourth Sabbath in April and Sunday following. On Sunday morning, before divine services, we had a very nice Sunday-school address by the presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Godfrey. It was very beautiful and impressive, adding largely to the interest of the occasion. We are going to organize a gentlemen's prayer meeting at the church. To-night is the time appointed for our first meeting. May God help us, and abundantly bless us in our efforts to do good. Our Sunday-school celebration came off May 24. It was well provided for and well attended. Everybody was in a cheerful mood, and evidently enjoyed the occasion splendidly. We had a number of excellent addresses by Rev. L. J. Jones, Prof. W. E. Lloyd, Mr. G. R. Moody and W. J. Moore. Those addresses were well prepared, and delivered in the very best manner, and in every way wholesome to the attentive audience. Circumstances being favorable at every point, we hope to advance with increasing interest, and may our earnest efforts for good be crowned with abundant success.

HENRY L. NORTE.

ISREY, ALA., JUNE 7, 1884.

SUWARTOWN, LA.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been some time since you have heard anything from this section possibly a few words may be of interest to your readers. Our District Conference was held at Lake Charles not long since. It was our privilege to bear some most excellent sermons preached by those dear old fathers in Israel and also by our young brethren. The district was well represented, most all the preachers being present, and the reports showed a considerable improvement on the Opelousas district. Bishop Keener was on hand, and preached and presided to the satisfaction of all. Lake Charles is a town of some magnitude, and is inhabited by a kind and generous people. After having to live for one year on the Sugar town circuit without any permanent home for the preacher, the people have built a cozy little house and secured one acre of land for a parsonage. We are living in the midst of a kind and generous people. We have now two Sabbath-schools organized on the work, and hope to organize soon at the other appointments. Prayer meetings are very well attended and some interest manifested. Everywhere I go I find a hearty welcome from saint and sinner. The indications are favorable for a revival at some of the appointments.

H. J. WOLTZ, P. C.

JUNE 15, 1884.

TUPELO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. I. D. Steel (Cumberland) and I began a meeting in the Methodist Church at Tupelo, Miss., on the third Sabbath in May, lasting ten days. It resulted in the church being graciously revived, and twelve conversions, which makes about sixty-five or seventy conversions at that place in twelve months. We were aided by Bro. Mitchell, agent of the American Bible Society for the State of Mississippi. We commend him heartily to the brethren wherever he may go as a faithful minister of Christ, and very useful both in the pulpit and in the altar among mourners. Bro. Thomas, of the Shannon circuit, preached some good sermons, which were blessed of God to the hearts of the people.

J. B. STONE.

Marriages.

MONTGOMERY-HENRY.—In Edwards, Miss., April 16, 1884, by Rev. E. H. Mounger, Capt. W. A. Montgomery and Miss Bettie Henry.

LAMB-CLARK.—At Queen's Hill, Hinds county, Miss., May 27, 1884, by Rev. E. H. Mounger, Mr. William F. Lamb and Miss Mary Ella Clark.

BYERS-JONES.—At the Methodist parsonage, in Water Valley, Miss., June 6, 1884, by Rev. S. M. Thomas, Mr. E. S. Byers, of Water Valley, to Miss Sallie A. Jones, daughter of Rev. K. A. Jones, of the North Mississippi Conference.

VERNON-EVANS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Capt. W. T. Evans, Vidalia, Concordia parish, La., June 11, 1884, by Rev. Lewis A. Reed, Mr. W. Henry Vernon to Miss Beattie W. Evans, all of this place.

MCCLUTCHIE-TRAVIS.—At Wesley Chapel, Natchez, Miss., Thursday, June 13, 1884, by Rev. C. B. Black, Mr. William G. McClutchie, formerly of Jefferson county, to Miss Mary Travis, formerly of Pike county, Miss.

FAVRE-SANDERS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Dr. J. Sanders, in Quitman, Miss., June 11, 1884, by Rev. J. M. Weems, Mr. Joseph J. Favre, of Pearl River, Miss., to Miss Octavia Sanders.

FUNCHER-KRIBBE.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Crystal Springs, Miss., June 13, 1884, by Rev. W. B. Lewis, Mr. E. W. Funcher, of Crystal Springs, and Miss Agnes I. Kribbe.

WREN-BROWN.—In the Methodist Church, in Waterproof, La., June 15, 1884, by Rev. J. M. Brown, Mr. A. G. Wren, of Webster parish, to Miss Minnie, daughter of J. M. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference.

MYER-CHILDRE.—In the Methodist Church, at Raleigh, Miss., May 14, 1884, by Rev. B. S. Gate, Mr. C. A. Myer and Miss D. N. Childre, all of Smith county.

Obituaries.

FLEMING—MRS. EMMA E. R. FLEMING, daughter of Rev. G. C. and Amanda S. Armstrong, was born in Jefferson county, Miss., January 15, 1835, and was married to Mr. M. B. Fleming, February 14, 1862. She left this world for the city of God, on Sunday, April 6, 1884.

It has been seldom, if ever, our privilege to witness a grander exhibition of the power of Christian faith over death than we did on this occasion. Bro. Drake and I had exchanged appointments for the first Sunday in April; hence it was my sad privilege (for such I considered it) to stand at the bedside of this child of God as she was entering the valley of the shadow of death. Sister Fleming was for several years a member of the Female Financiers' Society, of Fayette circuit. This called her to the parsonage, in company with her mother, once a quarter; therefore she was well known by the presbytery as a woman of decided Christian character. To know Sister Armstrong (her mother) will explain the secret of her piety. Being dedicated to God in infancy, and brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, we are not surprised that at the age of twelve she came forward and claimed her place in the church of God by assuming the vows for herself at Mt. Carmel, in Franklin county, in 1857. She was not fully satisfied with her religious state until 1877. During that year she felt her sins forgiven. Ever after this she was happy in a consciousness of her acceptance with God. For several years past she had kept a diary, giving her religious experience, often dwelling with delight on God's special promises to his children. This will no doubt prove a source of much comfort to the aged mother and distressed husband.

The day before her death she praised God aloud, saying: "Bless the Lord, O, my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name!" When her friends expressed a hope that she would not think of such a thing, I am ready and willing to go. Her mother said to her: "Daughter, what will become of your poor old mother?" With a smile upon her face, she said: "Mamma, it will only be a little while, until we are there. Then we'll all be together again." "What shall become of these two little children?" (one only a week old,) continued the mother, who was loth to give her up. The reply came quickly: "God has taken care of us all, and I'll trust him with my little children."

About four hours before her death I made her adieu. Never can I forget that look, accompanied by the words: "Farewell, Bro. Bradford. May the Lord bless you in all your efforts in life, and bring you with all your family to heaven at last for Christ's sake! Amen!"

Thus passed away the last child of Sister Armstrong. No doubt many of her ex-pastors will join in saying: May God bless and comfort this aged mother, take care of the children and bring husband and all to heaven at last! N. P. NIADFOIN.

GREEN—REV. WILLIAM C. GREEN was born in Madison county, Tenn., May 15, 1823, and died in Calhoun county, Miss., May 9, 1884, at the age of sixty-one years. He embraced religion at the age of ten years, and for several years lived a consistent and pious life; but finally, growing cold in his religious life, he withdrew from the church and then became very wicked. He embraced the doctrine of fatalism, or predestination, and repudiated, and believing himself to be a reprobate, he determined to live and die a gentleman sinner. In this condition he remained until the spring of 1850, when alone on the bank of Beauvoir river, in Morehouse parish, La., he was brought from peculiar surroundings to consider his course and final destiny. Then and there he again sought pardon and peace through faith in Christ, and obtained the divine assurance of acceptance with God. The next Sabbath he attached himself to the church.

Bro. Green was licensed to preach, in 1855, by the Quarterly Conference, of Jackson circuit, Jackson district, Memphis Conference, George Morria, P. C. He was admitted on trial in the traveling connection, in the fall of 1856, and appointed junior preacher to Murray circuit, M. B. Robinson, P. C. In 1858 and '59 he traveled the First Point circuit, Miss.; in 1860 he was in charge of Tunica circuit, Miss.; in 1861 he was on the Calhoun circuit; in 1862 he traveled the Charleston circuit; in 1863, Horn Lake circuit. From failing health he was superannuated in 1864. In the fall of 1865 he married Mrs. Lenise Gaston, the widowed mother of three children who are grown and married. She had since become the mother of six children—five of whom are living—as the result of her marriage union with Bro. Green. He remained superannuated until 1867, when he again traveled the Calhoun circuit. In 1868 he was on the Coffeeville circuit; in 1869 and '70 he traveled the Chickasaw circuit, and then for four years he was on the superannuated list. In 1876 and '77 he traveled the Bellefontaine circuit. From then until his death he remained on the superannuated list.

He was a great sufferer, but ever willing to do all in his power for the cause of Christ. As a minister of the gospel he had been successful. The results of his labor will be better known in eternity. His manner of preaching was that of the Pauline type, "Christ and him crucified" was held up before the gaze of the penitent sinner with an unctious and clearness that often inspired the faith of the penitent to lay hold on the hope set before him.

The high esteem in which he was held by his brethren and neighbors was manifest in their kind attention as he passed down into the shadow of death full of faith and the Holy Ghost. He leaves many friends to sympathize with his bereaved family and cherish his memory, believing our loss is his gain.

R. O. CALLAWAY.

ROWLAND—Another fair flower has been plucked from the earthly garden to bloom more beautifully in the paradise above. Our sister, MRS. SUSAN JANE ROWLAND, nee DAVENPORT, has been taken from us where she seemed greatly needed. We can not fathom the deep counsels of infinite wisdom; we can only bow submissively to all that.

She was born in Jefferson county, Miss., December 31, 1854, and died in Franklin county, April 21, 1884, in the prime of a life that had promised much vigor and usefulness. She was the granddaughter of our venerable brother, Rev. William B. Johnson, and inherited some of the excellent characteristics of that family, and also, like most talented women, some strong traits from her father.

Unswerving integrity was, perhaps, her most striking feature. She would not wink at sin. When she erred it was in judgment, and not in heart. She joined the Methodist Church, South, when quite a child, and at the time of her death was a consistent member thereof. She was married about four years since to Mr. O. B. Rowland, of Franklin county, Miss. Here two lovely children were born to them. To leave these behind was a struggle. Otherwise she feared not to confront "death's iron gate."

May the God of consolation bless all her loved ones and bring them to meet her in heaven!

HEN PASTOR.

ROBINSON—GORDON ROBINSON

was born September 20, 1881, and died April 29, 1884.

After Christ took little children in his arms on earth and blessed them, and said of such was his kingdom, we could never be anxious about their condition in heaven. He who so loved and loved them here will certainly care for them up there. The angels and the pure of earth will be their guardians and instructors, and Christ will be father and mother alike to them all. The child is asleep—not dead. He is risen; he is not here, but yet with God where such as he do always behold the face of their Father in heaven. The little pet of the house is gone; but, thank God! not forever. He has simply passed away to another home brighter and better and safer than any earthly home—where his precious family relics may be re-formed and glorified.

May the thought of his being taken to the parents as though his little hand had been let down from heaven, had taken hold of their hearts and was drawing them heavenward!

J. D. HARPER.

TROWN—Died, near Columbia,

Caldwell parish, La., May 14, 1884.

ARCHIE E. Infant son of Dr. Archie E.

Brown and Ella Boatner.

He was deprived of death of his mother when but a few weeks old, and a cousin—Miss Lullie Grayson—took him and was in every respect a mother to him. He was a beautiful and sprightly child, whose presence was a ray of sunshine, and whose voice was music to a large household, with all of whom he was a perfect pet. By the carelessness of a servant he fell into a tub of scalding water, and after three days of suffering he landed out on the pure young life and exchanged a world of sin and suffering for one where there is no more death. He died at the age of one year, ten months and eight days.

J. D. HARPER.

MURRAY—MARTHA ALICE, infant

daughter of Thomas B. and Mrs. M. B.

Murray, of Rankin county, Miss., died

May 8, 1884, after eight months of most constant suffering, aged two years, six months and twenty-eight days.

The good Shepherd came and took his gentle suffering lamb to his bosom

in heaven. She has one to be an angel

The Christian parents how sublimely silly, and say with Job: "The Lord gave,

and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

H. J. HARRIS.

VINSON—Little FANNIE L. VINSON was born September 15, 1883, and departed this life April 16, 1884.

Thus the sweet little babe passed away to live with Jesus and the bright angels. We tender our sympathy to the young parents in the loss of their first and only child, and pray God to comfort their sad hearts in their bereavement, and finally bring them to their reward in reunion with their darling little angel!

D. F. WITT.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Some grocers are so short-sighted as to decline to keep the

"Ivory Soap," claiming it does not pay

as much profit as inferior qualities do, so

if your regular grocer

refuses to get it for you, there are undoubtedly others who recognize the fact that the increased volume of business done by reason of keeping

the best articles more than compensates for the smaller profit, and will take pleasure in getting it for you.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sent to any one who can not get it of their regular grocer. Write to J. W. & C. O. Smith,

New Orleans, La., for particulars. Please mention this advertisement.

PHOTOGRAPHS

The Finest Establishment in the South

WAS HBURNS

Photographic Parlors

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. O. HUBBARD.

THURSDAY JUNE 26, 1884.

The Christian Register suggests variety in pulpit ministrations as follows: "Churches that have been living too long on honey and rose-water need a dose of lightning and earthquake."

The recent General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church discussed at length the "time-limit" question, and referred it to the Annual Conferences with this proviso: "No rule shall be passed to abolish an efficient itinerant ministry, but each Annual Conference shall determine for itself whether any limit, or, if any, what limit, shall be for the renewal of annual appointments." This measure will certainly destroy uniformity. A different rule will obtain in the several Conferences, occasioning no little confusion.

Not in a great while have we read anything more terse and timely than the address of Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, before the Congregational Union. His theme was "Orthodoxy of the Heart," and was worthy of the author of "Ecce Deus." The following passages are striking and brilliant:

"We must remember that in seeking a creed we may easily lose a faith. In defining God we may be unconsciously creating an idol. There is an idolatry of phrases as well as an idolatry of images. For this reason I am most anxious to connect pureness of heart, sweetness and lowliness of soul, with the doctrine of Christ, rather than with dogmas of the priest. The priest is a deadly hindrance to the progress of the kingdom of Christ, find him where you may. He wants to make the gospel the secret of a class; to give the infinite music of the cross the accent of his own individuality; and to stand at heaven's door that he may fill it with his own dupes."

Bishop Brown, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, in his sermon before the recent General Conference, on "The Priesthood," gave offense to the brethren by announcing some strange ritualistic views. Vigorous protests were made to his teachings, and the General Conference adopted the following:

Whereas, The General Conference has, by an enactment, forbade the use of robes or gowns by any of the clergy of our church.

Resolved, That all ministers having such robes on their hands be requested to present the same to the Museum of Wilberforce University, and that the same shall be kept as relics and memorials of an age in our church when there was a tendency to go to Rome.

During the session of the General Conference in Philadelphia Dr. George Dana Boardman, of that city, a distinguished Baptist minister and author, preached a sermon on "The Methodists." He concluded with these eloquent words, which are commended to all high church landmarks:

The followers of Wesley were ever true to his holy motto. The Methodist Church is a machine—but alive, self-conscious and free. Methodism has a mission. It has reversed Voltaire's bitter doctrine—that philosophy does not care to enlighten cobblers and maid-servants. It is a church of the highways and hedges, the Protestant Propaganda, a skirmish line of the Zouaves and Uhlands of the church militant.

A Practical Suggestion.

Under this title the Southern Christian Advocate quotes the words below uttered by a Baptist minister, the Rev. R. N. Burton, of South Carolina, and gives them cordial endorsement. We desire to join in a hearty amen, and ask that the proposition have a fair trial. It will be a little extra labor, but exactly what our fathers did in ante-bellum days: I propose this: That every pastor in our Association who has no regular appointment on Sunday afternoon arrange to preach to the negroes at some point convenient to his place of preaching in the forenoon. If we can not get to their churches let us try to meet them in schoolhouses and brush arbores. My experience and observation convinces me that the negroes are not only willing, but anxious for white ministers to preach to them. Much is said and written about the negro's ignorance—his need of education—but it seems to me that his sorest need is the gospel of Jesus Christ; for if the principles of the gospel are not implanted in his heart, if Christian morals are not the basis, the foundation of his education, it will be better for him and the whole country that he remain as he is.

Mr. Spurgeon's Jubilee.

A jubilee in honor of Mr. Spurgeon's fiftieth birthday was celebrated in London on Wednesday of last week, June 18. An immense audience of more than five thousand persons assembled to pay tribute to the world's greatest pulpit orator. Mr. Spurgeon made a characteristic speech, closing with an earnest appeal to preachers to preach more simply and plainly the pure gospel of the grace of God. He said the dry, dead gospel of some preachers never evoked the sympathy of men's hearts. A congratulatory address was then made by Mr. Moody, the American evangelist, which aroused the audience to frequent and prolonged applause.

Mr. Spurgeon's history has been phenomenal. Before reaching his majority he became a London pastor, and at once rose to national fame. Through all these years he has maintained his high position in the world's esteem, and seemingly without effort. His capacity for work is marvelous. In addition to his large pastorate he has edited a periodical and presided over a training college for young preachers. He has never displayed any of the tricks and arts of the pulpit sensationalist or mountebank, but has achieved greatness and wrought wondrously by reason of his profound consecration to his one work of winning souls. He has preached an earnest, pure gospel with a single, divine purpose. Nor has his great reputation in any wise affected his spirit, save to deepen humility and lead him nearer to the Master. Other profounder thinkers and theologians are in all the churches, other more polished orators adorn the pulpits of the Old and New World, but in all the elements of a gospel preacher and pastor it is doubted if Charles H. Spurgeon has a peer.

In his conversion and marvelous history we Methodists have an intimate interest and a large share. He was converted in a Methodist Chapel. A year or two ago he preached in that self-same chapel, and began his sermon about as follows: "Thirty years ago I heard this text announced from this pulpit. I was sitting over there by that post, and during that sermon the Lord graciously converted my soul." And in all his ministry he has displayed the broad catholicity so characteristic of our Methodism. No narrow ecclesiasticism obstructs the expression of his generous, Christian love. Though a Baptist, he invites all fellow-citizens of the saints, all of the Lord's children, to meet at the Lord's table. We thank God for a life so pure, a ministry so fruitful and a career so remarkable. That same spirit of consecration will make all our lives useful though not sublime.

Commencement at Meridian.

Leaving the Agricultural and Mechanical College on Monday afternoon, the sixteenth instant, we reached Meridian at half-past ten o'clock the same evening, and stopped over to attend the commencement exercises of East Mississippi Female College. The sermon on Sunday was preached by Rev. Dr. Felix R. Hill, of New Orleans, and was highly appreciated by the immense congregation present. We heard many kind expressions concerning both the morning and evening services.

On Tuesday morning, by invitation, we attended a meeting of the Board of Trustees, and witnessed their deliberations. They looked carefully into all details of administration, and planned for enlarging the facilities of the college. President McVoy was cordially endorsed and enthusiastically re-elected. The trustees look for increasing prosperity under his prudent, progressive management.

In the evening the chapel was early crowded to attend the anniversary of the Alumnae Association. Quite a number of members were present. Though yet young in years, East Mississippi Female College has many fair daughters, of whom she is justly proud. The president presided with queenly grace and dignity, and the accomplished secretary had the entire programme most admirably arranged. After delivering his address this editor made a hasty bow to the association in the midst of the exercises, and at half-past ten o'clock was thundering down the Northeastern railroad for 112 Camp street. On the platform we noticed Rev. James A. Godfrey, president of the Board of Trustees, Rev. J. T. Heard and Rev. Dr. J. W. Harmon. A more brilliant audience it is not the lot of any one often to address. We rejoice in the growing prosperity of this eligibly located and very valuable institution. We were the guest of our old friend, Dr. Casteel, to whom and his family we are indebted for considerate attentions.

Brandon District Conference.

This body met in the charming little town of Brandon, on the nineteenth instant, with the presiding elder, Rev. F. M. Williams, in the chair. Bro. W. M. Thornton was elected secretary, a position he has held before, and for which he has exceptional qualifications. A good secretary is invaluable to any deliberative body, but is not always found. A model secretary eschews adjectives and opinions, and only records facts and doings. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. A. B. Nicolson. Most of the pastors were present, but few laymen. Those, however, were not silent, but active and intelligent members. Some of the discussions were full of interest, and indicated a growing activity among the laity in all departments of church work. The preachers were all supplied with blank forms of reports, and used them to marked advantage. We had not met them before, and hereby urge their general acceptance. They secure accuracy and condensation. The pastor can make any additional or explanatory remarks that may seem necessary. The district is manned by a faithful band of laborers, and they are giving due diligence to the flocks over which they have been appointed. Generally reports were favorable, though there had been but few revivals and no large gatherings. And, as in other District Conferences we have attended, the brethren considered the matter with some measure of alarm. Out of this introspection and renewal of consecration we trust great blessings and fruitful revivals will come.

Saturday morning was devoted largely to Centenary matters. The leading address was delivered by Rev. H. J. Harris, whose familiarity with local incidents in early Methodism gave his remarks a thrilling interest. It was quite a coincidence that in 1839, not far from Brandon, he had celebrated the Centenary of English Methodism, and now, in 1884, he united in services commemorative of the one hundred years of organic American Methodism. It was also significant that in seven miles of Brandon was first located Centenary College, the monumental expression of Mississippi Methodism's thankfulness in 1839. Rev. J. T. Heard followed in a fervent speech, indulging felicitously in matters of personal experience. Rev. N. B. Young discussed the General Rules of the United Societies, showing their Scripturalness and comprehensiveness, and urging the brethren to seek diligently the old paths. Rev. Dr. H. F. Johnson uttered words of warning against the temptation of allowing Centenary enthusiasm to expend itself in mere talk, and made an earnest plea for a liberal thank-offering commensurate with past blessings and present responsibilities. This editor followed with "a few feeble remarks," and then Presiding Elder Williams closed the service with a rousing exhortation.

Forest was chosen as the next place of meeting. The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Irvin Miller, W. M. Thornton, L. McLauren, S. E. Silby. Alternates: S. O. Brown, J. H. Warren.

For a cordial greeting, many attentions, a patient hearing and some cash subscribers we are profoundly grateful. The following resolutions, introduced by Bros. Miller and Thornton, were passed by a unanimous rising vote, and we make no apology for allowing them to close these notes:

Resolved, That we hail with pleasure the presence of Dr. C. B. Galloway, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, among us, and we have heard with deep interest his address to us in the interest of the paper.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, our Conference organ, and are glad to state that its circulation is increasing within the bounds of our district, and we pledge our efforts to still increase its circulation, and we pray God's blessing upon its editor in his great and good work for religion and the church.

At a recent funeral in this city the Rev. Father Simon is reported to have spoken as follows:

That there was great consolation to his family and friends in the fact that they could pray for their dead, that a man must do penance for his sins, either in this life or the next; that the Catholic Church taught the doctrine of purgatory, where souls were purified in order to enter heaven. If this man could come back he would tell us what a bright home heaven was, and bid us all to live for God and not for this world.

When we read that paragraph two thoughts were suggested. First, the peril of encouraging any one to hope for repentance and salvation in another world. And second, how could the man, who was then in purgatory and for whom they were exhorting to pray, possibly know "what a bright home heaven was." That folly and falsehood of a purgatory will be the eternal ruin of many souls.

Death of Bishop Simpson.

Bishop Matthew Simpson, the senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his home in Philadelphia, on the morning of the eighteenth instant. During the session of the General Conference, in May, his health was so infirm as to prevent his attendance upon the daily sessions. But he never came upon the platform without demonstrations of gratitude and great respect. At the close of the Conference resolutions of esteem and reverence were passed with marked cordiality. For many years he has been the master spirit in that great denomination. In the pulpit he reigned without a rival. He ranked with Olin, Bascom and Durbin as the mightiest orators of American Methodism. Some displays of his power partook of the marvelous. He had a magnetism that was irresistible, a singularly distinct enunciation and a volume of rare flexibility which he controlled with an orator's magic skill. We heard his great sermon in Music Hall, Cincinnati, during the General Conference four years ago. For an hour fully six thousand people hung upon his glowing eloquence. His sermon at the opening of the Ecumenical Conference in old City Road Chapel, London, was a masterpiece, and in every sense met the demands and high expectations of the hour.

For some years after the war Bishop Simpson was not in high favor with us in the South. He was thought to entertain partisan feelings toward us, and to lend the weight of his great influence to the extreme measures of humiliating reconstruction and to the policy of "disintegration and absorption." But for five or six years past no man from "across the Tweed" has made more encouraging and impartial reports of our section and our Methodism.

The following are the leading facts of his remarkable career: He was born in Cadiz, Ohio, June 21, 1811. He received an academic education in his native town, and attended Madison College, Pennsylvania (subsequently merged into Allegheny College), where he was elected to the office of tutor in his eighteenth year. He engaged in teaching, and, having studied medicine, in 1833 he commenced its practice. About the same time, feeling it his duty to enter the ministry, he was licensed to preach, and was received on trial in the Pittsburg Conference. In 1837 he was elected vice-president and professor of natural science in Allegheny College, and in 1839 was elected president of Indiana Asbury University, where he remained until 1848 he was elected editor of the Western Christian Advocate. In 1852 he was chosen to the office of Bishop. At that time he was considered by his own and other denominations to be one of the most eloquent and popular preachers in the country. In discharging his duties he has visited and held Conferences in all the States and most of the Territories; was sent by the General Conference as delegate to the Irish and British Conference in 1857, and was also a delegate to the Evangelical Alliance in Berlin, Germany, the same year, from whence he extended his travels through Turkey, the Holy Land, Egypt and Greece, returning in 1858. In 1859 he changed his residence from Pittsburg to Evanston, where he accepted the position of president of the Garrett Biblical Institute, to which, however, he devoted but little active work. During the civil war he delivered a number of addresses in behalf of the Union, and was urged by the secretary of war to undertake the organization of the freedmen on the establishment of the bureau, and was afterward invited by President Grant to go as a commissioner to San Domingo. Both of these offers he respectfully declined. In 1870, at the death of Bishop Kingsley, he visited Europe to complete the work which had been assigned to him on the continent, and also as a delegate to the English Conference. In 1874 he visited Mexico, and in 1875 again visited Europe to hold the Conference of Germany and Switzerland, and also to meet the missionaries on the continent.

He has written "A Hundred Years of Methodism," "Lectures on Preaching," and was editor of the Cyclopaedia of Methodism. With our sister church we mourn the loss of one of her chief pastors. May his spirit and power rest upon some younger son in the gospel.

A man who committed suicide at Clinton, Ill., last week, left a note on his person, which read: "Good-bye to you, mother and sister, and my wife and my children. Whisky has killed me." Those last sad words might truthfully be said of many who are followed to the grave with great lamentation.

The First Centenary of Methodism.

The first Centenary of Methodism was celebrated in 1839. One hundred years previous to that date the first Methodist Society had been organized at the Old Foundry, in London. Several other remarkable occurrences designated the year 1739 as that from which the rise of Methodism should be reckoned. On the first day of that year Whitefield, Charles Wesley and others had a "Pentecostal season" at Fetter Lane, the Holy Spirit coming mightily upon them, so that some fell to the floor insensible, and all were amazed and cried out: "We praise thee, O God; we acknowledge thee to be the Lord." It was during that year Whitefield induced John Wesley to dare the transcendent innovation of preaching in the open field, first at Kingswood, where the fire was kindled, and afterward at Moorfields and Kennington Commons, whence it set the whole principality in a blaze." During that year Whitefield made his second visit to the New World, awakening the churches and arousing the people from New England to Georgia; Wesley organized his first "band" at Bristol, and laid there the cornerstone of the first chapel ever built by his people, and the brothers, John and Charles Wesley, issued the first volume of those "hymns and sacred poems" which have been adjudged by ever multiplying thousands in many lands most fit to bear the praises of men to God, until in our day their sound is gone out through all the earth, and they are sung quite around the world. It was altogether fitting, then, that 1839 should be celebrated as the Centenary of Methodism.

During that first century of its existence Methodism had grown from the "eight or ten persons" in its first society to be a great army of 1,171,000 souls, with more than 5,000 itinerant preachers in the Wesleyan and Methodist Episcopal Churches alone. If we include all bearing the name of Methodists they were more than 1,400,000, of whom more than 6,000 were itinerant preachers. When Wesley died, about half a century before, they numbered about 80,000 in England and 140,000 in all the world. At this time they had more preachers in their three hundred foreign missionary stations than were on the roll of the Conference at Wesley's death, and almost as many members as were then to be found in all England.

During its first century Methodism was, perhaps unconsciously, ranking itself among the greatest moral powers of the world. It called all now Roman Churches from the deadness of forms and damning decrees to a realization of their divine mission to perishing men, and aroused millions who were dead in trespasses and sins, not only to a consciousness that they had souls to save, but also that there is a gospel at hand powerful enough to save them. It modified the interpretation of every creed, and the preaching, both as to its matter and manner, of every pulpit in Christendom. Wesley and the Methodists introduced cheap literature and disseminated it among the common people, thereby more than doubling the influence of the press, and inaugurated the Tract Society, the Bible Society and the modern Missionary Society. They first employed the Sunday-school (which existed long before the days of Raikes) as an agency of the church. They were the means of improving very greatly the education of the masses, producing what Mr. Buckle describes as "an immense change among the people," which exhibited itself, according to the same author, in "a craving after knowledge on the part of those classes from whom knowledge had hitherto been shut out." Rev. Dr. Dobbin, a church man, declares: "Never was there such a scene before in the British Islands; there were no Bible, Tract or Missionary Societies before to employ the church's powers and indicate its path of duty, but Wesley started them all; the church and the world were alike asleep; he sounded the trumpet and awoke the church to work."

The Wesleyan Conference resolved to celebrate the year 1839 as a jubilee, the first object of which should be "the religious and devotional improvement of the Centenary" by public services in all their chapels, and that there should be also a "general pecuniary contribution" for several benevolent purposes as a thank-offering to Almighty God. Accordingly the year was begun by united prayer in the month of January for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and Friday, October 25, was designated as a festival day, to be celebrated by prayer meetings, sermons, festivities for the poor and for the children of the Sunday-schools and of the day schools. The Committee of Arrangements had suggested that they should undertake to raise at least $400,000 for benevolence during the year. It soon, however, became evident that the committee had underestimated the liberality of the people. In large sums and small the contributions poured in. Before the end of January the collections amounted to more than half a million of dollars, and in March reached $750,000. The sentimentality of the denomination was roused to a high pitch, and exhibited itself in these contributions. Some gave in honor of long deceased veterans in the ministry; others in memory of parents, children, brothers or sisters who had been saved through Methodism; others in commemoration of class-mates, class-leaders or pastors no more on earth, or of signal deliverances from danger, sickness, trial or death. "It was an occasion," says one, "which had never been equaled by any Protestant religious body in the extent and interest of its observance or in the munificence of its liberality." The amount contributed in England during the year (which was one "of almost unparalleled commercial depression") was $1,080,000, and in America, $800,000. The missionary fields sent up their contributions, making the sum contributed by Methodists in all the world over $1,700,000, without interfering with the ordinary annual collections. Its spiritual prosperity was in a corresponding degree. An increase of more than 10,000 members was reported at the Conference of that year, and there were 118 candidates for the ministry. The power of God, had mightily attended his word throughout their borders. There was no sign of halting, much less of retreat, amid all their hosts. Luther had said that a revival seldom lasts more than thirty years. Wesley had seen the Methodist revival last fifty, and his successors now saw it close its hundredth year equaling in power, and immensely exceeding in extent the days of its beginning. Perronet, the venerable vicar of Shoreham, had written during its first half century, "I make no doubt that Methodism is designed by Providence to introduce the approaching millennium," and did it not really seem that his prophecy was being fulfilled?

W. L. C. H.

—Bishops Wilson and Hargrove have been doing District Conference work in Missouri.

—Hilwase College has conferred the degree of D. D. on Rev. F. M. Featherston, of the Pacific Conference.

—Rev. John Hogan, of St. Louis, nearly eighty years of age, on a recent Sabbath, preached three times and rode forty miles.

—Local preachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church will hereafter be asked this question, "Will you abstain from the use of tobacco?"

—A children's meeting at Louisiana Avenue Church one evening last week resulted in an offering of $185 for the benefit of their new church.

—The Southwestern University at Georgetown, Texas, has conferred the honorary degree of LL. D. on President A. G. Haygood, D. D., of Emory College.

—Central College, Missouri, has conferred the degree of LL. D. upon Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson, D. D., and Hon. John F. Phillips, of the Supreme Court of Missouri.

—Bishop Bowman, of the Northern Methodist Church, preached for Dr. Tudor in St. Louis on a recent Sabbath. The doctor had been called away unexpectedly from the city.

—On our third page will be found an account of the Montague Assembly programme. That is a delightful height, and a week spent there will be a season of profit and pleasure.

—A certain Louisiana pastor has the thanks of the church for his active interest in this ADVOCATE. He has not lost a single old subscriber and secured a number of new ones.

—Work has been stopped on the Seney Hospital, Brooklyn, because of Mr. George I. Seney's failure in business. It is thought the Brooklyn Methodists will push the enterprise to completion.

—Through trains on the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad will be run from New Orleans to Leland, in Washington county, Miss., through Port Gibson and Vicksburg, by July 15.

—Dr. Buckley's letters to young men, which have appeared in successive numbers of the New York Christian Advocate, are to be published in a book. It will be a readable and valuable volume.

—Rev. W. P. Barton, of the North Mississippi Conference, is the agent for Mississippi of "The Life and Times of Bishop Kavanaugh." He desires to secure good agents for the sale of the work. He writes: "The advanced sheets I have seen promise well." His address is White Station, Shelby county, Tenn.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending June 24, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2 @
Ordinary	10 1/2
Good ordinary	10 1/2
Low middling	11 1/2
Good middling	11 1/2
Middling fair	11 1/2
Fair	12
Galveston middling	11 1/2
Mobile middling	11 1/2
St. Louis middling	11 1/2
SUGAR.
Inferior	3
Common	4
Good common	4 1/2
Fair	4 1/2
Good fair	4 1/2
Fully fair	4 1/2
Prime	4 1/2
Strictly Prime	4 1/2
Choice	5 1/2
Seconds	5 1/2
Yellow clarified	5 1/2
Gray clarified	5 1/2
Choice whites	5 1/2
Granulated	5 1/2
MOLASSES.
Syrup	—
Fair	—
Prime	—
Choice	—
Fancy	—
RICE.
Choice	—
Good	—
Fair	—
Ordinary	—
Common	—
No. 2	—
FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 1/2
Minnesota patents	6 1/2
Extra fancy	6 1/2
Winter wheat patents	6 1/2
Choice	5 1/2
Fancy	5 1/2
CORN PRODUCTS.
Ground meal	4 00
Corn meal	3 35
Grits	4 00
Hemlin	3 75
GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White	80
Yellow	70
Mixed	70
OATS:
Western	44
Texas rust-proof	44 1/2
BAW:
Choice	19 00
Prime	17 00
PROVISIONS.
PORK:
Mess.	17 00
Prime mess	15 50
Prims	15 50
BACON:
Choice breakfast	11 1/2
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	10 1/2
Sides, clear rib	10
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	13 1/2
Dry salt meat:
Shoulders	9 1/2
Sides, clear	9 1/2
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2
FISH.
MACKEREL:
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25
Half bbls.	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 25
No. 3, in bbls., large	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00
GROCERIES.
COFFEES:
Rio, choice	94
Cordova, choice	12 1/2
Java, choice	22
BEANS:
Western dairy	20
New York dairy	20
Country	15
LARD:
Choice	84
FAIR:
Choice	50
Fair	25
COALS:
Coal, choice	18
Coal, hbs	13
Cotton seed	45
Lard	80
VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western	—
Country	—
POTATOES:
Louisiana	1 60
KROUT:
Choice	20 00
ONIONS:
Choice	2 50
BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
1 lb.	104
2 lb.	111
BALING TWINE:
1 lb.	134
2 lb.	134
3 lb.	134
4 lb.	134
5 lb.	134
6 lb.	134
7 lb.	134
8 lb.	134
9 lb.	134
10 lb.	134
11 lb.	134
12 lb.	134
13 lb.	134
14 lb.	134
15 lb.	134
16 lb.	134
17 lb.	134
18 lb.	134
19 lb.	134
20 lb.	134
21 lb.	134
22 lb.	134
23 lb.	134
24 lb.	134
25 lb.	134
26 lb.	134
27 lb.	134
28 lb.	134
29 lb.	134
30 lb.	134
31 lb.	134
32 lb.	134
33 lb.	134
34 lb.	134
35 lb.	134
36 lb.	134
37 lb.	134
38 lb.	134
39 lb.	134
40 lb.	134
41 lb.	134
42 lb.	134
43 lb.	134
44 lb.	134
45 lb.	134
46 lb.	134
47 lb.	134
48 lb.	134
49 lb.	134
50 lb.	134
51 lb.	134
52 lb.	134
53 lb.	134
54 lb.	134
55 lb.	134
56 lb.	134
57 lb.	134
58 lb.	134
59 lb.	134
60 lb.	134
61 lb.	134
62 lb.	134
63 lb.	134
64 lb.	134
65 lb.	134
66 lb.	134
67 lb.	134
68 lb.	134
69 lb.	134
70 lb.	134
71 lb.	134
72 lb.	134
73 lb.	134
74 lb.	134
75 lb.	134
76 lb.	134
77 lb.	134
78 lb.	134
79 lb.	134
80 lb.	134
81 lb.	134
82 lb.	134
83 lb.	134
84 lb.	134
85 lb.	134
86 lb.	134
87 lb.	134
88 lb.	134
89 lb.	134
90 lb.	134
91 lb.	134
92 lb.	134
93 lb.	134
94 lb.	134
95 lb.	134
96 lb.	134
97 lb.	134
98 lb.	134
99 lb.	134
100 lb.	134
SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 25
Young	4 50
Chickens, South'n	3 50
Young	3 50
Turkeys, Southern	5 00
Eggs:
Western	12
Southern	14
WOOL:
Lake	18
Louisiana	18
Wool	18
HIDES:
Green salted	7
Dry salted	104
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, casks	50 00
Oak, boxes	75 00
Hogshead	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal	24 00
Peat ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	—
Sulphuric acid	—
Bone black	—

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Henry Havemeyer, who has an income of $25,000 a year, has been declared unable to manage his affairs on account of drunkenness.

PITTSBURGH, June 17.—The local prohibition committee of the National Prohibition Convention, which meets in this city, on July 23, is making thorough preparation for the convention. Delegates are expected from every State in the Union, and arrangements have been made for ample hotel accommodations for all. Over 1100 tickets are reported sold.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The final order in the proceedings brought against Rev. Dr. John P. Newman, pastor of the Madison Avenue Congregational Church, has been rendered. The decision of Chief Justice Sedgwick rendered some weeks ago, was signed to-day. By the terms of the order Dr. Newman is re-instated from officiating as pastor of the church or taking charge of any of its services or meetings except as officiating pastor. He is excluded from presiding at meetings of church members or Board of Deacons or Officers; from voting at these meetings; from demanding or receiving a salary for services as pastor since March 31 last, except as acting pastor, and from proceeding with re-organization of the church.

BROOKINGTON, Ill., June 18.—The Illinois State Prohibition Convention convened here this morning. Between 500 and 600 delegates were present, among them ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas, who addressed the meeting, tearing away from Republicanism and declaring for the party of Prohibition.

COLUMBUS, O., June 18.—The State Prohibition Convention met to-day. One hundred delegates were present. The declaration of principles rehearsed the damage done by the liquor traffic, asserts the inability of the old parties to remedy the evils, and reiterates the assertion of a false count of the vote for the second amendment last fall.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 20.—The Mormon press and prominent Mormons consider the bill which has just passed the Senate as a cruel measure, harsh, unjust, tyrannical and in some respects revolutionary and unconstitutional, and designed to rekindle the fires of persecution. Many of its provisions, they think, will not stand the test of judicial examination, and it was evidently framed with a design to destroy the Mormon religion. They assert that circumstances here do not call for any such enactments, and that existing public opinion which prompted the Senators to vote for this measure has been created by persistent circulation of false reports concerning affairs here.

CINCINNATI, June 22.—Memorial services out of respect to the life and character of Bishop Simpson, deceased, were held in St. Paul's Methodist Church to-night, all the Methodist churches in the city uniting in them. Memorial services, in honor of the late Bishop Simpson were also held in the Union Methodist Episcopal Church, at St. Louis, this afternoon. Nearly all of the Methodist clergymen of the city took part in the services, and a very large audience was in attendance.

FOREIGN.

DUBLIN, June 17.—Earl Spencer, Lord Lieutenant, started for the Belfast meeting called to protest against the other regarding public demonstrations. There is great excitement in Belfast, and the absence of decorations is generally remarked. On one building the union jack was half-masted. Another was suspended across the street through which Earl Spencer was to pass, with the following words on a streamer upon it: "Remember Newry and Rossmore."

LONDON, June 20.—In the House of Commons to-day the Under Foreign Secretary stated that the last news from Gen. Gordon was of the date of April 12. He said twenty messengers had been sent to Gen. Gordon by different routes. One messenger, who went up the Nile by boat, succeeded in entering Khartoum. On his return, bearing Gen. Gordon's answer, he was pursued by the rebels and killed.

DUBLIN, June 20.—Wm. F. O'Brien, M. P., editor of United Ireland, who has just been fined $500 for contempt of court, and who refuses to pay his fine, is declining private offers to pay the same. He says he is determined to continue to expose the manner in which the government of Ireland is conducted by Earl Spencer and Gladstone.

ROME, June 22.—The powder mills at Pontremoli exploded to-day. Thirty persons were killed and seventeen injured.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 22.—The Sultan has presented a valuable carpet and other costly gifts to Abraham S. Hewitt, who last winter was presented to the Sultan by Minister Wallace.

PAUL, June 23.—Twenty deaths from cholera at Toulon were reported yesterday. The city is in a panic. There were five deaths from cholera at Toulon to-day. The Minister of Commerce has issued a notice that the cholera at Toulon is sporadic and not Asiatic, and that it is due to local infection, and is, therefore, confined to the place of its origin. Eight thousand persons left Toulon yesterday. The public schools have been dismissed. At Marseilles there is a cholera scare, and orders have been issued to bury immediately the corpses of cholera victims in deep trenches, which will be covered with chloride of lime.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 179 Girod St., N. O., for price list of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positive free from Alum or any other hurtful ingredient. It not only laves, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

The regular quarterly meeting of the New Orleans District Sunday-School Union, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in Carondelet Street Church, Tuesday, July 1, at 7 P. M. Address will be delivered by Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Rev. B. Carrington, and Rev. S. Halsey Welch, of this city, touching matters of vital importance to the Sunday-school and the church.

Let there be a full representation of all the schools in the city present to hear these interesting and important addresses.

A. L. HILL, Secretary. W. H. FOSTER, President.

Those delegates to the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference in convene at Corinth, July 1, who expect to be in attendance, will please notify me at once.

CORINTH, Miss., June 10, 1884. J. A. HOBBS.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The Eufaula District Conference will meet at Midway, Wednesday night before the fourth Sabbath in July. The preachers will please write their reports, and send them to Dr. Huddy, at Midway, at least a week beforehand.

The Grenada District Conference convenes at Courtland, Miss., Thursday, July 3, at 9 A. M. 1884.

The presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference will please send me promptly the names in full, of the several delegates elect to the coming Conference, and of their alternates.

BYALIA, Mississippi. J. N. RANCHOFF.

The Vicksburg District Conference will be held at Phoenix, Yazoo county, beginning on Thursday, July 31. Opening sermon on Thursday, at eleven A. M., by Rev. S. J. Cotton.

The preachers and the laymen who are members of the Vicksburg District Conference will please notify me immediately whether they are coming to the District Conference, and if so, by what route. It is very necessary for us to know this, so as to be prepared to meet them at the river or railroad. You, Mr. Editor, are expected, and do not disappoint us.

PHOENIX, Mississippi. THOS. A. HOLLOMAN.

The Woodville District Conference will be held at Woodville, beginning on Thursday, July 23, at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Seashore District Conference will be held in Moss Point, July 3-4.

The Holly Springs District Conference will meet at Pleasant Grove, Hickory Flat circuit, July 25, 1884. Opening sermon by E. H. Moon, Friday 25, 10 o'clock A. M.

The Homer District Conference will convene at Lisbon on Thursday, August 23, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Alexandria District Conference will convene at Ocofay, August 27, 1884.

The Belle Cheney Springs Camp Meeting will begin on Tuesday, August 5, 1884. This camp ground is beautifully located in the parish of St. Landry. The preachers generally are invited, and will be furnished free transportation from Leconte on the T. P. railroad to camp ground and return. Apply to D. Brewer, at Leconte.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Bayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The camp meeting at the Toplaw Camp Ground, near the junction of Summit, Miss., will begin on Friday, August 2. Everybody invited. An ample boarding tent will be open for strangers and others who are not otherwise provided for. Preachers attending the meeting will be provided for by the association. Free transportation is and from Summit will be provided for those preachers who come by railroad; provided the undersigned be duly notified of the time they may be expected to reach Summit.

R. WALTER FRATER, P. C.

The Pensacola District Camp Meeting, Williams' Camp Ground, will begin Thursday night, July 5, 1884.

The China Grove Camp Meeting will commence Friday

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 27.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1457.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Singles and copies of the Advocate, 10¢ per copy.
Advertisements, 10¢ per line per week.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KENNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.,
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

LOSS AND GAIN.

BY MRS. EMILY J. BUCKNER.
All's gone, do we say?
When the stars of earthly hope go down,
When the light fades out in shadowy gray,
When the sun goes down on the rugged ground,
And the birds of summer flee away!
What's left?
Why, only our little throne of pride,
Only the outward trappings of life,
Only the friends that could not abide
When sorrow came and storms were rife.
What's left?
Why, God! and his true heaven above,
The glory of earth, and sea, and air,
The deathless pulse in his heart of love,
And we to his grand estate are heir.
Infinite gain!
The riches that nevermore take wing,
The gold wrought out in the furnace fire,
The strength that is born of suffering,
And the upward lift of the soul's desire.
—Chautauquan.

The Senior Methodist in China.

BY REV. H. C. BUCHER, PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONARY.
The Mississippi Conference, over thirty years ago, sent forth one of her preachers to the Land of Sinim. W. Lambuth is a name honored in his native land and by the missionaries and Christian converts in Far Cathay. The son of a leading minister, his youth spent in athletic sports, a crack shot, as many a deer in the Mississippi swamps and the angles beyond the great lake can witness, he graduated at his State University, under Dr. Wadell, and after answered the appeal of Bishop Andrew for men for China: "It is the custom of good Methodists to have revival services, especially in the summer. Bro. Lambuth by his daily preaching has held a protracted meeting continuing through the generation of living men. His circuit in the prime of life was one hundred and fifty miles long, and since he had a station, sixty miles above here, on the Grand Canal, at the city of Changchow. His itineraries have been more frequent and extended than those of any missionary in the Kiangsu province. He was the first permanent effort made in Soochow. As you see the little settlement with its Methodist Church, missionary residences, Mission schools, and the beautiful group of cottages constituting the hospital, the thoughts go back sixteen years ago when Bro. Lambuth preached in a little room with a dirt floor—the only building he could get. For ten years he was a "nursing father" to this station. The work at Na-lang was established firmly and opened the gates of the last. In the cities and towns about twenty chapels were opened by his lustrous ministry. The Lord richly blessed his labors, for one hundred and twenty souls were gathered into the fold. He has been the gift of "discerning spirits," and a man in the field guards more carefully the door to the fold and the sheep gathered within, for there are wolves without. Eight native preachers were introduced by him into the ministry, and his special forte is in training Chinese preachers in holiness, in seriousness, in prayer and in the Scriptures. For years he has been on the New Testament Translation Committee, and is now engaged partly on the Old Testament. His translations of theological works, hymn books, catechisms, etc., all amount to twenty or thirty volumes—religious save a geography and an astronomy. One of his last—"Notes on the Gospels"—is one of the most popular works among the native preachers I know of.

His life is summed up in a word—"This one thing I do." Among this people he has only known Christ and him crucified. It is the purity of life, the gentleness of character, the zeal for souls which has made such an impression upon this pagan people. Two heathen men were walking along the street. "Do you know that man in front?" asked the one. "No," said the other. "That is Lanseen-sai, and whenever you meet him he talks about Jesus."

When he received the degree from his alma mater he was absent, and it was found out by his son who was authorized to open his letters. On his return he strictly forbade its being mentioned and wrote declining the honor.

From 1863 to 1875, the Southern country unsettled, the Board in debt, this servant of God received scarcely a cent from home. He could have obtained lucrative secular positions; but, "No," said his helpmeet, "you preach, and I will take boarders to support the family and teach school that threeson may go through college."

Few know of the tolls of those long years when this man of God stood alone and unaided like Abraham of old, and had it not been for his faithful and devoted wife the sun of Southern Methodism, now rising so gloriously in the east, would have set in a long silent night. The church now honors this handmaid of the Lord who stood in the breach, and at the great day when works are manifested she shall be counted "worthy of double honor." Her labors among the women have been multiplied, and who can tell what will be the influence in coming time of the Clopton School? Mrs. Lambuth is known throughout the land as one of the finest educators in China. The girls from her school are the wives of Methodist preachers and teachers. The wise man's encomium is so appropriate: "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."

The Curry-Comb vs. Feed.

Two ministers were talking about a third one in the presence of a layman of another church. The preachers agreed that Bro. C. was a good man, a faithful pastor, a strong preacher, pious, devoted, zealous, and all that; but somehow he did not succeed. The people did not love him. One year in a place was the period of his pastorate. If he stayed longer, it was an affliction to him and to the charge. "What is the matter with Bro. C.?" A number of answers were given to this question—none of which seemed to be satisfactory. The layman said: "Brethren, I'll tell you what is the trouble with Bro. C.'s case. He carries too much and feeds too little."

That was it exactly. Bro. C. made constant use of the curry-comb and fed too little. The comb he used had long, sharp teeth, and he bore on heavily. He fretted and irritated the skin at an unmerciful rate. All who were not pachydermatous, thick skinned, suffered every time Bro. C. got a fair chance at them. The people went to church to be fed; but, lo! the curry-comb was piled instead. This was the real cause of Bro. C.'s unpopularity. The people got tired of it. They were hungry for food, and if they had been well fed, they would have endured with meekness a good currying now and then. When it came all currying and no food they grew restive and fretful. Many a preacher has been given to the free use of the curry-comb. It is good in its place; but it will not supply the place of corn.

If things do not go just right, some preachers begin at once to curry the church at a fearful rate. This is a mistake; it is not right; it is not in harmony with the spirit of Christ, and shows him who is guilty of it to be a poor judge of human nature. If things get wrong, pile in good gospel food; and if you must use the curry-comb, do it tenderly and in love. It will not do for a preacher to vent his spleen on the church. He carries the wrong horse; those who need it are not there. And it shows a bad spirit—real spite.

This is Bro. C.'s trouble. The layman was right.

GILDEROY.

Rev. B. M. Drake, D. D.

BY REV. H. M. BOOTH.

Of all the ministers known and loved during a long life this eminent one has asserted the most commanding influence on my affections, and during his life and since his death has been present to my conception in my daily and nightly visions, with his benignant countenance, as the beau ideal of a Christian gentleman and minister. Bro. Steele used to say, when he was twitted with an assimilation to this eminent exemplar of the Christian minister and gentleman as a model, no better could be found to imitate. It would be difficult to find a flaw in the complete exemplification of all the characteristics of the man and minister that gave such a charm to his character in the social and family circle as well as in the pulpit. His ministrations were characterized by distinctness and appropriateness of exegesis, so that his elaborations of truth are remembered by his preachers as to be reproduced in the exact line of thought long years after his voice is stilled in death.

Unlike his great compeer and friend, Dr. Winans, his address gave emphasis to his thoughts and were all that could be desired in the pulpit and upon the forum. He was an admirable presiding officer and would have graced the episcopal chair. His example was another illustration of what our great training-school could produce in the formation and development of ministerial character. Like Dr. Winans, it was a question with him for a time whether he ever would succeed as a minister. It would be difficult to conceive how his training could have been bettered by human manipulation in all the elements which go to make up the complete ministerial character. His thought, eloquence and style were most impressive. I heard a man of culture—Dr. Wade, of Jefferson county, Miss.—say he had to quit hearing him or yield to his convictions under his impressive discourses. As a debater on the Conference floor he stood next to that master of logic, Dr. Winans. These two were generally arrayed on the same side of great questions of forensic disputation. Some few times I have known them to antagonize each other, mainly, in reference to the strict construction of the law—Dr. Drake maintaining a rigid enforcement of the law, and Dr. Winans pleading for its abatement in cases when the subject of penalty had strong claims of forbearance, and the latter's views generally prevailed.

Not only not chiefly did Dr. Drake make his impress in the pulpit and upon the Conference floor, but in the social and family circle. No minister was ever more prized as a friend and companion by ministers and the people. It was my privilege to be much with him on his districts and in my charges, and can bear testimony to his reception by the churches as an honored ambassador of God and a welcome guest of the people. I have frequently heard him say, "Never cast off old friends for new ones," and he held fast to him the confidence and affection of all who were privileged to know him. The magnetism of this man of God was never surpassed.

Dr. Drake was not so much distinguished for any striking development of special mental characteristics as he was for a well-rounded mental organism with all his faculties in equipoise adequate to the demands of any exigency arising in the multifarious claims upon him in the varied relations of his ministerial life as minister and president of college, legislative institutions, male and female. He was a man of clear head, well-informed practical sense and of great adaptation to whatever position assigned him by the church. No minister ever had more good qualities and fewer faults. His friends can never forget his social qualities, his warm attachments, his gentlemanly and courteous bearing and noble presence, his effective, consoling ministrations, his ripe Christian experience and admirable judgment in the things of God. Take him all in all, we shall never look upon a finer specimen of Christian and ministerial manhood.

This great and good man bore upon his heart the undying interests of humanity with such intensity of emotion as to fix the latent disease that terminated prematurely his valuable life. While laboring under the premonition of death from this disease of the heart he familiarized his mind with the contemplation of the blessed friends who had preceded him to the heavenly land, keeping a written memorial of their names. It was the privilege of my household to receive from him one of his last appreciated visits and have him perform one of his last ministerial services in the dedication of our youngest son to God in holy baptism. He had baptized all previously save one. This one, named for him, he consecrated with great impressiveness, praying most fervently, which we can never forget, that God would lay his hand on him for the work of the ministry. His whole demeanor during this visit was peculiarly solemn and impressive as though eternity occupied his thoughts. He was well aware that his life work had abbreviated his days on earth, but frequently and emphatically said if he had his life to live over, he would spend it in the same way. Like Dr. Winans, in his near approach to the river there was no consolation in the review of his past life of long and faithful service except as the great atonement radiated with its Divine light his work and labor of love. They trusted in the Redeemer as the only hope of their salvation. This blessed faith distinguished these collaborators and bosom friends in the last conflict, leaving their conjoint testimony of victory achieved through this Divine instrumentality. I would here record the testimony of Dr. Drake in reference to his friend, Dr. Winans.

He had a well-selected library of varied reading, both solid and light literature, that had been well read and digested; but in the closing years of his life all other books were utterly ignored and he poured over and over again many times the word of God—the one book.

Mansfield Female College.

MR. EDITOR: It was the privilege of the writer hereof to attend the commencement exercises at our college at Mansfield, embracing Sunday, June 8, and running over into the following week.

It was truly refreshing to one, who has heard rumor after rumor to the effect that our only female college was dying for want of support, to see in all the evidences of thrift and usefulness. Moreover, some "evil bird in the air" had published in these parts that the citizens of Mansfield were not patrons of the college. The truth is, as I gathered while there, the college is well patronized by the people of Mansfield, who recognize in it a power both for the upbuilding of the town and the education and refinement of the female portion of its population. All know the depressing circumstances under which Dr. Grace took charge of the college one year ago. That it might possibly be made to pay expenses was just about as much as the most sanguine hoped for. But here are facts. Let them speak. Professors, 6—Literary department, 3; music, 2; art, 1. Matriculations, 71—Literary department, 65; music, 33; art, 14; special Latin course, 15; college boarders, 24. Income to the college over all expenses, net, $1,400.

Those friends of the college who are not cheered by these facts must be hard to satisfy. The administration of Dr. Grace is, as far as I could learn, entirely satisfactory and the corps of teachers, in the main, unobjectionable. I did not reach Mansfield early enough to hear the examinations; but the concert and works of art showed very plainly that there had been no shortage in those departments.

Speaking of the exercises, the DeSoto Democrat, published at Mansfield, says:

The past few days have been a period of great interest to the people of Mansfield. The students and patrons of Mansfield Female College have been in a whirlpool of excitement, which has been contagious to such an extent as to involve the whole community; and the staff matron and the sedate man of the world have, in a great measure, laid aside their grave, starchy and composed manner and recklessly plunged into the whirling vortex of pleasure.

Again, speaking of Dr. Grace, the Democrat says:

The college is not so prosperous as it should be; but, under the present most excellent management, we hope to see it at once regain its past prosperity and popularity. President Grace, although he has been in charge of the college but one term, has fully demonstrated his entire fitness for the high and exalted position, and under his direction we expect to see it bound upward and onward until it is second to none in the "world of letters."

Referring to the graduating class of 1884, of which two received "M. A." diplomas and seven "M. E. L." diplomas, the Democrat speaks as follows:

The graduating class of 1884 is an unusually bright one, and we wish them all a long life of usefulness and contentment.

The sphere of action open to women is now greater than ever before, and is constantly expanding. Therefore, the responsibility now resting upon educated women has increased in proportion. We now beg our young friends to forever bear in mind that in moral strength women are now giants of the world, and the influence for good or for evil of an educated woman can be expanded to an indefinite extent. You will now be called upon to take an active part in the stern struggle of life, and it is within your province so to conduct yourselves as to make your companions happy in your association or drive them to dishonor, despair and death.

The Weekly Herald (Mansfield) says of the Fairy Literary Society and concert:

The exercises of the first evening were very interesting and instructive, and those in attendance expressed themselves well pleased.

The music consisted of the most choice pieces, the essays were instructive and entertaining throughout and the recitations, in the main, were the choicest selections from the most renowned authors and poets, and were delivered with an air of grace, elegance and precision that denoted studious discipline and attentive training.

On Monday evening, June 9, a grand concert in honor of the graduates was given at the college. The same was largely attended and enjoyed to the fullest extent by the lovers of music. The Mansfield brass band and amateur string band acquitted themselves with great credit, and the young ladies who conducted the songs received the well-merited and repeated applause of an appreciative audience.

The alumni held a reunion on Tuesday, and after suitable exercises provided for an entertainment next June, which will, no doubt, be an occasion of great interest. The alumni is a large body, and some of the best female talent may be found in it.

MINNEN, Louisiana.

J. A. PARKER.

Commencement at Port Gibson Female College.

MR. EDITOR: It would be almost, if not quite, a positive unkindness to you and your readers not to tell of some things that have recently taken place in Port Gibson. Yes, in Port Gibson, a quiet town, which for a century has been hidden away in the hills of Claiborne, near the banks of the Bayou Pierre, its enterprising citizens finding egress to the rest of the world only when a passing boat on the "Father of Waters" would thrust out a plank and take them off the end of an eight mile rail at that ancient extinction known as Grand Gulf. Now Port Gibson finds herself, as if some unseen hand had reared her relations to the world, located upon one of those grand thoroughfares of commerce, which are bringing into vital union and communication every part of the American continent, as the arteries, the veins and the nerves bind into one harmonious community the varied parts of that wondrous microcosm, the human body. The Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railway brings the contributions of the world to Port Gibson, and take away Port Gibson's contributions to the welfare of the world, the telegraphic wire regulating both movements for safety and propriety. Her new cotton factory building stands in majestic completeness.

Awaiting the auspicious hour
To hum and roar with faithful power.

But the chief glory of Port Gibson is her schools. More than one gentleman of taste and scholarship has suggested that she is, or is to be, the Athens of Mississippi. On last Friday night, the thirteenth instant, the commencement exercises of Port Gibson Female College were inaugurated by the exhibition of the juveniles in the hall of the college.

On Sunday Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg, preached the commencement sermon as only he could do it. On Monday the trustees met and resolved good things concerning the college. They adopted and sent forth an address to the public, setting before the world some interesting facts concerning the college, as that more than a thousand young ladies and girls had been taught in the college during the last forty years, and that more than a hundred had been graduated—that no pupil had ever died in the college, and that the college has larger patronage now than at any time since the late war.

On Monday night the Junior exhibition took place. On Tuesday several original compositions were read, and one young lady, Miss Addie Gordon, was graduated. At the close of these exercises Dr. Marshall, being rallied, made a brief impromptu address, in his most felicitous style. Indeed, he outdid himself.

The annual address was delivered by Dr. C. G. Andrews, presiding elder of the Vicksburg district. His theme was "Woman's Kingdom—the Beautiful." The address was a strong and successful appeal, and argument for woman's right to rule and revel in the realm of the beautiful. It was indeed a masterly production of its kind, and was highly entertaining to all, and especially to the ladies. President Bradford's baccalaureate address was a brief, forcible and earnest protest against the tendency to the hot-bed system of education and the substitution of superficial accomplishments for thorough mental training. Hurry and cram might meet a popular demand, but could never satisfy the judicious and conscientious educator.

At night, on Tuesday, came off the grand concert of vocal and instrumental music. Medals, too, were awarded for scholarship, neatness, deportment, elocution, callisthenics and music.

W. L. C. H.

The Centenary Thank Offerings.

While in some of our larger cities it was deemed advisable to postpone for awhile the Centenary collections, owing to the threatened financial panic in the middle of May, it was solely in the belief of larger results following such delay. In other places the programme was carried out entire, and with most encouraging results. Many of the thank offerings are not yet full, and pastors prefer to wait before publishing the amounts. In some instances, perhaps many, nothing has yet been done, possibly for special reasons, and in the hope of doing more by some delay. Care should be taken lest such delay result in a failure to make a Centenary offering. Both the Church Extension Board and the Board of Missions are justly depending on large thank offerings in the aggregate. They need the money now. Collections should come in as speedily as possible. The pastors hold the key of the situation. Indifference or neglect here is fatal, and will be a matter of life-long regret. We commend the following extract from the address of the Sherman District Centenary Committee, of the North Texas Conference:

We heartily endorse the plans and suggestions of the Central Centenary Committee and, true to our connective interests, we would urge our pastors and people to adjust themselves to the plans of the committee, and do their utmost to carry out both their letter and spirit.

The wisest plans are worthless unless they are skillfully executed. In a connective body like ours, plans are essential to that uniformity of action by which the largest success may be achieved. Let us then see to it that we do not by our indifference or inactivity make fruitless the plans by which it is proposed to commemorate this Centenary of American Methodism. While the plans are wise, and, if carried out, will make this a monumental year in our history, let us not forget that their success depends solely upon the tact and skill with which we execute them. As yet the interest in this Centenary year is not as general or intense as it should be. This is not the fault of our connective officers nor our church papers. These latter have given the command; the latter have, by their "Centenary pages," sent it ringing down the lines until it ought to be familiar to every ear. Let the pulpits take up the "Centenary watchwords," as they are given from time to time, and thus shall we awaken interest and enthusiasm.

Let this not be merely an occasion of self-glorification—an opportunity for recounting the triumphs and achievements of Methodism; but rather make this the point—the vantage-ground in our history, at which we marshal our forces, and from which, with the growth and strength of a hundred years, and the baptism of power, we shall go forth to a more efficient service for humanity and grander achievements for the Master.

Intelligent zeal on the part of the preachers will bear largest fruit. The aggregate already promises to be great, but will reach the desired sum only by aiming at "a Centenary thank offering from every member." Blankets for reporting Centenary collections at Conference will be furnished every preacher. Let the utmost diligence be used between now and Conference to realize the great ends of Centenary year. While congratulations are being given are congratulations, with others there must be both seed-time and harvest in one year, but the results may abide forever.

E. R. HENDRIX,
Chm. Cen. Com.

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1884.

For the heart grows rich in giving; all his wealth is living grace;
 Seeds, with mildew in the garner, scattered, fill with gold the plain.
 Is the burden hard and heavy? No thy steps drag wearily!
 Help to bear the brother's burden: God will bear both ill and thee.
 Numb and weary, on the mountains, wouldst thou sleep amid the snow?
 Chase that darkness from beside thee, and together
 both shall glow
 (as from sunrise in life's battle) Many wounded
 'round thee meet;
 Lash on their bounden throes, and that balm shall heal thine own.

In the heart a well left empty: None but God its void can fill;
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain can its ceaseless longings still.
Is the heart a living power? Self-entwined, its strength sinks low:
It can only live in loving, and by serving love will grow.

Under the influence, of gathering memories—memories that come upon me, many of them, as gently as fall the dews of night upon the bows of the drooping willows over graves—I am prompted, on this bright morning of June 4, to pen for the eye of many friends as much as may be seemly of the thought and sentiment inspired by a visit I have just made to the cemetery. The white monuments stand about in rows, and slabs, besides, bear inscriptions of names that call up faces of old men and women, of the middle-aged, and of lads and lassies that were in expression of life and love, of hope and purpose, when, over thirty-two years ago, I came, with my young wife, and entered upon life's engagement with motive only of usefulness and self-development. Many graves are unmarked. Not since 1856 had I passed the portal of the sacred precincts where the up-turned faces of whole households and of sections of families and of single individuals have known, through years, no movement of muscle or twitch of nerve. The folded hands! Ah! the silence. Father and Mother Rash, the parents of the editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, lie out at the old homestead, on the other side of the town. Thither I rode on Sunday evening last, for it was at that home that they used so cordially and affectionately to greet the young married couple just from South Carolina, who prized so much the benediction of such rich-hearted old people. Burns' "John Anderson, My Joe John," is a favorite poem with me. That old couple might have set for the picture. In the cemetery, from which I have just leisurely come, lie, F. G. Ferguson and Daniel M. Hudson, preachers of the old Alabama Conference. A gallant knight was Ferguson—a friend, truly, of the young men of our Israel, Hudson was the Bishop of the Conference. I called in just now and had a chat with Slater Hudson, and looked over the shelves of quaint old volumes. In 1856, at the little log parsonage at Spring Hill, near Demopolis, Hudson and wife, with their first baby, dropped in and passed a night with us. How she has just now laughed as she told of their reception and entertainment: "Don't you remember how you ran out and met us as we came up to the gate? You called out to us to come in; that you'd have the old Shanghai rooster killed for our supper." It is astonishing how time and trouble, how temptation, trial, tribulation, and else that does not commence with t, take out of a man the liveliness of youth. A sober, sedate, orthodox old man can hardly realize that he should ever have yielded to impulse of merriment. How I would like to have known the old gentleman of the parable who said to his elder son, on an occasion (who was in the pouts), "It was meet we should make merry and be glad." The music and—and—and, well, something else, that the elder brother overheard, were not pleasant to his ear. To predicate an argument or a claim for that else, of that little, mere mention, were as absurd as just the like of it has been on behalf of some graver things in religion and theology. To name all, or even the half, of those who sleep in this graveyard, treasured in memory by the preachers and teachers who have, in the past thirty years, come and gone, is impracticable. Just a few, therefore, I venture, Milton Stevens and his sweet wife, Marshall Hooks and his, Col. William Banks Bowen whose daughter, Mattie, was but yesterday laid to the hymeneal altar by my young friend, George W. Gonzallis, of Pensacola, Maj. James H. Smith and his wife, William Brewer, Mrs. David Clifton, one of the most beautiful of matrons, Dawson Edwards, these and many of theirs and others, some of their well-remembered students whom I taught and drilled in the Military Academy. It was here C. C. Gillespie buried his first wife; but a little while after a like bereavement of my own left me with a little boy two weeks old, whom a sister of J. J. Hutchinson, wife of Mr. George Lanier, took to her home for a time and nursed with her own. To find the grave of the mother of that babe (now himself a widower, with a little two-year-old girl, Florida.) I went this morning with my friend, Mr. Penbrooke S. Lockard. The eyes of considerate women have held the spot aloof from final and utter vanishment from memory. My friend leaves me to my meditations. What a potent factor is this city of the dead! Silence and solitude take the burden of the emphasis of death—of the grave. The mind sheds its follies, escapes from out its littleness, and draws up into communion with "the spirits of the just made perfect," an immemorable company, and realizes the blessedness of assurance that God appoints and dispenses. As I return from among the tombs, where thoughts most hallowing and chastening have redeemed the hour, I drop in and renew acquaintance with some whom I knew in the by-gone. "Time's effacing fingers" have been busy, yet the faces are not altogether strange. At the corner of the square the old hotel is as it was in 1851, when I came on a furlough from the citadel in Charleston, S. C., in my cadet grey uniform, and witnessed the marriage of my youngest sister, Annie Fletcher, to Mr. T. Brewer. My uncle, James L. Daniel, then kept the hotel. My mother was there, having given up charge of the academy here to Mr. Douglas. To find that same old hotel now in charge of one of the young girls whom I used to gallant in Charleston, now a fine-looking matron, and to chat with her about the dear old city and the gay times we then had, varies the emotions somewhat. Thrice has she been married. A twin sister of hers, Mrs. Millidge Weaver, lives in Florida, having never lost one of her fourteen children. "Blessed is the man that hath his quiver full of them." I was the eighteenth of a family of twenty—third son of a Methodist preacher. Just look at the names of some of them: Samuel Wesley, William McKendree, Joseph Benson, Sarah Wesley and Annie Fletcher. As I stood at the altar of our little church in Yalaha, Fla., a few Sundays ago, and baptized the baby boy of my stepson, Hon. H. H. Dugan, and called his name (Henry Cottrell,) realization that I and mine are all "native and to the manner born" was very vivid. This and memories of thirty-three years' experience, study and work in our itinerancy have combined to make me so doleful and tuition of the young guardians of our Methodist "doxie," who stand so modestly, respectfully and steadfastly "the old laudmarks." Bless the boys and the old men from whom they take the cue.

I am much indebted to the hospitality and kindness of Bros. John Mott and Pembroke Lockard for a pleasant stay for several days in this dear town. Bros. Dowdell, James and preacher in charge, Rev. Claude C. Cotton, have added much to my pleasure. Bro. Holcombe also. With these, on night, at the parsonage, discussion of the "doxies" was edifying. The female college, under Dr. John Mass, flourishes. Expectation is on tip-toe to hear Dr. Carter's commencement sermon on the fifteenth instant. He preached once and lectured at Masouche Lodge meeting of special interest, the opening of a dancing school and a social party in town on the evening of my lecture were all against, as also a misunderstanding of the type yet there were enough, and the sort, for me to talk to. The enthusiasm and zeal of Bro. Chilton are beautiful. I knew well his noble father, on the chief of the leaders of the State in the Baptist Church here one of the most potent and devoted. Bro. Chilton has a helpmeet radiant in person and spirit, the daughter of my old friend, Dr. Pierce, of Dallas. At I Dowdell's elegant home I was honored to meet Mrs. Powers, nee Burton of Greensboro, Ala. She is a student of the University, and keenly and intelligently alive to all that concerns cause of truth. The Methodist and Baptist Female Colleges were in rivalry here until the Baptist College was burned to the ground in 1870. The debris of the building gives an aspect to the otherwise ample, elegant lot on which the college stood. Samuel Henderson, pastor of the First Baptist Church at the time of the opening of these colleges, and for the first time of their history, was as wide-awake and influential a minister in Alabama as Dr. William Johnson, whom I was associated in the Medical Academy in 1852, was as mild, unassuming, upright and considerate a gentleman as I have ever known. Never married, but seemed to hold in highest consideration and delicately to bear himself toward the sex. He died in the Confederate Army. The memory of him is one most fully cherished. Associated with him as teacher was Mr. Eli Pough, who married a daughter of Maj. James Smith, and who is now practicing law at Smithfield, N. C., ranking high in his profession. Meeting him here yesterday, who has seen me in Mexico and the United States a number of times, caused me to realize the value of time. When I last saw the fellow was about as now seems the son of Dr. A. A. Lipscomb taught, and Dr. Darby, whose daughter, Mrs. V. Price, writes me to come to New Orleans. He was professor of natural science at C. C. Gillespie, who entered the Methodist College in the face of considerable opposition, and by his extraordinary boldness, rare tact and powerful oratory overcame it all, is held in admiration by the older people here. He afterward edited the Texas C. C. Advocate, and won his spurs.

fraternity, was elected by the General Conference editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and by editorials of striking elegance and ability drew from Abel Stevens high encomiums. David Clifton, now inferior to no man as jurist or statesman in the South, took his rise at this bar. A courtly gentleman and devoted servant of the church, it is a great pleasure to hear him in regard to the olden times, as I did at his home, the other day, in Montgomery. I should have mentioned Judge Robert Dougherty, who sleeps in the cemetery here. It just comes into mind of a discussion I had with him in Gillespie's first meeting on behalf of his college enterprise. Clifton nominated me as secretary of the meeting, and I declined on the ground of not approving sectarian schools, and made a plea on behalf of the State furnishing all her children an education, and in the same schools. In my second sermon at Montgomery, after being appointed junior preacher, my first year, on the text, "The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that wateth shall be watered also himself," I made a criticism to the same effect. The next official meeting of the brethren relegated me to the negro congregation. These escaped any heresy, I hope. Many other memories crowd in upon me. The greeting of my old school patrons, and of men whom I taught in their boyhood, has been refreshing. The old-time students of my mother, who are now grandmothers, talk of her in just such terms as are delightful to the ear of a son who believes that she was the equal in highest qualities of womanhood to any of her sex that ever nourished children, taught a school or wielded pen for printer. I have walked about places here that once knew her under profoundest sense of God's great favor to me in this as in other regards. "Goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life," and the elect ones whom he caused to be my associates, men and women, some gone and some yet in the flesh, are the treasures of my soul.

I find here the venerable Bilbrow and his wife, parents of our young Bro. Bilbrow, of the Alabama Conference. It was to his house I went from the grave in 1852, and memory of the delicate sympathy they showed on behalf of me and the motherless babe have endeared them to me through the three decades following. I greeted their preacher boy at Eufaula last December, and talked of the time before he had come to either the natural kingdom or the gracious. I find but a part of the family here, but they are after the order of the dear old father and mother. There is a row of six or seven little graves near where the mother of my boys lies that are suggestive of tears upon the cheeks of my cotterell friends.

JOSEPH D. COTTELL.

On the morning of June 3, at half past four o'clock, with no company save a well-filled lunch-basket, and a traveling linen containing a shaved pillow (each of which proved very agreeable companions,) the writer launched forth, a delegate to the Woman's Board of Missions, to be held in Kansas City, Mo., a distance of about seven hundred and fifty miles from Meridian. As the train steamed out from the depot, leaving behind it bustle and confusion, thoughts came and varied crowded themselves upon the mind. The last copy of the NEW ORLEANS and Nashville Advocates were put into the lunch-basket, to read during the journey, but truth demands the confession that they were never opened.

Never having gone very far north before the M. and O. railroad, there was much outside to attract the attention to even try to read the daily paper whose appearance is nearly half that of the sun. From Macon near Corinth the surrounding country looked perfectly beautiful, the fields a rich green, and large fields waving grain, separated by hedgerows a darker shade, struck the writer quite beautiful compared to the corn fields, with shabby rail fences, she always been accustomed to.

The train stops at Artesia for breakfast, and just here let me say that Dr. Marshall would be compelled to say the coffee at that eating-house splendid; at any rate it was that magnificent.

At Verona Mrs. J. B. Stone, corresponding secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Society, came aboard, and was gladly welcomed as a traveling companion, she too I bound for Kansas City.

Reached Corinth at one o'clock, remained there till six. The "piling rain" kept us in doors all over. After waiting an hour or more in a crowded depot for the belated train, we, in the midst of a large number of excursionists, took the train for Memphis. It seemed at first there was even standing room, every car filled with parties going to the "Thomas Concerts" in Memphis. However, there was one gentleman who very kindly gave us a seat, so our first, and it is hoped last, stop on an excursion train. Arrived Memphis at eleven o'clock, spent the night and breakfasted at the Gaston Hotel. At half-past eight A. M. the K. C. S. and G. railroad bore us down in a "transfer boat," on which the engine excepted was carried. "The Father of Waters" having "slept" we had the pleasure standing in the rear door, and could thus "take in the situation" as we crossed. In this car we met Mrs. Duokworth and Rawlins, of the Memphis Conference, and at Hoxie, Ark., Mrs. Holmes, representing the Arkansas Conference. Our party now numbered five. What if we had never seen each other before, we were not strangers, for we were not all interested in the same grand cause of trying to further our Master's kingdom? Therefore we were bound together by stronger ties than mere traveling companions have any knowledge of. We were until late in the evening travelling across the northeastern corner of Arkansas, a distance of one hundred and thirty-five miles, and agreed that if the other corners and middle looked like this we did not care to emigrate to that State. Nearly all the people, for a long distance, were living in cloth tents in the river swamps, surrounded by mud and water. However, before leaving the State we must not forget to mention the lovely little stream known as Spring river. The railroad runs immediately along its banks for a distance of thirty miles or more. Surely this stream can vie with any for beauty. It derives its name and flows from Mammoth spring, said to be second in size to any in the world. It appears suddenly at the base of one of the Ozark range of mountains (to us only a respectable looking hill), is sixty or seventy feet in depth, and in circumference looks like a small lake. The railroad here crosses southwest Missouri, thence into Kansas, runs some distance along the eastern border of that State to Kansas City, which is divided by the State line, the major portion being in Missouri. That part of Kansas and Missouri through which this road runs is a beautiful country scarcely any timber to be seen, a well-kept fence, but a number of large and four blades, wild flowers like early spring with us; corn in abundance, grain fresh and green, together presenting a beautiful scene on which the eye would love to dwell. One thing was very noticeable—absence of corn housed. In some places the cribs seemed groaning under the weight. If such sights were more frequent in our part of the country, it would indeed be a scene upon which the poor horses and cows would like to dwell as well as the people.

Arrived in Kansas City at half-eight o'clock, a little tired after days' and nights' travel. Those were accustomed to the Union Depot, a large city can imagine the scene greeted us. Such a commotion! but the midst of it all a nice looking German stepped up, and asked if we were missionary ladies (judged from looks probably), to which we responded "yes." After being seated in the waiting room he produced a printed list of the names of all expected, with their hostess opposite. Being identified, we were all herded into one carriage and taken to our respective homes. After a cordial welcome (each having the "best place" all soon felt at home. Half an hour to rest, then time to ride over a portion of the city before the meeting opened. World space permit our workers should have a full report on each session. However that was published in the Minutes. Rev. Hargrove, Rev. J. J. Itanoom, Rev. Marcia Marvin and Rev. Mr. Brown from the Indian Territory, and several missionary candidates, were in attendance. The best of feeling prevailed throughout the entire session, opened Thursday night and continued Tuesday afternoon. Between fifty delegates and officers were present. A missionary social was held Saturday evening in the Central Church parlors, which was very enjoyable indeed. This church is the care and pride of Bro. Lowrance. Indeed, a beautiful structure, cost something over $25,000. Bro. Lowrance and wife had a kind of "home" for the Mississippi delegation, and received them accordingly. The meetings were all held in Dr. Marshall's church—the "mother church." We have fine congregations, and are delighted with their pastors. In giving such full reports from other references, this delegate felt that we must just begin to cultivate our vineyard, and resolved that the other year had rolled around would, by all means in her power, strive to awaken greater interest here. One reason we are behind sister societies is because we have always had a representative board. Here we get new ideas and have a clearer insight into the workings than we could possibly have otherwise. A prayer meeting was held each morning before a regular session. The afternoons were given to committee work, with one exception. In order to finish up on Tuesday meeting was obliged to be held on Wednesday afternoon, at which the most interesting thing of the entire occasion occurred. A bright, sweet looking young woman, Miss Lou Phillips, sister of Dr. Marshall's Phillips, came forward, and in an affecting but beautiful manner presented herself to the board to go anywhere on their missionary. There was a dry eye in the house.

For fear our good editor might object to publishing such a long list of names, there is so much to be said I must try to "keep it good graces," and write as briefly as possible.

JEMMIE E. PETTY.

ABBEVILLE, Miss., June 21, 1884.

COLLETT-WIMBERLY.—At the residence of the bride's uncle, George H. Wimberly, Esq., in Bastrop, La., on Wednesday, June 18, 1884, by Rev. John T. Sawyer, Mr. William L. Collett, of Ouachita parish, and, Miss Mollie Wimberly, of Morehouse parish.

SELLERS—ROUSE.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. John W. Rouse, June 12, 1884, by Rev. G. R. Ellis, Mr. William L. Sellers, of Deer Park, Ala., to Miss Carrie Rouse, of Bluff Creek, Jackson county, Miss.

Obituaries.

CONNORLY.—MRS. ELLEN TAYLOR CONNORLY, second daughter of Dr. J. J. Connorly, was born in Perry, Georgia, and M. R. Taylor, was born in Columbia, S. C., January 10, 1837. While she was a young girl her parents removed to Alabama: first to Perry county, and soon afterward to Forsyth land, Green county. There, at the age of ten, she joined the church of her parents—the Methodist Episcopal Church of the South—of which she remained a member up to her dying day. Her education was completed at the female seminary at Tallahassee, Fla., in 1854. In September, 1855, she gave herself in marriage to Rev. D. C. B. Connorly, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Theophilus Moolly. At the time of her marriage her husband was pastor of the church in Eutaw, and afterward at Selma. After Selma he was called to the seaside over Centenary Institute, at Summerfield, Ala., where he remained for six years. Soon after the war he established a high school in Dallas county, and his students called him a "Stonewall," and his attendance the eighth year of President Connorly, was a record seat of learning. During the above-named years the writer was closely associated with Prof. Connorly and his wife, succeeding him in the Eutaw and Selma stations, and living in proximity to him at Tallahassee. "Stonewall" here he speaks his opinion of, and gives the general reputation of Mrs. Connorly.

She was a consistent Christian lady whose character was constituted of the graces entering into true religion. She was highly esteemed for her word of blameless truth, and her ever ready assistance to her, but words of commendation from multitudes of lips. She was indeed a helpmeet to her husband, presiding over the boarding department of his schools with success so as to order herself to pupils and her husband in the same manner. She died in 1874. Prof. Connerly and the writer left Alabama; the former for Arkansas, and the latter for Texas. But the general current brought them former also to Texas. A few months since he settled in Austin, Texas, and hope that, in the future, his business and the atmosphere would build up the strength of his wife, who for 7 years had been in feeble health; but this hope was not to be realized.

On the early morning of June 1, 1887, after giving her "farewells," she was distributing to her family and friends the treasure of her children, she fell asleep in Jesus, and her body now rests in a beautiful cemetery near. Her husband and six of her seven children were present to receive her dying wishes. Her husband and her children were in mourning; but with the assurance of a future reunion in case of their perseverance and like triumphant exit, in the absence of her pastor, the worshipers performed at the funeral service. The services of this esteemed friend of other days in the presence of a large concourse of sympathizing friends.

NEYLAN-S-AMANDA C. NEYLAN nee Harris, was born in Smith county, Miss., June 12, 1844, and died, Ma-1881, at Tampa, Fla.

As a father, there could no more adequate task devolve upon me than to make this record and furnish a suitable memorial of a dear departed child, knowing more of her early Christian life especially than anyone else save her mother, and being confident that I shall have the endorsement of all who know her for what I may here undertake a tribute debt to her virtues and moral worth and to vindicate one of our ancient and sacred traditions dedicated to the God of her father and mother, and whose death was glorious triumph of saving grace.

Our dear Amanda was a woman more than ordinary native intelligence, and in the providence of God, had opportunities for early literary training at Sharon Female College, in the city of New York, where she received a liberal education, and subsequently at the Southern Female College, under the presidency of Rev. Thomas H. Capers. She was apt to teach, and taught success at Woodville, Miss., and other places; was preceptress in many of the Baptist churches, and was an education of her younger brothers and sisters, thereby lightening a burden often pressed heavily upon a true Methodist preacher with a large field to rear and educate. My children converted at a very early age, was a constant reader of the Bible, and knew never what it was to be of the church. She never removed from the altar.

She was married to Mr. James Neylana, February 9, 1864, at Atchafalaya, Miss., by Rev. W. T. J. Smith. She became the mother of ten children, seven survive her; three were born in heaven in their infancy. The testimony of all who know her is that in the relations of life she acted her part as a devoted woman. She died a very poor health for, perhaps, three years, and her husband had that the climate of Florida restore her.

Last year they hurried their yo-hale amid the "land of flowers" now death has summoned them away. Her dying message to the ones away was: "Tell my dear mother, brothers and sisters ready and willing to go if God proper to call me away." "I expect to meet them all on that hol shore." Thank God the have tried to preach has power my children. Two have been away within the last six months, three now in heaven.

PEPPER—Died, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Hines, in Richmond, Indiana, Miss, January 31, 1884, Mr. G. PEPPER, in his seventy-third year. He was born near Chicago, S. C., August 31, 1810; was married to Miss Eliza Y. Jones, daughter of R. L. Jones, February 12, 1835, and had no children of their own, but was cared for and raised several children. They removed from Carolina to Alabama, where he remained some years, and then to California, Miss., in 1842. It was his privilege to be intimately acquainted with Bro. Pepper's time, and I can truthfully say I knew a purer or more consistent than his. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1832, how he loved his church and his doctrines! His seat was never vacant in the sanctuary unless he was providentially hindered from attending. Indeed, his attendance was so regular that his absence caused inquiry as to

The influence of the minister's home, and was one of his chief pleasures to have them with him and minister to their comfort. He was always one of the most attentive hearers of the word I ever knew. Of late years his hearing had become greatly impaired, and he had to draw very near the pulpit in order to understand the sermon fully. To me it was a touching sight to behold the venerable, white-haired sabbatarian there, with his eyes leveled on the pulpit and his hand bowed on his ear, that no sound might escape, striving to catch every word that proceeded from the man of God. Since his arrival here he had always been one of the chief pillars of the church, giving liberally of means toward its support. And but his intimate friends knew of many private charitable deeds. He was exact in his business transactions just to himself as his fellow-men were to him. He was a good neighbor and true friend. In a word, he was good man.

His health had been feeble for several years; but his fatal illness was of only one week's duration. It was hoped by his friends and consequently that he would recover; and consequently the subject of death was not mentioned to him. He left no dying testimony of his readiness for the change; but none was needed. All knew his lamp was trimmed and burning, and that his brilliant rays lighted his pathway through the dark valley and shadow through which we all must pass.

His mortal remains were deposited in the cemetery at Lexington, Mass., in his immortal spirit now lingers in the "green palm groves" of God's paradise. His aged companion is left in loneliness and sorrow. Would that we could speak some word of comfort to her! She has kind and sympathizing friends; but, ah! who can fill the void in that desolate and sorrowed heart? None but God! And who can tell how well will be his loving hand, how it would no have indicated. Cast all your load of grief and care on him, and you will "sanctify to thee thy deepest distress," and after awhile—a little while—you will rejoice the loved one who has gone before in that land where parting are unknown and tears never shed. Kind, hospitable, true, cheerful, earnest, humble—Christian—father—husband—Rest sweetly in your narrow bed. "How bright will your narrow bed," "How bright in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints!"

FOOSE—D. C. Foose was born in Pennsylvania, March 19, 1805, and died at Lexington, Miss., May 18, 1884. He professed religion about forty years ago in Warren county, Miss. He has been living in Lexington about thirty-seven years.

"What's worth doing is worth doing well."

[EXTRACT FROM ANALYSIS OF PROF. CORNWALL.]

"The 'Ivory' Soap is also well made, no greasy fats being left in it, while the Alkali is thoroughly combined, so that it will not injure the most delicate fabrics."

Very respectfully yours,
H. H. CORNWALL.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sent to any one who can not get it of the dealer. Six two-cent stamps, to pay postage are sent with the soap. Please mention this advertisement.

PHOTOGRAPHS

The Finest Establishment in the S

WASHBURNS

Photographic Parlors
109 CANAL STREET
 Are situated within a block of the principal and almost directly opposite the City Tavern.
 You are cordially invited to visit our
PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY
 There will be no obligation whatsoever
 We make every kind of portrait known to art, from the miniature for the pocket size, in
Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon
 Small and faded pictures copied and colored the likeness faithfully preserved.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY JULY 3, 1884.

LIFE AND DEATH.

A summer's sojourn by the sea;
A child's voice ringing merrily;
A hand fort reared by chubby hands;
A glorious ramble on the sands.
A golden week, with gladness rife;
The sunshine of a cloudless life.
A month of pain that lingers by;
A closing of a bright blue eye.
A pining "neath the angel's breath,
And then the awful hush of death.
A wild wind moaning through the trees;
A sobbing mother on her knees.
The grief which will not be beguiled;
The wail, "Oh, God, my child! my child!"
A tiny mound, and on it laid
A little bucket and a spade.
A sunny greenwood pruned with shells;
A wreath of golden immortelles.
A cold, fall form beneath the sod;
A little angel-face with God.

—Churchman.

"Reminiscences."

BY REV. H. J. HARRIS.

VIDALIA CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

This chapter will be shorter, perhaps, than any I have written. It is made up of incidents more thrilling to me than were ever grouped in so brief a period of all my life. Some I fondly cherish, others I would rather forget if I could. I was only preacher in charge of this circuit for about two or three weeks. The Conference was held in the city of New Orleans at the close of my happy year on Coles Creek circuit, in December, 1845. At the invitation of Hon. Alex. G. Penn, then postmaster of New Orleans, my former friend while I was at Covington, Abner Woodbridge (once a grand Methodist preacher, my predecessor when I was a boy, now become Unitarian), Abram A. Green, and Mr. McDougal, his partner in business, I took my wife with me to Conference, and we were their guests at Mrs. Stone's boarding-house, then the most popular boarding-house in the city, and where all these friends lodged. It was a most delightful occasion to me. When I left the paragon at Fayette I had not the remotest idea of a "change of base" for the next year, but confidently expected to be returned. The people expected and expressed universal desire for my return. No one can imagine my surprise, therefore, when my name was "read out" for Vidalia circuit! What it meant I could not conjecture. Though with a sad heart, and my poor wife grieved, I asked no questions, but took my lot and tried to commit all to God. Presuming that I would be returned to Coles Creek, and having been generously supported by the good people, I felt safe in vesting what money I could in providing some clothing and other comforts for my family, reserving barely enough to pay expenses back to Fayette.

A glance at the map will show the relative positions of Fayette and Vidalia, but can give no idea of the extent of my new circuit. It extended from Vidalia, opposite Natchez, down the west bank of the Mississippi river to the mouth of Red River, and westward from Vidalia to Black and Little rivers, a distance of, perhaps, forty miles through the bottom. There were three male members of the church in the circuit, and two of these spent most of their time in Natchez—had residences there, with plantations in the swamp. Soon as practicable I "wound up my affairs" at Fayette and started in mid-winter with wife and three children in my barouche with all our earthly goods for Vidalia, via Natchez. The road was almost impassable; mud up to the axles much of the way. It was only twenty-six miles to Natchez, but I barely made the trip in an entire day. I left Fayette with just $2 75 in money, not knowing with whom I could lodge, or how I could make the trip. There were two men personally known to me in Natchez, Bro. Benj. Jones and S. W. Speer; a third I knew from reputation only, Bro. Van Campen, then a local preacher residing there. With one or the other of these I expected to lodge for the night, if they could accommodate me, although I felt it would be burdensome to either, and was loathe to ask their hospitality. But the necessity was upon me. These brethren have never known, till this present writing, all that transpired, and all my heart felt that memorable evening. I drove into Natchez, a cold, drear and drizzling winter eve, with my wife and children taken from a comfortable home and sent adrift to a circuit without membership, without a parsonage, and, as it proved, without a place where I could find board and lodging for a single night, with putting my children on the floor to sleep. My three male members were all stewards—to collect mainly from themselves, and were wealthy men; their fortunes aggregating not less than $150,000 to $200,000.

I knew Bro. Benj. Jones' wife (formerly Miss Rachel Bange, and Sister of Prof. Magruder's wife), my wife knew her also. She had once been a member on my charge. We felt that in her we had a friend who would receive us kindly. I had a Conference acquaintance with Bro. Jones, and only limited at that, but sufficient to enable me to recognize to him the true spirit of a Methodist preacher. I concluded to call at the parsonage, therefore, first; and for Bro. Jones was the stationed preacher there. After some inquiry I found the house, rang the door-bell, a servant responded, and I was ushered into the sick chamber, where Bro. Jones was lying in a seeming unconscious state, did not recognize me. His wife and sister stood watching and weeping at his bedside. Sister Jones greeted me kindly, but, of course, had to decline entertaining me. I had to go away and seek lodgings elsewhere. Next I thought I would apply to Bro. Van Campen, as he was an old citizen, long in business in Natchez, and might be better provided to "entertain strangers." For another reason, candor compels me to say, I felt that I would be less embarrassed in calling upon him, though a stranger, than upon Bro. Speer, whom I knew personally. I record just here a lesson I learned that has been invaluable to me since, and may be profitable to others. I was forcibly taught not to "judge by the appearance." Bro. Speer still lives, and to his honor and as a tribute to the memory of his now sainted wife, (his first wife, as was then), I must say that no two persons in this life more agreeably surprised me than they on this trying occasion. Oh! may God reward them in heaven hereafter for their unexpected kindness to me and mine. They were childless, and kept a boarding-school in Natchez. Bro. Speer was greatly my senior in the ministry, and, to be candid, there was something in his manner in those days that savored of indifference, a sort of stiffness that made his younger brethren feel ill-at-ease in his society, (though a warmer heart beats not). His wife was a New England lady; highly cultivated, a noble Christian woman, a woman of historic lineage, (Willmarth). I had only seen her at Conference; my wife had never met her, and in view of all the circumstances we concluded to try a total stranger's hospitality, rather than be repulsed or denied lodgings where we feared, perhaps, there would be no room for us. I was driving through the city, along Main street, I think, seeking Bro. Van Campen's, when a voice from the sidewalk hailed me: "Ho! Isn't that Bro. Harris?" I looked, and saw my good misjudged Bro. Speer, and responded to his inquiry. He then asked whether I was going? When I told him, he put this further and pointed question to me: "Didn't you know that I lived in Natchez? and why are you not inquiring for my house?" I had but one reason that I dared to give, viz: that he kept a boarding-school, might be crowded, and it might not be convenient for him to entertain so many under the circumstances. He replied: "I have always room in my house for a Methodist preacher and his family, especially during weather like this," and giving the careful directions how to find his house, told me to drive there at once, and get my wife and children under shelter. I found the place, and to my great surprise was recognized immediately by Sister Speer, who cordially greeted my poor chilled, tired wife and little ones, took them to her arms with sisterly tenderness and kisses of kindness, unsurpassed by any they had ever known before. Soon they were round a glowing fire in an elegantly furnished room and were made comfortable and happy. Never did we receive more generous hospitality. I had to put my horses at a livery stable for the night. After tea, Bro. Speer and his good wife sat with us for some time, and we indulged in one of these old-fashioned Methodist preacher family communions. After prayers and before we separated, as if by inspiration, Bro. Speer was moved to inquire into the state of my finances. I told him reluctantly the extent of my exchequer—two dollars and seventy-five cents! "Only two dollars and seventy-five cents!" said Bro. Speer. "Your two horses in a livery stable for the night, and the Mississippi river to cross, no ferryboat except a common flat, your family must be rowed across the river in a skiff, you will have to employ men and pay extra prices for all this—and only two dollars and seventy-five cents! Well, well, are you crazy?" "It will take all your money to pay the livery bill; then what will you do?" I was dumb; knew not what to say or do. Bro. Speer had traveled the circuit himself the year before, when that wealthy Methodist community of Waterproof was included. But that had been cut off for my benefit (?) and two young men without families, (one, perhaps, was married), were given the cream of the circuit. Bro. Speer knew well the situation, and tried to dissuade me from going to the work. But I knew nothing but to obey. In the face of seeming impossibilities I determined to make the effort. My condition was a sufficient appeal to the generous heart of a noble brother. I asked nothing of his hands, but he drew his purse from his pocket and gave me all he had—six dollars, I think, in silver. God only knows how I felt in that hour. The next morning I started on my way. I crossed the Mississippi river with my wife and children in a skiff, two negro men pulling at the oars. It was a bitter, cold day in December, the wind blowing a stiff breeze from the North and the waves sometimes threatening to dash over the boat. But God took care of us and we landed safely at Vidalia. My horses and baggage were in the flat, were carried over in the flat. Crossing the river and traveling thence, ten miles consumed most of the day, and we lodged the first night on Vidalia circuit, at the house of a good old widowed Sister McKinney.

Here I must stop for the present, and reserve the sequel to this episode in my itinerant life for another "paper." There are some rich things yet connected with this affair.

MARVIN PARSONAGE, May 5, 1884.

Natural Virtues and Goodness.

BY REV. J. W. HARMON.

Have you ever been fascinated with the splendid portraiture of character, and really basking in their graphic outlines and limnings, which some men have drawn of human nature and in all ages of the world. Behold the dignity of his outward carriage; the wide grasp and reach of his intellectual faculties; the marvelous developments of his skill and ingenuity; the interesting schedule of his rare virtues that bloom out and fruit out in his life; all this would seem to indicate that he was a possessor of so large a stock of exquisite qualities and powers as to be but little lower in the scale than a God. These wonderful pen pictures, so admirably drawn upon the printed page, have been cheerfully accepted and endorsed by the brilliant and gay world of fashion and wealth, as well as by a large class of the scientific and learned world. With unanimity of sentiment they have reached the frank and generous conclusion that it is discreditable to say anything or produce anything discreditable against human nature in the higher walks of life, and especially against those who have committed themselves and their labors to the fair fields of philosophy, and learning, and scientific research. All these finely drawn pictures of humanity fall upon the ear like the mellow tones of sweet, but distant music, eliciting poems of song and praise, just as if there never had been any discordant and jarring notes, wrung out by sin from our common humanity all along down the ages, to mar and deface such lovely sketches and florid pictures of beauty.

Yes we acknowledge the unfortunate fact that there are exceptions to this general rule, growing out of the disadvantages of their environments and want of training and education; but we live and work in hope to remedy all the defects of humanity by a wise legislation and a universal education, and the direct application of a modest, persuasive, moral suasion. Is it any wonder then, that these masterly, but fictitious characters of humanity have found a world of converts, and have been lauded in song and eulogized in all the force of eloquence? But if there be any real foundation and truth in these fine limnings of character, and these polished portraits of human nature, what are we to do with our Bibles? whose picture galleries are hung all over with weird photographs, with strange and degraded faces, and life-size portraits of human nature, drawn with the hand of an infallible artist, even the Holy Spirit of truth, that reverses all these bright pictures of humanity, and dashes all these cherished hopes by the most tremendous indictment ever penned against our common humanity, telling us that "there are none good; no, not one," that all mankind have gone astray and forgotten the God of their being and their endowments, that human nature "is only evil, and that continually."

Now the conclusion is inevitable, that the Bible must be false, and surely one of the grandest fictions that ever found its way into, and secured a secret hold upon the world, or else by some magic, magnetic and inspiring power, it has found credit in the faith of millions, and must therefore be true. And what renders the indictment against our common nature and mankind, truly and bitterly appalling, is the fundamental specification in the indictment, that we are wholly averse, and unwilling to abandon the evil that clings to humanity with such marvelous tenacity, because the moral powers and attributes of the mind and soul are blunted, and that will—this great master faculty of our very being and constitution is enervated, and emasculated of its moral force of execution; and, therefore, human nature is spiritually bankrupt, and is protested by true piety in the sense of purity and holiness. These virtues have sometimes had a splendid theatre for their exhibition; have we not witnessed within the last few years of fire and flood; of disasters and epidemics in these United States, the outpouring of benevolence and beneficence towards our fellowmen by all classes and characters; filling all the channels of social and public life with a delightful aroma that was chronicled in flowers of poetry and in tributes of masterly eloquence? Pray, alas, what more can Christianity ask or demand of us? what further necessity for conversion or change of heart and life? True, all this covers our common humanity, with an earthly glory and fame, and, punished by the tongue that would find fault and condemn such excellencies of human nature.

But now rise up to a wider, and grander, and broader range of thought, and relationship, and obligation, and take hold of the honor, and homage, of the gratitude and love due to God, the author of all these natural virtues and grandeur of character in men, and will it be believed that men, with proud speech and lofty dialado, refuse to give the same obedience and the same gratitude and love to God that they give to earthly governments and men.

Natural virtues and natural goodness, therefore, when divorced from the cross of Christ, is of no religious value, nor does it present and claim to God for a religious blessing either in time or eternity.

Natural virtue and goodness, however, has its enjoyments, just as a fine taste, and a fine fancy, and earthly loves have their enjoyments, and this is its only compensation; in fact, this is the finality of its reward. Its reward, therefore, is entirely of this world, and is pleased, and gratified, and sustained by an inward consciousness of its own honesty, and its own justice, and its own integrity and elevation of character, and bears not the slightest regard to God, and possesses no religious element whatever, and never will, until these natural elements of character are consecrated by faith and prayer to the Redeemer of mankind, who by his bond and blood has given life to these natural elements of goodness.

The fact is, the very constitution of our mortal being, all the attributes of the soul, all grades and cast of moods in their happiest moods, and all the flow of generous spirits, are as much the result of God's creating power as is the matter and formation of our bodies. And all these grand elements of character are possessed by men who are utterly destitute of any piety or real love to God. If ever they are saved at all it must be through the blood of the Redeemer, and their sanctification by the Spirit.

To Bro. Gilderoy.

My dear brother in Christ, with all the cuts pro and con I am satisfied that I have accomplished something in the discussion I started out to rout you off the plank of a change of nature in regeneration, which in your last article you fairly give up. I may have mis-understood your meaning, but you were following the line of other able and worthy writers on this subject.

For instance, if you will turn back to the article of Bro. S., who wrote shortly after my first article appeared, you will see he argued a change of nature and showed the necessity as he thought by saying that the ox could not glide in the sea, neither could the fish browse in the meadow. As you truly said, we do not desire a heir's breadth as to our views of the work done by the Holy Ghost in regeneration. But, my brother, we do differ as to the normal condition of man. The trouble lies in the doctrine of total depravity which I can not accept, neither can I stop here to argue.

Now, my brother, you say "a sinner has a depraved nature that leads him to love sin and hate God, and a Christian has a depraved nature; but the principle of a new life imparted by the Holy Ghost leads him to hate sin and love God."

Now, do you not see where your difficulty lies? If his nature leads him to love sin and hate God, and as you say "he was not to blame for it," then he is not to blame for loving sin and hating God. If so, I ask, how can God condemn him for what he can not control?

Your last proposition I am ready to accept if you mean by that that this depraved nature which you say the Christian has, is the same he was born with and which regeneration does not change, but only puts in subjection to the spirit of God which reigns in him. My position is that the child is born in a state of grace, hence no regeneration is necessary. This state continues until he commits an actual sin.

Then he must be regenerated, which is a work done by the Holy Ghost. This is regeneration: the term means to reproduce. Hence, when by sin he becomes corrupted by grace, through faith in Christ he becomes reproduced, which is to bring back into a normal state of infantile purity. "Except ye repent and become converted, and become as a little child, (as ye can not enter into the kingdom of God.)"

Now, my brother, if this is a bunch of grass, feed it to the cows; but if Bible theology, "beware how you hear."

TUCOPOLA, Miss., June 14, 1884.

Religious Intelligence.

The Presbyterian Board of Publication reported to the General Assembly that the receipts for the past year were $308,393 95. The total expenditures were $287,216. The total sales amounted to $199,950. The committee to examine this report recommended the discontinuance of printing parallel lesson texts from the revised version as tending to diminish the confidence of children in the sacredness of the Scriptures by showing divergent readings.

The first Presbytery organized on the soil of Mexico is connected with the Southern Presbyterian Church. It bears the name of the Presbytery of Tamaulipas, and has five churches under its care.

The Union revival service, held in Lowell, Mass., under the preaching of Dr. A. B. Earle and Mr. C. C. Luther, resulted in over three hundred conversions. The work still goes on.

The Presbyterian and Congregational Churches in Columbia, Dakota, have united, giving the Congregationalists, who were in the majority, a membership of fifty-six.

Since Brooklyn, N. Y., was incorporated, fifty years ago, the number of Methodist Churches has increased from three to thirty-seven, worth $1,500,000.

The Baptist Church at Indiana, Iowa, recently added one hundred and thirty-five to its membership.

Our Young People.

CHILDHOOD'S GOLD.

BY LUCY LARSON.

They pass not go so far away,
Through heat and cold, to hunt for gold.
They might beside us sit or stray—
Our hearts are full as they can hold.

Gold! Gold is poured out of the sky
From a rise of sun till day is done;
With falling leaves it flutters by;
In liquid gold the rivers run.

"T was scattered all the way from school,
In stars and bells above the dells;
We children gathered aprons full,
Where little Dandelion dwells.

And yellow Cowslip to our feet—
Come, like a king his hand to bring;
"And Columbine, with nod so sweet,
Stood gold upon our path,—gay thing!

Was golden gleams with such wine
As the bee sips from buttercups;
What gold bends on the wet grass shine,
Sprinkling to breezy downs and ups!

Our homes are sweet upon the hills,
Where love is sure, and life is pure,
And sunshine every season fills;
How can a country child be poor?

No robber seizes our midnight hours;
No coffer eider our treasures hold;
Dewdrops and sunbeams, stars and flowers,
Gold! Gold! Who shares our childhood's gold?

—S. Nicholas.

From "Invalid."

While your venerable and more entertaining correspondent, Rev. J. G. Jones, is not claiming your immediate attention, and if it will not crowd out some one's little letter, "Invalid" will call, (per letter) and "chat" awhile through the same medium. I would much prefer going on an excursion in my wheel-chair, and write this on my pretty desk, which I am told was the joint-gift of Mrs. P. A. Johnson and her mother, Mrs. Kelley, whose names were unknown to me when I wrote my "thank-offering" for my chair, and who will please accept my "tardy," but warmest, grateful thanks; but I must forego this pleasure, write in my old position in bed, and "take in" the limited view from my South window instead of going on the delightful excursion in the yard among mother's dowers. How I would like being out there under the spreading branches of those dear favorite trees, with that luxuriant grass for my carpet, over which the wheels of my chair would glide, almost without a jostle to set my flesh quivering with pain. But I would not care to enjoy it all alone to-day, for everything out doors is so lovely that I would like to have my little friends of the Advocate with me, to share this coveted pleasure.

I find myself almost envying the wild-birds their freedom, until I think that One has "bid me tarry" here—"watching unto prayer." How yonder group of wild roses, and that cluster of blushing beauties—"the seven sisters"—nod in the breeze, as if beckoning me to "come!" What sweet faces the flowers have, almost seeming to smile at you,—or, up at the great, good Creator who made them so beautiful! There goes "Pet," my white kitten, so playful and gay! If I could, I would paint his picture, as he stands near that rose-wreathed mound, like a white pony rearing among the roses and green grass, and call it "Pegasus," with his blue neck ribbon for a silken "halter," as if he was "grazing," with that bank of roses to represent Mt. Parnassus.

"What a vain idle dreamer 'Invalid' must be!" are you not saying? But "Pet" is so very pretty. Well, then, I'll leave the poetical, and come down to common prosaic nature. There is "pretty Polly," not a parrot, but my buff turkey hen, with her var-colored, downy brood, seeming to enjoy a May-day picnic, as well as my white hen, "Onie Owen," with her little ones. She looks like a large white butterfly, and they, like smaller ones, of richest tints in velvet and plush. To me they are pretty, if "prosaic" to others. They suggest the above thoughts to my mind, while grandma regards them prospectively as excellent for the table—for Thanksgiving and Christmas, while those dear little innocent chickens are to be murdered for pies, broils, stews, etc. There is the difference! "Pretty Polly" has one little cream-colored, fluffy beauty, different from all her other "tribe." S. says it is "just as cute as can be," and while I am trying to express how "perfectly lovely" it appears to me, in its soft costume of cream-colored, plush-like down, with its hood of shaded fawn and cream-colored feathers, so much like the shaded zephyr hoods that babies wear, L. laughingly replies: "No; not a hood, but 'a widow's cap.' They are so fashionable and pretty. I wonder if mine will become me!"

This is very amusing to us, for L. is not even married, and the idea of her wearing "a widow's cap" is so "funny" that she laughs. I reprove her, but she says, as she gives me my luncheon of strawberries and cream: "Better a widow's cap than a 'cap and bells' by inheritance, as royalty wears its crown."

My strawberries with its dainty "accompaniments" served on my pretty decorated china set—the gift of my dear "airy godmother"—only makes me wish more than ever that I could have a May picnic with my "Advocate" friends. I really would like to have a "Centenary" picnic, and invite all the little friends of missions, especially "The Parker Magnolias," for whom I cherish the highest regard and best of wishes for their own, and for the welfare of their noble enterprise. I will tell you something about my "society," and what others have contributed soon, with the proviso, always, that this escapes the waste-basket!

Mr. Editor: Mamma takes the Advocate. I'll get her to write this for me, so my grandmas can see my name in print. One of my grandmas lives in Clark county, Ala., and one is with my uncle, C. G. Harbour, at Interlochen, Fla. "Two is lies of the Methodist Episcopal Church gave a festival last Wednesday night at the Pillipi Hall for the benefit of our church here, and raised forty or fifty dollars. Mamma and Miss Nannie Mosby had charge of one of the tables. We have a new Sunday-school now, organized about a month ago. Mr. N. L. Brody is superintendent, and papa is secretary and treasurer. Mamma says if you will send me no sample copies of the Advocate, she will try and get you some subscribers. She says to ask Bro. Keenor to explain our Sunday-school lesson in the Advocate like he has been doing heretofore. It is so much help to her. Love to all my cousins and grandies too, and answers to you. MABEL HARRISON.

TERRY, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I have long wanted to write something to your paper. I think you are so nice and kind to let us little boys and girls have space in which to ask and answer questions and tell what we think. As you know, my papa is pastor in Meridian. We have a Sunday-school Missionary Society, and every member pays a nickel a month. We have in connection with the society a free-will offering once a month. The money received this way is used to educate a Chinese boy. We have sent twenty dollars for this object. Now Mr. Editor, if you can do so, please let my little letter see light through the Advocate. We have not forgotten your visit to us, not long since, and all wish you would come again.

LEWIS NONWORTHY.

Meridian, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I read with pleasure the children's letters in your valuable paper, but see none from our part of the country, so I thought I would ask you to put one in your paper for me. I was eleven years old on the thirtieth of June. Bro. C. W. Hodge is our preacher, for which we are thankful to the bishop that sent him. We are all giving him something for his missionary collections. I will now answer John D. Falls question: The word "beans" is found in II Samuel xvii, 23, and Ezek. iv, 9. "Cheese" is found in Job x, 10, and I Samuel xvii, 18. I will now ask a question: Where is it that the wicked are like the troubled sea? NETTIE BUTLER.

LEBANON VILLAGE, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: I love to read the children's letters, but am not very fond of writing. I think I can answer some of their questions. Pearl Webb asks, "Who married Caleb's daughter?" It was Othniel. Rosa Mixer asks, "Who cast out evil spirits by playing on his harp?" It was David. Delaney Calhoun asks, "Who interpreted the hand writing on the wall?" It was Daniel. I will ask, What five kings did Joshua fasten in the cave of Makkedah? And who says, "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one?" Your little friend,

ANNIE A. FOREMAN.

BATON ROUGE, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: As I see so many of the little people writing to your valuable paper, I thought I would write one too. I am a little boy living one-half mile from Oak Grove post-office. My father is a farmer. I like to see the pigs and chickens, and I have one little young calf of my own. One of my uncles is a Methodist preacher. We have no Sunday-school now. Mr. Jimmie Riddle was our last superintendent. Bro. Hill is our pastor this year. I will close by asking your little readers, Where is the word "plow-share" used in the Bible?

Your little friend,

EUGENE WILSON.

OAK GROVE, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: I think you must love little children, as you give them space in your valuable paper to ask and answer questions. Children end old people too, like extra attention sometimes. I am a Methodist, and attend Sunday-school regularly. Please tell Beesie Vaughan the answer to her acrostic in C. B. Galloway. Will the dear contents tell us, Where the bodies of Saul and his three sons were burned? What was the weight of A baloun's hair when he pulled it?

Your friend,

OEN CAMERON.

GREENWOOD, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I have been to church to-day, (May 25) and heard a splendid sermon from Bro. H. J. Harris at West Leysana. Our little baby sister was buried there two weeks ago. We miss her so much. I have two brothers and two sisters living. We go to Sunday-school. Papa and mamma are members of the Methodist Church. I am eleven years old, and small to my age. Next time I will ask some questions.

NETTIE MURRAY.

STEEPS BANK, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl 10 years old. My mamma takes the Advocate, and as I have not seen any letter from the boys or girls of this place, I will try to write one. I will answer Theodore Lewis' question: "How many stories high was Noah's ark?" It had a lower, second and third stories. It is found in Gen. vi, 14. I will ask the question: How old was Noah when the flood of water was on the earth?

Your little friend,

VIVIAN V. FOREMAN.

BATON ROUGE, Louisiana.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
SOUTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY JULY 3, 1884.

A Centenary Gun—Twenty-One Thousand.

We have been patiently waiting for some loud Centenary report that would thrill and arouse the entire Connection. Such an offering would stimulate this hopeful and put life into those who have industriously prophesied failure. We are glad that the first gun has been heard, the signal, we trust, of mighty achievements for our Southern Methodism. And it comes from the quiet little college town of Brookhaven, Miss. On Monday of last week the trustees of Whitworth College met in special session, at which time Dr. H. F. Johnson made a Centenary donation of a handsome new building and other property to the college, valued at $20,000. To this was added $1,000 in cash by Maj. R. W. Millsaps. That was a grand day for the college and for the great cause of education in our Southern Methodism. The history of Whitworth College, under the presidency of Dr. Johnson, has been an uninterrupted and phenomenal success. From those halls have gone out many cultured, Christian young women, who reflect honor upon their alma mater, and whose divine influence is beyond possible computation. To have trained so many young minds—to have equipped so many for the great conflict of life—is a noble, monumental work, worthy of all honor. But when in addition, our friend gives so freely the frugal gatherings of his toil and wise administration back to the church, he displays a liberality that commands the highest praise. We have long known his purpose to do this noble thing for his Lord, and we now rejoice in its happy accomplishment. It is neither our taste nor disposition to indulge in fulsome personal eulogium, but we must be permitted to say that this act crowns with honor a career of marvelous success, and writes conspicuously the name of H. F. Johnson in the honored roll of Methodist educators and benefactors.

Maj. Millsaps, who has made other offerings to the college, and for years has been an active member of its Board of Trustees, and whose well-poised character as a financier is unexcelled in this latitude, demonstrated his confidence in the growing success of the institution by adding another thousand. Now, if others, of ample means, will come forward, Whitworth will secure a liberal endowment, and be placed beyond the accidents and exigencies of annual patronage. To this end her friends should labor, in season and out, and with hearts and faith that will not fail.

Twenty-one thousand! Let its echo fly all over our spacious Methodism. In this great matter we hope two will not put ten thousand to flight, but stimulate them to like, if not equal, achievements. We can not allow this Centenary year to pass without a monumental offering of some kind and amount. After this signal gun, may we not hope for "resounding arms" along the entire length of our serried ranks? The months are passing away; District and Quarterly Conferences are being held; our Annual Conference sessions are approaching, and the question will be asked, What have you done? How have you shown gratitude for God's signal mercies of an hundred years to your church? Unless we hestitate ourselves immediately and mightily, some will have to respond in painful silence. Let us be up and doing. And let pastors remember that, not by large offerings from the few, but liberal gifts from the many, are we to rear a memorial worthy of our high estate.

"Extempore Listening."

We met this expression some days ago in a quotation from an address by the Rev. Brooke Hereford before the Unitarian Club on the subject of "Extempore Preaching." The following pertinent interrogation we reproduce: "Did it ever occur to you that listening, in order to be worth much, needs preparing for as much as speaking, and that there are a great many persons who listen extempore, who never think upon the great topics upon which they expect to hear the preacher speak, up to the last moment of entering the church?" That is an intensely significant and suggestive question, and is its own painful answer. The idea of preparation for hearing preaching does not occur to the ordinary church attendant. But just there, may be found the failure and "foolishness of preaching." The man who never meditates upon religious subjects before and after sanctuary service is not a very helpful, and never an appreciative, hearer. He discounts the message and depreciates the messenger just in proportion to his lack of preparation for worship. There may, indeed, be applause of the sermon's rhetoric and the preacher's style of oratory, but a strange indifference to its spiritual power, and edification. There must be the hearing ear in order to the understanding heart.

"Extempore listening" is the greatest enemy to profitable spiritual worship. The heart needs attuning before the hymn is sung; and heart preparation for Sabbath service is of almost equal importance with the preacher's careful, prayerful study. Those who pray for a profitable service will surely enjoy it. The Spirit uses very ordinary agencies to accomplish great things with those who live near to God. A sermon or a prayer meeting which to the extempore listener is the extreme of dullness to them is fruitful in divine suggestions and spiritual comfort. The pastoral visits of the succeeding week report infallibly to the preacher the character of his hearers on the Sabbath. He knows with absolute certainty whether the listening was prepared or extemporaneous. It is far more important in "getting ready for church" to consider the heart rather than the dress. To know if motives and desire are pure, than that the robe is spotless and the hat straight and the flounces properly adjusted. We do not depreciate tasteful attire for the Lord's house, but that is of minor importance to heart preparation. The one is to be "seen of men," the other commands the benedictions of the living Christ. But, alas! is not the order strangely reversed? We have known many to stay away from worship for lack of "something to wear," but have heard of very few who were distressed for want of heart preparation.

"Extempore listening" is an enemy to successful preaching. Among a certain people it is said our Lord did no mighty works because of their unbelief. And the most Scriptural, able sermon can be shorn of its power by extempore listening. Dr. Broadus, who is an authority on the subject of preaching, says that true eloquence depends as much upon the audience as the orator. If they are listless and unappreciative, his finest thoughts and most glowing periods will be as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. But when the congregation is in rapport with the preacher, his utterances have a fervor and power that sometimes seem phenomenal. The wonderful results attending the preaching of our fathers may be attributed as much to the praying, listening, "hungering church" as to their own rare gifts of nature and special endowments of grace. During a camp meeting, when three or four services are held daily, and the thoughts are almost constantly fixed upon spiritual things, preaching becomes easier to the speaker and more profitable to the hearer. A church goer's appropriation and assimilation of a sermon is in exact proportion to previous spiritual preparation. An extempore listener never has good spiritual digestion. But, on the other hand, the brother who prays for his preacher that he may have power and for himself that he may have ears to hear, will always hear "a good sermon." Dr. Jonathan Edwards preached with surprising power to himself on one occasion. Many were converted, and there were strange demonstrations in the congregation. He learned afterward that a large number of his brethren spent half of the night before in prayer for blessings upon the preaching that day. If all Christians would cease to be extempore listeners the world would stop prating about the pulpit declining in power. Listless pews will make a dull pulpit.

Editorial Correspondence.

Leaving Oxford on the early morning of Thursday, before the commencement exercises had closed, we started northward to attend the Corinth District Conference at Ripley. But, alas! for "hot-boxes" and their consequent delays. Reaching Grand Junction nearly an hour too late for the train eastward to Ripley, we were assured that courteous could be made at Jackson, Tenn., with the south-bound express on the Mobile and Ohio railroad, so that by way of Corinth Ripley might be reached that afternoon. But imagine our disappointment on learning that we were just twenty-two minutes too late, and forced to spend about eight hours in that city. Jackson shows signs of progress in everything except hotel accommodations. The afternoon was spent in editorial work and observations about the town. We called upon the pastor of the First Church, Dr. Guilford Jones, and with him visited the well-known Female Institute in charge of Dr. A. W. Jones, a place beautiful for situation. The First Church is not a very tasteful structure, but we learned from the pastor it is to be either remodeled or rebuilt at large cost this Centenary year.

At half-past eight P. M. we started southward on the Mobile and Ohio railroad, reaching Okolona, the seat of the Aberdeen District Conference, at two A. M. On account of so many missed connections and delays the Ripley visit had to be regretfully abandoned. Okolona is situated in the beautiful prairie region, and is evidently a town of solid wealth. The substantial brick buildings wear an expression of permanency and confidence in the future prosperity of the little city. Our church there, under the watchful care of its active young pastor, the Rev. S. D. Long, is doing admirably. In the Conference room we found Rev. R. G. Porter, the presiding elder, in the chair, and Capt. T. B. Sykes, of Aberdeen, at the secretary's table. The reports of pastors were, in the main, quite encouraging, some of them eliciting spirited discussion. In no District Conference have we heard more general and courteous debate. Church Conferences, class meetings, family worship, pastoral discipline and financial plans were discussed more or less at length. One brother made the very gratifying statement that 20 out of a membership of 150 will engage in public prayer. For many courtesies accorded, a patient hearing in behalf of the ADVOCATE, resolutions of cordial endorsement passed by a rising vote, a good list of cash subscribers and a pressing invitation to come again we are very grateful. To Bro. Farish, Col. A. Y. Harper and Capt. Frank Burkett, of the Okolona Messenger, we are indebted for charming hospitality. At two o'clock that night we continued our southward course, with Waynesboro and the Meridian District Conference as an objective point.

We reached Waynesboro on Saturday morning at ten o'clock, and at once repaired to the seat of the District Conference. Rev. James A. Godfrey was in the chair, and the business of the District Conference was quite concluded. The question of Sunday-schools had been appointed for that day, and it proved to be an occasion of real profit. No doubt the cause will gather inspiration from those discussions. Pastors and delegates will go home to renew diligent effort in that department. A few reports were especially gratifying. The DeSoto circuit, Rev. J. C. Brogan pastor, has five hundred church members and six hundred Sunday-school scholars. Enterprise station, under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Weems, reports an excess of nineteen Sunday-school pupils over the membership of the church. But few such instances can be found in our Southwest.

The Conference very generously and thoughtfully, by unanimous resolution, urged Presiding Elder Godfrey to take some needed rest from his loved employ, promising to look after the prompt payment of his salary. That act was graceful and commendable, indicating the high esteem in which the sub-Bishop is held by pastors and people. The Conference also made cordial recognition of Dr. H. F. Johnson's great Centennial offering to Whitworth College, and directed the secretary to convey to him a copy of the resolution. The following, introduced by Dr. J. W. Harmon, was adopted without a dissenting voice:

Resolved, That it is the solemn and feeling sense and judgment of the officers and delegates of the Meridian District Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that it will be a violent disregard of the sentiment of our people to open on Sunday the gates of the Cotton Centennial Exposition, to be held in the city of New Orleans, beginning December 1, 1884, and hereby request the managers of the Exposition to close the gates on the Sabbath during the continuance of the same.

For large congregations and a hearty, inspiring service of song, we have not found a better place than Waynesboro. Capt. Taylor's charming home will long be remembered by this travel-worn editor. At seven o'clock on Monday morning we entered the office at 112 Camp street.

Our Alma Mater.

Two or three days last week were spent at Oxford in attendance upon the Board of Trustees of the University of Mississippi and the commencement exercises. We regretted not being able to hear the commencement sermon, by Dr. T. D. Witherspoon, of Louisville, Ky., but heard from many that he quite fully met the high expectations of friends, old and new. In 1856 Dr. Witherspoon graduated, carrying off the honors of his class. After graduation at the University and at a theological Seminary, he returned to Oxford as a Presbyterian pastor, where he remained until the war between the States. His coming this year was greatly enjoyed. The Sophomore prize declamation on Monday was thought, in many respects, the best ever witnessed on that platform. The medals were won by Mr. Guston Thomas Fitzgugh, a son of Prof. Fitzgugh, of the University, and Mr. Mathews, a son of the late Mr. Print Mathews, of Copiah county. On account of the bereavement of his home—the death of his father, who attained such a national notoriety—his success was much enjoyed and highly applauded. The original addresses by members of the junior class, on Tuesday, attracted a large audience, and two or three of them had much merit. On Wednesday the address before the literary societies was delivered by Prof. Jones, of Memphis, Tenn. It was classical, thoughtful and in most admirable spirit. We feel quite sure it will accomplish great good.

Having to leave on Thursday morning, we failed to witness the exercises of commencement day. Sixteen young gentlemen received the degrees of the University, and were sent forth to the great battle of life. The honorary degree of LL. D. was conferred on Prof. W. H. N. Magruder, of Baton Rouge, La., Rev. T. D. Witherspoon, D. D., of Louisville, Ky.; and a local Wesleyan minister in England of scientific distinction, whose name has escaped our memoranda. We are especially grateful that Prof. Magruder, a Nestor in our circle of Methodist educators, has been thus honored by the great institution of his native State. He was the first native Mississippian who ever became a college professor, and in ripe scholarship ranks with the foremost of his noble profession.

The University has closed a very prosperous term with 276 students in attendance. It has an able faculty, ample endowment, most excellent buildings and equipments, and a campus of rare beauty. The State has reason to be proud of such an institution.

Deuteronomy xv.

The first bankrupt law upon record is here. Its provisions are too simple for the lawyers of this age, too lenient for the creditors, too strict for the debtors. The lawyer could not get up a dispute; he therefore would lose his fee. The creditor would find himself barred by limitation from even a renewal of obligation, and the debtor would find himself unable to make an assignment to his wife or children as preferred creditors. A poor man had the benefit; but fraudulent conveyance was not contemplated. It is noteworthy that Moses addresses people who are supposed to be honest in their motives; hence is not full of circumlocutions and provisos innumerable. He made no provision for those penniless wails who are taken care of by rich wives. How charitable the women are of this age! About one-half of them furnish their poor husbands with agencies or clerkships, and give them board and lodging. Such men were not permitted to shelter themselves behind their wives. A true assignment was necessary in order to enjoy the benefit of this bankrupt law.

Loans were obligatory even though the year of release might be at hand. It was really a charity, but so nicely concealed behind the form of a loan. A splendid lesson of charity is that which throws away the ostentation of a benefactor and assumes the exterior of a loaner; not indeed a shylock, but of a business man recognizing the manhood in a mendicant. It is degrading to the poor to receive the ostentatious charity of the rich. But if the poor man sits down to a full table, bought by the loaned money of the rich man, there is a feeling of honorable self-esteem excited in him. "I am poor, but my credit is good." Yes, and if he is not a travesty on manhood and a reproach to his Maker he will try the harder to retain that credit. His will ask if he can not do something, and his worth double a hired servant. It discourages mendicancy. If the poor have loans made them and then be furnished employment they can pay, and if not employed they can not pay. If he can not pay he must, nevertheless, be fed; so that loans and employment are the best business policy. Worldly wisdom would counsel this course. Be it remembered this law forbids the dodging or trickery of the borrower as strictly as it does the oppressive selfishness of the money holder.

The paucity of beggars and loafers among the Jews is noteworthy. The prevailing and ever-growing tendency to tramp among the Christian nations is also noteworthy. It may be well to consider whether or not this great difference is due to the manner in which the precepts in regard to giving are kept. "The poor shall never cease." No man shall ever live and say that there was no opportunity for him to be charitable. But, on the other hand, no man should be allowed to expect these benefits unless he is worthy. Charity, indeed, does not regard the worthiness of the receiver, but, on the other hand, it forbids expectation on the part of those who make no effort to be worthy. If we extend this principle to the sinner's hope of heaven we show its fallacy.

"The poor shall never cease." But it is one thing to be poor and another to be a mendicant. Helplessness that is providential should never be allowed to beg. In fact, beggary is evidence of great social wrong somewhere. There may be cause in the beggar and also in the rich for strong animadversion, even punishment. But usually the responsibility should be shared. Let the question be pondered: 1. How did the beggar ever yield consent to beg? 2. How did his rich neighbor ever gain his consent to see his neighbor forced to beg? Honest investigation would enlighten the eyes of both. But here lies the difficulty. Neither will honestly lay aside his prejudices; both stubbornly pursue a course that is disgraceful to each and ruinous to society.

God honors the poor man. America could have done without the rich, but not without the poor. The poor man to-day is driving the engines, sinking the shafts, building the railroads, manning the fleets, plowing the fields and breeding the brail of the world. "The poor shall never cease." Thank God for that. What if we were all retired millionaires? In less than ten days a man who could fill a coal scuttle and lay it across the street would be the subject of more genuine affection than Prince Bismarck. Within the same time a woman who could use a dish rag and kindle the fire in the kitchen stove would command a more splendid reception than the mistress of the White House. The Lord's word is pledged that there shall be men to do and dare. Work shall be kept up. Enterprise, push and pluck shall be bunched tandem with the wheel-horse necessity. Humility shall abide in some cot. Charity will come to see her. The little dirty robin shall look up from his squat hiding place behind mother's chair to catch the radiance of heaven in the sweet face. The picture will be photographed forever. The boy will grow and the picture too. The angel face shall stoop at night, and the smile will come as the glimpses of the first dawn of heaven. Fancy will dwell upon the tones of voice until like the tinkle of far-off silver bells the echoes will weave themselves into the songs of the night. The youth will be a man. So will the picture present man's noblest gerdon and highest ideal. Temptations to sin and shame will come. But the man can not sin till he shuts his spirit eyes to that picture. Disappointments will befall; but the man can not despair while that sweet face beams upon him in the night vision. He will arise and once more to the breach. Sorrows will not be driven away; but under the wondrous magic of that ideal the deepest groans will be but the diapason which sound in accord with the air of a heavenly anthem which without them could never be sung. Age and decrepitude, heralds of the coming King, who knocks with equal force at hovel door and palace gate, may steal upon him ere he knows, but not too soon. Happy the child who sees an angel ere he has dandied with evil. Happy the boy whose angel in his dreams and loves her yet. Happy the man who, battling in the thickest light, still sees his angel overhead. But thrice and four times happy he who, tolling late, has not seen the setting sun until the angel stoops and touches his eyelid, and lends the glassy hall the radiance of celestial dawn, and whispers: Rest—God's toilers shall not cease, though poor, to drink in hope the sweetest draughts that heaven can give.

From Bastrop, La.

Our little daughter was too seriously ill to allow of our going with the temperance expedition which left this town for Plantersville last Saturday. However, we send you the following account of the affair, written by Bro. Samuel W. Handy: "The ladies of the Bastrop Woman's Christian Temperance Union went to Plantersville, ten miles from here, on last Saturday to organize a union at that place. We met with a warm reception. Rev. R. S. Isbell introduced to the large audience Mrs. Kate Vaughan, the president of the Bastrop Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The union called to order, prayer was offered by Rev. J. Byron Wire, of the Baptist Church. Then the president read some very interesting tracts on temperance, and made some encouraging remarks. She was followed by Mr. Wire, who gave us a most excellent talk. The temperance choir then sang 'Rescue Us Perishing,' and the Misses Bettie Bussey, May Compton and Minnie Evans were appointed to go through the audience and solicit signers to this pledge. Thirty-two names were taken, and among the signers were the most prominent citizens of the ward. The following ladies were elected as officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Plantersville: President, Mrs. Robert S. Isbell; first vice-president, Mrs. Henry Bailey; second vice-president, Mrs. McCrary; third vice-president, Mrs. A. Aldridge; corresponding secretary, Miss Mala Leavel; treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Williams. The union then adjourned for dinner, which had been sumptuously and elegantly arranged by the ladies of Plantersville and neighborhood for the occasion. Mr. L. F. Leavel, a leading man and merchant of Plantersville, says that he feels confident the ward will give a handsome majority for prohibition."

Bro. Wire and the ladies on Sunday afternoon, at the colored Baptist Church in Bastrop, partially organized a colored union, the organization to be completed at an early date. The work of temperance is going on, and we shall try to do as did Rapides parish—vote the whisky out.

JUNE 24, 1884.

To "Alonzo," in the Advocate of June 19, on "A Limited Episcopacy."

DEAR BROTHER: If I knew your address I would write you privately, but, as I do not, allow me to say that I am profoundly impressed with the belief, and have long been, that in our structural theology we preachers and church writers frequently use the terms order, office, ordin and other ecclesiastical terms in such different senses as often to misunderstand each other. We use these terms in a more or less technical sense, and, as they are frequently used in different senses, the writer or speaker supposes his readers or hearers to give to them the precise meaning he himself intends, which is not always the case. Hence seeming or apparent differences of belief among us when there is no real difference. Now, I am by no means certain that I understand the difference you make between order and office in the article alluded to. A common dictionary will not give the information, for they use the terms in so many different senses. According to Mr. Watson (Die orders), he uses the word to merely distinguish between the ministry and laity, but not different grades or functions in the ministry. I have no debate with or for anybody on this subject, and intend no argument, but I think it probable that a little free and easy explanation would bring us to a better understanding about the "framework of our church." There are several things about ministerial functions and duties which are, no doubt, susceptible of such explanation as would cause us all to see alike, while at present there is at least seeming difference of belief. The questions you ask show this. Either structural or doctrinal Methodism is capable of being made transparent. And it ought to be so in order that we successfully maintain the true ground in opposition to all forms of sacerdotalism. This is to be the battle-ground on all questions of church government; and we ought to maintain a clear, straight front. This, I am persuaded, we can easily do. Then let us understand each other, and do it.

I suggest, therefore, that "Alonzo" give us the clear and plain meaning, as he understands it, of the term order as contradistinguished from office pertaining to the Christian ministry. I think there is lack of understanding here that can easily be made clear. And I respectfully suggest that he also give us his name and address.

Respectfully, D. ABBEY.

Yazoo City, Mississippi.

A Letter of Love.

It cheers the heart to read such noble sentiments as those found in the letter below. They have the fragrance of the cloister and the inspiration of the Christian zeal which says: "The world is my parish." Several times already this year our brother has made like remittances, and we can testify to the great good accomplished thereby. In no better way can the kingdom of our Lord be advanced and young Christians be given careful nurture. Such deeds are worthy the son of that venerable, apostolic man of God, who was one of the original nine that composed the first Mississippi Conference. Though not written for publication, we crave our brother's pardon for giving this letter to the public eye, hoping thereby to provoke other brethren to similar good works:

DEAR BROTHER: Since the war I have been a subscriber to the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocate, and have experimental knowledge of the influence a Christian paper has in keeping the flame of spirituality burning in one's heart. I have read these papers, and I have said, when I neglect my Bible, and I never read them without becoming more or less under spiritual influence. There are many young converts who would and could be helped on their way to God by putting these means of grace into their hands. Enclosed you will find eight drafts for $10, to send your paper to such as you may know to need it.

I hope the amount may be credited to the little account of "treasure in Heaven," I have been trying to lay up. Send where you think the most good can be done, and if at any time you become acquainted with a case, or cases where you think good could be effected, send him $10 more is consumed, and send him $10 more, and you send the paper and I will remit. Yours fraternally,

PETER JAMES.

Unsweetened Dynamite.

We give space to the following exactly as written, without the profanation of an editor's pen. And all for this exercising a little editorial judgment which failed to publish one or two unsought communications:

MR. EDITOR: Sir, in as much as your proceedings have obstructed my highest regards for you and the Advocate towards me in the past, I deem it highly expedient to with profound regret to order the discontinuance of it to me. I therefore hereby avow that if you send to this office thinking that I will pay for it any longer in the future, I assure you that it will be at your own expense. I never had my feelings so much hurt by one man I can not regard you as any part of a Christian nor a gentleman in any sense whatever. At the end of 6 months from to day I will send what is due to date. According to my opinion the money thus in the paper is all you crave and that the souls of men never have been so much in hell when you are in the truth as you are not a fit man for your position you have a highly favored opinion of yourself and no feelings for others I never desire any more to hear your name called. I think really you are not fit for good society, at least you had never undertaken it with me.

The following resolutions were passed by the Meridian District Conference, in session at Waynesboro: Your committee feel that little is needed to be said in praise of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Its editor is one of us, and its liberality as a Christian gentleman and eminent success in his position is known and recognized by all. Yet we feel it only a duty we owe the church to commend his zeal and perseverance in the bold defense he makes of the doctrine and polity of our church and his fearless attack on the evils of the day. This Advocate is not simply an addendum to the pastor's work. It keeps abreast with the advancing host in its march and efforts to conquer the world for Christ. While we feel that much needed work should be accomplished during this centennial year, we doubt if any would prove more effective than to place a copy of the Advocate in every family in the district; therefore, be it Resolved, That the members of the Conference earnestly labor to accomplish this much-needed result before the close of the year.

The Nashville Christian Advocate is every way worthy the high place it occupies as the general organ of the church, and we lament that it is not more extensively circulated in the bounds of the district.

Resolved, That we will use our best efforts to give it a wider circulation in the Meridian district.

The commencement exercises of the Konokusko Male and Female Institute, the Rev. T. A. S. Atkins, principal, have just closed, and in the minds of critics did credit to both teacher and pupil. The Rev. W. B. Murray, of Winona, preached the sermon, and there never was, perhaps, a commencement sermon that gave more universal satisfaction and delight. Indeed, it appears to have been in perfect keeping with the ease and grace of both manner and speech of the scholarly and singularly gifted young liberant.

—Princeton College has conferred the degree of LL. D. on President Arthur.

—The address of Rev. J. A. Ellis, treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension, is Canton, Miss.

—Rev. J. A. Timmerman, of the North Georgia Conference, has been elected president of the Aberdeen Female College.

—The Arkansas Methodist has again changed hands. It has been purchased by Rev. John H. Dye, who has sold a half interest to Dr. A. R. Winfield.

—Dr. Ditzler is debating at Blanco City, Texas, with Elder Sweeney, of the Campbellite Church. All that "spouting" is of little account. Books, pamphlets, tracts and church periodicals, carefully read, are more helpful to right conclusions than listening to arid or sermonous debates.

—Bishop Parker left last week for Texas, after a few days rest at home holding the German District Conference. He has given two years of faithful, constant service to the church in that great empire State. His headquarters have been in the saddle.

—The Rev. B. Carradine, pastor of St. Charles Avenue Church, has been suffering from a painful illness of some days. Constant labor has told upon the strength of our friend, and we hope he will take a vacation of several weeks for a rest on the coast or amid the healthful air of the mountains.

—The Rev. Dr. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, has gone to Europe for a season of rest and recreation. He sailed June 19 on the Baltic, in company with Revs. Robert Newton Young and Sylvester Whitehead, fraternal delegates from the English Wesleyan Conference to the recent General Conference at Philadelphia.

—Bishop Elliot, of Texas, in his annual address to the diocesan council, condemned the manner of raising money for church purposes by rallies, dancing and voting on the question of personal beauty or popularity. Such counsel would be helpful to "the church" in some other latitudes we wot of. Christ is often wounded in the house of such friends, and his cause put to an open shame.

—The Brookhaven District Conference was held last week at Magnolia, Rev. J. A. B. Jones, presiding elder, in the chair, and Prof. R. S. Kicketts, secretary. Bro. Carver, the senior publisher of the Advocate, was in attendance, and speaks in high praise of the courtesies extended him as a representative of the paper and its warm endorsement. The attendance of the lay delegates was very small. The reports from the pastoral charges were generally hopeful, and indicated measurable prosperity throughout the district. We regret that labors elsewhere denied us the pleasure of a day in their courts.

Roll of Mississippi Conference.

The chronological roll of the Mississippi Conference, which I have just used for many years, has been destroyed. I would be very much obliged to each member of the Conference if he would send me on a postal card the date of his admission, or readmission, or transfer into the Conference. My file of the pamphlet minutes of the Conference was also destroyed. If any brother has an extra copy of any of the pamphlet minutes I would be greatly obliged if he would send it to me. I need a consecutive record.

C. O. ANDREWS, Vicksburg, Miss., June 30, 1884.

Excursion Rates to Chicago.

To accommodate those who desire to visit Chicago and attend the Democratic National Convention, the Illinois Central railroad will sell round trip tickets from all local stations to Chicago and return for one unlimited fare for the round trip. Sale of tickets to begin July 5 and continue until July 8, good to return until July 14 inclusive. A fine opportunity to see the great city.

A. H. HANSON, Gen. Pass. Agt.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

—Peace is the evening star of the soul as virtue is its sun; and the two are never far apart.—Coltoun.

The following statistics were reported to the recent International Sunday-school convention, in session at Louisville:

Sunday-schools in the United States, 98,303; teachers, 1,043,718; scholars, 7,068,833—making an aggregate of 8,712,718. The total for Canada, 500,000. Total for Great Britain, 7,000,000. In the whole world: Teachers, 1,883,451; scholars, 15,775,093; total in Sunday-schools, 17,658,524.

Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh.

Several years previous to his death, Bishop Kavanaugh entrusted to Rev. A. H. Redford, D. D., the task of writing his life, and one year ago, while in Florida, renewed the request. The work is just now completed, and the first thousand subscribed for. The work is published in two styles of binding, and sold by subscription only. The advertisement will be found in another column.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1884.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANLEY.
Denver.....	July 25.....	Denver.
Montana.....	Aug. 21.....	Stevensville.
Columbia.....	Sept. 3.....	Dayton.
Pacific.....	Oct. 8.....	Spokane.
Los Angeles.....	Oct. 22.....	San Bernardino.
SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
West Texas.....	Oct. 29.....	San Antonio.
Northwest Texas.....	Nov. 5.....	Waco.
North Texas.....	Nov. 12.....	Sulphur Springs.
East Texas.....	Nov. 19.....	Longview.
German Mission.....	Nov. 27.....	Houston.
Texas.....	Dec. 3.....	Galveston.
THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri.....	Sept. 17.....	St. Louis.
Western.....	Sept. 25.....	St. Joseph.
Southwest Missouri.....	Oct. 1.....	Jefferson City.
North Carolina.....	Nov. 25.....	Wilmington.
Mississippi.....	Dec. 17.....	Yazoo City.
Baltimore.....	March 11.....	Salem.
FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
St. Louis.....	Sept. 21.....	St. Louis.
West Virginia.....	Oct. 8.....	Greenup.
Arkansas.....	Nov. 19.....	Van Buren.
Little Rock.....	Nov. 26.....	Little Rock.
White River.....	Dec. 3.....	Little Rock.
Louisiana.....	Jan. 8.....	Batavia.
FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Indian Mission.....	Sept. 17.....	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee.....	Oct. 8.....	Nashville.
South Alabama.....	Nov. 25.....	Tallahassee.
South Carolina.....	Dec. 17.....	Charleston.
Florida.....	Jan. 8.....	Gainesville.
SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Kentucky.....	Sept. 17.....	St. Sterling.
Louisville.....	Sept. 25.....	Louisville.
North Carolina.....	Nov. 25.....	Savannah.
North Georgia.....	Dec. 3.....	Atlanta.
South Georgia.....	Dec. 17.....	Savannah.
SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Holston.....	Oct. 22.....	Bristol.
Virginia.....	Nov. 12.....	Lynchburg.
North Mississippi.....	Nov. 25.....	Albany.
Memphis.....	Dec. 3.....	Memphis.
Alabama.....	Dec. 17.....	Opelika.

Bishop McTear has charge of the missions in China and Japan.

Bishop Keener has charge of the missions in Mexico.

Bishop Granley has charge of the missions in Brazil.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

See advertisement of a very desirable cottage for rent on Seashore Camp Ground; good location, partly furnished, clean in yard.

A lad who started for Texas to become a cowboy returned in three weeks a perfectly cured boy.

DANNER & CO.—We call the attention of our patrons to the advertisement of Danner & Co. Soliciting correspondence as to prices, etc., of white oak staves, they have facilities for offering highest cash prices. Before making sales of our staves consult with Danner & Co., 54 Canal Street.

Baby said to his mother, who had false teeth: "Mamma, you are very lucky." "Why, my dear?" "Because, if your teeth ache you can pull them out at once."

Rev. Prof. S. F. Gard writes: "Your Life Tonic will cure the chills. Have tried it. Result entirely satisfactory." A great amount of similar testimony at the Depot, 151 Julia St., New Orleans. No family in malarious districts should be without it.

"Will the youngest girl in the room please rise?" said a school superintendent in a rural district. Every female stood up, including the teacher.

For chills, fever, ague, and weakness, Golden's Liquid Beef Tonic. Children's; take no other. Of druggists.

"Can you give me ten cents for a drink?" asked a seedy-looking tramp of a reporter. "Certainly," replied the reporter, "bring in your drink."

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon Sts., New Orleans, has good 2 octave rosewood piano for $250; an elegant new 75 octave rosewood piano for $500; an elegant new piano for $250; or $200 a week or $50 a month, for the first year; another elegant piano, formerly $500 for $300 cash. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at bargainable low prices. The Chickering, Weber, Mathushek, Decker, Hardman, Werlein, Hale, Schomaker, Blüthner and Cables pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Steingard and Ray State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and secures all his customers. Immense stock of sheet music and musical instruments. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange, or part payments for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent to any address.

Inexpensive and effective is the great Anesthetic for sulphur baths, GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP.

HILL'S HAIR DYE, black or brown, fifty cents. Pike's Toothache Drops are in one minute.

Responsible young ladies have their pet cats photographed. We're glad of it. Cats always do appear to better advantage when they're taken from life.

Fond Mother: "Are you better, my dear?" Little Em: "I dunno, is the jelly all gone?" Fond Mother: "Yes, 't is. Little Em: "Well, I'm well enough to get up, then."

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

"My daughter, you ought to have some sense in life," said a father to his sixteen-year-old. "Oh! I am going to, papa!" was the enthusiastic reply. "I have got my head already."

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or no.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resort. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUAX, New York.

CHURCH BELLS. The Bell Catalogue of the LIVERY MANUFACTURING CO. of Cincinnati, O., in addition to descriptions, prices, etc., contains some 1,500 testimonials from purchasers throughout the United States and Canada. The Bells are warranted two years. The prices are comparatively low, and with the reach of every family community. Churches needing Bells and none should be without—would do well to write for the Catalogue.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WANTED.

WHITE OAK STAVES.

Delivered in Mobile or New Orleans.

Write for particulars and prices.

DANNER & CO.,

54 Canalelet street,

NEW ORLEANS.

or MOBILE, ALA.

JERSEYS BY MAIL.

PRICES INCLUDE POSTAGE.

Plain back, all colors, $1.25; best quality, $2.50. Plain back with satin back, $1.25; best quality, $2.50. The above are the wholesale prices at which we sell retail with present stock is disposed of. Send exact list measure and sleeve length. Perfect fit guaranteed or money refunded.

J. N. COLLINS,

Stenton 100 paper, 32 W. 11th St., N. Y.

BARGAINS IN

DRESS GOODS.

48 inch Allabroze (Nun's Veiling) in all fashionable shades, at 50c, reduced from 75c. 62 inch light weight Ladies' Cloth, for tailor-made dresses, in all the new shades of Tan, Fawn, Brown, Grey, etc., etc. per yard, worth 80c, reduced from 1.00. 42 inch all wool black and white checks, 60c per yard—reduced from 75c. 42 inch all wool French Cadouline, in all colors and black, one per yard—formerly 65c. 40 inch a 1/2 black Nun's Veiling and Allabroze, at 25c per yard—reduced from 35c. Clearing out of Rich Embroidered Ribbons in Nun's and Cadouline, in street and evening shades. Full Wrapper Patterns, $1.00—formerly $1.50. Fall Trimmings, $1.25—formerly $1.75. (If samples are desired, enclose stamps.)

LE BOUTILLIER BROTHERS,

Broadway & 14th St., N. Y.

ESTABLISHED 1840.

No More Nauseous Doses.

It has been reserved to our swamps to furnish materials for the greatest cough and teething syrup extant for all throat and lung complaints—the New Life Remedy. Contains no poison, and is delicious. Home references by thousands. Life Tonic, invaluable for children.

House Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

JOY TO THE WORLD.

In Character Notes.

More than 100 Times and 238 Hymns.

A collection of Choice Spiritual Songs and Tunes, for SUNDAY-SCHOOLS and SOCIAL MEETINGS, edited by Prof. T. C. O'KANE, C. C. McCABE and J. R. SWENEY.

Besides the usual number of new pieces, it contains a large number of the Grand Hymns of the Church.

The popular and rapid sale of the "Round Note" edition of this book induces us to publish this "Character Note Edition."

If you want the best and cheapest, give this a trial. Send 25 cents for sample copy.

Only $3 a doz.; $25 a hun'd.

For sale at Book Stores.

CRANSTON & STOWE, Publishers,

Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis.

EDUCATIONAL.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,

NASHVILLE, TENN.

SESSION 1883-84.

Permanent Endowment, $750,000.

THE Academic, Biblical and Law Departments open September 1. The Medical, Dental and Pharmaceutical Departments open October 1. Fees: Academic Department, $45; Biblical, $15; Law, $100; Medical, $200; Dental, $50; Pharmaceutical, $25. The Schools of Science are supplied with the most approved apparatus. The School of Engineering is supplied with a work-shop for practical instruction. Two Post-graduate Fellowships, worth $50 each, and four Graduate Fellowships, worth $30 each, are annually awarded. Board from $12 to $20 per month. The Annual Register is sent on application to John W. Shilpp, Secretary of the Faculty.

L. C. OARLAND, Chancellor.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MANSFIELD, DeSoto Parish, LOUISIANA.

The twenty-ninth Annual Session will begin on the 12th of September, 1883.

Mansfield is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, forty miles south of Shreveport in a beautiful and healthy country, and is easily accessible from almost every portion of Texas and Louisiana. The College is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by the Louisiana Conference. The buildings and grounds are extensive and all the facilities for instruction are provided. The College last year had nearly a hundred boarders and sixty pupils in Music, thirty in Art and one hundred and twenty in all.

Board and tuition, per term: $30.00.

Medical and Pharmaceutical $25.00.

Tuition charges in Art Department and Modern Languages. F. N. GRACE, President.

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, Bienville Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport.

The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness.

For circulars, address R. A. SMITH, Principal.

LINDENWOOD COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES,

ST. CHARLES, MO.

ORGANIZED 1834. CHARTERED 1838.

Fall term, Sept. 10. Course full and thorough. Art and Music specialties. Early application necessary to secure room and board. Tuition, $20.00; for the highest grade in junior class. For catalogue, etc., address Rev. ROBERT EDWIN, D. D., Pres.

- SCIENCE - HILL -

An English and Classical School for Girls.

FOUNDED 1825 BY MRS. TEVIS.

Aims to give its pupils elements of a complete education. Faculty selected from best Eastern Colleges. Terms reasonable. Send for Catalogue. W. T. POYSEN, D. D., Principal, Shelbyville, Ky.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A author from chronic diarrhoea writes: "I tried various preparations, but even the simplest and most recommended failed to give relief. I tried your 'Witch's Food,' and it cured me. I feel better than I have for years. It is the best medicine I have ever used. I will never be without it. I will send you a testimonial. The supply was changed a few times, but I always found a return of interest in the night. I have used it, 4 bottles, 4c. each, $1.25 and $1.75. WOODBURN & Co., Palmer, Mass., on every label.

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Extending Silver Watches at $12.

Stem-winding Silver Watches at $15 to $25.

Stem-winding Gold Watches at $35 and upwards.

All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co.,

116 Canal Street, New Orleans.

603,292

SINGER SEWING MACHINES

Sold in The Year 1882.

BEWARE OF

WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

GREAT REDUCTION

50% in prices of NEEDLES for all Machines, and parts for the Singer Machine. Singer Sewing Machine, No. 1, $10.00; No. 2, $12.00; No. 3, $14.00; No. 4, $16.00; No. 5, $18.00; No. 6, $20.00; No. 7, $22.00; No. 8, $24.00; No. 9, $26.00; No. 10, $28.00; No. 11, $30.00; No. 12, $32.00; No. 13, $34.00; No. 14, $36.00; No. 15, $38.00; No. 16, $40.00; No. 17, $42.00; No. 18, $44.00; No. 19, $46.00; No. 20, $48.00; No. 21, $50.00; No. 22, $52.00; No. 23, $54.00; No. 24, $56.00; No. 25, $58.00; No. 26, $60.00; No. 27, $62.00; No. 28, $64.00; No. 29, $66.00; No. 30, $68.00; No

MISCELLANEOUS.

Publishing House Column,
M. E. Church, South,
NASHVILLE, - - - Tenn.

SUNDAY - SCHOOL
PERIODICALS.

PUBLISHED BY THE Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Sunday-School Magazine, per annum, in advance, per copy, 10c.

Five or more, to one address, per annum, 50c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

Single subscription, in separate wrapper, per
annum, 10c.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!
CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

THE Pillow-Inhaler is one of the most effective medical inventions of the age. It is a triumph of science over disease. It is indispensable in its effects, for it is the conqueror of Catarrh and the whole horrible phalanx of kindred ailments.

ONE THING IT DOES—IT CURES!

It is a Mechanical Pillow that is used the same as one's ordinary bed-pillow. It contains reservoirs for volatile medicine, and the patient inhales the vapors of these in the reservoirs are the most healing and disinfecting that science and experience have been able to formulate for the purpose required. They are entirely safe and the Inhaler is perfectly comfortable; a child can use it.

CATARRH.
BRONCHITIS.
CONSUMPTION.

HERE IS ONE TESTIMONY OUT OF HUNDREDS.

A CURE OF THE WORST TYPE OF CATARRH.

I had Catarrh of the worst kind, and then I was going into Consumption. I was inhaler right along, and gave up all other medicine, and now I am perfectly healthy. It has brought me a cure for me that I feel I cannot do too much to spread the knowledge of it to others, as it may prove a great blessing. The pastor in my church, in Baltimore, knows how I feel, and also many friends in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Send for Circulars and Testimony to
THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., 1520 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

When writing please mention the name of this paper.

THE NATIONAL CABINET LETTER FILE,

PATENTED AND MANUFACTURED BY

O. C. MACKENZIE,

SUCCESSOR TO

Culver, Page, Hoyle & Co.,

186 and 188 Fifth Ave., Chicago. 320 and 322 Broadway, New York.

We are much pleased with your Letter File, and can recommend it as a very useful article.
SEMON RAGIE & CO.,
New York.

We do not hesitate to say it is the best Cabinet Letter File made, and you recommend it to any and all business houses. It is the "Boss."
GEO. H. BARNARD & CO.,
St. Louis.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

House Established in 1842.

Keep at all times a most complete assortment of European and Domestic

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be

Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

Christian Advocate.

IS THE OLD FAITH DYING?—It is often said specifically that men of affairs, as a class, have lost their interest in the churches, and an attempt was lately made to test the truth of this assertion. In an Eastern city, with a population of a little less than forty thousand, the president and cashier of one of the national banks were requested to furnish a list of the fifty strongest business firms in the city, with the name of the head of each firm. The gentlemen furnishing the list had no knowledge whatever of the use that was to be made of it. In classifying the list, the great majority of them communicants. In a Western city of a little more than sixty thousand inhabitants, a similar list of fifty-two names was obtained in the same way; and the analysis showed three whose ecclesiastical standing was unknown; one Jew; and two regular church-goers, of whom thirty-one were communicants.
These lists were both made up by well informed and sagacious business men;
the cities represented by them are not conspicuously religious communities;
and the composition of them gives small color to the notion that the increase of our cities are extraneous from the churches. It is astonishing that such a notion should ever have gained currency. In the face of the palpable fact that so much money is contributed every year for the support of the churches and the prosecution of their charitable and missionary enterprises.—Century.

"DOING A GRAND WORK FOR ME."

In sending for a new supply of Compound Oxygen, a gentleman at Walnut,
Iowa, says:

"I can not get along without it, as it is doing such a grand work for me. I would not believe me to be the same miserable man I was a year ago to see me now, I am getting so fast in flesh. I weigh more now than I ever did in my life before, but I still have pulsus through my lungs when I do any work; but other ways I am feeling as well as ever I did."

Our "Treatise on Compound Oxygen," containing a history of the discovery
and mode of action of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Cattarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address, DR.
STARKY & PALEN, 1109 and 1111 Girard
St., Philadelphia.

WITHOUT GOD.—Earthly things can not satisfy the cravings of an immortal spirit. It came from God, and to him it will return. The body will die, but the spirit can not. Man, being a compound being, and peculiarly constituted, is in a state of dissatisfaction.
Like Noah's dove, he is restless. There is no place for him to rest the soles of his feet in peace. He desires something beyond this present world; for his wealth, honor, and pleasure are vanishing, uncertain and perishable.
In view of the vast future and God's eternal inheritance, being out on the world's restless tide, and seeing there is nothing permanent but heaven, as a wise man he exclaims, "Return unto rest, O, my soul." God alone is that rest, and all who make him their rock of refuge will be prepared for this life and that which is to come.
Reader, are you without God? If so, you are without gospel hope; and if you thus die, being without God, you are without spiritual life, and the absence of this is death eternal. Escape for thy life, before the gathering storm settles down upon your deathless existence.—Texas Methodist.

MISCELLANEOUS.

YALE & BOWLING,
WHOLESALE
DRY GOODS
AND NOTIONS

17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 88 Common Streets,
NEW ORLEANS.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Crockery, China and Glass Ware

General Furnishers for

House, Hotel and Steamboats.

For Country Dealers

Packages Nicely Assorted.

CROCKERY WARE

YELLOW WARE

GLASS WARE

TIN WARE

Sole Agents for

Coal Oil Motors and Garden Pumps.

Wanted Agents in every Town in the State.

Refrigerators, Ice Boxes, Water Coolers, Ice Cream

Freezers, Cheese Safes, Fly Fans.

Ply Traps, Bird Cages.

Parrot and Quail Cages

CHEAPEST CASH HOUSE IN THE CITY.

Send for Catalogue.

ESTABLISHED 1838.

F. BELDEN

WHOLESALE DEALER IN

HATS

TRUNKS,

FLOWERS,

UMBRELLAS,

ETC.

No. 14 MAGAZINE, and
75, 76, 77, and 79 COMMON STREETS,
NEW ORLEANS.

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

88 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

MISCELLANEOUS.

Worth Thinking Of.

What Ayer's Cherry Pectoral does:—

It prevents the growth, to serious illness, of a dangerous class of diseases that begin as more trivial ailments, and are too apt to be neglected as such.
It alleviates even the most desperate coughs of pulmonary diseases, and affords to the patient a rest and the only chance for restoration to health.

It breaks up a cold, and stops a cough more speedily, certainly, and thoroughly than any other medicine.
It soothes inflamed mucous membrane, and gives the patient a rest and the only chance for restoration to health.

How Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Does Such Good.

It expels the mucus from the throat and cleanses the mucous membrane.
It allays inflammation, puts a stop to tickling in the throat and coughing, and enables the patient to rest.
It heals sore throat, reduces the swollen tonsils, and restores natural tone to the affected vocal cords.

It soothes in natural and refreshing slumber, during which Nature regains strength to combat disease.
It clears out and breaks down air cells in the lungs, and helps Nature to repair the waste made by the corrosion of pulmonary disease.
It puts a stop to the enervating drain of Catarrh.

Why Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is so Perfect a Medicine.

Because it is a scientifically ordered compound of great potency, the product of years of study, observation, and experience in the treatment of throat and lung diseases.
Because it is prepared from the purest forms of the drugs employed in it, chemically combined by a process of such

Correspondence with Vunderbilt University advantages in every Department.
ing, Ample Faculty, Music, Art, C
Accessibility. For Catalogue, add
Rev. GEO. W. F. PRICE, D. D., P

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 28.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1458.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

JHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
JAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
JAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Numbers and copies of deceased subscribers half price.

All papers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. F. H. HILL.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D.D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTTE.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D.D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D.D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CANERON.

NO NIGHT AND NO SORROW.

BY GEORGE H. EMERSON.

There are miles of living round the way:
There are clouds which shadow the day;
There are nights darkened and dreary;
There are hearts laden and weary;
There are storms on every track,
And tears we can not keep back;
Grief making the sunset and morn—
But one day these shall be no more.

There are sighs for joys not tasted,
And wallows for loss not wasted;
There are battles fought and won;
And trials for each heart to run;
There are tears for the loved and lost,
And prayers for the tempted and tossed;
There is mourning on every shore—
But one day these shall be no more.

One day, a brighter, better day,
When earthly scenes have passed away;
When, with the angels of ransomed souls,
Freed from all terrestrial ills,
Sorrow and grief shall be no more;
And all about the great white throne
Shall be no weeping, sick or sore;
For each his smile there shall be over,
O'er laden and weary.

There is light for the path so dreary;
There is grace for the heart so weary;
Look to the world's light and be glad;
"I am the Way," he hath taught us;
With his own blood he hath bought us;
Hath prepared a mansion on high,
Where each shall be banished for aye,
O'er laden and weary.

And when the ages e'er us roll,
In that blessed time of the soul;
When the ceaseless and a flow
Of glory shall drink upward so,
Toward the shadowy unknown,
Incense shall rise as a day dawn,
For there'll be no night for sorrow,
No pain, no sickness, nor sorrow.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

Mr. Editor: Our first Sabbath at sea was a dreary one to us all. No public worship was held, for we found it necessary to remain in-doors and keep the Sabbath each one as best he could. The second day out we saw a vessel with mainmast torn away, and this was not very comforting to us, for we did not know how soon we, too, might be brought into difficulties. On the third day the sea was more calm, the sun shone out brightly, and our hearts were greatly cheered. We began to find our way to the deck, and, with all eagerness, we scanned the horizon to see if any land was near; but we could see nothing save the sky and the deep blue sea. During the day we saw many little birds in large flocks following in our wake, and they are called by sailors, "Mother Carle's chickens." Our party was nearly idled up and out and able to take some refreshment after their long fast. We saw many porpoises, and they afforded a great deal of amusement by their peculiar shape and actions. This is the sea-ho. They would leap out of the water two or three feet and seemed to be chasing each other. It was indeed a strange sight to see "land lubbers," as the sailors call us and all others who are not seamen.

The third night out was beautiful, and all except two of our party were able to be out to unite with us in earnest prayer and thanksgiving to God for his kind and gracious care of us. I spent several hours on deck during the evening, and my thoughts went back to my earthly home and loved ones, and then to my heavenly home above. The fifth day at sea was almost a perfect calm, and we scarcely more than crept through the water, while our sails would flap back and forth against the masts. Then the sailors began to think, and say, "We have too many Jonahs aboard." We saw many little branches floating on the water—one of which we secured. It was from the Bahama Islands, and to it was attached many beautiful little shells.

On the seventh day out I began to learn a little Chinese, and the first word, or character, was lieu—heaven. We had many days of calm weather, and on the fifteenth day a squall came up and some of our sails were taken in for the first time. In the evening black and angry-looking clouds rose in the south, with lightning and heavy thunder, and all betokened a storm. The captain walked back and forth on the deck and looked anxiously around, and the men flew about in every direction at his command, and all was excitement. It was all strange to us, and yet we could only look on in silence, for we had never seen a storm at sea. Our port windows, only four inches in diameter, were closed as the angry clouds drew near. Loud peals of thunder rolled incessantly, and our ship began to toss upon the waves, and then our sky-light above was closed. It was the first gloomy evening we had experienced since leaving the shores of our native land, and we scarcely dared ask the captain what he thought of the storm rising. The night was dark, and we went pinning through the foaming waves. The pilot stood all alone at the helm, for he dare not leave his post for a moment. Come life or death, he dare not move. The storm came upon us quickly, and was soon over without any damage. That was our first storm, and resulted in a little scare for the landmen. The next day was a beautiful Sabbath, and all was quiet. The storm had passed and left a dreadful calm. In the morning we had a good experience meeting, and we felt it was good to be there and thus to commune with each other of God's dealing with us. At three P. M. we had a sermon, from Bro. Belton, on John iv, 34. It was a sermon of great spiritual power, and we all felt greatly blessed. We had a calm without and a blessed calm within our souls.

The first two weeks was a time of great blessing to my soul. I felt greatly impressed with the necessity of drawing nearer to God, living near the cross and trusting alone upon the power of the Holy Spirit. The word of God was precious to me, and I began to gain clearer views of the way of holiness than I had ever before experienced, and my soul hungered and thirsted after righteousness. While in New York City I visited Mrs. Palmer's Tuesday afternoon prayer meeting, and my soul was made glad to hear the witness of many of God's people to the cleansing and sanctifying power of the Holy Spirit; and since then that blessed theme has been the joy of my soul and, I trust, will be till I die. In searching the word of God, it seems to me to be the privilege and the duty of every Christian to know and realize from blessed experience the workings of God's Holy Spirit upon the heart to the uttermost.

On the twentieth day at sea, everything being so calm, the captain had a boat lowered, and Bro. Belton, young Mr. Jenkins and myself accompanied him on a row around the vessel. Before leaving the vessel the sea seemed perfectly smooth; but when we got into the little row-boat we went down at times so deep into the trough of the sea as to hide the hull of our vessel entirely from sight. Our good ship in full sail upon the white ocean was a beautiful sight, and we enjoyed the ride. On the twenty-first day we saw a vessel in the distance and prepared letters to be sent home; but, alas! we were disappointed, for at eleven A. M. she disappeared from sight, and our hopes fell.

Our twenty-third day out was a Sabbath. I preached and directed my remarks mostly to the seamen present, who seemed deeply interested. The vessel rocked so much that I could scarcely stand erect without holding on to the pulpit, which was the pulpit, and I felt it was preaching under difficulties. The next day there was a calm, and such a calm! Nothing to attract the attention from morn till night, and the sun's rays were burning hot all day. Two days more and we sped on our way at a good rate. Eighteen three English men-of-war, and coming so near we could speak with them. They asked us if we had seen the English fleet, and then, wishing us a pleasant visit, passed by us homeward bound. That was an exciting occasion and one of pleasure for our little band. How eagerly we leaned over the bulwarks and listened to catch a word from the strangers as they passed by us.

In the evening of the thirty-fifth day out Neptune sent his card aboard. This was on Friday. On Monday old Neptune, with his attendants, came aboard about six P. M. to visit the sailors and passengers and to see who were strangers entering his dominions. It is customary with sailors when crossing the equator to have their sport, and if any of the crew or passengers have not been across, they are required to pay a fine or submit to a process of shaving which old Neptune superintends. He is one of the old sailors dressed in white fur of some kind, and a long white beard of the same, and he, with his attendants, examine the history of every one aboard. If there be a young sailor who has not crossed the line, we be to him if he can not pay a fine! If any of the passengers have not yet entered his dominion, they must pay a fine by giving something—a piece of money, something good to eat or a little wine. (The latter they prefer.) On this occasion old Neptune had his wife with him; also his physician who had his bottle of salt water, and through the cork two needles projected, which were applied to each patient to see if he was able to undergo the process of being shaved. The barber followed the physician with his long tin razor, which was in shape to a reaping-hook, with teeth on one side half an inch in length which served as a comb. In one hand he bore a brush of canvass which was lathered with soap, grease and tar. Neptune had his secretary read out the names of all persons aboard. He and all his attendants were painted, so that none could be recognized. Several boys were aboard as young seamen who had never crossed the line and, as their names were read out, they were laid hold of and blindfolded and roughly seated on a bench in front of a hoghead of salt water. The secretary would then question them as to their names and where they lived, and when they would attempt to answer would thrust the brush of soap, grease and tar into their mouths. They covered their faces with it, and then the barber would go through the process of shaving and scraping the men with his tin razor and combing their hair with the tin comb. After this they were shoved into a barrel of salt water. Some six or seven sailors went through this ordeal. We landmen stood by and witnessed this scene with great astonishment, and we could but pity them; but they seemed to take it in good humor. I believe we all paid a fine rather than make the acquaintance of Neptune in that unpleasant manner.

We were under the equator, and the sun poured upon us his burning rays. The fortieth day out our progress was exceedingly slow and monotonous. The captain became angry because of adverse winds and calms. He swore and blasphemed the name of God because there was no wind. We prayed for him, and we prayed that God would help us in this trying hour. On the night of the forty-first day out we passed within fifteen miles of the Island of St. Paul, but we did not see it. We were creeping through the water. We were all dumb.

Yours in Christian fellowship,
J. W. LANDRY.
SHANGHAI, CHINA, May 20, 1884.

Roll of Mississippi Conference.

The chronological roll of the Mississippi Conference, which I have used for many years, has been destroyed. I would be very much obliged to each member of the Conference if he would send me on a postal card the date of his admission, or readmission, or transfer into the Conference. My file of the pamphlet minutes of the Conference was also destroyed. If any brother has an extra copy of any of the pamphlet minutes I would be greatly obliged if he would send it to me. I need a consecutive record.

O. G. ANDREWS.

VICKSBURG, Miss., June 30, 1884.

"Alonso's" Inquiry—Orders in the Ministry.

Other minds than that of "Alonso" are exercised with regard to the number of orders in the Methodist ministry and the consequent relation of Bishops to the church. Are there not three orders in the Methodist ministry? It is answered, "Our standards recognize only two orders." Then are our standards not inconsistent with themselves and with reason? What constitutes an order in the ministry? Are not the duties and powers of a Bishop as distinct from those of an elder as are the functions of an elder from those of a deacon? Does not a Bishop outrank an elder more decidedly than an elder outranks a deacon? If it be answered, the orders of deacons and elders may be reached by all ministers who comply with certain conditions, it may be replied, so may the order of Bishop. Personal qualifications and votes are the only conditions in the one case as well as the other—the wants of the church limiting the number in each case.

But it is said, "Bishops are not ordained." They are simply elected and consecrated and, therefore, do not constitute a separate order. Yet this position will not bear examination. Those who take it, no doubt, think they state a forcible fact. Let us see. In the first place, if it is the policy of the Methodist Church to consecrate her ministers to office and to ordain them to orders, why does she not consecrate those selected for the office of presiding elder? Do not those who are made Bishops publicly profess to be "truly called to this ministration" just as in the cases of elders who are made deacons or elders? Does God call ministers to the merely elective offices of the church? Let it be further observed that in consecrating Bishops the Methodist Church uses throughout, with very slight verbal variations, the ritual of the Church of England and of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America. Their ordinal speaks of making deacons, ordering elders and of ordaining or consecrating Bishops. ("Consecrate" is their preferred word in this connection.) I confess I was a little surprised when I found that Methodists can not claim priority or proprietorship of any sort in the use of the word "consecrate," as applied to the setting apart of Bishops. They simply borrow that, as they do the whole form of consecration, from the English Church, which has always held the doctrine of a third order; but deny that, in using the word and the form, they confer a third order. Is that generous, self-respectful or courteous? Shall the very words and forms of others be borrowed, and yet the meaning which their authors and conservators attached to them be denied? Are not those who use a form of ordination inconsistent in saying they do not ordain? In using the form for conferring a third order in the ministry, would not any church afford the plainest evidence of holding and conferring a third order? Shall we undertake to define the phraseology and ritual of a church much older than our own? If our views of the relations of church officers are different from theirs, is language so scarce or thought so meager with us that we can not frame a ritual of our own? Or is legislative genius so lacking among Methodists that they must adopt the offices and form of another church, while they deny the significance which their authors gave them? To be candid, is not our practice in this particular at war with our theory? Do we not appear to the impartial observer of our polity and practice to claim the highest authority for presbyterial ordination only because John Wesley, a presbyter, gave us orders, while in the consecration, the duty, the dignity, the authority and the prerogatives of our Bishops we claim the biggest things for them and never allow a presbyter to ordain while a Bishop lives?

It has been shown that the use of the word "consecrate" instead of "ordain," as implying something different, is delusive. They mean in this connection the same thing. If anyone doubts, let him turn to the Discipline, and read, "We present unto you this holy man to be ordained a Bishop." If anyone doubts that the Methodist Church holds the doctrine of a third order in the ministry, let him read, on the page opposite to that from which the last quotation is taken, these words: "Almighty God, giver of all good things, who, by thy Holy Spirit, hast appointed divers orders of ministers in thy church, mercifully behold this thy servant now called to the work and ministry of a Bishop."

If we use other people's bottles, we are apt to get some of their wine. Each of two neighbors spelt his name "S-m-i-t-h," but one of them persistently denied that his name was Smith, insisting that the "i" was long, and that his name was "Smith." That the latter was the son of the former added to the unaccountableness of the distinction. If anyone still doubts that Methodists hold to three orders in the ministry, let him undertake to show what changes in the ritual and usages of the church would be necessary to conform them to that doctrine. If we have a third order, why not acknowledge it and rejoice in it?

W. L. C. JR.

Texas Letter.

THE OUTLOOK.

Stirring times are these in which we live; but not more stirring than hopeful, for that sentiment of Carlyle always seemed to me true and universal—that an under-current of sincerity has always characterized the attitude of humanity as a whole. At bottom there is more than a mere casual or prejudiced view can take in. The beginnings of political destiny are with us, and not without prophetic presaging of a satisfactory outcome. This is far from being an era of good feeling in any ideal sense; but the momentum of enlarged thought and progress has touched all our interests and is rapidly gathering into national sentiment. The secret of all this is growing confidence, without which there can be no certain prosperity or advancement. Those words of St. Paul, "Honor all men," have in them a profound and far-reaching significance. But it may be answered that where the conditions are favorable confidence will result necessarily. This is by no means certain. Nay; experience often shows a contrary result. Political prejudices and selfish aims sometimes unfit us for taking large and patriotic views of public measures, social methods and their advocates. After times or alien judgments can see what the actors in great political dramas are unable to discern. England to-day enjoys the most beneficent, large-minded and humanitarian administrations its history has every known, and yet that government maintains a precarious existence only by the sufferance of those who have temporarily suspended their private judgments with full confidence in the greatest living Englishman. A cotemporary has unheeded, in the following language, a deplorable perversion of our judgment and conscience; yet one, we may hope, is as rapidly diminishing as present conditions will admit. "How is it that we can see a moral blemish in the candidate of the other political party so much easier than in one belonging to our side?"

THE TYRANNY OF MAJORITIES.

The philosophy which proceeds upon the assumption that the judgment of majorities is the embodiment of truth and right is, of all things, the most dangerous, and it is not far to go to discover its fallacy. We need only look at the fate of those great moral and social issues in which are bound up the hopes and blessings of the future, and which are held in abeyance before interests of infinitely less moment. It was a matter of no small importance when a few weeks since the greatest social and moral question of the age—prohibition—was presented to a political convention for its earnest consideration, and it was far from being a trifling matter when the question was recklessly laid aside. But it will be renewed under different conditions. It is not idle assumption to say that we have a right to demand that something be done with this transcendently important matter. Of what significance are taxations, currency, and economies else, as compared with the influences to be set in motion by its settlement?

LETTERS OF JOURNALISM.

Thanks to you, Mr. Editor, for a copy of your address on the above subject. Judging from the policy and utterances of some newspapers, the ethics of the profession are either little understood or grossly ignored. But it is a cheering thought that there is a true and well-defined standard of morals that has been arranged and adapted to the needs and purposes of journalism. It is true that every profession has or should have its ethics. Those of journalism are distinct in proportion to its diversified offices and its relation to every department of human weal. The standard of journalistic honor is being elevated day by day, and nothing, it seems to me, is better calculated to enhance the weight and scope of its obligation than such utterances from one of the craft as are contained in your address. The time is coming when dignified criticism and sober declaration from the newspaper press will prove the mould of public opinion and the matrix of destiny, but when rampant aspersions and pointless libel will recoil with ruinous force upon the heartless tenacity that gives them birth.

LOCAL ITEMS.

There is little new about which to write in Texas Methodist circles, and this is no unfavorable sign. We are moving on in the even tenor of duty and orthodox Christian preaching. Hundreds of conversions are being reported weekly from our fields of labor; but it is the old story of the power of the gospel and the efficiency of Methodism. One item of material prosperity is worthy of note. The church extension movement has already produced visible and gratifying results in the number and character of church buildings now being erected. The last matter is of much consequence—church architecture. The plan of the society—to furnish good, common-sense plans—is an excellent one. It often saves money and quite often edifies taste, and thus preaches the gospel; for if there is any one incontrovertible fact outside of the grace and salvation that came of the gospel, it is this—that religion properly enjoyed cultivates good taste.

Our schools are all closing prosperous sessions with the usual clat of commencement. By the way, there seems to be coming into vogue a more rational idea about commencement sermons than heretofore. We hear now fewer labored and technical discourses, oratorical efforts, and more sound gospel preaching that will be of lasting good to young people in their after life. A good sign none will question!

District Conferences are growing more popular and more useful. The accompanying Sunday-school convention is now an institution. Why should the District Conference be thought an anomaly and a failure? It can be made a success, and our economy would now be incomplete without it.

H. M. DUBOSE.

HUNTSVILLE, TEXAS, JUNE 13, 1884.

From Bastrop, La.

The children's Centenary was held here on the night of June 30, and was an enjoyable and successful occasion. The prayer was by Rev. J. Byron Wise, of the Baptist Church; the reading of the Scriptures by George P. Roberts, Esq.; the speaking and singing by the children; the responsive service conducted by Hon. T. Newton, superintendent, and the twenty minutes' Centenary address by Rev. Robert S. Isbell, of Brokeaux, La. Everything passed off well and something was realized for the children's Centenary fund. The usual collections were all taken up by May 15, and so both the Centenary collections have also been taken. The people have in addition, agreed to build a handsome Centenary church in place of the present structure, and to have it dedicated, if possible, in the fall. The temperance cause is moving steadily onward in our parish, and many of the first ladies and gentlemen of this section are praying and laboring for the overthrow of whisky.

S.

July 8, 1884.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1884.

THE PROMISED LAND TO-MORROW.

BY GEORGE M. HANLEY.

High hopes that burst the stars sublime.

Go down the heavens of freedom.

And true hearts perish in the time.

We hurriedly fled them.

But never all we found and say.

"There's nothing left but sorrow."

We walk the wilderness to-day.

The promised land to-morrow.

Our little of soul are silent now.

There are no flowers blooming.

But life beats in the frozen blood.

And freedom's spring is coming.

And freedom's tide comes up to-day.

Though we may stand in sorrow.

And our good angels, agonized to-day.

Shall find again to-morrow.

Our hearts bleed over the past; our eyes

With smiling futures glitter.

Lo! now the dawn bursts on the skies—

Lean out your souls and listen.

The earth rolls freedom's radiant way.

And ripples with our sorrow.

And 'tis the martyrdom to-day

Gives victory to-morrow.

The weary watching wave by wave,

And yet the tide leaves onward.

We climb like coral grave by grave.

Yet beat a pathway onward.

We're beaten back in many a fray.

And where our vanguard rests to-day

Our rear shall rest to-morrow.

Through all the long, dark night of years

The people's cry ascended.

The earth was wet with blood and tears

Ere their necks suffered ended.

The small host never away.

The host of the living to-day.

But Christ shall rise to-morrow.

Then youth, flame, earnest, still aspire

With energies immortal.

To many a heaven of desire

Your yearning opens a portal.

And though age wears by the way,

And hearts break in the furrow,

We sow the golden grain to-day.

The harvest comes to-morrow.

Columbus District Conference.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT ON THE STATE

OF THE CHURCH.

We find from observation and reports from our ministerial brethren that the spiritual condition of the district is about as good as the average,

but of us would like to see our Zion arise and shine with such effulgence

as to attract all people and bring on such a continual outpouring of the Holy Spirit as to cause every heart within its portals to be glad and rejoice continually because God is with us in the hope of glory. We would like to see every member of our church exhibit a purer and holier influence, as will work good to those who are strangers to grace, and make of us, indeed, a power for good in the land. Methodism, as a branch of the great church of God, has been owned and blessed by him from its beginning. Its work has been accepted in every field. That its preachers have been called of God to this work and anointed by his hands their successes show, and all along these years our members have shown bright examples of true piety, and have died glorious deaths, in hope of the glorious history of the past will serve to keep alive such zeal in the ministry and earnestness in the membership as will cause the glad shout of praise to ring out at every appointment and thrill every soul within our bounds. Brethren say here and there are good people, holy, Christian people, who exemplify the religion they profess, but not all the membership; unfortunately there are instances of members who not only do not live good lives, but are doing wrong to themselves and communities. Oh! what a pity it is that men can get their conscience to live such lives or indulge such habits as will blight their own souls and curse their children and neighbors and all the while hold fellowship in the church of God. Oh! for such a reawakening, such an outpouring of the Holy Ghost as will bring all such back to their first love. How can this glorious result be attained is a question your committee would gladly answer in such a way as to fire every heart in our district and turn every wandering son back to the house of plenty, the Father's arms of love. We know there is nothing wanting in the doctrine of our church, nothing in the polity,

nothing wanting in its social features, nothing wanting in the will of the Father, nothing wanting in the readiness of the Holy Spirit, nothing wanting in the cleansing power of the blood of Christ; no, thanks be to God, the blood has power yet to cleanse every heart and purify every life. To it we look, in it we trust for our own salvation and that of every wayward son and daughter of our church. But how shall we fix their eyes on the cross and bring their minds to accept its attainments, your committee would suggest first more zeal on the part of the ministry, a deeper sense of the burden of their call, a more positive conviction that the word is self I preach not the gospel, but to be satisfied by mere pulpit efforts, but rest upon them every moment of their lives; they stitutions of our church have passed away, or nearly so, but enough are left to work wonders in this land for church class meetings. Why can not our brethren substitute family class meetings, and around these home altars keep alive this flame of sacred love? Why can not the church Conference make a source of social pleasure which will serve to bind our people into a oneness of mind and heart? Brethren of the ministry, think what an engine of power your church has given you in this institution of church Conferences, and use them. The lever is in your hands; hold it with a firm grip and fearless heart. We would have our preachers more impressed with their duty toward the Sunday-school; no excuse here. Here is the nursery for the lambs. Where are the shepherds? Bring milk, the sincere milk of the word—your storehouse is exhaustless—and raise up stalwart Christian characters to tell on the ages as they roll their ceaseless rounds. Such work the ministry can add should do, and to hold up their hands. We suggest that all our laymen be urged to build an altar in their homes and daily draw around it their loved ones. How can a Christian father fail here? How can Christian mothers allow the fire to go out while their tender ones are drawing the inspiration which is to shape their future? Can professing parents feel guiltless when they see their children, raised in prayerless homes, go to the bad? Oh! ye preachers, here is a work for you to do. Preach on this subject, talk about it everywhere until there is an awakening which will reach all our people and cause altar fires to blaze up around every hearthstone in the land. Thus will our Centenary year be glorious to us, and honoring the God who has so wonderfully blessed us in the past and whose promises are not yet exhausted.

N. D. GUERRY, for Committee.

Brandon District Conference.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY-

SCHOOLS.

The committee to whom was referred the Sunday-school cause beg leave to make the following report: That from the several reports made by the pastors we see an increasing interest in the Sunday-school cause, and gladly report the same with profound gratitude to God, our heavenly Father. Yet we have reason to chide ourselves for much neglect. Many communities within the bounds of the district are without

Sunday-schools. This does not bespeak much of zeal or appreciation of religious education and training of our young, whom God hath given us to train for a holy life and a happy eternity. We recommend a special effort on the part of the pastors to stir up the people of those communities on that subject. We greatly rejoice to see an increase of Sunday-schools bearing the name of our own beloved church, while we have reason to believe that a like increase is realized

by our sister churches, in which we rejoice.

We also greatly rejoice to see that our people have not lost their faith in the covenant relation of children to God in baptism, as a large per cent. have their children baptized; indeed, there is an increase of faith in this doctrine; therefore be it

Resolved, That our people should call to memory that their first and solemn obligation to the church of their choice and faith, and that which we bid other Christians God-speed in the glorious

Sunday-school work, yet we feel that the interest and success of our own church—an effort to build up an institution, a union school which, upon the basis of its existence, justly refuses the watchcare and supervision of any of the established churches of the land or their ministers, and that encourages or necessitates the neglect of doctrinal instruction in the Sunday-school, and that an effort should always be made first to organize a Sunday-school under the auspices of some recognized church. That we offer to God our humble thanks for his blessings upon the Sunday-school work for the past year, and earnestly invoke his blessings to be continued in the next.

In conclusion your committee earnestly recommend that the pastors call the attention of their Sunday-school workers to the importance of seeking the conversion of the children in all their Sunday-school labors.

OEO. BANOFROT, for Committee.

Woman's Work.

Mr. Editor: I was requested by our general vice-president, Mrs. C. G. Andrews, to write a short notice of the proceedings of the first quarterly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Missionary Society, of Rodney, Miss., and send it to your paper for publication. We now have 31 members, and since our first regular meeting have collected the sum of $8 50 dues, besides the Centenary offering, which was over four dollars, and a small sum for paying the expenses of delegates. At present there are but two of the members who take the Woman's Missionary Advocate, though several speak of doing so soon.

The majority of the members are very punctual in paying their dues, though many of them are far from rich. They are faithful and true, and their hearts are in the work. But, as women's heads and hands are more accustomed to managing domestic affairs, to work of sewing on ruffles and laces, tying ribbons, etc., than making or administering the laws of societies, I hope that any little errors or mistakes which we may make will be looked upon with an indulgent eye. With many good wishes for the success and prosperity of the ADVOCATE, I remain,

Respectfully,

MAGGIE HARPER, Cor. Sec.

RODNEY, Mississippi.

Letter from Texas.

Mr. Editor: I suppose that you are not troubled very often with letters from the preachers of the Texas Conference; therefore I will trouble you with one.

So far this has been a remarkable year for rains. I have never known as much water to fall in the same length of time as I have this year. The old Texans say this is a country of extremes, "and I partly believe it." For when it is wet, it is extremely wet; when it is dry, it is extremely dry; when it is cold, it is extremely cold, and when it is warm, it is extremely warm. But, with all these extremes, this is a great country. The heavy and continued rains have greatly injured the crops, and the crops are at least four weeks late. On the rivers the farmers have suffered heavy losses, and the waters are not entirely off the farms at this time; so the farmers on the rivers are compelled to give up part of their crops, and in many places on the highlands they have had to abandon them to the weeds and grass. I have never known so many men to have the blues; but with the gloomy prospect there will be a sufficiency made to supply the needs of the people.

Our Conference is making some advance. Parsonages and churches are being built and old churches are being repaired. The preachers are trying to establish the principles of Methodism in the minds and hearts of their people. It is believed that the general state of the church is improving. We are not having as many conversions as some Conferences, but we have some difficulties with which to contend that those Conferences do not have where they have had so many conversions; but we are gratified to say that some of our charges have been blessed with good revivals.

A few words about our female college at Chappell Hill, and also Soule College, at the same place. Both of these schools closed the third week in June. Soule College has been presided over by Dr. Pitts; but with this term he resigned. The Board of Trustees are looking out for a president. So far as we could learn, there is a good future for this school. Chappell Hill is surrounded by a good country, and it is located on the western branch of the Houston and Texas Central railroad. It is accessible from all parts of the State, and is directly connected with the States east of Texas. The Chappell Hill Female College is presided over by Rev. E. W. Tarrant. This is his first term at the head of this college and his first year in Texas. He transferred last fall from the North Mississippi Conference to take charge of this college. He has won the confidence of his brethren and friends, both as a Christian minister and an educator. We were gratified to learn that its patronage is increasing and to find such good evidence that it deserves its increasing popularity. Rev. E. W. Tarrant is a born teacher, and magnifies his office as a Christian educator. The exercises showed that the president and his excellent collaborators had spared no pains nor labor in the work which has been committed to them. Among the quiet and pleasant surroundings of Chappell Hill, with the supervision of such a president and teachers at this college, the bodies, brains and morals of the young ladies are well guarded. So you can say to the readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE that we have a first-class female college in the Texas Conference.

J. B. ADAIR.

GIBBING, Texas.

Sweet Home.

How sweet the word home, where heart beats in unison with heart, where sympathy responds to every call. In unity there is strength, harmony and prosperity. Unity is a strong defense, and home can not be home without it. Love and affection must predominate to constitute and define the word home.

In cultivating the finer feelings many virtues are drawn out that otherwise would lie dormant. They grow and expand in beauty and strength day by day. Home is to the soul what the beautiful flowers are to the sight or the sweet strains of music are to the ear. It is a place of rest, a reunion of family ties, a retreat from the world, where the most implicit trust and confidence are reposed. Fond memory may quietly sleep and slumber, but ever and anon it will awaken and cling and cluster around the home of long ago. It may be of the beautiful flowers sparkling with dewdrops, bathed in the morning sun. It may be of some sweet and sad strain of music by the hand of one whose touch was as soft and gentle as the Eolian harp. It may be of some prayer or kind admonition of a father. And it may be of the time when bowed with folded hands at a mother's knee, listening to the words, "Our Father." Or it may be the last words of a mother. Those precious memories that quietly sleep in the heart's closet will awaken, filling the soul with love and reverence. Home; there is no place like it. See the bright smile, the cheerful greeting, and hear the merry peals of laughter as they re-echo with the words inscribed in letters of gold—this is home. Their little bark sails on over the rough sea of life, guided by affection and controlled by love. At last the tie is severed, the chain is broken, and one by one they are transplanted to their beautiful home beyond the skies. There is no sorrow there, no tears, no pain, no night and no separation. It is a reunion of loved ones to live throughout time and eternity in that beautiful land beyond the stars. A home in heaven, how sweet the words. ETTA. EXTENSIVE, Mississippi.

Our Conference Brotherhood.

Mr. Editor: Already official notice has been given by the secretary, Rev. Inman W. Cooper, Benton, Miss., of the death of Bro. G. M. Gilmore, who was a member of our brotherhood. The secretary writes me that up to date he has received $155, and that if all members pay their mortuary dues the total will be $400. We not only suggest but urge every member to forward dues promptly to Bro. Cooper at Benton, Miss. Such as fall to pay at the expiration of four months will have forfeited their membership. Let every member pay as early as practicable. For the information of those who have been making inquiries in reference to the brotherhood I would say that we organized at Natchez last winter by the election of the following officers: Rev. W. D. Dominick, president; Rev. T. S. West, vice-president; Rev. Inman W. Cooper, secretary; Rev. George Bancroft, treasurer. Since our organization a constitution has been adopted and the organization has been chartered as "The Brotherhood of Traveling Preachers of the Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." All brethren who have given their names and paid the initiation fee have been enrolled as members. Now, brethren, forward promptly that Sister Gilmore may have the money. At our next annual meeting such changes and amendments can be made as the majority may think best.

SHEPHERD, Miss., June 25, 1884.

From the Work.

CAYUGA, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I have seen no report from this part of God's vineyard, so I write you a few lines relative to what we are doing in the way of church improvement and other matters. We have expended on our house of worship this year about one hundred and sixty dollars. Have had it well painted inside and out, and the box, misnamed pulpit, has been removed, and in its place have had erected a neat reading stand and lamp-stands on each side. In addition to this we have placed in the church a nice awning lamp just over the pulpit, thus rendering it more pleasant in every way for the minister. We are now trying to devise some means to procure a set of pulpit furniture for our church, and hope by the time our presiding elder makes his fourth round to have it in a neat, orderly condition. The Methodist Church at this point has been struggling for several years for existence, being hardly considered as ten in the enumeration of the societies holding meetings here, but, by the grace of God, we are getting our heads above water, and if God will continue to bless us and our members, take a more and more increased interest in the affairs of the church, this Centennial year will witness the Methodist Church outstrip every other church in our midst, both as regards membership and spirituality, and also in their house of worship. We intend having ready by Conference for our pastor, whoever he may be, a neat and comfortable parsonage. I have just received notice from the "mill man" that he would ship the lumber for same this week, but as business of every kind is so dull at this time I hardly deem it probable that much more than getting the lumber on the ground will be done before October. Our presiding elder has held two Quarterly Conferences on this circuit. Collections so far exceptionally good, and the prospect, on the whole, very encouraging.

J. D. N'KIE.

JUNE 25, 1884.

Marriages.

HAWKINS-WHITE.—At the residence of the bride, June 24, 1884, by Rev. Thomas J. Upton, Mr. C. D. Hawkins and Mrs. Minnie White, both of New Iberia, La.

WEST-WHITNEY.—At the Methodist Church, in Fayette, Miss., on the evening of June 18, 1884, by Rev. J. P. Drake, Mr. Howell F. West to Miss Emma B. Whitney, all of Fayette, Miss.

WARD-LAWRENCE.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Rapides parish, La., May 29, 1884, by Rev. J. M. Beard, Mr. C. W. Ward to Miss Katie Lawrence.

Obituaries.

IRVIN.—It is with a sad heart that we chronicle the death of our much-loved and trusted friend, Mrs. LEMENDA M. IRVIN, who, by the will of an all-wise Father, has been called to a more beautiful land than ours.

Mrs. Irvin was born at Edwards, Miss., March 12, 1838, and died, at the same place, May 9, 1884, at the residence of her eldest sister, Mrs. M. T. Osborn. She was married to Dr. C. C. Radliff at Edwards, in 1858, who died about four years afterward. She next married Dr. W. D. Stovall, of Vinson, Miss., with whom she lived happily six years, when he, too, was summoned to join the band in the land beyond. In

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY JULY 10, 1884.

TAKE IT TO GOD.

Has thou a care within thy heart
That chafes from thine eyelids sleep?
To thy Redeemer take thy care,
And change anxiety to prayer.

Has thou a hope within thy heart
Wouldst thou feel it almost dead to part?
Entrust thy God that hope to crown,
Or give thee strength to lay it down.

Wilt thou the care that breaks thy rest,
Wilt thou the wish that swells thy breast,
Spread before God that wish, that prayer,
And change anxiety to prayer.

Christian Activity, the Demand of the Times.

BY REV. J. H. WALKER, D. D.

"The great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who have blessed us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."—Titus II, 11.

The gift. The most wonderful fact of all the wonderful facts Revelation makes known to us is the great self-gift of Christ. It is a gift without precedent or parallel. Peradventure for a good man some would even die. Some have died for country, some for humanity and some for friendship; but God commended his love toward us while we were sinners and enemies, Christ died for us.

The purpose of this gift was: First, to redeem us from all iniquity. "We, as a race, were utterly helpless. We could not atone, could not redeem, could not save ourselves. Jesus sought us wandering from the fold of God, and to rescue us from danger interposed his precious blood. But this great redemptive and recovering gift contemplates even more than deliverance from the guilt of sin; it means and seeks our sanctification also—"to purify" unto Christ and for Christ "a peculiar people." The purchased gift of the Holy Spirit renews us in the spirit of our minds and makes us new creatures in Christ Jesus. But the text teaches us that all these are but great means looking to a great end—to make "a peculiar people." The distinguishing peculiarity of Christ-redeemed and purified people is this—"zeal for good works."

Zeal, we all know, is by no means confined to the pure and those careful to maintain good works. Satan and his hosts are zealous; but their zeal is for evil. Satan goes about seeking whom he may devour. He is the accuser of the brethren. We see him slandering Job; we see him tempting in all ages; like the greedy birds of the air following the sower through the fields to devour the precious seeds of life. Among sinful men we see wonderful and persistent zeal in all the walks in which they pursue the various passions of life. Is it ambition for place and name? See, from the days of Nimrod to Napoleon, how the whole race of power lovers have put forth the most active, as well as the most persistent and stupendous, exertions to realize their aims. By night and day, through all weather, all perils, and often against tremendous odds, they have labored unceasingly toward their selfish bona fides. Is it a covetous greed of gain? See how the sons of avarice in all times and lands have toiled for gold. Under the burning line, in the frozen north, in malarious swamps, on snowy mountains, on hostile shores, in deep mines and on perilous seas; in youth, in mature manhood and in age oxen—unflinching, unceasing. Or is it the search for pleasure? See how sinful men, who are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, rush, with tireless activity, into the thousand paths of sinful and selfish indulgence. That distant journeyers over continents, seas and mountains! What sleepless nights! What wearisome labors and exhausting exertions!

We find men equally zealous for pleasures. See the libraries of books which have been written to propagate and maintain opinions. What millions of treasure expended! What flaming outbursts of passion! What bloody and wasting wars and what cruel persecutions for opinions! What zeal has often been put forth for mere forms and ordinances, saying, "Ye can not be saved unless you observe our forms and follow us! So from the earliest times down to the latest ritualist."

But the zeal of Christ-redeemed and purified people is for "good works"—such as have for their aim, "Glory to God in the highest, peace and good will to men." This zeal for good works has always been a conspicuous trait in truly saintly men. Moses for forty years, laboring only to honor God and bless his countrymen; Paul, the Apostle to the Gentiles, going from house to house, day and night, with tears in his eyes, and from country to country, as though God did beseech him, he persuaded and urged them to become reconciled to God, and ceased not to work until he ceased to live. Look at Luther. Behold Wesley and Whitefield for so many toilsome years traveling, preaching all over the British Islands. See Howard flying like an angel of mercy over and around Europe on a circumnavigation of charity. Consider Coke traversing England to raise money for missions, eight times crossing the stormy Atlantic in slow-sailing ships, and at last going down into his coral bed in the Indian Ocean. Look on the saintly Astbury, whom the love of Christ constrained, a devoted soldier of the cross, year after year to tread the wilderness from the North to the gulf, and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, crying out with unwearying voice, "Behold the Lamb!" These were representative men; but a countless host in narrower and humbler fields, according to ability and opportunity, have served God in their generation. Zeal for good works, then, has been the shining characteristic of God's people in all the ages of the church.

Christian activity is the peculiar demand of our times. What, it may be asked, is there in the conditions of our times making a special demand for Christian activity? The first answer we find is this: The worldly spirit of our times works fast. See, for example, the large class of writers, how diligently and how rapidly they pour forth books—many of them against "the truth as it is in Jesus." The attack seems unceasing, untrifling and endlessly various. These attacks must be met and repelled with equal ability and activity. We must circulate through books, periodicals and papers a conservative literature. Our students and thinkers must write and triumphantly set forth and vindicate the truth.

We see again the spirit of the world manifesting itself with great activity in all our towns and villages in building in advance of the church its various haunts of crime, drinking shops kept open all the time—three hundred and sixty-five days and nights in the year. Gambling and dance houses rise in our towns more rapidly than churches. Then see the persistent zeal with which these establishments are conducted. We might say these establishments hold protracted meetings, extending through the entire year, rarely closing before the midnight hour. At this the world expresses no surprise; but what would not the world say if the church was equally active and zealous. Doubtless it would provoke from the sensual and covetous much unkind criticism; but it would also compel them to admit that Christ's people are tremendously in earnest. These haunts of dissipation manufacture drunkards, paupers, gamblers, disease, crime and a sad assemblage of widowhood and orphanage. Do not such facts loudly call the church to come forth to "the help of the Lord against the mighty?" Can we afford to stand all the day idle? Dare we bury our Lord's money in a napkin or hide our lights under a bushel?

Again, the hurry of our times in travel, in various intercourses, in rapid interchange of ideas, and in the demand for the services of young men, all tend to the rapid development of character, to develop it with a pre-maturity unknown to slower and more cautious times. If the church does not hasten to put the stamp of Christ upon the characters of the young, it is certain Satan will label them for death and hell. If the church does not put forth a holy activity to direct, and lead the footsteps of the young, Satan will surely entice them into the broad and downward way. The young who are not taught to pray will soon, by example, be taught to swear. If not soon enlisted as soldiers of the cross, they will be mustered under the black banner of Satan and sin. In this work, as important as the salvation of immortal souls can make it, there is no time to lose, now is the time to work. The day of salvation to the young is the church girl herself for the holy task, and hasten to save the young while it is called to-day.

Another feature of our times demanding zeal is that the providence of God has opened up and developed avenues of usefulness and opportunity for sanctified activities unknown to former times. Artist can not work without tools; Christians can not work without opportunities, nor with the best success without suitable instrumentalities, but it is a matter of pious felicitation that opportunities are greater and facilities better than in any previous age. Now we hold it as an axiom, that the measure of our capacity and of our opportunity is the exact measure of our duty. As to knowledge, we know more of nature, and more of man, than any generation. Universal travel, printing, and the general diffusion of knowledge rolls the world in all its aspects, needs and possibilities, like a grand panorama picture under our eyes. Truth and benevolence are now organized for the great conflict with error and selfishness as never before. The Bible is translated into hundreds of languages; the great Bible societies are sending forth the Scriptures of the printed page, like leaves from the tree of life for the healing of the nations. Translations are annually making, and each new year opens some island or nation to the ingress of the word of God. This grand opportunity, unknown to the olden times, indeed to quite recent times, invites us to be up and doing until Bible-light, like sunlight, shall shine upon every land, and all the earth rejoice because its light has come and the glory of the Lord has risen upon it. Every considerable branch of the church has its domestic and foreign missionary organizations to send the gospel to all. Here is another wide and open door for prayer, gifts and good works.

The Sabbath-school has undertaken to obey the Saviour's broad command to "feed" with the bread of life the millions of the "lamb" and gather them into the fold of God. Now here is an opportunity for every man who can give a dollar, sing a song or teach a lesson. Too many of our mature members of the church are too neutral, too much at ease in Zion in this important work. Do something, look up, children, teach in the Sabbath-school; or, at least, often look in on its gathered companies and by your presence say, Amen.

In this favored period we occupy the position of generals-in-chief, we stand on a great height, and with our glasses can sweep the field. Our travel, our mail facilities and our telegraphs, like couriers and aid-de-camps, bring us intelligence from the lines and outposts. Our unparalleled advantages impose great obligations, and demand corresponding activity.

There is another reason for religious and spiritual activity growing out of the spirit of the present time that appeals with special urgency to us as men striving to make sure work for eternal life. It has been well said by a wise observer that "he must be something more, or less than men who will not burn in the general blaze." Ours is eminently a commercial age, the world is busy buying and selling. This spirit of enterprise and worldliness, this general rush after material good with which the very air is impregnated must operate a powerful influence upon us. Perhaps the current of the world is stronger in this direction than ever before, and demands a mightier and more diligent effort to escape its indurative than Christians men were ever before called on to make. When the eyes of the prosperous thousands around us are fast set upon the glittering prizes of earth, Oh! how much faith it requires to turn away from the temporal things which are seen to the eternal things which are not seen by the light of reasons glimmering ray, and only seen by those who believe in God and walk by faith! How much watchfulness, how much prayer, and how much holy zeal our circumstances demand! In the midst of these glittering attractions and material activities our greatest, almost our only refuge, will be found in zeal for good works. Let us enter heartily and actively into all the open doors to well-doing we can, and work with a will for God. Let us be too busy serving God to have any time or zeal left for the sinful and the wrong. But zeal for good works will not only safely occupy our time and thoughts, but will spiritualize our affections and raise us above the alluring spirit of the world, and help to kindle our aspirations after holiness and heaven. Thus shall we be able to walk through the world's fiery furnace without so much as the smell of fire upon our garments.

The encouragement to work is all that we can reasonably ask. Great and precious promises are made to all who "ask"—they shall receive. The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much, for God has never said seek ye my face in vain, nor turned one empty away. The work of sowing and teaching has the promise it shall prosper, if we sow to the spirit we shall reap of the spirit life everlasting.

The results which have followed faithful labor have been great, blessed, and enduring. We must remember when Christianity began its great task of converting the world to the religion of the cross, that the earth, with the small exception of the Roman province of India and the scattered Jews, was wholly given to idolatry. That the great majority of the Jews, even from their mistaken conception of the Messiah's kingdom, were the bitter enemies of the gospel. That the governments, the philosophers, the priesthood and the people of all the nations, from various causes, united to oppose the spread of the gospel. That no means were left untried to hinder its success and to break it utterly down and crush it forever. But see the outcome of the conflict, heathen idolatry has been banished from all Europe and America. From the West Indies, from Australia, Van Diemens Land, New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, Madagascar and Greenland. And see further that missionary stations have been planted and are in successful operation all around the coast and in the interior of Africa. In Persia, Burmah, India, China and Japan, and the churches in the great nations who wield the political and commercial power of the world, are the leaders in the movement which marches to the conquest of the world to Christ. The general survey is full of encouragement, and so are many special examples. Look at the Sunday-school, it has in a century spread all over the world, and, perhaps, fully eight millions of English-speaking children are thus learning the way to Christ and heaven. See what the Methodist Church has wrought in North America in one hundred years. She has increased from fifteen thousand to more than four millions, and instructs and influences twenty millions in our federal Union. Look at the blessing upon the zeal and love of godly families in training households for Christ.

Let us consider the blessed results that would flow from a general realization of Christ's redemptive purpose; millions on millions of good men, zealous of good works. Think of a single church thus alive! An altar of prayer in every house. Every child old enough to be there at Sabbath-school. The prayer meeting not a dreary solitude, but thronged, prayerful and praiseful. The holy Sabbath a delight. The house of God crowded with a zealous host. All joining in the service of song and sending praise in ascending flames to heaven. The air of the holy place all aglow with the ardors of devotion.

For Visiting Committee.

FAVETTE, MISS., June 15, 1884.

—Among the one hundred and fifty Roman Catholics who have united with the Presbyterian Church in Valparaiso, South America, one-third have said that the turning-point in their religious experience took place while witnessing the celebration of the Lord's Supper. Is not the promise fulfilled, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me?"

—The women of the Presbyterian Church keep at their work steadily and increase their gifts. The receipts for foreign missions from the various boards and societies of the Presbyterian Church amounted to $29,751 7/8. Since these auxiliary societies of the women came into existence during the past fourteen years they have contributed $1,707,184 70.

—The Lutheran Church, known as the "Old Dutch Church," situated about two miles from Madison Court House, Va., has been thoroughly renovated, and recently rededicated. The building is 144 years old.

vation. The preacher encouraged, and his arrows taking fire in their flight as they sped from his bow. Saints made happy in God. Sinners made to the heart, melted down and brought to Jesus. Penitents pardoned, regenerated and filled with holy joy, and all the consecrated place glowing with the manifested presence of God.

Oh, how many, and how great the motives that should prompt us to be zealous of good works. Let us realize the Redeemer's gracious purpose and be "a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

Port Gibson Female College.

MR. EDITOR: It was my good fortune to attend the latter part of the closing exercises of Port Gibson Female College, going up on our new, smooth-running Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad, Monday morning, the sixteenth instant, I was in time to hear the proceedings of the Board of Trustees. It appeared that the session just closed had been one of solid success. The resident members warmly testified to the careful and thorough training of the pupils committed to President Bradford's care. The boarding department was worked to the satisfaction of the patrons and, I think, of the girls themselves, who seemed warmly attracted to the lady manager of this important arm of the institution. We were much gratified to learn that the college is now more than paying its current expenses, and to see that improvements to the fencing, etc., are being made. Grounds so capable of being made superbly beautiful ought to have the benediction of some liberal-hearted Methodist. Here is a place most suitable to erect a graceful "monument of the signal mercies" of our God to Methodism, such as posterity may rejoice in. A whole square on the apex of a gently sloping ridge, higher than all its fellows, gives special advantage in drainage and room for exercises, as also an elevating view of a classically beautiful country town, whose citizens take special pleasure in adorning their promises, and preventing that dissipation so distressingly common in our country. The surroundings in social, moral and religious influence here are exceptionally good. Every incentive to a right progress is afforded. Its health record is remarkable. Among the hundreds of young ladies boarding here through a long series of years, not one death has occurred in the college.

The exhibition of the younger classes on Friday evening was highly recommended by good judges who attended. The commencement sermon, by Dr. C. K. Marshall, was reported as his best style—admirably suited to the occasion. Monday night a fine audience was delighted with a series of recitations in prose and poetry, both grave and gay, interspersed with good music. The articulation of the girls was noticeably distinct, showing thorough training. The slight fault of dwelling on last syllables is, perhaps, a virtue, as we feel usually in an opposite direction. Mingling with Southern society will soon tone down any extra preciseness in this particular.

Tuesday morning we had three choice and chaste original essays from the juniors. One graduate to the degree M. E. L., Miss Addie Gordon read a beautiful valedictory that would have done credit to any female college. Evincing classical culture, it was also so replete with common sense and womanly feeling that many eyes were moistened, and hearts sent up fervent petitions that the bark just launched might have a peaceful voyage and blissful anchorage. The well-digested and forceful address of Dr. C. G. Andrews on "Woman's Realm—the beautiful," the polished and feelingly eloquent address of President Bradford, and the racy, stirring appeal of Dr. Marshall closed the morning feast of reason.

At night we had a musical treat in many well-rendered vocal and instrumental solos, duettes and choruses, and a calisthenic drill. This department of the college showed the same careful culture as the others had done. Not a single failure in the whole round of literary and musical exercises. The general verdict was "well done." The doxology and benediction suitably closed these delightful days.

In conclusion, let me say that to no other college, North or South, would I rather commit the training of our daughters. The attendance during the last session was larger than at any time since the war. It is now thoroughly accessible, with all needful advantages. Let it have the patronage it richly merits.

J. P. DRAKE.

For Visiting Committee.

FAVETTE, MISS., June 15, 1884.

—Among the one hundred and fifty Roman Catholics who have united with the Presbyterian Church in Valparaiso, South America, one-third have said that the turning-point in their religious experience took place while witnessing the celebration of the Lord's Supper. Is not the promise fulfilled, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me?"

—The women of the Presbyterian Church keep at their work steadily and increase their gifts. The receipts for foreign missions from the various boards and societies of the Presbyterian Church amounted to $29,751 7/8. Since these auxiliary societies of the women came into existence during the past fourteen years they have contributed $1,707,184 70.

—The Lutheran Church, known as the "Old Dutch Church," situated about two miles from Madison Court House, Va., has been thoroughly renovated, and recently rededicated. The building is 144 years old.

Our Young People.

THE BOY MAKES THE MAN.

The kind of a boy often shows on the man.
For boys are the stuff men are made of.
The boy who will do all the evil he can Makes the man we may well be afraid of.
The boy who delights to learn all that is good,
And does it as far as he learns it,
Will make such a man as gains honor of God
And blessing of man as he earns it.
Then what kind of man are you going to be.
A blessing or curse to your fellow?
The day is approaching when many will see,
Not can you not even now tell us?

MR. EDITOR: Papa says he wishes me to write a letter to you and tell you something about Robeline. He says I am a good little girl, and try to do everything he tells me; so I reckon I must try and write you a letter. He says this letter will go close to "Botany Bay," and will run some risk in getting drowned. I am studying geography; but I do not know where this bay is. This town is a growing town, situated seventy-three miles below Shreveport, on the Texas and Pacific railroad. It has 500 inhabitants, but no church. All the preaching is done in the school-house, where papa and mamma teach nearly seventy pupils. Bro. Chappin, our minister, preached one Sunday, last month, and told the people that the way to get rich was to pay their dues to the Lord. At night he took up a subscription to build a Methodist Church; $573 75 was subscribed. A Building Committee was selected, and we are glad that we are going to have a church soon. I gave all I had—which was twenty-five cents. A little over a year ago we moved here. A Sabbath-school was organized and papa was elected superintendent, and he has been carrying it on ever since. They call it a union school, but we use our literature published at Nashville.

On June 1 several ladies met at our house and organized a woman's missionary society. Bro. Chappin made a speech and, among other things, he stated that a nickel given for this purpose was like bread cast upon the waters that would return in due season but-tered. Now, you never knew anyone who loves butter more than mamma, and when she saw this prospect of having her supply of butter increased at so little cost, she at once became a strong advocate for missions, and she will go as a delegate to the Woman's Missionary Convention, to be held at Mansfield, La.

You must make due allowances for errors, as I have not been studying grammar long. I say my prayers, and I am going to ask God to bless you and your good paper. Papa says it is the best religious paper he ever read. Your little friend,

ZENA FREEMAN.

MR. EDITOR: As all the children are having a word in your good paper, please allow me a chance just once. We are very much interested in missionary and church affairs this centennial year. Our good superintendent, Mr. George Galloway, gives us words of admonition and encouragement from Sabbath to Sabbath, and it would indeed be a pity if we did not turn our thoughts away from the things of this world. We call our society the "Wide Awake Missionary Society." We have twenty-six members. We allow each one to make his or her own assessment; but the most of us pay two and a half cents a month, while some pay as much as five cents. They have conferred on me the treasurer's office, and last month we paid over to our preacher, Mr. Caldwell, $2 75. I must say something about myself. I am an orphan, and I live with my aunts and uncle. I am going to school now. My teacher says I have lots of mischief in my composition which will bubble over on almost every occasion. With love to the little cousins. Will some of them write to

ORALIE THOMPSON.

MR. EDITOR: I am very much interested in reading your good paper. My adopted mother takes it, and we all read it with delight. We hear from our distant friends through its columns. How sad we all felt when we heard of Bro. Gilmore's death! How much we sympathize with Sister Gilmore and her children! They were with us two years at China Grove. We loved them dearly, and yet they are fresh in our memories though absent. Bro. Gilmore was our pastor when my dear adopted papa went to heaven. May we not feel assured they are happy together in the presence of our dear Saviour? I hope we will meet them there where death enters not and parting is not known! I will answer Pippie J. Lewis' question. It is found in 11 Kings xviii, 4. Hezekiah broke the brazen serpent in pieces, "for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it." I will ask the cousin's question: Who increased the widow's oil, and what were the circumstances?

MATTIE YARBOROUGH.

CHINA GROVE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Mamma has been taking your paper ever since I can remember. I love to read the letters from the little folks. As I have not seen any letters from this part of the country, I thought I would write one. We have no Sunday-school now at our church, but expect to organize one soon. My uncle, Mr. A. Nason, is to be our superintendent. We have preaching once a month. Bro. J. S. Parker is our preacher. I will ask a question: Where is the word "sprinkle" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

KATIE C. JONES.

PIKE GROVE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Will you kindly permit me to join the little folks circle. I am quite a little boy and will write quite a little letter. My old grandma Davis, who is my "papa's" grandma, sends us the Advocate in real, and mamma reads such nice little letters to me from the children's corner. I can not yet answer their hard questions, but my mamma has taught me a good many from the Bible. I am going to school to aunt Laura Davis. She is so good and kind to us all, and we have such a nice time that we are sorry when Friday comes. But then we meet again at our nice Sunday-school "which is all a time with the love of Jesus' name;" also our little mite society which shines like "a candle on a candle-stick." Although I am a little boy, it makes me feel very proud to walk up with the big folks and pay my little dues. Grandpa says he is going to give me a pig, that I too may raise some missionary money. I will ask one question that mamma has taught me: What were the names of Moses' parents? Your little friend,

CLYDE T. THOMPSON.

MR. EDITOR: I am not fond of writing, but I want to answer Miss Bessie Vaughan's question. The answer is C. B. Galloway. I hope I am correct. I live in the country, and go to school to Miss Julia Richert. I love her very much. She devotes one evening in the week to teaching us about the Bible. Mamma teaches us also on Sunday, as we have no Sunday-school at our church. We have no preaching now either, as our dear pastor, Bro. Gilmore died a few weeks ago. This makes us all quite sad, and I guess many of the little folks who read the Advocate knew him and loved him too, so sorry to hear this sad news.

JONES P. CARRUTH.

MR. EDITOR: Seeing so many children writing to you, I thought I would honor you with a letter. The answers to Ida and Carrie Allbright's questions are first, "Mary Magdalene," and second, the word "Jehovah" occurs 6,855 times. Lyman Haven asks, "What verse contains all the letters of the alphabet?" Ezra vii, 21, has all the letters of the alphabet except "j." Now I will ask some questions: Who first divided the Bible into chapters? In what year? What is the shortest verse in the Old Testament? How many times does the word "and" occur? Trusting you will print this in the children's column, I remain,

Yours truly,

PRINUS TEMPUS.

SATCHEL, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write you a letter to answer and ask questions. I will answer John D. Edle's question: "Cheese" is found in 1 Samuel xvii, 18. I will also answer Mattie S. Gibson's: "Aaron's rod" is found in Numbers xvii, 8. "Coffin" is first mentioned in Genesis xix, 24, and Joseph was put into it. Daniel interpreted Belshazzar's vision. It is found in Daniel v, 26-28. Seth was the third son of Adam and Eve. Now, I will ask some questions: Who was the Philistine's champion? Where is "artillery" mentioned in the Bible? Where is "partridge" found in the Bible?

C. F. MURKIN.

MUSKOGEE, Texas.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eleven years of age. My papa is a Methodist local preacher. He has been taking the Advocate ever since I can remember. I love to read it, especially the letters from the girls and boys. Our pastor is Bro. A. P. Cox. We all love him very much; he is such a good man. Samson's riddle is found in Judges xiv, 14. I will now ask my little friends a question: Who was the mother of Moses?

Your new friend,

VIOLE KLAS.

VALPARAISO, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl six years old, but I thought I could do something for the cause of missions. I have succeeded in collecting one dollar, which I forward to you to be appropriated where you think most needed. I go to Sunday-school. My Uncle John Clark, is our superintendent. Mr. Emily Pike is my teacher, and we love her because she is so good. My papa wrote this for me.

Your little friend,

J. CRAIG HOPKINS.

PERAZANT HILL, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: We have a good Sabbath-school, and a great many children and grown people who attend. Bro. J. S. P. Sheppard is our pastor this year. I will answer one of Willie Goodwyn's questions: The word "reverend" is found in Psalm cxi, 9. I will ask a question: What blood relation was John the Baptist and our Saviour?

Your little friend,

EMMA E. ORRIS.

LONG SPRING, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I go to day school every day. I am studying grammar, arithmetic, geography and dictionary. I will answer Mattie Gibson's question: It was Aaron's rod that brought forth buds and bloomed blossoms and yielded almonds in one night. I will close for this time.

LUCY E. HAMMETT.

MR. EDITOR: Papa takes your paper, and we love to read it, the best in the world. We have no Methodist Church here, but we are going to build one soon. I will answer Florence Bylie's question: Sarah was one hundred and twenty-seven years old.

FLETCHER TATUM.

VANCE, Alabama.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors: REV. J. T. SAWYER, REV. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY JULY 10, 1884.

Another Thousand.

Centenary day was observed at Moss Point last Sunday, and was a glorious occasion. It was a fitting close of the Seashore District Conference. After a rather lengthy Centenary discourse, one thousand dollars was subscribed in a few minutes. A heavy rain-storm in the afternoon interrupted the children's Centenary service, or the offering would have been still larger. This is but the beginning of greater things. Every member will be granted the privilege of making a Centenary offering. Well done for Moss Point! If our stronger charges show like liberality more than the resolved sixty thousand will pour into the Conference Centenary treasury.

President Arthur has vetoed the Fitz John Porter bill. It is certainly to be regretted that the interposition of a veto should prevent justice being done a greatly wronged man. Mr. Arthur's objections were mainly constitutional, but are thought to be very strained inferences from that much and variously interpreted instrument. Gen. Grant, who once thought Gen. Porter guilty and approved the finding of the court-martial, has revised his opinion and ardently supported this measure of relief. We thought his article in the North American Review on the subject quite conclusive.

"Sunday Laws" was the theme of editorial discussion in a recent issue of the Times-Democrat. While there was no clear deliverance against such statutes, the entire trend of the article was an advocacy of no Sabbath. The infusion of new blood and the immigration of Continental ideas were referred to as liberalizing our puritanism. Just so, and with the degradation of the Sabbath in any city, we have enjoyed the fruits and sweets of communism—the reign of the mob and the flames of the riot. At another time we will refer to our neighbor's statement of supposed facts.

The Presbyterian Observer thus characterizes the relations between the two Presbyterian Churches. It will be remembered that the Southern Presbyterian Assembly declined to send fraternal messengers to their Northern brethren any more, and chose rather to write letters:

Northern Presbyterian Church to Southern: Do you love me?

Southern Church: Yes.

Northern Church: Do you enjoy my visits?

Southern Church: Well, rather—O yes.

Northern Church: May I come to see you again?

Southern Church: Suppose you write. That will do just as well.

The Methodist Episcopal Church grew rapidly during the episcopate of Bishop Simpson. The following summary of service and results we find in the New York Christian Advocate: Bishop Simpson presided over 247 Conference sessions. At an average of a week each, this would be four and three-quarter years spent in Conference duties. Ordained deacons at these Conferences, 1,263; ordained elders, 180. Since his own consecration Bishop Simpson has assisted at the consecration of 22 Bishops. The 37 Conferences in 1882 waxed to 59 in 1884; church members from 638,500 to 1,709,500; missionary contributions from $150,000 to $650,000.

As we go to press our friends are gathering at the Seashore Camp Ground for a grand feast of tabernacles. The indications are that the meeting will be more largely attended than ever before. Distinguished ministers from abroad will be present, and work in pulpit and altar as becometh a Methodist preacher. In the name of the Lord will the gathering of the people be, and upon them we invoke a Pentecost. Ample arrangements have been made for the comfortable accommodation of all who come. The railroads have shown marked liberality, extending even more than their usual facilities. In addition to the full publication of routes and rates made for two weeks or more, we are requested to say that the Illinois Central will sell round-trip tickets as last year and the Vicksburg and Meridian will extend like favors. Next week we hope to chronicle some gracious and inspiring spiritual results.

The Sabbath and the Cotton Centennial

In the Times-Democrat of June 29 appears an open letter from our distinguished friend, Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg, on the observance of the Sabbath at the coming Exposition. We do not often have to take issue with our brother with whom we have taken counsel for years, but this letter and the proposition it contains can not command our approval. Indeed, while honoring the motive that prompted its publication, we feel assured it will achieve what we are endeavoring to avert. In response to a resolution of the Sunday League, of this city, the pastors and official members of the several churches here have petitioned the Board of Management of the Exposition to close the gates on the Sabbath. And as the national government has endorsed the enterprise, and several States have made legislative appropriations for special State exhibits, religious bodies outside the city have united in the petition of the Sunday League. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, embracing a communicant church membership of 1,700,000, in recent session at Philadelphia, passed an urgent resolution in favor of Sunday closing. Several District Conferences in Mississippi have also joined in the request. Other bodies in the several States will heartily unite, thus voicing the dominant moral sentiment of the entire nation.

But in the midst of this growing sentiment, and the collection and collation of these requests, our friend, Dr. Marshall, suggests another way, which in our judgment is a total surrender of the whole question. We quote as follows:

"Doubtless the board will realize the embarrassment of the Sunday problem in view of all the questions, claims and criticisms that must arise. Pleas, protests and remonstrances will be laid on your desk in great numbers. But for one I do not believe it will be in the power of your board to resist the pressure of the countless multitudes of people at home and from abroad who will desire to spend a part of the holy day upon the Exposition grounds. I wish it were otherwise, and that the claims of the sacred day were better understood and more fully appreciated. But we are not a Christian people, save in the name, and worship must be voluntary or it is worthless. Forced and formal worship is as hateful to God as the hollow pretenses of hypocrisy."

In that last sentence our learned friend falls into the common error of all objectors to Sunday laws. They have nothing to do with religious worship, whether "forced and formal" or voluntary and joyous. These statutes have only a civil significance, but are founded upon the broadest philosophy and the wisest statesmanship. A State must conserve the morals of its people or suffer declension of power and the loss of all elements of prosperity. True, in some sentences following the doctor pays an eloquent tribute to the American Sabbath—its industrial, social, civil and moral influence upon the happiness and greatness of our people. But this reference to "forced and formal worship" is irrelevant and unfortunate. But to his proposition:

Viewed from this standpoint, I am of the opinion that the best thing that can be done at the Exposition Temple, or Great Hall, will be to make ample arrangements for public worship on the Sabbath day, mornings and evenings, under the management of a joint committee, and let the most eminent clergymen of all over the world be invited to preach and conduct divine service agreeably to their several creeds and customs, so that all sensible men will on such occasions, controverted and irritating sectarianisms as themes of discussion. Let the platform and the pulpit be placed at the disposal of Jews and Gentiles, Greeks and Mohammedans, Roman Catholics and Protestants, from week to week, as may be desired, arranged and agreed upon, so that no clashing or jarling may arise.

It is the World's Exposition—let it be the occasion of broad, high, ecumenical worship and praise. Without discussing the impracticability and incongruity of Sunday worship conducted by Mohammedans, Jews, Greeks, etc., in turn, we must say that this proposition defeats the very end we have in view. It will give excuse for Christians away from home to desecrate the Sabbath. Of course they will only go to the Exposition on Sunday to hear preaching! Just as many parents go to a circus "to show the children the animals!" We very much fear the good doctor has furnished New Orleans with a plausible defense for outraging the moral sense of the nation. He says, further, that "of course no machinery will run on the Sabbath." Well, why not? If the gates are opened and the entrance fee is paid, each visitor has a right to the full display. If not he is denied the promised value of his purchase money. Such a compromise can not be made, and ought not, in all fairness. No, the gates ought to be sealed, and every hard-worked employee allowed his legitimate rest.

The great Centennial at Philadelphia was closed on Sunday, albeit powerful pressure endeavored to force an entrance. The Louisville Exposition was closed on Sunday, and the whole nation applauded the prompt refusal of a petition in favor of its being opened. Nor will "a discerning Christian sentiment" be satisfied with any less on the part of the managers of the World's Exposition in New Orleans. Indeed, as Sunday is a national, civil day, protected by statute, we doubt if the appropriations by the several States can be honestly used, in morals, if the Sabbath sentiment of the people be so grossly violated. Even that $1,000,000 national loan might fairly be withheld, until some assurance is given that the national Sabbath and, therefore, the nation's good name is to be respected. If the general government can prohibit the transmission of obscene literature through the mails, or the letters of that local iniquity, the Louisiana Lottery, surely it might protect the integrity of our national day. While fully appreciating and applauding the motives of our honored friend in his proposition, we oppose the principle and fear the evil results.

Editorial Correspondence.

One day at home in more than two weeks is all we have been allotted, and that was largely spent in furnishing copy for the ADVOCATE and preparation for another trip abroad. Leaving on Wednesday night, we reached Courtland, the seat of the Grenada District Conference, on the Mississippi and Tennessee railroad, Thursday morning for breakfast. Quite a number of the brethren, including the presiding elder, joined us at Grenada, and the journey onward was much enlivened by such companions of travel. The Conference was presided over by Rev. S. M. Thames, the presiding elder, and Prof. R. W. Jones, of Oxford, was elected secretary. Reports from the pastors were rather better than we have heard at other Conferences. Revivals and large gatherings had blessed a few churches. Especially was this notable at Grenada, where two revivals have been enjoyed by the church during the past few months. Collections for connectional purposes and pastoral support were well up, indicating a marked advance over previous years. We felt quite impressed with the fact that the church throughout the district is in good condition and on a steady, healthful advance. The Conference gave us a patient hearing on the interests of the ADVOCATE, and a handsome list of cash subscribers. Leaving Courtland about nine P. M., we returned southward, and at the urgent solicitation of friends stopped at Winona to celebrate "the glorious fourth of July" by attending a grand prohibition mass meeting. By act of the Legislature the question of license or no license was to be submitted to a vote of the people on Tuesday, the eighth instant. For weeks past the contending forces have been engaged in a hand to hand struggle. Under the leadership of Rev. W. S. Lagrone the prohibitionists are well organized, and have made every hill-top and valley in the county vocal with temperance eloquence. Two weeks ago there was a joint discussion, the whiskey men importing a champion from Grenada. He was met by Rev. W. B. Murrah, and so thoroughly vanquished that some of the saloonists acknowledged a signal defeat. They haven't asked to "divide time" any more. The interest in the issue is intense, and we confidently look for prohibition to gain a glorious victory. The immense audience that crowded the courthouse on the fourth, including a number of ladies, and patiently listened to a perspirational speech from this editor for two hours in the high noon of a hot day, is sufficient evidence of their devotion to the cause. It was reported that the wholesale whiskey dealers of the large cities had sent down large sums of money to be used in carrying the election for license, but our friends, working "without money and without price," were jubilant with hope; indeed, felt that victory was quite assured.

Leaving Winona in the afternoon, we continued our southward journey bound for the Seashore District Conference, at Moss Point. Reaching Jackson at half-past ten P. M., the woman who "tarries by the stuff" was at the depot with a fresh valise and a good-bye. In five minutes we were thundering down the Illinois Central, and at seven o'clock next morning walked into the office at 112 Camp street. An hour at the desk preparing grist for the hopper and onward we go by the Louisville and Nashville to Moss Point.

The Seashore District Conference had nearly concluded its business when we arrived, about noon on Saturday. We found Presiding Elder Rayner in the chair and Rev. B.

Jones at the secretary's table. The attendance of both preachers and laymen was very small, owing to the distance and expense of travel. That district covers an immense territory, and is a great tax upon the time, strength and purse of a presiding elder. Only seven of the preachers were present, and less than a dozen lay delegates. We understood that the work on the district generally is moving forward with vigor and great promise. The next Conference will be held at Hattiesburg. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. B. Smith, R. Habbington, Henry Ware, M. M. Evans. Alternates: C. H. Woods, J. W. Starr, J. P. Carter. Strong resolutions were passed on the subject of temperance, inveighing vigorously against the use of tobacco. As that is about the first action taken by any Southern Methodist body against the weed, it is worthy of note. We hope the Seashore is thus leading a much-needed reform. President MoVoy, of East Mississippi Female College, was present, preached twice, and spoke effectively in behalf of his institution. The Conference, by resolution, warmly commended the college as worthy of patronage and Centenary contributions. We are indebted to Bro. Griffin, a venerable and versatile Methodist patriarch, and the large-hearted, liberal Bro. Dantzer, for delightful hospitality. Rev. R. J. Jones, the pastor, has favor with his people, and is doing well. Sunday was observed as Centenary day, and right royally was it celebrated, as will be seen by a notice elsewhere. We are obliged to the Conference for the following, and with it we close these jottings:

Resolved, That the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is worthy of the high place it occupies, and that its editor is to be commended for his zeal and energy in the defense of the truth, and for making it emphatically a religious paper.

Resolved, That we will use due diligence to give it as wide a circulation as possible.

Partisan Praying.

Recent political conventions have developed some new features in the character of public prayer. Enterprising newspapers have given them full and wide publicity together with all other proceedings. At the National Republican Convention, on successive days, distinguished ministers, of unquestioned political orthodoxy, offered prayer invoking Divine blessing upon the "grand old party." Like petitions have been made by preachers at several State Democratic Conventions. As we have read these proceedings, thoughts have been suggested that may be of general profit.

Much praying, so-called, is for the ears of man rather than the throne of God. In rhetorical phrase, the relation of local incidents, and expressions of opinion upon matters purely secular and partisan, the purpose of the performance is perfectly manifest. The papers pronounce it "very eloquent," and the prayer-orator reads the tribute with genuine satisfaction. Every such notice offends the spiritual propriety of true Christians and wounds the cause of Christ. Prayer—"the soul's sincere desire"—is only for the throne of grace and may be as true and efficacious "uttered" as "expressed." When offered in public, it should simply lead the devotions of the congregation for needed blessing, and not entertain the people with devotional stumping. "Beautiful" and "eloquent" prayers are a delusion and a snare. They should not be voiced in incorrect or infelicitous language, but their intellectual quality should not be prominent. The spirit should breathe through the words and not the words shroud and conceal the spirit.

Prayers for party and by partisans have the odor of secularism rather than the fragrance of true piety. They prophesy party success in the form of prayer, and in that attitude stir up the faithful to an active campaign. We doubt the propriety of praying for the triumph or defeat of any party as such. We may and should ask that all party conclusions be directed to the general good, and that divine blessings dwell upon the entire land. But to pray for Republican success or Democratic defeat, or vice versa, is more partisan than pious—an unseemly, if not unsanctified, performance. An entire elimination of selfish purpose or ambition is necessary to true prayer. We need pious rather than partisan praying.

Rev. S. W. Miller, of the North Mississippi Conference, stated to us at Courtland that at a recent appointment in Pontotoc county, while in the pulpit preaching, he was fired upon by some unknown party, the ball barely missing his head. We hope the miscreant will be discovered and made to suffer the law's extreme penalty.

Delayed Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR: The second week in April last I received a letter from Bishop McTyeire informing me that I had been selected as the clerical delegate to accompany Gov. Colquitt, of Georgia, the lay delegate, to Philadelphia, the seat of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to bear the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to that body. I had heard people talk about the astonishment which comes from a loud clap of thunder out of a clear sky, but I could never form a distinct conception of its meaning. I believe now that I can guess at it with tolerable correctness. There was no doubt as to the genuineness of this letter of information, for the Bishop's chirography carries its authenticity in every stroke and dot. After making what preparation seemed to be necessary, on the last day of April, I started on what has been to me a memorable journey, by the Queen and Crescent route to Cincinnati, thence by the Baltimore and Ohio railway to Washington City. Your space is too valuable for me to fill it with the thoughts that passed through my mind while spinning along through the barren pine regions of Mississippi up to Meridian, or with the dreams that chased each other through the corridors of my brain, while, during the thought, we whirled, like a cyclone, from southwest to northeast through the mining regions of the great State of Alabama, or with the kaleidoscopic views which came and went as we turned northward at Chattanooga and sped in a straight line across the commonwealth of Tennessee, or with the emotions that filled my soul while, with increased velocity, we thundered along among the hills and over the beautiful valleys and through the center of the famed "Blue Grass" region of Kentucky. These thoughts and dreams and visions and emotions have become a part of my being, and while a man may be interesting to himself, it would do for him to think that he is always interesting to others; so I forbear at this point the process of elaboration.

We arrived at Cincinnati late in the evening of the second day out, and, having an hour to wait, I thought I would see what I could do of that city. Before starting out, being covered with dust and soot, I sought a place to wash my face, and was charged ten cents for the privilege. This was a new experience to me. The idea of paying for the privilege of washing my face, in a place where water was so plentiful, had never entered my mind. It had the effect to change my whole purpose during the hour spent there. I just went back to the depot waiting-room and sat down. What little things sometimes change the whole course of life! I kept thinking about that face-washing and that ten cents, and after while I worked it out. I came to the conclusion that from the style of that I wore I was taken for a "typical Southerner with a pocket full of money." Alas! what mistakes men do make. Leaving Cincinnati at half-past seven P. M., we scudded across the Southern portion of Ohio in the darkness of the night, seeing nothing, dreaming nothing. Daylight came peeping over the big hills of West Virginia, and, as the sun shot his arrows of flame into their summits, they appeared like towering Titans, upon whose heads sat crowns of golden glories. During all the morning the scenery was of that varied kind most calculated to charm a man who has lived all his life in the monotonous low-grounds of Louisiana. From Parkersburg to Harper's Ferry, while the scenery does not present many sublime views to the eye, there is absolutely nothing to weary. Coming to the headwaters of the Potomac, near Oakland, the road winds along down that stream to Washington City, and there is presented a succession of landscapes of surpassing beauty. We had breakfast at Cumberland, and it was the best meal we obtained on the whole route, and plenty of time to eat it. We passed Harper's Ferry about noon. Here is the finest view, in some respects, that we had. How did the river get through that mass of rock? There is a passage in Habakkuk which explains the process: "Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers." But what Southerner these days passes Harper's Ferry without thinking of Bill Arp and his "burning questions?" "Who is old man Harper, and what does he keep his ferry for, anyhow?" At half-past two, being two days and two nights out from home, we rolled into the capital city of the nation, and Dr. Cox, the quiet, popular pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Church, was at the depot, and gave me such a welcome as made me feel that I had found another true friend, and was at home.

"The time would fail me to tell" of what I saw in this beautiful city.

With my host as a guide I went everywhere and saw everything, worth seeing. That you may know something of my patriotism and political whereabouts, I will state that the first place visited, after a night's rest, was Mount Vernon, the residence during life and the resting-place after death of George Washington. The place and surroundings are lovely to look upon. What a queer old house it is! How strangely it is divided and sub-divided into the cutest little bed-rooms and sitting-rooms and reception-rooms and parlors! Many relics of the Washington family have been gathered into it, and in looking upon them the memory travels back to the good old days of our simple-hearted ancestors. Washington's camp chest and equipage look as if they had gone through all the wars since the time of William, the Conqueror. The tomb in which lie the remains of George and Martha Washington is a very plain brick vault, containing the two stone coffins, with the simple inscriptions, Gen. Geo. Washington—Martha Washington. On the outside are the other members of the Washington family, among whom I noticed the name of the wife of one of the sons of Louisiana. The grounds and gardens are said to be just as they were left when the great man died. The flower garden is a beauty, and my guide said the box-trees were planted by Washington's own hand. I was told that the famous, historical hatchet was there, but I did not see it. I stood under willows that purported to be transplanted from the grave of Napoleon at St. Helena. What curious emotions come to us when we are assured that we are treading the same soil and looking upon the same scenes where the great ones have lived and died!

The next place to visit was the "Bureau of Printing and Engraving." This is where the treasury notes and bank bills are made. It requires the work of 100 men and 100 women to keep the country supplied with money. The process of making a bill is such an elaborate one that it requires thirty days to make one bill. Everything is reduced to a perfect system, and if there is the least mistake made in counting the sheets of paper which are in process of development into money, the doors are all closed and guarded until the mistake is found and rectified. I came away with the feeling—no wonder the United States is so rich, when it can make money after that manner. As we passed out, just to the left of us was the long-talked-of Washington monument, now 425 feet high, and still going up toward the sky. I was told that the purpose is to make it the tallest structure in the world, and that to be this it must reach 535 feet into the air. When I looked up at the workmen there looked like little boys, and the huge stones they were placing upon the walls looked to be about the size of ordinary bricks. Though so high, I was told that a cat jumped from the top the other day and scampered away toward the Potomac, apparently with the best use of his legs. I am inclined to think that that was the old traditional cat, who possesses nine lives. I was informed that those who have the work in charge proposed to finish the monument and have a grand celebration on February 22 next, and that the man who made the oration at the inception of the work, fifty years ago, is to be the speaker on that occasion. The next places visited were the Smithsonian Institution and the National Museum. I spent about four hours looking and wondering and thinking. It would require two sides of your paper for me simply to set down the names of the things I saw without describing anything. The fish commission came next, and the young man in charge told us many new and strange things. The post-office, treasury buildings, naval department, with their interesting details, occupied much time. In one of these is the original "Declaration of Independence." The body of the instrument is still legible, but the honored names are almost entirely faded from view. Corcoran's Art Gallery is a delightful place to spend an hour, if you happen to have one, a companion who can appreciate and point out to you the beauties of art. I don't know much about such things, but my companion, Miss Maria Cox, took such delight in instructing my ignorance and making everything so interesting that I came away feeling that I had lived one hour of pure pleasure in an art gallery. Of course I went to see the White House, but did not see the occupant. When passing through the East Room I could not help but be struck by the portrait of the author of a "Comic History of the United States," "this is the room where Mrs. Adams used to dry her clothes on wash-days." Nobody goes to Washington without visiting the capitol. It was a memorable day—the day the Morrison Tar-

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending July 8, 1884.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	74 1/2
Good ordinary	75 1/2
Low middling	76 1/2
Good middling	77 1/2
Middling fair	78 1/2
Fair	79 1/2
Good fair	80 1/2
Full fair	81 1/2
Prime	82 1/2
Strictly prime	83 1/2
Choice	84 1/2
Seconds	85 1/2
Yellow cleared	86 1/2
Gray cleared	87 1/2
Choice whites	88 1/2
Granulated	89 1/2

SUGAR.

Interior	3
Common	4
Good common	5
Fair	6
Good fair	7
Full fair	8
Prime	9
Strictly prime	10
Choice	11
Seconds	12
Yellow cleared	13
Gray cleared	14
Choice whites	15
Granulated	16

MOLASSES.

Syrup	17
Prime	18
Choice	19
Fancy	20

RICE.

Choice	54
Prime	55
Good	56
Fair	57
Ordinary	58
Common	59
No. 2	60

FLOUR.

Minnesota lakers	6 1/2
Minnesota patents	6 1/2
Extra fancy	6 1/2
Winter wheat patents	6 1/2
Choice	6 1/2
Fancy	6 1/2

CORN PRODUCTS.

Green meal	4 00
Corn meal	3 15
Grits	4 00
Meal	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.

Corn	77
White	78
Yellow	78
Mixed	78
Oats	41
Western	42
Texas first-proof	42
Beans	95
Red	95
White	95
Choice	10 00
Prime	17 00

PROVISIONS.

Pork	10 75
Prime mess	15 50
Rumps	15 50
Bacon	11
Choice breakfast	11
Shoulders	12
Sides, clear	12
Sides, clear rib	14
Sugar-cured	13 1/2
Dry salt meat	6 1/2
Shoulders	6 1/2
Sides, clear	6 1/2
Sides, clear rib	6 1/2

FISH.

Mackerel	14 25
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25
Half bbls.	7 15
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 87
No. 3, in bbls.	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.

Coffee	91
Rio, choice	113
Cordova, choice	12
Java, choice	22
Breakfast	20
Western dairy	20
Country	15
Lard	8 1/2
Choice	8 1/2
Texas	50
Choice	50
Tail	25
Oils	18
Coal, cases	13
Coal, bbls	13
Cotton seed	45
Lard	80

VEGETABLES.

Cabbages	1 00
Western	1 00
Country	1 00
Potatoes	1 00
Louisiana	1 00
Krout	17 00
Onions	2 25
Bbl	2 25

BALING STUFFS.

Baling	104
12 b	114
Baling twine	134
12 b	134
Ties	1 30
Bundle	2 75

SUNDRIES.

Poultry	5 25
Chickens, Western	5 50
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	4 25
Young	1 50
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
Eggs	12
Western	13
Southern	14
Wool	18
Lake	18 1/2
Laurens	10 1/2
Hurry	8
Hides	7
Green salted	10 1/2
Dry salted	10 1/2
Staves	50 00
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	50 00
Oak, hoops	50 00
Hoop poles	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 50
Fertilizers	12 00
Meat	23 75
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	24

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

CHICAGO, July 1.—Allen Pinkerton, the famous detective, died this afternoon. He had been gradually sinking from the effects of malaria fever, contracted some weeks ago, while on a visit South.

DECATUR, Ill., July 1.—A national prohibition camp meeting, under the auspices of the National Association, opened to-day at the Fair Grounds, and will continue ten days, bringing together a remarkable array of men.

MILWAUKEE, July 1.—The Citizens' League have decided to attempt an enforcement of the Sunday law, which demands that all the saloons be closed on that day. The first test case will be that of a saloon called the Y. M. C. A., which opened last week next door to the Young Men's Christian Association and took that name. The Association members were strenuous in their opposition to granting a license to this saloon, but the Council sided with the saloon-keeper.

KEOKUK, July 2.—In the week of a construction train of the Chicago, Burlington and Kansas City Railway passing through the Grand River Bridge last night, from twenty to twenty-five men were precipitated into the stream, and from ten to forty to fifty feet, and from ten to fifteen men were more or less injured, several of them fatally.

MILES CITY, M. T., July 2.—The committee appointed by citizens of Eastern Montana to-day telegraphed Secretary Teller, urging immediate removal of the North Cheyenne Indians, now on Tongue and Rosebud rivers. They number more than 300, are without rations and are starving. There is nothing to suggest an except range cattle, which they are killing in large numbers. The stockmen will make armed resistance if they are not moved, and the result will be serious trouble with the Indians who are independent and angry.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The message of the President vetoing the Fitz John Porter bill was received at the House at half past 3 o'clock. The reading of the document was proceeded with amidst profound silence. From Slides moved to the bill press. The years and days were demanded, and as the voting proceeded the interest was most intense until the announcement was made that the bill had passed by a vote of 168 to 78. When the cheering did begin it was loud and hearty. It was led by Gen. Sherman, and was given three times three and a cheer.

St. Louis, July 6.—Dispatches from Decatur, Springfield, Shelbyville and other places of Central Illinois, report that a very severe wind storm swept over Macon, Sangamon and Christian counties, between midnight and daylight Saturday morning, which destroyed much property, but so far no lives were reported lost. The loss in Sangamon county, as far as heard from, is estimated at over $100,000. In Macon county the destruction is still greater, nearly all houses and outbuildings in the path of the storm being entirely demolished or badly damaged. The wind lifted the cars off the track at Road Station, and the Madison Presbyterian Church and parsonage were entirely destroyed. The loss in Macon county is estimated at $200,000. Christian county is also said to have suffered severely, but no details are given.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The appropriation for defraying the expenses of the Government exhibit at New Orleans, Cincinnati and Louisville was fixed in the sundry civil bill as it passed Congress at $300,000. Ten thousand of this amount is to defray the expenses of unpacking at Cincinnati and $10,000 more for unpacking at Louisville. Both houses have been in session all day, taking recesses at intervals.

NEW YORK, July 6.—A great many thousand New Yorkers enjoyed a holiday to-day in the shape of a Sunday concert in Central Park. Thousands joined in singing "Old Hundred" when the time was played by the band, and the crowd did not leave the park till after sun-down.

DETROIT, July 7.—This is the fourth day since the prohibitory law was to go into operation. So far it has had little visible effect upon the liquor interests of this city. The breweries closed Sunday, but to-day are running as usual. A large number of saloons were also closed Sunday, but they, to-day, are openly dispensing all kinds of liquors. So far not a single saloon out of 126 licensed by the city is observing the law. Beyond a disposition to close on Sundays and holidays and exercising more care in selling, the saloons have determined to pay no attention to the law. Wholesale dealers seem to be as active as ever, but packages have assumed a new shape and seek different channels of transportation.

Just What they Need.
Those complicated stomach, kidney and nervous troubles from which many women suffer soon find a mild but active operation of Parker's Tonic.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The flags of the Houses of Congress were hoisted down this afternoon at precisely 2:50 o'clock. At the same moment Mr. Edmunds in the Senate and Mr. Blackburn in the House spoke the usual address to the members, and, among the gavel down, pronounced the two houses adjourned without a day.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, July 2.

Advices from Toulon state that five cases of cholera occurred by inhaling pure oxygen. The effect is immediate and consists in restoring warmth to the system, making the pulse normal.

PARIS, July 4.—The formal presentation of the Bartholdi statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World" by the French Government to the United States took place in Gauthier's workshop to-day.

Toulon, July 6.—There have been seven deaths here since last night. The oxygen cure is unsatisfactory.

Marseilles, July 6.—There was no death from cholera since last night. Intense heat aggravates the cholera. An outbreak of small-pox has occurred at Vigan, Department of Gard, and there have been seventeen deaths. A military cordon is ordered.

PARIS, July 7.—Advices from Snakum report that Gen. Gordon was murdered by his soldiers, and El Mahdi occupied Khartoum.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 170 Grand St., N. O., for price list of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a superior household product of the Crescent City. Positively free from alum or any other harmful ingredient. It not only invites, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.
The Enfield District Conference will meet at Midway, Wednesday night before the fourth Sabbath in July. The preachers will please write their reports, and send them to Dr. Humble, at Midway, at least a week beforehand.

The presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference will please send me promptly the names in full, of the several delegates elect to the ensuing Conference, and of their alternates.

BYHALIA, Mississippi.
The Vicksburg District Conference will be held at Phoenix, Yazoo county, beginning on Thursday, July 31. Opening sermon on Thursday, at eleven A. M., by Rev. S. J. Cotton.

Delegates to the Vicksburg District Conference can come either by rail to Benton on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad, or by water to Satastia. The Patriot Line will take delegates from Vicksburg to Satastia and return for five dollars round trip, or three dollars fare each way. Delegates are required to present their credentials to the clerk of the boat to get this reduction. Conferences will be at Satastia on Wednesday morning. Satastia is the most convenient point for us, it suits the delegates as well. Delegates must let us know by what route they are coming, if they want conveyances, for we will only meet those who so inform us.

PHOENIX, Mississippi.
The Woodville District Conference will be held at Woodville, beginning on Thursday, July 24, at ten o'clock A. M.

The Holly Springs District Conference will meet at Pleasant Grove, Hickory Flat circuit, July 25, 1884. Opening sermon by E. H. Moon, Friday 25, at 11 o'clock A. M.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The camp meeting at Mt. Zion Camp Ground, near Beech Springs, N. O., will commence on Friday night before the third Sabbath in August. All ministers are invited and will be well cared for.

The Downsville Camp Meeting will begin on Friday before the third Sabbath in August. All ministers are invited and will be well cared for.

The Davis Springs Camp Meeting commences Friday night before the second Sabbath in August. Preachers are cordially invited and will be handsomely cared for.

The Goshute Academy Camp Meeting commences Friday night before the first Sabbath in September. Ministers have a special invitation to come and preach the word. You will be well cared for.

There will be a camp meeting at Cypress Camp Ground (near Stonewall, on New Orleans and Paducah railroad) commencing Friday before the second Sunday in August, next.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Rayville circuit, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers and their families will be cared for. Friends are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Belle Chenery Springs Camp Meeting will begin on Tuesday, August 5, 1884. This camp ground is beautifully located in the parish of St. Landry, La. Preachers generally are invited, and will be furnished free transportation from Levee on the T. P. railroad to camp ground and return. Apply to D. Brewer, at Levee.

The annual camp meeting of Henderson Camp Ground, near Cross Creek, Miss., will commence, Thursday, July 11, and continue eight days. Ministers are especially invited.

The question has been agitated—Why did the Executive Committee of Henderson Camp Meeting Association, appoint the annual meeting for the year upon the same time as that of the preceding year? The Executive Committee have an answer to this question. The time of holding the annual meeting of the association was fixed several years ago; therefore the Executive Committee, on motion, at their next meeting ordered the secretary to have published the rule governing the association as to the time of holding the annual meeting of Henderson Camp Ground, shall read "each year."

The camp meeting for St. Matthew's Camp Ground will begin on Friday before the second Sunday in August. It will be sustained as heretofore. Ministers are invited. The brethren will be conveyed from Hickory to camp ground by rail.

The China Grove Camp Meeting will commence Friday before the fifth Sunday in August. All ministers are invited and will be well cared for.

The Lake Camp Meeting will begin on Friday before the fifth Sunday in August. Preachers generally are invited.

The Providence Camp Meeting will begin on Wednesday, July 30, and continue six days. The camp ground is beautifully located near Rockport, fourteen miles east of Lakeport. Preachers generally are invited, and will be furnished free transportation from Lakeport to camp ground and return.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

MOBILE DIST.—THIRD ROUND.
St. Francis Street, Mobile, Ala., July 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sept. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, June 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, July 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sept. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, June 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, July 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sept. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15,

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 29.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1459.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

J. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

JARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Single copies, 10 cents.

Advertisements, 10 cents per line.

Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. P. H. HILL.

REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KEENE.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GONFREY.

REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

REV. W. P. BARTON.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

UNREST.

BY FRANKS RIDLEY HAYWARD.

"Our heart is restless till it rests in thee."—St. Augustine.

There is a strange wild wall around, a wall of wild unrest.

A moaning in the music with echoes unconfessed,

And a moaning (wither there and there, with small notes shrill and thin,

And deep low shuddering groans that rise from caves of gloom within.

And still the wild wind crosses the harmonies of God,

And still the waters wander through his fair lands rich and broad;

Grave thought, explorers swell the cry of doubt and nameless pain,

And careless feet among the flowers trip to the dismal strain.

They may wander as they will in the hopeless search for truth,

They may wander in the quest all the freshness of their youth,

They may wrestle with the nightmares of sin's unending sleep,

They may meet a futile plummet in the heart's unfathomed deep.

But they wait and wait and wander in vain and still in vain,

Though they glory in the dimness and are proud of very pain;

For the life of Titan struggle is but one sublime mistake,

While the spell dream is upon them, and they can not, will not wake.

Awake, O thou that sleepest! The believer is near, arise, go forth to meet him! Bow down, for he is here!

Thou shalt count your true exultance from this first and blessed tryal,

For he saith to reveal himself, the very God in Christ.

For the soul is never satisfied, the life is incomplete,

And the synchroisms of sorrow find no cadence calm and sweet,

And the earth-lights never lead us beyond the shadow of our grief,

And the lone heart never resteth till it findeth rest in him.

North Louisiana Notes.

BY REV. F. M. GRACE, D. D.

RED RIVER—AN EX-FEDERAL JOURNAL—A "WIRE ROAD," AND

THE SUBVERSIVE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: It has been my privilege to go on a short tour with our presiding elder, Rev. B. F. Alexander.

We attended a Quarterly Conference on the Coushatta circuit, Rev. A. C. Couey, P. C., and a District Conference at Natchitoches, Rev. C. F. Stivers, P. C.

As it was my first visit to Red River, I saw much that was novel and interesting.

First, we crossed Bayou Pierre, east of Mansfield, and saw the recent marks of high water in the swamps.

In fact, we were the first travelers since the last flood, and had, literally, to drive the first stakes for the ferryboat and to make the first tracks in the mud between the bayou and the Red.

We had the honor of being ferried over by an ex-Federal general, who has turned his attention from the noblest of war to the ignoble business of running a ferry for the accommodation of his rebel foes.

The general's case reminded me of that of one of Napoleon's marshals who kept a ferry in Prairie Creek, near Demopolis, Ala., after the fall of his great master in 1815.

His dithought brought him back to bank, and one had only to drive in and out to get across the stream.

In fact, it was a bridge rather than a boat. The charge was only ten cents, and Marshal Levee was satisfied.

"To such base uses do we come at last," Coushatta gave us a good congregation on Thursday night, and a day of delightful visiting on Friday.

Approaching the river from Bayou Pierre through the swamp, we finally reached the cultivated land near the Pastoral Methods.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of June 19 there appears, on the same page, two articles of very different thought on the same subject, and yet both worthy of our consideration, as pastors and laymen.

The article by "Laymen"—"Pastoral Courtesy"—opens up more questions than one; the article by Dr. Deems—"Our Plan of Pastoral Work"—solves that problem to many an overworked preacher.

I trust that every reader of your paper has read that article and will act upon it. And, further, I wish that every member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, could be furnished with a copy. I am in agreement with Bro. "Laymen" that Dr. Hill did well in following up the absent member; nor would I too readily excuse the seeming neglect of courtesy on the part of the four brethren held up by "Laymen."

Still we can not fully agree that it is altogether the result of indifference or a disposition to be discourteous.

Such a character as is represented by "Laymen" is not unknown to the pastor of average experience.

A young man, "wild, skeptical in religious matters, and by no means disposed to be communicative with his friends at home in regard to his business or spiritual interests." Why, what a familiar face! I doubt not that every preacher who has attained to elder's orders does at once recognize every feature in the picture.

As a pastor, we have always held it a duty to see all strangers who come to our notice and invite them to the various church services; but the manner in which most of these wild, skeptical, uncommunicative young men meet such invitations and exhibitions of interest in their welfare brings at once to mind our Saviour's exhortation in reference to giving holy things to dogs and casting pearls before swine.

Why, sir, such as these are in every community—wiser in religious and Bible truths than seven men who can give a reason; choosing darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil; absorbed in their business and dissipations, what care they for the preacher's welcome or invitations?

Doubtless the four brethren were direct in their duties, to an extent, in not answering the brother's letters in reference to his wayward brother.

Yet there is much dependent upon what course the wayward young man is pursuing. I know young men concerning whom I would hesitate to write a true statement to any one of their manner of life.

What father, mother, sister or brother would appreciate a letter running thus: "I know your son (or brother). He is leading the life of a libertine; often drunk; gambles extensively; very profane; never comes to church, though often invited; keeps company only with the most wicked and dissipated." And yet there are thousands of such whom the preacher is expected to invite again and again only to see a cold, stolid indifference to all his kind intentions.

If parents would only give their sons the proper education as to their duties to the church and the minister, all this hunting of young men would be obviated.

They would hunt the church and the society of the minister instead of waiting to be invited to the house of God.

If our prominent laymen would manifest some interest in these dissolute young men, attend church better themselves and bring these with them, it would greatly help the pastor and improve the boy.

Few people are capable of appreciating the arduousness of a conscientious pastor's work.

The general impression seems to be that he has an easy time, with nothing to do—whereas he must do the office work of a lawyer, the active work of a physician and the social and religious work of a preacher.

If our people would adopt the plan of Dr. Deems, and visit the pastors when they are in trouble, and not demand so much unnecessary and inopportune visiting by the pastor, the church would thrive better and the pastor would have more time to devote to the wayward and backslidden.

During a ministry of ten years (and we have not been among the uncultured or unclean) we can count on our fingers the number of visits paid to us by our brethren as social, friendly visits; and as for those in trouble, few make their cases known to the pastor, and yet condemn him loudly for non-attention.

Let every man of us look to the interest of one another, and all pull together, and the work will prosper.

T. B. H.

Letter from Oregon.

MR. EDITOR: As I write to have the address of the ADVOCATE changed to Albany, Oregon, it presents an opportunity for a word from the country of the setting sun, or, in other words, the occident, or, as the beloved Bishop Doggett tersely called it, the "ultimate West."

Of your movements and that of the great church in the Southland we keep somewhat posted in the ADVOCATE and by private letters.

Truly, it is a time of moving to and fro with our Israel. The good accomplished in enlightening the world as to the birth, growth, struggles, triumphs and world-wide breadth of Methodism will be one of the facts of our Century.

Turn on the light! Let the people know we are of God; are not ashamed of our paternity; that our one work is and has been to spread scriptural holiness over the land—to aid and abet in bringing about millennial glory.

There is chance for us to improve on the past. We see our errors; we know the source of our strength and success.

"Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it." We feel the quickening of our pulse when we read and hear of your doings; but, oh! we would be so happy to feel the throbbings of the great bosom of the church.

We are here in our remote and distant place from the great centers of Southern Methodism. We bide our time.

There is nothing strange, wonderful or unusual to write as to this country. That we live under the reign of Divine protection and care; that we share the bounteous stores of Divine munificence; that we have the sweet drawings of Divine grace about our hearts; that we feel the everlasting arms are underneath us; that Divine pity and love is ours; that our kinship with the Father is attested by the constant intercession of the Son; that the Divine Paraclete is to abide with us forever; that the full fruition and unutterable glories of our Father's house is our inheritance is enough to enrapture our being.

God bless you! My address for the present is Albany, Oregon.

T. B. WHITE.

Mississippi Conference Brotherhood.

Several articles appearing of late in the ADVOCATE relative to the interests of our Conference brotherhood, showing an evident misunderstanding, I have thought that, as I was secretary of our preliminary meeting just prior to adjournment of Conference, a statement from me might be in order.

Our meeting was very informal, without general previous notice, mainly to get signatures of brethren to form such an organization, elect officers, appoint committees to draft constitution and by-laws to be submitted to the brotherhood at our next session of Conference for consideration.

Initiation fee, ten cents; for stationery and assessment fee on the death of a member, $5 was assessed to; but if any one at that meeting said anything about provision for any member who might die this year, I certainly do not remember it—much less any period of sixty days as a limited period to pay assessment in.

Until a consideration and adoption of constitution and by-laws by members we are yet in a formative state.

While I heartily am in favor, as an individual, of paying assessments this year for the deaths of all who signed the agreement to form a brotherhood for future operations; yet, as a member, I do not feel bound to any period in which to pay it, as no action has as yet been taken by the brotherhood upon this point.

It certainly will be most desirable for all to pay, within sixty days; but some of our brethren more highly favored with personages, ready cash and prompt payment, etc., forget that along in the eastern and southern borders of our Conference many faithful preachers have a lot that emphasizes the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." I know that there are periods in the year when for months the minister of God does not receive cash enough to buy food for his own family, and is compelled to go in debt or locate.

When it comes to adopting the "time clause of our by-laws" I shall certainly insist upon sixty days, if possible, or until the meeting of the society at Conference session before forfeiture of membership shall occur.

Now, while this subject is up, will our people who we serve suffer a suggestion from us.

This death assessment of five dollars per member will prove a blessing to the widow and orphans of a deceased preacher that can scarcely be measured, and yet if out of the meager salary received the preacher must deprive his own loved ones of food and raiment that they need, some one will miss a golden opportunity to bear a heavy burden and get a blessing from Christ.

Will not some young lady constitute herself a special committee to raise this death assessment from the church by small assessments on each member, and on notice of the pastor of the death of a minister go at once to work and collect the money?

If this can be done, the widow and orphans will not have to wait sixty days? Then there are our veterans resting, not on an income accumulated while fighting for Jesus in the forefront, but weary, aged and infirm, every morning throwing open the case, looking for the ravens or the angels—just as God wills. Will you not raise their assessment anyhow?

ROBT. B. DOWNER.

Grenada District Conference.

The Grenada District Conference convened at Courtland, Miss., and was in session July 3, 4 and 5.

Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E., called the Conference to order and presided over its deliberations, giving direction in large measure to its proceedings and displaying his intense earnestness in all the departments of ministerial activity and church interests.

Toward the close of the session he was taken sick, so that he was unable to remain and preach on Sabbath, as was greatly desired.

The visits of Dr. C. B. Galloway and Rev. James D. Cameron were very highly appreciated.

Dr. Galloway delivered an admirable, strong centennial address on Thursday, at eleven A. M.

That night he delivered a most interesting and instructive sermon. The Conference and the people of Courtland were charmed by his pleasant manners and fine discourses.

Bro. Cameron made some excellent speeches on the floor of the Conference, and at the centennial meeting, Friday evening, he and Rev. T. J. Newell, of Grenada Institute, made strong impressions upon the people in favor of Methodist progress and influence by their skillful presentation of the facts and figures of the church's history.

The first morning a half hour was devoted to a prayer meeting, which was delightful and refreshing to the soul.

The usual prominence was given to the preaching of the word of God. In addition to those already mentioned, sermons were preached by Rev. S. W. Miller, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, Rev. T. G. Freeman.

We trust the seed faithfully sown here by these brethren will produce a glorious harvest.

The reports showed the general condition of the district to be in advance of what it was last year.

The spiritual condition of the church, in the main, is very encouraging.

The Grenada station has been blessed with a most gracious revival.

Resolutions were passed (1) strongly endorsing the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, commending the great work of the editor and pledging an earnest effort to put a copy of the paper in every Methodist family in the district;

(2) urging the importance of a proper observance of the holy Sabbath during the Cotton Centennial and World's Exposition, and calling on the management to have the gates closed on Sunday;

(3) requesting R. W. Jones and W. T. J. Sullivan to present to the next session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference a memorial, praying that an assessment of $1,000 be made on the whole Conference to aid young men who are preparing for the ministry.

ORENADA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

The Conference was highly gratified at the prosperity of this institution of the church under the prudent and wise management of Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., and with great confidence recommended it to the patronage of the public.

The revival at Grenada began with the pupils of this school, and at its close there was but one young lady who had not been converted.

Strong testimony was borne to the faithful teaching and pure, invigorating moral and religious influences brought to bear on the pupils.

Mrs. Newell has admirable qualifications for the domestic management and the motherly oversight of girls.

The property of this school is very valuable. There is a small debt on it which ought to be speedily paid.

The Conference, by vote, asked that the people of the district raise this balance during this centennial year.

A proposition was made for a number of persons to give twenty-five dollars each, to which there were several responses.

Wesley Chapel, at Water Valley, was chosen as the seat of the next District Conference.

R. W. Jones, E. J. H. Christian, Rev. Jesse B. Porter, O. F. Bledsoe were elected delegates to the Annual Conference;

Dr. A. E. Hardin, Rev. J. W. Wells, alternates.

The Conference most cordially thanked the good people of Courtland for their kindness in opening their hearts and homes to us, and prayed the blessing of God upon them.

A vote of thanks was also given to the secretary for the performance of his heavy duties.

I enclose the following resolutions offered by R. W. Jones and W. T. J. Sullivan:

Resolved, That we highly appreciate the visit of Dr. C. B. Galloway to this Conference.

His presence and services have been delightful and profitable to us.

We tender him our thanks for the able, interesting and instructive centennial address which he delivered at eleven A. M., of the first day's session, and for his earnest, fresh and inspiring sermon that night.

Resolved, That we most highly appreciate the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of which he is the faithful and successful editor.

It is a valuable assistant to the pastor, a safe counselor in the family, a brave defender of the truth, a zealous opponent of evil.

Its voice is raised in behalf of purity and right. We pray for its large success and usefulness, and will use all practicable efforts to put a copy of it into every family.

R. W. JONES.

Sec. Dist. Conference.

JULY 8, 1884.

A Centenary Watch-Night.

On Friday night, April 9, 1742, the first watch-night service in London was held by Mr. Wesley.

It is proposed that we have a Centenary watch-night on August 6, 1884.

This service the church is requested to come together and unite in earnest prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

1. We need, as ministers, a baptism of the Spirit of God, the spirit of holiness, of power from on high.

2. The church needs this baptism. (1) To quicken the cold, lifeless members. (2) To increase the measure of grace and religious comfort in the hearts of the faithful. (3) To awaken sinners and to convert the penitent.

3. The service of each place to continue at least one hour, beginning at eight P. M., August 6.

4. A prayer meeting held in Baltimore, closing at nine o'clock, will end just as the meeting in St. Louis begins; and when the St. Louis prayer meeting closes, the meeting in Denver will have commenced; and when the Denver meeting closes at nine o'clock, it will be past eight in San Francisco.

When the San Francisco meeting closes at nine o'clock, it will be midnight in Baltimore, and thus across this great continent the voice of prayer and supplication will go up to the throne of grace in one continuous appeal for a revival of the work of God.

Brethren, are there any among us who do not feel the need of this work? Are there any that will refuse to co-operate in this movement? Are there any reasons why we should not engage in this appointed time in this concert of prayer?

The Central Centenary Committee, by formal action, invites the church to observe the evening of August 6 for such watch-night services.

R. B. RENDIX, Chm.

W. P. HARRISON, Sec.

Central Centenary Committee.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
THE WORD OF GOD.

BY GEORGE SHARPE.

How precious is thy sacred word,
My gracious, kind and loving Lord;
It fills my mind with heavenly light,
And brings my Saviour to my sight.
It points me to the things above,
Where all is joy and peace and love;
When called to suffer grief and pain,
It comforts and brings the heart again;
There Jesus shines on every page,
Our fears and sorrows to assuage;
It is a sure, unerring guide,
To lead us to the Father's side,
It smooths to all the path of life,
And when we shall see the fearful strife,
Will lead our souls above the sky,
Where sin and death forever fly.
To live with God and angels bright,
In that bright world where is no night.

Spiritward.

Every one who looks at the past must ask, Whence? and he that looks to the future must ask, Whither? An atheist would answer both questions by saying we came from nowhere and will return to the same country. The agnostic would answer with a simple "I do not know." The devout Christian would say, We are God's children, and will receive an inheritance with his heirs. Between the whence and whither there not only swings the pendulum of time, but also that of human thought and destiny.

If we were to inquire of the "watchman" what is the world's great trend? what is its movement and its end? we would not, perhaps, get an answer as from whence it came or to whither it was going, but an answer as to the now and that would be spiritward. Let us look at this tendency in human experience, in philosophy, in government and in the church.

I take an experience common to every life. Every man has thoughts of his childhood, of his young life, and these are intimately associated with the objects that gave them being. These symbols, around which hang his most delightful memories, are one by one decaying and passing out of their former existence. The stones are broken up, the trees are dying, the forests are cleared up, the houses rebuilt, the branches and creeks changing their course. All that is left him is the memory of things that have been. His very experience is spiritualized. The trend is only in one direction.

The work of the plodder is to unearth facts for scientific purposes. Facts are not things, only ideas of things gathered from activities. When these facts are collected by the thinker, and transformed into thoughts that make for the betterment of our race, we need not ask the tendency. Materialism is losing itself in the governments of the world, and we are fast learning the principle that a people is best governed who have the least use for government. Whenever any nation becomes so obedient that there is no need for the enforcement of any law you have the model, the ideal of earthly governments. What is lost in rulers, in codes, in prisons, in courthouses, etc., is gained in manhood, in principle, in freedom, in virtue, in truth, in goodness, etc. The trend is the same.

Since the day John Wesley began to preach a new movement has been introduced into the church, or rather an old movement has been intensified. The Jewish Church was a failure in spiritual power, because of its adhesion to rites and ceremonies, to formality and deadness. Christianity has suffered from this cause, and in many institutions suffers until now. Apostolical succession on a historical basis is one of the drawbacks in some churches. Some reverence the Bible to such an extent as to render it almost a fetish, even when it is written "the letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive." Some seem to think and preach more crucified than "Christ and him crucified." Some could never endorse St. Paul's principle, "though I have known Christ after the flesh, yet know I him so no more."

I place true Methodism as the highest blossom on the "tree of life," justly ignores all such materialistic views, and worships God, not in the church, its rights, its members, but "in spirit." It looks beyond the outward man to the inner man, and teaches him, not that he must belong to the church or be baptized, etc., but that he must have the testimony in himself that he is a child of God.

Let us then gather up the threads of our argument. We have seen that the trend of experience, of philosophy, of government and, lastly, of the church is spiritward. This world, in all its complications and mysteries, in its wonderful unfoldings and revelations, in its beauty and deformity, teaches us one great, grand lesson—its spiritual tendency as comprehensible by the human mind. The tendency of this movement on individuals is to make them better acquainted with themselves, by a close examination into their powers and usefulness. The tendency on humanity is to bring it more in conformity with our heavenly Father and his divine Son, if these are the objects to be accomplished, and if the Methodist Church is in wonderful harmony with such a movement, then we need fear no evil to our Zion, for the same spiritual forces that have made her great in the past will carry on her work in the future; until all things are subdued to the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and the glory of God established forever.

JOHN E. ROBINSON.

Sunday-School Celebration at Franklin-ton, La.

Our time to rejoice has come. The hearts of all were made glad by holding a Sunday-school celebration on the fourth of July. Preliminary steps had been taken early in May. Suitable, judicious and active committees were appointed, selection of speeches, dialogues and discussions were made, and as the day approached the interest manifested by old and young was intensified. The spacious and shady grove around Mile Branch Church was at an early hour filled with anxious and expectant hundreds. Grandparents with silvered locks and feeble step, and smiling infants, were also there. The day seemed propitious. The sun's beams passing through floating clouds were soft and mild. The air was balmy and pleasant. At ten the organ, accompanied by a score of rich, mellow voices, summoned the multitude to well-arranged and comfortable seats. No. 165 of the New Life was used as the opening hymn. Prayer was offered. No. 53 was then sung with great effect. The opening address was beautifully rendered by Miss Mary W. Bateman. A short address on the mutual duties of a neighborhood and its Sunday-school was delivered by the writer. And while "The flowing fountain" was being beautifully and grandly rendered the clouds that had been sending down almost daily showers for the past month caught the inspiration, and sent down their flowing fountains for the space of two hours and deluged the grounds. The crowd retreated to the church for shelter, and there a most attractive, happy and social scene was enacted. Friend held fellowship with friend. All hearts beat in unison, while the sweetest music was made by skillful and fair fingers on Estey's best instrument, cultured and mellifluous voices harmonizing in its vivifying strains. Ere the rain had ceased, and while pearly drops were hanging from leaf and flower, and suspended in mid-air, all lit up by the sun's bright rays, a procession was formed, children in front, and a grand march was made to the grandest table ever supported by fifty legs. It was circular in form, fifty yards in diameter, one plank wide, with a center table ample enough to hold the stuff of life, the twenty-five barbecues of sheep, lamb and veal, the scores of Methodist preachers' fowls and the countless rich and rare delicacies. The crowd surrounded the table as if by magic or military strategy. No Joshua's horn was blown, but a blessing was asked; no walls fell, but a feast was enjoyed richer than the food given to the Israelites in the wilderness. The St. Nicholas Hotel in New York is not conducted with more success than was displayed by the Messrs. Bateman and their able coadjutors on that occasion. And if the managers of the World's Exposition at New Orleans need good, efficient and true men to head any of its departments no better can be found than these. After such a happy morning and such a sumptuous dinner of course everything was inspiring and everybody in the best humor.

At two o'clock the programme was resumed, and each piece and every song was better than its predecessor. The interest culminated in the appropriate, able and efficient address of Dr. Aiford, of Washington parish, La. The doctor is a retired physician, and seems now "ready unto every good word and work."

Methodism is doing something here. The "children's day" will be held at Franklin-ton on the first Sunday in August. We would be pleased to see an editor's or a college president's face. Come and see us.

Fraternally, ROBERT MOORE.

Family Religion.

(Report on the State of the Church, Adopted by the Board of District Conference.)

The family is God's institution for the perpetuation and good government of the race. Here are both Church and State in miniature. This is clearly shown in the first form of government instituted of God in which the father was both high priest and chief magistrate of his own household. This government not only has the divine sanction, but the sure promise of the divine favor and blessing upon its proper administration. This is seen in the case of Abraham, of whom God said: "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment, that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him." This is the reason given as to why he should become a great and mighty nation, in whom all the nations of the earth should be blessed. But failure in this administration has nothing but the promise of bringing the gray hairs of the parents in sorrow to the grave and the entailment of the curse of the parents upon the children to the third and fourth generation. Nor does the curse stop with the immediate posterity of the parents thus failing, but is infectious and widespread in its consequences. This is shown in the case of Samuel's sons, through whose bad administration of the affairs of government Israel was led to reject God and ask a king. One has said that the family is the seed-plate of the church. Here the tender plants are reared, whence they are to be transplanted to the garden of the Lord; As are the seed and the plants thus sown and reared such are the growth and products of the garden. We all know that our best church members and most of our preachers come from well-regulated, Christian families. Not only so, but our best citizens come from the same quarter. Home training shows itself everywhere, at home, in the schoolroom, in the social circle, in business relations, in our legislative halls, on the battlefield. Said a distinguished Confederate general: "Our best and most reliable soldiers come from well-regulated households." It is especially with the fact that good family government promotes the spiritual interests and eternal salvation of children that we, as a church, have to do. And on these accounts we would emphasize the necessity, the absolute necessity, of good family government. Childhood is the gateway through which God and Satan both enter the world, and by this way the conquest of the largest number of souls is made. It is for the parent to say who shall enter, and for whom the conquest shall be made. It is not for us to lay down special rules to be adopted and rigidly adhered to in all families. The absurdity of such a thing will at once occur to every observing head of a large family. He knows that the same rules will not answer for the different members of the same family, but that he must study temperament and frame his rules according thereto. The utmost we can do, if possible, to impress upon the minds and hearts of parents the paramount importance of the spiritual interests of their children. With this impression deeply imbedded in the consciousness of Christian parents their minds will become prolific sources of wise methods and expedients. In general terms, this will lead to godly example, wise counsel, earnest prayer and proper discipline. Accepting, as we do, the teachings of God's word, we are bound to believe that parents are largely responsible for the conduct, character and destiny of their children. One fact which strikes us, and which is cause for much pain, is that children are turned loose to take their own course and shape their own character and destiny amid the uncertain or dangerous influences into which they may fall just at that time of life when they most need parental direction and restraint. Solomon says: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." This language clearly implies that the training is to continue through the formative period of life. The figure is that of a vine being trained on a trellis. We are not assured that the vine will not switch off till it has reached the top of the trellis. So children are to be trained up in the way in which they should go, and the promise is when they are old they will not depart from it. Eli's family was cursed because "his grown up sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not." The judgment and eternity may make some fearful revelations on this subject. If this Centennial year of our beloved Methodist can witness a return to the custom of the fathers, a family altar in every home, much will have been accomplished toward her perpetuity and success as an agency for good in the Master's cause. We offer for adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That every Methodist head of a family should keep up regularly, night and morning, family prayers. Resolved, That it is the duty of pastors to urge upon our people, both in public and in private, the faithful discharge of this duty.

J. D. CAMERON, for Committee.

Personal and Pleasant Memories.

MR. EDITOR: Of late years I seldom trouble the knight of the tripod, but in your last issue appeared an obituary notice that awoke sweet memories of other days and brought me again in vital contact with scenes and associations that transpired twenty-seven years ago. That year the sainted dead alluded to was my parishioner, and I a novice in the ministry. My first night upon the work was spent at his beautiful and hospitable mansion in company with my predecessor, the Rev. G. T. Vickers, now of Covington. I found the family composed of himself, his wife and a sister-in-law, then a charming young lady of deep piety and rare literary and social accomplishments.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men Taken at the flood leads on to fortune"

(I quote from memory) sings Rochdale's noble band, and ages yet unborn will echo back the truism. On that night began the labors, joys and the varied and checkered experiences of 1857, to me the happiest year of my life. The work consisted of two appointments, the county seat and a neighboring village, and was served on alternate Sabbaths. On the second Sabbath in May began a work in the village, the like of which I have not since witnessed. The divine Schekiah unveiled in part the hidden mysteries of redeeming love, and with his glorious presence filled his sanctuary. Saints shouted, sinners wept and penitents cried out, "Men and brethren, what must we do to be saved?" A literal fulfillment of the prophet's declaration: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount upon wings as eagles, shall run and not be weary, shall walk and not faint." With unabated interest the great work swept on through the remainder of the Conference year. Scores were added to the church, and "the bow of promise" sat as "a thing of beauty" upon the brow of the church of God. It was then and there I began to know and to love Daniel G. Pepper, of Richland, Holmes county, Miss. The deceased was then in the prime of life, and surrounded by princely affluence. He was the preacher's first friend, the church's liberal supporter. His house was an oasis in the itinerant desert, and doubtless many of "the redeemed of the Lord" will rise up "in that day" and call him blessed. During these months of revival power, when penitents were converted at nearly every bi-monthly appointment, he often told me with suppressed emotion, "Brother, I have never felt the Lord so precious as during this year," and the brethren oft remarked, "I have never seen Bro. Pepper so thoroughly suffused with the Holy Ghost." Those are yet living in and around that once beautiful but now dilapidated village to whom the scenes sketched above are well remembered.

With the close of the year my labors ended for a time with that loved church. I was gone for ten long years, during four of which the continent shook beneath the red hoof of battle. The direct campaign recorded by the historic Morse was waged. Theories and principles hitherto regarded axiomatic, and whose locks were whitened by the flight of years, were overturned as if nothing worth. I was returned. Much I found changed, but not in Bro. Pepper. The same plain, sweet spirit characteristic of his former self, the same staunch friend of the preacher and the church. After this year I seldom saw him, but doubt not his "path grew brighter and brighter" till in the valley of death he met "the chariot of the Lord and the horsemen thereof," and was borne to Abraham's bosom. I lay this little wreath upon his new-made grave with the prayer to Elijah's God that "the widow's barrel of meal and cruse of oil" may ever be replenished.

WAYNESBURG, MISS., July 6, 1884.

Moreau Street Church.

We left home, near Minden, La., on Wednesday before the first Sunday of this month for our city home as pastor of the above-named church. It was not long after reaching here before we were enjoying the hospitalities of Dr. Adams, whose family treated us in a manner calculated to make a new preacher feel that he had fallen among God's good people. We found the church newly repaired and wearing a tasty appearance, much to the credit of its members. Our office has been comfortably furnished by the Ladies' Aid Society, and in that respect we have all that we could wish. A nice boarding place was procured near the church, and in a Christian family whose influence is like home to us.

This people have not had a pastor among them this year, but have been blessed with good preaching on Sunday from Bro. Ivy. He could not be among them in the family circle, as his home was up town, some distance away. Our service on Sunday was very well attended, and the sacrament was administered by Bro. Ivy. Our soul longs to see this people blessed with the outpouring of God's Spirit, and hope that one and all will "come up to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." We do earnestly pray that God will bless our labors, and that this church, now seemingly in a cold condition, before this year closes will be "spiritualized and active in promoting the cause of our blessed Saviour. Brethren, it is time for us to work, and it is our privilege to feel that "the Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge."

HORACE KIMBALL, P. C.
NEW ORLEANS, JULY 9, 1884.

From Texas.

MR. EDITOR: Your excellent paper finds its way to me here in north Texas, and is just as welcome a visitor now as it was last year at Marietta, Miss. My work this year is the Colfaxville mission, Sherman district, North Texas Conference. I like Texas very well, but can not get as near the people here as I could in Mississippi. We have had no revival meetings yet, but have received twenty-six members into the church, most of them by letter. I heard the history of your conversion not long since, from the lips of Dr. J. S. Moore, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Sherman. He told me that you and he were at college together. He left Sherman a few days since for Belfast, Ireland, whither he goes as a delegate to the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance. He esteems you very highly, and bade me if I should ever write to you to give you his best wishes, which thing I do. Long live the Advocate.

Yours, R. J. ALLEN.
COLLINSVILLE, TEXAS.

Obituaries.

REMBERT—J. P. REMBERT died, April 8, 1884, in his fifty-ninth year. He was born in Copiah county, Miss., where the whole of his life was spent. He was married to Miss Sarah Jane Holaday, of the same county, January 29, 1851, who survives to mourn his loss. In his early life the writer knew him intimately, attending the same school with him. He was then a pleasant companion in a social way. After a separation of years we met at a protracted meeting, where in conversation he expressed himself as desiring above all things the knowledge of his acceptance with God. Soon after this he became a great sufferer and conscious that he was near life's close. He prayed very earnestly to God for pardon and mercy, and though he felt great fear of death, yet when the hour came he was calm and peaceful, leaving to his loved ones the consolation that he rests in Jesus.

TURNER—The subject of this notice, MRS. GOODMAN TURNER, was born in Charleston, S. C., July 2, 1829. She was married, in Mobile, to Mr. Samuel C. Turner, January 28, 1847. She was the child of godly parents, and early taught to remember her Creator. In after life she experienced a gracious evidence of pardoning grace.

She was amiable in disposition and pleasant in her manners. She was for years a sufferer from an inward cancer, but did not murmur against God. She remarked to a friend, as she selected a spot for her grave, that she knew her end was near, but "I am prepared and willing;" but the thought of the affliction and bereavement of her children was most painful. In May, last, her disease suddenly developed into mortal violence, and on May 25, 1884, at Arcola, La., she passed from pain and suffering to eternal rest. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; they rest, and their works do follow them. Her example and her end invite the loved ones who mourn her loss to meet her in "fairer worlds on high."

T. N. WALKER.

COMPTON—Died, in Richland parish, La., May 21, 1884, Mrs. JULIA E. COMPTON, whose maiden name was Potter. Sister Compton was born in Illinois county, Ala., June 1, 1822; moved to Copiah county, Miss., in 1855; from thence to Louisiana in 1840. She was married to W. W. Compton, October 9, 1851.

Her disease was cancer, which caused her intense suffering; yet she endured it all without murmuring. I visited her a short while before her departure and found her suffering greatly. I asked her if she realized that the Lord was with her in her afflictions. She said that she did, and if it were not for his assistance, she could not endure her affliction; that she only waited for him to say: it is enough; come up higher. Sister Compton joined the church in 1837, and remained a member of the church militant until the day of her death, when her membership was transferred to the church triumphant. She truly died in the faith, exhorting those around her to meet her in the holy city; also sending messages to absent ones to meet her in heaven. May the Lord incline their hearts to enter the highway that leads to eternal life, and comfort the bereaved!

C. T. MCHOLLAND.

AUSTIN—The following resolutions were adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Spring Ridge circuit:

Resolved, As it has pleased Almighty God, in his providence, to take out of this world the soul of our beloved brother, J. G. Austin; therefore, be it resolved, by the Quarterly Conference of Spring Ridge circuit that while we bow with submission to the will of God, we feel that we sustain a loss in the death of one so useful and benevolent in our church. In the death of Bro. Austin the community has lost a valuable citizen, his family an affectionate, kind and indulgent husband and father.

Resolved, That we sympathize with his afflicted family, and pray that God may uphold them by his grace and enable them to be resigned to his will in this their sad bereavement. Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon a separate page of the record book of this Conference, and a copy sent to the family, and also to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

W. E. HARRIS, For Committee.

TURNBOW—Died, at her home, in Red River parish, La., February 28, 1884, WILLIE A. TURNBOW, wife of W. D. Turnbow. She was married April 6, 1852; was a daughter of W. T. and M. A. Cargill; was born January 2, 1833; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, July, 1851, and continued a faithful member till death.

Willie possessed a quiet, amiable disposition, was frugal and industrious, and acted well the part of a fond, affectionate, true and loving wife. No husband ever lost a better wife, no parents a more loving daughter; no true or kinder sister ever lived. Her neighbors have lost a true friend; but heaven has gained a soul. She leaves a little babe ten months old. Oh! it seems hard that death should invade the home, the circle of friends, and snatch from our embrace one we love so well, and yet so young! Her race is run; Willie is at rest. Let her sleep until Jesus shall wake her with all of God's children to dwell with him forever. Her uncle,

B. B. CARGILL, L. D.

McGEHEE—MRS. AGNES D. McGEHEE, wife of Mr. S. M. McGehee, died in Cono, Miss., May 20, 1884. Sister McGehee was born and reared in Panola county, and was near forty-six years of age when called to her reward.

She had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about twenty-two years, leading a beautiful Christian life to the day of her death. For three long years she suffered, her kind, anxious husband and large circle of attentive friends expecting her departure at any time. Through all these afflictions no impatience was seen; the Lord was present. When friends were singing at her request, although in an agony of pain, her pure spirit, so near its final home, would respond, "How sweet!"

May this same sweetness of communion with Jesus enjoyed by her be realized in life and death by the dear weeping ones left behind that they may join her where parting is no more!

E. D. RANSKY.

HAYES—At a called meeting of the Sabbath school, of the Opelousas Methodist Episcopal Church, on motion, J. T. Stokes was elected chairman, and J. M. Morris, secretary. On motion, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted unanimously by a standing vote.

Whereas, It hath pleased the wise and gracious Lord, our Saviour, to take from our school CHARLES P. HAYES, son of J. L. Hayes and Mary V. Thompson, born January 8, 1875, and died May 19, 1884; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we regret his departure from our midst, but rejoice in the hope of his far happier state.

Resolved, That we will try to love his Saviour better and influence others to do the same that we may also be welcomed to that better land.

Resolved, That we offer to his parents and teachers our sympathy.

Resolved, That the foregoing be published in our paper, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

J. M. MORRIS, Sec.

HOWELL—EDWARD T. HOWELL was born May 31, 1858. In early life he professed religion and was happy in the love of God. He was received into the church by Rev. John Hancock, on October 12, 1881, he was happily married to Miss Mattie Coleman, who now is bereaved of a loving husband; yet a sweet little boy, hearing his father's name, cheers his gloomy hours. Edgar was always a good boy, and loved his mother devotedly. He died in peace at Rutherford, Tenn., May 22, 1884.

H. D. HOWELL.

McKAY—PEARL M. O. McKay, daughter of W. F. and E. L. McKay, died, October 17, 1883, aged five years, two months and twenty-four days.

EDDIE J. N. McKay, son of W. F. and E. L. McKay, died, October 17, 1883, aged eleven years, four months and fourteen days.

Little Pearl was the star of the family; but God has taken her to shine more brightly in heaven. We miss the pattering of little feet and the song of the "Sweet By-and-By," which she so often sang. The withered and blooming again in heaven.

So soon has death revisited our home! Eddie was our joy and pride. He was of a loving, peaceful disposition, his schoolmates loved him. "The days he died he sang, 'Hallelujah! Hallelujah!'" When his little sister died he tried to comfort his sisters and brothers by telling them of that better land. Now he, too, is gone to unite with the angel hands "around the great white throne." May God keep us who are left from all sin, so that when the summons come we also may be ready!

FANSIE.

REGAN—REBECCA JANE, widow of Joseph Regan, and eldest daughter of Samuel and Mary Ann McRee, died at the home of her brother, J. J. McRee, near Marion, Union parish, La., April 14, 1884, after several months of painful suffering. She was born in Copiah county, Miss., 1833. She died at the age of fifty-one years.

She professed religion when a child and joined the Methodist Church, which she was a member near thirty-seven years. We have lost a true and loving aunt; but our loss is her gain. She left this world calmly, and in her last illness she said she did not fear death. Her only desire to live was to enjoy the society of her two sons, whom she loved tenderly. She leaves a number of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. He of good cheer, leave her ones! She is not dead, but sleeping.

L. W.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

The advantage of using an article that is pure and always uniform, is, you are certain of having the same satisfactory results. Eight prominent Professors of Chemistry, of national reputation, have analyzed the Ivory Soap, and the variation in each is so trifling that the quality of the "Ivory" may be considered reliably uniform. Each pronounced to be remarkably pure and a superior laundry dry soap.

PHOTOGRAPHS

The Finest Establishment in the South.

WASHBURNS

Photographic Parlors

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal New Family Residences, the best day, and almost directly opposite the City Station. You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERIES

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait, known to art, from the miniature for the pocket to the life-size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon, etc. Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged to the likeness faithfully preserved.

THE NEW HIGH ARM

SINGER SEWING MACHINE

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!

—FOR—

Range of Work, Perfection

Stitch, Ease of Operation,

Rapidity, and almost

Noiseless.

GREAT REDUCTION

25% in prices of NEWER and better Sewing Machines, and parts for the Singer Sewing Machine. New Family Residences, the best day, and almost directly opposite the City Station. You are cordially invited to visit our McCall's House Patterns, Catalogue Free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

185 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

S. H. RUNDLE, Agent.

YALE & BOWLING

WHOLESALE

DRY GOODS

AND NOTIONS

17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 58 Common Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HENNING.

THURSDAY JULY 17, 1884.

The Irish Christian Advocate of June 20 is a Conference number, containing a supplement with full proceedings of the one hundred and fifteenth session in Belfast. The blessed old opening hymn was sung, "And are we yet alive?"

The session was a notable and harmonious one.

New Jersey enacted a new law that went into effect on the fourth of July, worthy of place on the statute books of every commonwealth. It "makes it a misdemeanor for any minor under eighteen years of age to play billiards or pool in public houses of any kind." And the proprietor who allows such an one to play is liable to a fine of $20 for each offense. If parents do not restrain their children, the State must. Hoodlums produce outlaws. Better hedge the boy than hang the man.

We can not too earnestly and repeatedly urge our brethren to circulate religious papers. The people grow in intelligent piety and liberality as they read how Christ is administering the affairs of this world in the interest of human redemption. Wendell Phillips once said: "Let me make the newspapers, and I care not what is preached in the pulpit or what is enacted in Congress." We would not accord the press an equal power with the pulpit, but there is sufficient force in the utterance to make every Christian redoubtful diligence in circulating religious papers. We must have "an Advocate in every Methodist family." Anything less will depreciate our Centenary glory and affect our monumental offerings.

"The American Congress of Churches" is a new movement in the interest of Christian unity. Whether needed or not and whereunto it will develop remains to be seen. We believe in the broadest catholicity, but at the same time in denominational and doctrinal integrity. Methodists too often mistake latitudinarianism for liberality. This idea of "The American Congress of Churches" originated in Pittsfield, Mass., and is favored and fostered by ministers of all evangelical denominations, including Bishop Clark, of the diocese of Rhode Island. The following statement, prepared by Dr. J. H. Seelye, president of Amherst College, Bishop Clark, and Dr. Joseph Anderson, of Waterbury, Conn., has been adopted:

1. The name of the new organization shall be "The American Congress of Churches."
2. The object of this Congress shall be to promote Christian union, and to advance the kingdom of God by a free discussion of the great religious, moral and social questions of the time.
3. The Congress shall assemble at intervals of two years.

The management of the organization has been entrusted to a committee of twenty-five. It is thought that the first meeting will be held in New Haven, Conn., in May, 1885.

Smarting under our exposure of its apology for the whisky business, and its lame defense of that "Vicksburg sugar-bowl" affair, the Morning Star shows spite and naughtily calls names. Such epithets as "acrobat" and "juggler" are applied to us and freely used through a full column of ugliness. That is the common refuge of defeated debaters. What they lack in argument they supply with billingsgate. But we propose to hold the little angry "Star" to the question. We charge that by such affairs as the unrebuked raffle of a sugar-bowl "to the most popular bar-keeper" at a church supper, attended by priests and the faithful, and such teachings as the Morning Star on the whisky business, a paper published under the authority of Archbishop, Bishops and other clergy, that the church condones and sanctifies crime and wrong. This accredited organ of the church, issued under conspicuous "episcopal approvals," professing to teach spiritual truth according to infallible standards, defends raffling, advertises "purely whiskeys," "genuine straight article," "under full guarantee of satisfaction," and says the business per se is no worse than selling dry goods or drugs. Not less than five whisky advertisements appeared in one issue. If priests "raffle" horses and buggies with impunity, and the Star advertises whisky and applauds the business, how can the church escape complicity in gambling and mixing drinks?

The Presidential Campaign.

We are again entering upon a quadrennial political contest, and it promises to be unusual exciting. The two great parties are so nearly equal in strength that the issue is difficult to forecast. The one in power, flashed with the victories of twenty-five years, and sustained by immense patronage, will contest bitterly the last inch before lowering its flag. On the other side there is a party thirsting for power, strengthened by the disaffected and independent elements of the majority, and encouraged by the general American conviction that a change of administration is best for the purity of government, which will strain every nerve to regain its ascendancy. The character and enthusiasm of the two national conventions, and the sharp contest for the nominations, indicate the hopefulness and determination of each. Unless, therefore, an unexpected reform is vouchsafed to the American people we will have the usual campaign of slander. Each party will denounce the other without discrimination, and invoke the direst imprecations. The country will go to rotteness and ruin if the one remains in power, or will suffer revolution and anarchy if the other wins a victory. So in either case, according to the average newspaper and stump-speaker, the nation will be destroyed. And, strange to say, the ordinary partisan believes it, and grows wild with foolish excitement. Well, what has a religious journal and Christian citizens to do with the matter? Much every way.

In the first place, every citizen should vote. Clothed with the solemn privilege of suffrage, with responsibilities which can neither be neglected nor relegated to others, he can not be indifferent to the issues involved or the result of the contest. To exercise the elective franchise is an imperative duty. In Republican governments, founded upon and sustained by the popular will, it is the Christian citizen's sacred duty to use the power of the ballot in the interest of a good and honest administration.

In the next place, he should vote as he prays. He should deposit his conscience with his ballot. Let it be the expression of profound conviction, and not sectional, sectarian or partisan prejudice. To pray for good rulers and vote for bad men is an anomaly and sinful folly.

Again, we should study both principles and men. The old party shibboleth principles, not men, needs repudiation. Study platforms and see who have been nominated to represent them.

We should be slow to accept and repeat campaign slanders. They are hurtful to the soul and an injury to good citizenship. So far as our opinion may be regarded, we are glad to believe that both the distinguished gentlemen nominated for the presidency are of high personal character, and in either hands the nation will have a chief magistrate worthy of honor.

The End of Wesley's High Ecclesiastical Principles.

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Rigg, of London, a distinguished Methodist preacher, educator and author, has prepared a short Life of Wesley, and issued it in a "penny pamphlet." The salient facts of his remarkable career are admirably presented, though with scarcely any elaboration. We extract the following from that publication, and commend it especially to those Methodists whose Episcopal friends are fond of flaunting Mr. Wesley's high churchmanship. With what unctious do they repeat: "Why, Mr. Wesley never left the church; he died a good Episcopalian." After reading this they may be able to see how thoroughly our great Founder repudiated the apostolic succession—that "fable without the merit of being cunningly devised."

In the beginning of 1738 Wesley had been a high churchman; and even after his conversion in that year he continued for several years to hold in the abstract high church views as to points of doctrine. But in 1740 he abandoned high churchmanship. He relates in his journal, under date of January 20, 1740, how his views were changed by reading Lord (Chancellor) King's account of the primitive church. From this time forward he consistently maintained that "the uninterrupted succession was a fable which no man ever did or could prove." One of the convictions derived by him at this time from reading Lord King's book was that the office of Bishop was originally one and the same with that of presbyter, and the practical inference drawn by Wesley was that he himself was a "Scriptural Episcopos," and that he had as much right as any primitive or missionary Bishop to ordain ministers, as his representatives and helpers, who should administer the sacraments instead of himself to the societies which had placed themselves under his spiritual charge.

This right, as he conceived it to be, he was often moved to exercise, that he might satisfy the needs and outcries of his societies; but he refrained until he felt it was impossible to resist the call of Providence on behalf of the American Methodist Societies. In 1784, when the colonies had become an independent nation, Wesley ordained his trusted friend and helper, Dr. Coke, a clergyman of the Church of England, as superintendent for America, where Coke ordained Francis Ashbury presbyter and also superintendent, and where Coke and Ashbury together ordained the American preachers as presbyters. Thus American Methodism was constituted an independent church. To-day the Methodism of America, taken collectively, is the largest aggregate of national Protestantism in the world. The following year (1785) Wesley ordained Methodist ministers for Scotland. In 1789 he ordained a minister for Antigua and another for Newfoundland. A number of other preachers were ordained by him during the next three years. In particular, he ordained Alexander Mather in 1788 not only deacon and elder, but also superintendent, and on Ash-Wednesday, 1789, he ordained Henry Moore and Thomas Rankin presbyters, for the special service of the societies in England.

Methodism in Oxford, England.

The London Watchman of June 25 contains an interesting letter from Rev. Hugh Price Hughes concerning the growth and needs of Methodism in the old University town of Oxford. In the very place where Wesley and his young college friends met for Bible study, and where the term "Methodists" was first applied in derision, for the past three years a wonderful work of grace has been manifest. The history of a century and a half ago has repeated itself in the evangelistic zeal and labors of the Methodists in Oxford and neighboring villages. How marvelous is the adaptability of Methodism! It flourishes alike in the wilderness, on the mountain sides, in populous cities and under the shadow of great Universities. The following extract from Mr. Hughes' letter is good Centenary reading:

The outpouring of the Spirit of God has necessarily led to considerable efforts for the extension and consolidation of Methodism. Three new chapels have been built in different parts of this city at an aggregate cost of £1520. Methodism is now planted in each of the most important quarters of Oxford, and in two of these quarters is the only representative of evangelical Christianity in the midst of nine thousand people. Each of the new chapels has been consecrated by many conversions, has its own society and Sunday-school, and is the center of constant evangelistic activity.

The work in the neighborhood of Oxford is equally important. A few years ago Methodism was dying out of the villages of this circuit. But thanks to the appointment of a house missionary minister at Woodstock, and, above all, to the new life which has animated and multiplied our local preachers, the village societies have been revived and increased until we have now eighteen places on the plan. The terrible irregular debt which had almost crushed Bladon has been paid off. Woodstock and Tackley have been renovated, and long-standing burdens on Combe, Wootton and Headington Quarry have been removed. These operations have cost £445, and much of the credit must be given to the zealous efforts and affectionate ministry of my late colleague, the Rev. Arthur Martin.

Last year I uttered a loud lament because we could not at once build a chapel at Eynsham, a small town between Oxford and Witney, with more than two thousand inhabitants, but in which we were not represented. Once then, notwithstanding our heavy engagements, God has compelled us to undertake this also. The best site in the place has been obtained for £200, and a chapel is now being erected at a cost of £500. My last act in this circuit will be to open the new chapel on September 1, and on that day, thanks to the great efforts of many friends, there will be no debt left except the sum temporarily allowed by the Chapel Committee. Eynsham already reports a crowded congregation, thirty-five members and one hundred and fifty Sunday-school scholars.

Simultaneously with these building operations, local preachers and mission bands of zealous young men have been evangelizing the villages around Oxford in summer and winter alike. Open-air services and eight days' missions are systematically organized in every place. Temperance meetings are regularly appointed. Attempts are even made to relieve the monotony of village life by magic lantern entertainments in illustration of sacred history and Christian truth. Bands of enthusiastic men are sent from time to time to villages in which we have no preaching place, and in some of these villages the gospel is never heard except from the lips of our apostles in the open air. This special evangelistic work, in Oxford and the villages, has cost us during the last three years £300.

We have been most anxious that these extra and special efforts should not interfere with our regular circuit contributions or connectional funds. Our success in avoiding that danger is sufficiently indicated by the fact that during the three years now coming to a close Oxford has contributed to the seven connectional funds for which public collections are made £223 4s. 10d., as against £279 18s. 7d. during the preceding three years.

Delayed Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR: The last place of interest I visited in the beautiful capital was the spot where President Garfield went down before the fatal bullet of Guiteau. A brazen tablet, with a suitable inscription, marks the spot in the depot of the Pennsylvania railroad. The run from Washington to Philadelphia by the limited express was the most delightful ride I ever had in a railway coach. We passed through a most beautiful portion of Maryland, along the upper edge of Chesapeake bay and across the north end of the little State of Delaware and then along the margin of the Delaware river to my place of destination. The country all along bears the marks of industry and thrift. Towns, towns everywhere; elegant looking residences, dotting the hills and valleys with picturesque beauty; manufactories of all kinds, filling the air with the hum of business, and farms, evidencing an advancing condition of agricultural interests passed before the eye like a panorama. Arriving in Philadelphia at three P. M., I went immediately to the home of my host, Rev. W. C. Webb, where a hearty greeting awaited me, and I spent twelve days of delightful enjoyment under his hospitable roof-tree. On the ninth of May I entered the General Conference, and was presented to that august body by Bishop Bowman. I am satisfied that nobody can imagine my feelings as, a perfect stranger among strangers, I made my bow to that body of ministers and laymen. I did not, myself, try to analyze them. The greeting of the messenger of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the body was a cheerful one, and, as the messenger was unknown to every one present, of course that greeting was meant for the church he represented. As the formal, public reception of our delegation was fixed for the evening of the fifteenth, I had much time to rove around and see the sights. The first place visited was the old "Liberty Hall," where the Declaration of Independence was passed and signed, and where the old bell proclaimed freedom to all the inhabitants of the land. The hall is said to look like it did then, and it surely has an antiquated expression. The original chairs, in which the signers of that instrument sat, are ranged in a semicircle, and each labeled with the name of its occupant. The old bell, with a great crack on one side, hangs in the stairway hall, and bears the inscription from the tenth verse of the twenty-fifth chapter of Leviticus: "And ye shall proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." I thought "those revolutionary heroes displayed quite as much foresight as courage when they inaugurated a system of government based upon the idea of the liberty of all the land and all the inhabitants thereof." How wonderfully have their prophecies been fulfilled. Of course no stranger visits Philadelphia without going through the Zoological Gardens. The collection here is said to be the finest and largest on the continent. Here are animals from all quarters and climes, and birds of every feather, and reptiles from jungle and brake of many lands. You can see beavers, from white mice to elephants, from prairie dogs to a graffe. The tropics and the frigid are fully represented. There are birds from a didapper to a swan, from a partridge to the "Condor of the Andes." I think of all the ugly things the monkey carries off the palm. A man needs to take a good natural history along with him, and spend much time in comparing notes in order to learn. Some of our party seemed to be so hurried that we were hastened through too quickly. The growing evil of the age is hurry. Everything must hiss with steam or else nothing is being done.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Ziegler I had a most delightful drive through Fairmount Park. Some of the Centennial Exposition buildings are still standing, among which is the Horticultural Hall, just as it was in 1876. It contains many things of rare interest and beauty, and, as it is well protected, it is a place much resorted to during the winter months. In January, from the city to the Horticultural Hall is like stepping out of the frozen regions into the balmy air of the West Indies. Fairmount Park has some of the most lovely landscapes that ever eyes rested upon. There is just enough of hill and dale, tree and shrub, with here and there a vista of exceeding beauty, to make a drive through it a most agreeable one indeed. We continued our drive along the bank of the picturesque Schuylkill and up the romantic Wissahickon, a place much frequented by the toilers in the great city during the summer evenings. Away up this little stream is an eating-house, and here I saw a sign swung out, the words of which are enough to make a Louisianian sea-sick. There it was in big letters and no mistake, "Catfish and Waffles, a Specialty." It was a most emphatic utterance to a man hailing from the waters where red fish and red snapper and pompano and sheepshead sport themselves. We did not partake of that combination, but chose in preference a delicious quaff of rich Alderney milk. The drive occupied over two hours of time, and measured about fifteen miles in distance. Chatty companions added much to the interest of the occasion. I heard from Mr. Ziegler that the citizens of Philadelphia pay the tax to keep up Fairmount Park more cheerfully and readily than any other tax. I suppose the Southern cities will follow along after a while in the matter of public parks maintained at public expense. After this pleasant drive I attended a most entertaining and instructive lecture on "China and the Chinese," by Rev. S. Whitehead, a former missionary to China from the English Wesleyans, and one of the fraternal delegates to the General Conference. He is a man of fine address, and possesses great facility and felicity of speech, and his talk of one hour and ten minutes was listened to with perfect attention. He seems to have a penchant for alliteration. I never noticed so much of it in any speaker before, many of his sentences being almost entirely constructed in that way. He combines the humorous and the pathetic, and the descriptive in a marvelous manner. He tried to give his audience an idea of the population of China by saying that if you would place the Chinese in a line, three feet apart, the line would wrap around the earth ten times.

Another place of great interest to me was the United States Mint. Police guides showed us through the various apartments, and explained the many processes of coining money. Here I saw great blocks of silver, piled from floor to ceiling, and reminding me of that passage of Scripture in regard to silver in the days of Solomon. Here were "pennies" by the peck and gold encrusted. With such an institution as this mint to stand behind the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, at Washington, there is no wonder that Uncle Sam don't know what to do with his much money. The facilities for getting about in this city are very good, but cost more than in New Orleans. The price for a street car ride on any one line is six cents, with a courteous conductor to receive your fare and call out the different streets his car crosses, so that you need have no apprehensions as to getting out of your way. There is a sameness about the construction of residences that is very monotonous to an eye accustomed to the greatest variety. The prevailing style is a three story red-brick edifice, just against the sidewalk and white stone steps. There are very few porches, and as for front yards, sprinkled with bloom, I see scarcely any. I suppose the ground is too valuable for flower gardens. The new city buildings, in process of erection, are expected to be the finest and most capacious of any on the continent. The view of the city from the top of these buildings is most impressive. On the one side is the Schuylkill and on the other the Delaware river, and the city lies between the two, in the shape of a wedge that seems to be trying to force itself down into the Delaware bay. The place of great interest to me, and which I have visited several times, is the Immense establishment of John Wanamaker. The interior is a vast circle, and the several stories contain everything, it seems to me. Cash-boys have been superseded by those curious things called pneumatic tubes, running from all parts of the building to the center. Here is a furniture store, book store, clothing store, house furnishing store, dry goods store, confectionery, baby carriage store, carpet store, picture gallery, jewelry store, crockery store, stove store, restaurant, and the young man told one of our party that they could supply "second-hand pulpit" if desired. It is certainly a marvelous place. But the fifteenth has arrived, and I must get ready for our reception this evening at eight o'clock.

C. W. CARTER.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15, 1884.

The following we clip from the Southwestern Methodist. There are very few candidates for church membership with us asking for baptism by immersion as compared with other years. In the earlier days such requests were quite common. But now many of our ministers have never performed the service according to that mode:

Rev. Dr. Tudor, pastor of Centenary Church, having six candidates for baptism by immersion, secured the use of the baptistry of the First Christian Church, Rev. William E. Hall, pastor. On Tuesday last the parties were baptized by the pastors of the two churches, Dr. Tudor baptizing two and Rev. Mr. Hall four.

The Seashore Camp Meeting.

Up to this writing the indications are that a more fruitful and joyful meeting was never held on the seashore. The attendance up to Saturday was not as large, possibly, as some other years, but every train brought fresh arrivals, and many of them from afar. The grounds this year seemed more attractive and beautiful than ever. Tents had been painted and repaired, new walks opened, and an expression of cordial, Christian welcome evident everywhere. The trees planted some years ago have attained sufficient size to give abundant shade, under which, along the beach, groups assemble, in the intervals of public worship, to be fanned by the cool gulf breeze. From observing the waves chasing each other to the pebbly shore, and contemplating the God whose glory they sing in ceaseless, rhythmic flow, we adjourn to the tabernacle for special offerings of prayer and praise. And some characteristic features of each service are to be commended. The first seats, nearest the altar, were in demand, and from the first meeting on Wednesday night. Those who came in latest were furthest removed from the pulpit. Then the singing was hearty, general and inspiring, although, occasionally, too deliberate. The preaching was earnest, direct, heart-searching, full of nuction and impassioned appeal. We have not enjoyed the ministrations of the pulpit more anywhere, nor witnessed more faithful work in the altar. All the old Methodist methods are emphasized at the Seashore. The choruses, now rarely if ever heard in our congregations, revived the memories of childhood, and made the old tabernacle echo with joy. Penitents lingered at the altar until they were converted, in the midst of the most active workers instructing penitents and joining in the service of song was Bishop Keener. Never shall we forget that prayer for conversion he offered on Friday afternoon. It had a thrill of phenomenal power, and stirred to the very depths the most earnest Christian.

The most ample arrangements were made for the comfort of guests, and from no one did we hear a word of unfriendly criticism or complaint. The tabernacle service was in the hands of Dr. J. B. Walker, presiding elder of the New Orleans district, Rev. B. S. Rayner, presiding elder of the Seashore district, and Rev. J. O. Keener, presiding elder of the Mobile district. Next week we hope to report accurately as to the number of conversions and accessions. To our editor is especially indebted to Bro. Foster for appreciated special courtesies.

—Dr. Hendrix will attend the Denver Conference, which meets July 23.

—A portrait of Mrs. James K. Polk has been placed in the green room of the "White House" at Washington, the gift of the ladies of Tennessee.

—Emory and Henry College has conferred the degree of M. A. honoris causa, on Rev. T. J. Newell, of the North Mississippi Conference.

—In Winchester, Va., there is a double cemetery divided by a wall. On one side 7,000 Federal soldiers lie buried, and on the other side are 3,000 Confederates.

—Rev. W. C. McCoy has been appointed financial agent of the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., by Bishop McTysie. Rev. H. M. Morris is his successor on the Decatur district.

—A revival is in progress at Ripley, in North Mississippi. Bro. Cordell has the assistance of Bro. Kilgore, whose evangelistic success has been phenomenal. We shall expect a report of great and gracious results.

—Rev. A. F. Watkins, Inman W. Cooper and P. A. Johnston, of the Mississippi Conference, left last week on a tour North, intending to take in Chattanooga and Monticello. From one or more correspondence is expected.

—Rev. M. C. Callaway, of the Mississippi Conference, stationed at Jackson, La., and Miss Celeste Lusk, of Jackson, Miss., were married at the latter place July 2. The editor of the ADVOCATE had the honor of officiating on the happy occasion.

—Father Hyacinthe has returned to Paris after extensive travels in this country. He seems to have found favor in the eyes of the Episcopals in America, and a number of times occupied their churches. His last sermon was in Grace Church, New York.

—The tenth World's Conference of the Young Men's Christian Association is to be held in Berlin, August 20-24. The opening address will be made by Count A. Bernstorff, president of the Berlin Committee. An excursion to Potsdam, the Emperor's country residence, is a part of the programme.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
FAIRER.

BY THOMAS DUNN MARSHALL.

Fairer than the boy leaves wandering,
Blood enlivened brow of victor brave,
Is the radiant perfume breathing
Round the martyr's lowly grave.Nobler than the proud arm shaking Spear shafts on the red-lined plain,
Are the former's hands breaking
The glebe for yellow-headed grain.Grandeur, too, that with words burning,
Striving up to war and strife,
Are songs that rattle the sun's and yearning,
And lift us to a nobler life.Sweeter than the love's own caresses
On the cheeks with passion glowing,
When her tangled curls are flowing,
With his arms bending and embracing.Are the words of blessing falling
From thrilling lips, as which we hold,
When for help we cry them calling
God's own sparkling waters cold.

D. D.

Come hither, my son, and while we rest under this pine, that seems whispering the secrets of the forest behind us to the murmuring, inquiring ocean yonder, that leans over on the strand to hear, then retire as if meditating on what has been heard, then rush forward again with another unnumbered question, and while the eye takes in the distant, motionless sail, let me raminate aloud to thee. It has come to this—like a certain Scriptural character I must speak or else I can not answer for the consequences of bottled-up thought. The season of commencement is over. Essays, held together with blue ribbon, have been written and read by thoughtful youths and able girls of sixteen. Questions, problems and mysteries of all kinds in art and science, poetry and philosophy, morals and religion have been met, solved, cleared up and made generally luminous in said essays. The thing is settled for the world, and the essay is to speak, also settled. It may be found after this month well settled in the bottom of some trunk in some far-off country home, without hope of resurrection.

Commencement is over. The speaker invited from a distance has returned to the bosom of his admiring family, who have already read in the morning telegrams that the sermon or address was able, scholarly and eloquent (the man sending the dispatch not having heard it). The returned speaker bears about with him a look of chastened triumph for several days; but after that time, and after two or three dozen adroit allusions to the market attention of his audience, etc., the speaker afterwards suddenly subsides into the jocular experience and hang-dog appearance of an every-day life that is unrelieved by dimities and introductions, deafening applause and general glorification.

Commencement is over. The red-hot college brand D. D. has been flourished and applied vigorously, and the smell of scorched ministerial flesh is in the air.

"Father, what is D. D.?"

Well, my son, it does not stand for double distilled, as some rashly suppose, nor dry as dust, as some maliciously suggest, but is one of the many remarkable combinations of the alphabet whereby some are made to feel glad, others sad, still others mad, and a chartered institution relieved of a heavy burden.

"I hardly understand you, father."

It is not difficult to comprehend. At one time it was thought that the only and great function of this alphabet was its service as a medium of communication between man and his fellow. This was a hasty conclusion; men grow wiser, discoveries thicken, inventions are blessing the earth, prominent among them the art of using the alphabet, and especially parts of the alphabet. For instance a body of gentlemen, representing a certain institution that is weak in its knees from a number of canes, can, by a wise use of one or more of the letters of the alphabet, not only help a friend make a friend, advertise a business, but also pay a debt, all to the comfort and glory of the institution. The whole thing is done by taking two or three letters, arranging them in a certain form, and applying them to the name, and you may say the person, of some individual; this constitutes the college brand.

The only arrangement difficult for them to make is the following. L. S. D. (pounds, shillings, pence). Failing here they make up for it with other combinations. But even here it requires much skill and nice judgment. It would never do to trust to a chance disposal. As for instance, if a college board, feeling the rewarding and delivering power of two or three letters presented to somebody, should accidentally happen upon this form, A. S. S. You see at once that not everybody would jump to the conclusion that this might stand for assistant scientific schoolmaster, but would insist that it was to be interpreted literally; and no matter how well the man's friends might think he had earned and deserved it, yet his own feelings might be rather warm for summer weather, and the college might lose a friend.

Or suppose the chance arrangement should be D. H., as I saw it once opposite a minister's name on a hotel register. I felt like protesting; sirs, you do him wrong; he is not D. H., but D. D.; you have mistaken a letter; but no, it seemed that while colleges had brands so had hotels; there was D. H. But this is a disgraceful. There are quite a number of kaleidoscope combinations in college use, some always in demand and never falling to please. They poorly all have a double meaning, the outer and inner significance. The one received and believed in by the world, the other known to a select few beside the board of gentlemen applying the brand. Here is one of the forms—B. A. The world outside sees in these letters two tower-like symbols of knowledge through which the bearer has evidently passed into fields of perfect erudition. The inner circle sees it thus, H. A. (th) So with M. D. Be hold the skillful deliverer of men, cries the crowd. M. (ur) D. (or) reads the select. So with Ph. D. Doctor of philosophy whisper men with bated breath as the branded man comes around, and they that branded him whisper also, but it is Ph. (il) D. (ol) "But what has all this to do with D. D., father?"

Everything, my son. D. D. is one of the favorite college brands; young men moan for it, middle aged men groan for it, old men will have it. And now you ask how it is given, and why? Sometimes it is administered medicinally; it comes up a depleted system; though in this light Cartwright, the pioneer preacher, refused it, saying he thanked God his divinity did not need doctoring. Sometimes, and I rejoice rarely, it has been given in recognition of a judicious application of whitewash and cement. Or in appreciation of a certain measure of influence in the branded man, or as brought to bear by his personal friends. Then the old chum feeling is quite strong and—don't stop me; I know what you are going to say, that you thought it required great attainments in theology, a ripe knowledge of the Greek, Hebrew and Latin, together with one's being a mighty expounder of God's word, a pupil giant, great in heart, head and deed in order to obtain this title. So it did once, but times have changed, my son, and the world is getting a new theology, or, worse, trying to get without one altogether, and preachers are numerous, and so are colleges, especially small colleges, and their existence must be known, and their prerogatives must be exercised at every hazard.

"Do all colleges bestow these titles with equal freedom and liberality?"

"Oh no; the small invariably surpass the large. In England the title D. D. is rarely given, and means much. In this country our great Universities give it more frequently than is done over the water, but still with great caution. It is the small college that wears it in this work, that seems possessed with the intense conviction that this is its mission on earth, for this purpose was it born into the world—to make D. D.'s. You would naturally suppose that a minister would prefer the title at the hands of a prominent seat of learning. This is true with a number; and so many are kept dodging through constant dread of one of these smaller institutions. But it is of no avail. The small college watches the papers and pulpits with morning glance, and just as soon as a man preps above mediocrity the boards rush in with the college brand, red-hot and resolute, and applying it vigorously, marks him for her own."

"I should think one would squall out, father, under such treatment."

Please don't use the word squall, my son; say rather he would give a great outcry, and so it happens sometimes. I know of an individual who had hoped for an University marking or titling, and was quietly hiding his time when suddenly a little college in Georgia suddenly over an able address of his at their commencement heated the irons, rushed upon him with one accord and branded him. He gave a great outcry; it was an unexpected, so painful, and, my son, he literally foamed at the mouth as he returned his acknowledgments. Now see the effect. The search of ministerial flesh, the sharp outcry, the fear of not branding as many as a sister institution of equal calibre, all these things fire the blood and excite the spirit of the little colleges. The battle color comes to the eye, the branding power to the hand, and away they dash into the thickest of the fight. The dull thud of the brand is heard doing faithful work, and the scream of the victim is also heard, and the acknowledgments flow like blood. The battle-cry is, brand, somebody if you can! but before you brand nobody be sure to brand anybody.

"But at this rate, father, there will soon be no preachers left without this title."

True, my son. By exact computation we find that at the present rate of conferring degrees the ministerial supply will be totally exhausted in ten years, seven months and three days.

"Then what?"

Doubtless you think you have thrown the colleges or myself into a quandary by your question. Not so; with prophetic gaze I see the escape from this great difficulty, for would it not be a difficulty? A college unable to confer degrees is like a doctor unable to reach his physic, or a man powerless to get his hand to his purse. Indeed more—Othello's occupation would be gone. Mark you now, the escape is this: When every preacher is a D. D. the college brand will then be changed for a different instrument altogether, something that shall be like a pair of forceps, something not of stamping, but extracting power. So that when this or that minister comes up to a college commencement with the ache and pain of D. D. upon him, and he shall by sermon or address cover himself with glory, the faculty and trustees shall consider his case, diagnose his power and influence, and, if pleased, shall apply the forceps and forever pull out the dead and cavernous D. D. from his name. Oh the relief. It shall come to pass in those days that it will be to a man's honor that he is without a title, and has no tail-like appendage to his name.

B. CARRADINE.

A Higher Life.

Mr. Editor: While attending modest lectures in Louisville, Ky., during the winter of 1882-83, it was also my privilege to attend a series of gracious revival meetings at the Walnut Street Methodist Church, corner of Sixth and Walnut. The meetings were conducted by the Rev. Samuel P. Jones, of Georgia, and Rev. J. C. Morris, pastor. There was a great revival in that church. Nor was it confined to "Sixth and Walnut," but other churches no doubt felt the leaven of it. Many sinners were converted, and many, very many, cold and sluggish professors of the Lord and Saviour were, by his power, brought to a sense of their duty, and made to rejoice in the fullness of his love. Among the latter was myself, who had come from a far-off State to be awakened to a deeper sense of the duties and obligations of Christianity than ever before. How prone are we to wander from the narrow way that leads to eternal life. And how soon do many turn aside, and thereby lose sight of the beautiful celestial city. Yet we know that his "yoke is easy and his (my) burden is light." Not content with the conversion of sinners and stirring up of church members, Bro. Samuel Jones urged upon us the importance and blessings of pressing forward to that higher life, and the danger of sleeping on our arms, being content to remain idle servants of the Lord. A goodly number of us entered into a covenant, and said that we would strive, by the help of God, to attain unto that higher life. I was among that number, and, though having been beset with many temptations and suggestions of the evil one, I still strive, and my prayer is that I may yet serve God more perfectly through Christ, our Lord. There are a good many professed Christians who speak lightly of holiness, and some of them hoist at it. It is against their taste and inclination to become holy in this world. Their affections are fixed on this world. Therefore it is no wonder that they can not "worship God in the beauty of holiness." It is necessary that we become holy in this world if we would make sure of that life of holiness that is to come, for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." If we love not the things which are spiritual in this world how shall we expect to love the things which are spiritual in the next? "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."

DECATUR, MISS., July 3, 1884.

Revival at Grenada.

Mr. Editor: Grenada is in the midst of great rejoicing, because God has signally blessed us. Early in May Rev. J. C. Caruthers, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Sidenstricker, of Water Valley, held a meeting of ten days' duration. The preaching was strong and sound, and commanded the attention of good congregations. When this meeting closed I began a series of services, which were continued twenty-four days, resulting in fifty conversions and twenty-five additions to the church. The power of the truth was felt throughout the community. Many came to church who had not done so for years. The meeting was a topic of conversation on the streets, and a general expression of wonder was heard that such a manifestation of divine power should be seen and felt in Grenada. Bros. Thomas, Newell and Poston, all of whom live in Grenada, rendered valuable assistance when not engaged in their own work. During the last week Bros. J. D. Cameron and Malone were with us several days, doing good work. The last Sunday of the meeting was the day for the commencement sermon of the Grenada Collegiate Institute. Bro. T. W. Dye was on hand to preach it. "Laying the principles of the doctrines of Christ, let us go on unto perfection" was the text. Our expectations were great, but they were fully realized. The sermon was worthy of the theme and the occasion. At night Bro. Jones, of Water Valley, gave us a pure gospel sermon. On Tuesday morning, at the college chapel, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan delivered a masterly address on Christian education. He followed new lines of thought, presenting them with a clearness that made them highly enjoyable and instructive. His eulogy of Mississippi, her men and women, was touchingly beautiful.

The three days of commencement exercises filled the interval between the close of our meeting and the beginning of one in the Baptist Church. Maj. Penn, the Texas evangelist, assisted by a sweet singer, Mr. Cairns, conducted the meeting for eighteen days. Maj. Penn was unique in his methods, everything having an air of novelty. He preached no regularly arranged sermons, but made earnest, convincing, captivating talks, interspersed with apt illustrations drawn principally from his own observation. His remarks on drinking, gambling and dancing will never be forgotten in this community. Vast crowds flocked three times a day to hear him. No church in town could hold the congregations. The members of the Baptist Church, assisted by the citizens generally, erected a large awning for the accommodation of the anxious people. It was certainly a meeting of great power. The number of conversions were one hundred and fifty-two, several of whom were skeptics. The churches here have new life, and Grenada is a new town. Sixty-three on profession of faith and twelve by letter, and quite a number yet to be received, is our share of the gracious work. We feel very grateful to God for his gracious visitation, and go on with our work with renewed energy. Yours,

T. Y. RAMSEY, JR.

Report on Temperance at Breckhaven District Conference.

We are gratified at the progress in our State of the cause of prohibition, the modern phase of temperance reform, and hope soon to see the day when the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages shall be banished from our commonwealth. Our church, with its rule forbidding the use of spirituous liquors except in cases of necessity, is a good temperance society of itself. Let all our preachers and people comply with this part of their obligation as church members, and our testimony against the vice of intemperance will be powerful for good. While we approve of prohibitory legislation on this subject, and of all other legitimate means of temperance reform, yet we would emphasize the fact that the regenerating grace of God is the most efficient means and, in many cases, the only means by which the drunkard can be saved from the domination of his vice. Recognizing intemperance as a social vice, we think one method of overcoming it is by countering social influences. The wine cup should be banished from the tables of our people on festive occasions, and it should never be so much as named among us that a member of our church would either treat or be treated to intoxicating beverages. Let us, as a church, maintain our true Christian dignity on this question of temperance, and let us throw every possible protection around the youth and young men of our country, to shield them from this seductive vice, which, perhaps more than any other we could name, is calculated to blight their prospects for this life and for that which is to come. In view of the widespread evils resulting from social drinking in bar-rooms, we are decidedly of the opinion that members of our church should not sign petitions for the granting of retail liquor license.

W. B. LEWIS, for Committee.

The Conference Brotherhood.

ANOTHER THOUGHTFUL LETTER.

Mr. Editor: The enclosed letter, from the son of the great, good and now sainted preacher, Peter James, will touch an appreciative chord in many hearts, and no doubt many prayers will ascend calling blessings and success upon the writer. Being intended only for private use, we trust our kind friend will pardon our forwarding it for publication; but we think it too good to keep. It will do the readers of the Advocate, those interested in the Master's work, and especially the members of the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood, much good to know that such a noble, generous heart is interested in the same great work, and willing to do good with what has been given him of this world's goods. May he receive a rich reward for the kind act.

BENTON, MISS., July 7, 1884.

THORNTON, MISS., July 4, 1884.

REV. I. W. COOPER: I have read in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of your Mississippi Conference Brotherhood. I admire the plan, and wish to add the object you have in view. I am not a minister of Christ's gospel, but I am a Methodist, and the son of a Methodist preacher, and want to become a member of your association, not that I may receive aid from it, but that I may contribute aid to comfortless widows and children of Methodist preachers. Inclosed you will find sight draft for $10 with which pay my initiation fee and assessment, if any due, or when any may fall due, and whenever there may, hereafter, any fall due notify me of my share, and as long as I live, or as long as God, in his mercy, enables me, I will remit. I ask an interest in the prayers of those who may receive any cheer or comfort from the little sums which God both enables and prompts me to send my needy fellow-creatures. Should there ever be any member unable from want of funds to meet his assessment, though anxious and willing, suppose you credit him with mine as I may remit, and when he becomes able let him pay, and keep my assessment for just such emergencies as this. I see from the ADVOCATE that such is likely to be a frequent occurrence. Yours,

PETER JAMES.

Blarvings.

HARKNESS-MCGAHEY—In the Methodist Church, in Waterproof La., July 9, 1884, by Rev. J. M. Brown, Mr. Jas. C. Harkness to Miss Julia K. McGahey, daughter of Rev. William McGahey, deceased, formerly of the Louisiana Conference.

BIGGS-FERGUSON—At the residence of the bride's father, A. J. Ferguson, Esq., July 9, 1884, by Rev. J. L. Forsythe, Mr. John Biggs and Miss Laura A. Ferguson, all of Beauregard, Miss.

ECKMAN-FERGUSON—In the Methodist Episcopal Church, in Wesson, Choctaw county, Miss., July 15, 1884, by Rev. J. L. Forsythe, Mr. J. W. Eckman to Miss M. C. Ferguson, of Choctaw county, Miss.

Obituaries.

ALLEN—Mrs. ALICE S. ALLEN was born April 1, 1851, and died at her home, near Crystal Springs, Miss., June 16, 1884, aged thirty years, two months and fifteen days. Her maiden name was Sobbe. She was married to Mr. Charles E. Allen, December 12, 1875, with whom she lived happily. They had four children born to them, the youngest of which is scarcely a year old. They have all been dedicated to God in baptism, and are bright and promising.

The subject of this notice was reared in the bosom of a godly family, and was received into the Methodist Church in 1870. She, however, was not fully satisfied of her conversion until the summer of 1873. During the second camp meeting that was held here she sought the Lord and was abundantly blessed. From that time till the day of her death she walked in the light of life and adorned the doctrine of God, our Saviour, in all things. She will be remembered by her former pastors, as she is by the writer of this tribute to her memory, as a quiet, unassuming, uniform, sweet spirited Christian lady. Always at her post of duty, with a cheerful countenance, betokening a pure and happy heart, she lived "as it becometh the gospel of Christ." Brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, converted in early life, and wedded to a Christian gentleman, she developed a strong and symmetrical Christian character that was alike beautiful and useful.

There were some features of her life and character that deserve special mention. She was an every-day Christian. Making a liberal use of her Bible and chamber of prayer, she made as few deviations from the path of rectitude as any one. She loved the house of God. Though living two miles in the country, with four small children, she would devise some way to come to church, and was often in her place on occasions of public worship than some who lived nearer and were more favorably situated for leaving home. She desired to be useful, and was in full sympathy with the interests of the church. Her pastor always knew her, had her prayers and co-operation in his work. In her home, made so attractive by the social and religious atmosphere that surrounded it, she dispensed a generous hospitality. It was one of those places where the burdened and care-worn minister of God loved to go.

Mrs. Allen's illness was protracted and painful. For twenty-five days she suffered with painful submission to the will of God. From the first of her sickness she had the impression that she would not recover. Indeed, for some time past the impression had been upon her mind that she would not live long. Was it the voice of the Spirit? When she would pray for long life, as she had done, the impression would come to her mind that the petition would not be granted, though to many petitions for other blessings she would get a favorable answer. Her friends partook of the same fear, that she would soon be called home. Her brother, Mr. Seibe, from Fort Worth, Texas, visited her last February, and left, feeling that he would see her no more, though at that time she was in her usual health.

During her illness she never asked her friends to pray for her recovery, though she said, if it was the will of God, she would like to live on account of her little children; but she felt that such was not his will, and she was resigned. She was a devoted wife, a fond mother, a loving sister, a consistent Christian. Her life was brief and beautiful, and her death peaceful. Early in the morning of June 16—the day of her death though seemingly better, she said she felt severely and asked if she was not dying. When the truth was fully known she had to bear, but rather rejoiced at the prospect before her. She knew she would be no stranger in heaven. About two hours before she died she was praying and became very happy. When sinking rapidly she said to one of her sisters, "I am almost home." She retained perfect consciousness, and continued talking till about ten minutes before she died. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." May we all be as well prepared for death when it comes as was Sister Allen!

W. B. LEWIS.

STONE—Mrs. SALLIE F. STONE, daughter of Rev. Stephen and Mary A. Gilmer, was born in Hawkins county, Miss., July 5, 1820, and married to M. D. Stone, January 8, 1878. She died in the bloom of life, May 25, 1884, leaving a devoted husband, a weeping father and three little children (one only six weeks old) to mourn her loss.

Our sister was taken away at a time when she seemed most needed. She not only had the care of and superintended her own household, but she also administered to the wants and comfort of her aged father, her mother having preceded her but a short time to the better land. The workings of Providence are indeed mysterious. It is not decreed for finite man toathom the depths of His infinite wisdom. We should conceive our selfishness as but morbid, and how in humble submission to his divine will.

Sister Stone's name was placed on the roll of the class book when only six years old at her own request. Some years after, and during a great revival in which many of her associates were coming into the fold of Christ, she took upon herself the obligations of the church, and over after lived a devoted and exemplary member. The writer has known Sister Stone from her infancy, and can truly say she was a kind and loving daughter, a devoted wife, a kind mother and one of the best of women. This was demonstrated on the day of her burial, the entire neighborhood turning out to show their last token of love and respect, and shed tears with those whom she had loved.

Bro. and Sister Gilmer raised only two children—a son and a daughter. This son was lost in the late war, the mother died in 1882, and now their devoted daughter, the last child, is taken away, leaving Bro. Gilmer to live a lonely life. Although he has many warm friends and relatives, yet they can not fill that aching void within. To her devoted husband we would say: Emulate her example and meet her in the glory land.

W. P. LOYD.

DENIGHT—Died, in Vicksburg, Miss., October 31, 1883, Mrs. ROSANNA DENIGHT, in the eighty-first year of her age. Sister Denight was born in 1802, and was one of the oldest, as well as one of the most highly esteemed, residents of our city. She died at her late residence on Walnut, between Grove and China streets. She suffered much and long, but through all with great patience and unflinchingly. She was born in Bedford county, Tenn., professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1837, in Westmoreland county, Penn., under the pastorate of Rev. William Long; moved thence to Pittsburg, Penn.; in 1855 moved to Vicksburg, Miss., where she resided until her death, and where she raised a large family—seven of whom have died: a son in 1858, in 1859 Mrs. M. A. Pelne, the (then) wife of Col. Pelne, of Vicksburg, who still survives her; in 1860 she laid away Sofia, a very lovely daughter, just blooming into glorious womanhood, made still more lovely by the reflection from her countenance of the Spirit of the Master, with whom she lived in sweet communion. She loved the songs of Zion—Charles Wesley's "Refuge in Christ" being her favorite. I had sang with her often as her steps neared the margin of the dark river; but she was without fear; and thus fell asleep in Jesus, Sofia Denight, a bright spirit transplanted to its heretofore abode. In 1871 another daughter, Mrs. Swords, was laid in the silent city of the dead; when leaving she would say: "Don't forget me when it goes well with you." Thus passed away her sweet spirit to meet the spirits awaiting her over there, and to see her dear Lord with whom she had walked so long in this life. Truly, "Privileged beyond the common walks of life is the chamber where the good man meets his fate." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Sister Denight was a great lover of "class meetings" that life of the church, which she loved much. I had the pleasure of attending class with her many years—most of the time as leader. Her seat was seldom vacant, and when present she was annually happy, thoroughly happy. Her illness was long and painful; yet she was always cheerful. I visited her often during her illness, and realized that it is far better to visit the house of affliction than the house of rejoicing. She would often after prayer with her, say: "Oh, brother, if the good Lord would only take me home! But I won't complain." When leaving she would say: "Don't forget me when it goes well with you." Thus passed away her sweet spirit to meet the spirits awaiting her over there, and to see her dear Lord with whom she had walked so long in this life. Truly, "Privileged beyond the common walks of life is the chamber where the good man meets his fate." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

JOHNSON—Died, near Ulen, Illinois county, Miss., on June 28, 1884, BRUCE BAKER, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Johnson.

We can not recall our loved one gone before; but, blessed be the holy name of God! we can go to them, May the "river of all good things" sanctify the affliction of the bereaved parents, and relations to their spiritual good.

J. D. McKENZIE.

McKENZIE—CHARLES SAMUEL McKENZIE was born August 20, 1881, died July 6, 1884.

Little Sammie was a sweet and promising child, just learning to say "papa" and "mamma," when the good Lord, "who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind," struck the tender bud from this world of care and transplanted it amid the glories of heaven to bloom forever.

W. W. CAMMACK.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

To produce instantaneously, in either hot or cold, hard or soft water, a promise, cream, and delightful lather, use the Ivory Soap, which, owing to its purity, will not cause redness or irritation of the skin.

PHOTOGRAPHS

The Finest Establishment in the South

WASHBURNS

Photographic Parlors.

109 CANAL STREET.

Are situated within a block of the principal Hotel, and almost directly opposite the Clay Square. You are cordially invited to visit our

PARLORS AND FINE ART GALLERY

There will be no obligation whatever. We make every kind of portrait known to the art, from the miniature for the pocket to the life-size.

Water Colors, India Ink, Crayon &c. Oil. Small and faded pictures copied and enlarged, and the likenesses faithfully preserved.

YALE & BOWLING,

WHOLESALE

DRY GOODS

AND NOTIONS

17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 88 Common Street.

NEW ORLEANS

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY JULY 24, 1884.

KEEP CLOSE TO ME, MY GOD.

Keep close to me, my God;
Keep close to me, my God;
The more I know of thee, and wilt—
Thy face is hidden from thy weary child;
O'er me the billows heavily do roll,
And threaten to engulf my fainting soul,
Oh, be thou near my sure support and stay,
Keep close to me, my God.
Oh, close to me!

I hide me, close to thee, my God;
Aye, close to thee!
Some else can know by bitterness of grief,
Not any heart, save thine, can bring relief;
I feel my hand may slip from thy hand;
The clouds are low, the storm is very cold,
But thou wilt lead me, I can still enquire,
Thou wilt be true and thy love breaketh sore,
Oh, keep close to me, my God!
Aye, close to me!

Our Centenary.

Mr. Editor: The very worthy heads of our centennial Methodism have joined together their intellectual alliances to create, if possible, a "Centenary" cyclone, which is designed to sweep over the whole area of American Methodism and awake all the sleepers in this great valley of dry bones by its muttering thunders.

The real intention of this great commotion among the stars is to mark the first century of the existence of our church as an organic body by a colossal thank-offering to God Almighty, honorable alike to him and ourselves.

The value of this expression of our grateful hearts is to be, on the part of our Southern Methodism, not less than two millions of dollars, and it is to be devoted to education, church extension and foreign missions. So orders the Central Centenary Committee at Nashville.

Now, these are all good and worthy objects, and should be helped as often and as far as possible. But when all the facts are carefully considered, I must confess that I do not feel that degree of enthusiasm at the coming visit of this grand, rotary wind-force, of which so many have written and spoken so knowingly.

Organic Methodism is but a child yet, when compared to other and older religious organizations, some of which have stood over fifteen centuries, breathing the horrid din and roar of zeal against the powers of sin.

It is time that some persons urge as a reason for this prospective display of primitive liberality, the swift and wonderful growth of Methodism, and its present large and constantly swelling numbers. But the rapid expansion and accumulating numbers are no sufficient evidence of strength and stability. Jonah's gourd grew up in a night and perished in a night. I believe that it is an admitted fact that no sect ever grew so rapidly as "modern spiritism," and yet its strength is but a speck of sand, and its durability but for a very short season.

I do not assume that we will perish as quickly as that famous gourd, or retrograde as "modern spiritism," but it is evident that we are changing; whether for good or evil. Who can tell? For instance, the class meeting, which was the mainstay of Methodism—its very foundation—has been removed and nothing but an irregular life, coexistence, a love of dress and show, and a fondness for sinful pleasures have taken its place. The prayer meeting, too, as a living spiritual force, has been deserted like the ancient pleasure grounds of Babylon and Nineveh, while we have ceased to observe a day of fasting and prayer before each quarterly Conference. Have we got a "general rule" that executes the "general rules"? If there is one such, it should be known. What about the "amen corners"? Are they not now like Goldsmith's "deserted village"? Besides all this the people who join our connection are not converted, and, as a rule, do not show even "a desire to flee from the wrath to come and be saved from their sins." In truth in a good many of our churches it would be very difficult to get a committee of good men to try an unconverted member.

But let us return to the subject in hand. We might urge, as a part of our plea, that the sacred Scriptures nowhere, so far as we know, justify this strange and unusual departure from the "old paths." The Jew was required to pay or give all he possibly could every year. And should we not feel under the same obligations, and if we give all we can every year, how can we go beyond this good and praiseworthy order of heaven this year? But if we have not, it is hardly probable that this coming twisting wind "of the powers that be," will tear us loose from the dark money backs of our basely covetous lives and drive us and ours into the open mouth of God's great treasury. And may not some of our wise but great men say truly that we are overdoing this work of money collections, and that we are becoming ambitious for heaps of money—a church who preclaims little else but a glittering money gospel?

If I mistake not, we have more money collections than any other church, and more than we can manage, and more than our churches bear with grace, particularly our humble brethren, who have but little of this world's goods.

Will you please count them as they are called over. Let us have them all. Count them fifty-two Sabbaths, a penny collection for each Sabbath. Then there are four quarterly collections, usually for the presiding elder. Then there are four collections for the poor, usually lifted at the quarterly love-feast. Next, a collection for Sunday-school literature. Then one for the Conference claimants, also for foreign missions, domestic missions, one for the Women's Missionary Society, one for the Children's Missionary Society—usually five cents a month each child—one for the Bishops, church extension, Bible cause, and one for the cause of education. Now, count them up and see what a large number it is. I do not wonder at the man who was looking over our discipline and seeing the word "collect" frequently in the several ordination forms, declined to join our church, as there were too many collections. All the above collections are to be taken up during each year, and any one at a time, if we comply with the letter and spirit of the law. Now, add this great centennial collection, which is to outweigh them all put together, and you have some idea of the great burden which rests upon our congregations. And how often do we wear out, and offend our people by the time consumed and the way adopted in lifting these collections.

The Jew had only the full-orbed moonlight of Christianity, but he did this duty in a better and a wiser way. Each was required to pay a tenth of his income per annum. And this covered the whole ground, and the people were not hammered to death every Sabbath on the money question.

I object to this centennial trumpet blast on a much more serious basis, and that is our preachers themselves are not paid. In a good many cases, as will be seen by the minutes, they are fed only on half rations, and, of course, they look poorly in their attire, and their wives and children sit in the same faded circle. Now and then a preacher may have a school or a farm as a supplement to the gospel, or his wife may have some private means of her own, and when this is so they manage to have square meals. But, O dear! when company comes for dinner or to stay all night, what distress it usually causes the poor wife that lives in the paragon, as to what she will set before her guests.

You, doubtless, noticed in all these collections that the preacher's needs are not considered at all, nor mentioned, nor even thought of. But let us look at the same facts and figures which properly belong to this part of the subject. Guided by the minutes of the last session of the Louisiana Conference, we see that the Centennial Committee of said Conference call for $30,000 as the Centenary offering this year. This large sum, you know, is to be outside of all the other collections.

"The decks are to be cleared," and then the fight begins for this monster offering. Now, the churches to be called upon for this huge amount are based on the salaries of their preachers, for last year, $1,145 33, or nearly 25 per cent. Everybody knows that the salaries of the several stations and circuits, as a rule, put down the allowance of their preachers at the smallest possible figures—at just what the stewards think they can get without much effort. And yet last year they felt behind this scanty and humiliating allowance almost one-fourth; while the previous year, 1882 it was much worse. As for this year (1884) the outlook so far is still more gloomy to the majority of our preachers. Now add to this fact that our Conference claimants tard just as badly.

But let us get still nearer this real ghost and gather a better idea of its size and shape and its horrid influence, if it is possible. If I have not blundered, the New Orleans district, according to the aforesaid minutes, paid its preachers last year an average of $1,250 54. And yet so far as I know, there is but one paragon on the whole district. Hence, house rent, supplies, etc., must come out of this amount. Why, sir, with a paragonage furnished in New Orleans that would be too small a sum to live on, when everything is so high there. But let us proceed. On the Shreveport district, the average receipts per man were $317 74; Opelousas district, $165 31; Homer district, $128 03; Alexandria district, $238 71; Delhi district, $194 83. In other Conference it is not much better, if any.

Now, here is a real ghost that will not down at your bidding. And yet the brethren might turn a "Centenary" cyclone in that direction which might do some execution.

The first question before us should be, not to raise $30,000 for colleges, church extension and foreign missions, but how shall we pay up our preachers the unpaid balance of last year? and how shall we pay them up this year fully? and then let the church reply by meeting first these claims, and then really "clear the decks" for another and a grander engagement by putting all the other collections together and make one of them all, and then proceed to lift them publicly or privately. Let this be done and let us have no more man and skinnery receipts by our faithful preachers as their entire support.

JAMES E. BRADLEY.
Gretna, La., June 11, 1884.

The Class Meeting.

The class meeting as a religious body was an outgrowth of Methodism—had its birth, growth and decline in Methodism. The original design and benefit of the class meeting were threefold. First, to raise money to pay a church debt; second, to inform the preacher of the condition of the church; third, as a means of grace to promote spirituality. At Bristol, Mr. Wesley inquired, How can we pay the debt on the preaching-house? Capt. Foy said, Let each member of the society pay a penny a week. Mr. Wesley accordingly divided the society into classes of twelve persons in each, and appointed a leader to each class to collect the penny. One of the leaders in one place where he went to collect the penny found the man drunk, and in another place he found a member abusing his wife, and reported them to Mr. Wesley. Very well, said he, that is the very idea. Let each leader add to the duty of collecting the penny that of finding out the spiritual state of his class, whether or not they are faithful and growing in grace.

By the discipline the class leader is still required to receive from the class what they are willing to give to the church and the poor and pay it over to the stewards, further than that they are not required to make any collections. It is also still the duty of the class leader to inform the preacher of any who are sick or who walk disorderly. The main duty of the class leader of this day, however, seems to be to labor to promote the piety and spirituality of the class.

The philosophy of the benefits, resulting from the class meeting, is based upon the fact that man was made a social being. As such, his moral and spiritual growth is greatly facilitated by an interchange of views, experience and progress. This is true in every department of life. In agriculture, in mechanics, and in the various professions. Here men interview each other, and are mutually benefited by each other's experience and methods. So in Christianity a man labors and strives to improve his spiritual nature and realizes, it may be, he is making poor progress, and becomes discouraged and his efforts are paralyzed. He has an interview with his brethren, hears them tell of their trials and triumphs, and finds that his experience is not dissimilar to theirs, and he takes courage and is spiritually benefited.

By an interview with Peter Brohier, a Moravian preacher, Mr. Wesley was not only religiously benefited, but got the idea of justification by faith, one of the fundamental doctrines of Methodism.

The institution of the class meeting was based on the Scriptures of divine truth. On such texts as, They that feared the Lord often met together, and spoke, one with another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord and that thought on his name. This was a social meeting, and such an one as the apostle comments upon he says, Neglect not the assembling yourselves together as the manner of some is. Various other texts teach the same thing, but let these suffice. The objections made to a Methodist class meeting are usually made by persons who are ignorant of their nature and design. We give the following incident as an illustration: A good man, of another persuasion, was making his objections to class meetings to a Methodist. The Methodist took occasion to introduce the subject of vital piety and spirituality, and after an interview of some length he said to his friend, How do you enjoy such an interview upon the subject of religion as we have had? Oh! he said, I am delighted, I have been greatly benefited. That is all we mean by class meeting, said the Methodist.

With regard to the restoration of the class meeting to its primitive position and usefulness, so much has been said, and so many suggestions made by the leading men of the church, that it would seem useless for us to add anything; but we may suggest the following considerations:

1. We commend to the ministry to preach more on the importance of inward and outward holiness—a more thorough consecration to God and to the church of all that we have, of soul and body, time, talents and money. Without a very great degree of inward piety and spirituality none is likely to appreciate the class meeting.

2. We commend that some pecuniary interest be added to the class meeting. Let a collection be taken, if it be only a nickel a week, for some worthy object, for missions, the poor or for the support of the ministry. This would give a double incentive of temporal and spiritual motive to bring the class together. In Mr. Wesley's day the penny a week, to liquidate the church debt, was the grand beverage which brought his class so punctually together.

3. We commend the propriety of reducing the classes to twelve, their original number. The classes, as they now are, numbering twenty or thirty, and sometimes the whole church, come together, and the leader must necessarily hold the meeting so long that they become fatigued and worn out or else fail to say anything to a large portion of them, in either case the meeting is bound to decline in interest.

4. We commend the propriety of training leaders for this work. The great trouble is, Yes, the greatest trouble is in getting suitable leaders. Our people are lamentably deficient in not being able to pray in public. Our young men are not trained to pray in public, and they grow gray in the church in too many instances, and never learn to make a public prayer. Hence, they never can have a family altar, or lead a prayer meeting, or superintend a Sunday-school, or lead a class meeting, nor can they ever attain to any commendable degree of piety. It is not so among the Wesleyans of the old country. Their young men are put to work as soon as they are received into the church, hence they are always supplied with capable members for leaders. It is not so among the Indians in our mission work. One of our Bishops said, when an Indian is converted and joins the church he is ready for work. Whatever his brethren tell him to do he is willing to make the effort. We can not have class meetings in many instances, because we have no suitable leaders. Therefore we earnestly commend the importance of establishing prayer meetings for the purpose of training young men to pray in public, that the present deficiency may be supplied.

With regard to the best method of conducting a class meeting, we commend that leaders be practical—exercise common sense—a sense of propriety to be governed by circumstances. Be punctual, be there at the time, begin and end with the set time. Let the meeting be short, not exceeding an hour. Read the Bible, not a large chapter; but some appropriate verses selected for the occasion. Sing, not all the verses of any hymn—not as a brother did at a camp meeting on a dark, rainy night, who selected and sung, "See how the morning sun purifies his shining way," but sing something selected and suited for the occasion. Let the leader interview each one in the class as to his method of living, whether he reads the Bible daily, prays in secret in his family, and attends upon the services and sacraments of the church. Whether he has a conscience void of offense towards God and all men, if he is growing in grace; if not, urge him to a more faithful performance of duty. If so, commend him to God and his grace that his pathway may continue to shine more and more.

MASSILLON, LOUISIANA.
Grenada Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Editor: As an appointee of the North Mississippi Conference for Grenada Collegiate Institute, and as an invited participant, the undersigned attended the last two days of the concluding exercises of the session which ended June 12 of the current year. A very gracious revival of religion, which began with President Newell's pupils, and which embraced among its converts all but one of its boarding pupils—about twenty—has just closed. This revival session covered those last days of the session which are so important for summing up and arranging for examination and entertainment, hence the pupils, in presenting their work, did not possess all the advantages which is secured by deliberate and uninterrupted preparation.

It is too common for writers about these exercises of our schools to put everything in the superlative; the present writer believes that it is unadvisable to publish or to give if mistakes are now and then made, or if there is some immaturity apparent in the performances of young people. In the case before us there was exhibited at the blackboard, in verbal answers to questions, and in written solution of problems, evidence of patient and diligent drill on the part of instructors and of responsive study on the part of learners. The conviction is left on the minds of observers that Grenada Collegiate Institute is a genuine and valuable laborer in the field of thorough and higher education. The high standard was set to the good work of the school by the citizens of Grenada, who kept the institute hall well filled during the day and packed at night. The Rev. T. W. Dye, of the North Mississippi Conference, preached the commencement sermon on Friday, June 8, commending the school of great vigor, clearness and action, eminently befitting the occasion. On Tuesday the younger classes passed verbal examinations, not heard by this writer, but well reported of. On Wednesday and Thursday came classes in geography, reading, arithmetic, history, geometry, Latin, etc. Besides evidence of good work in study and recitation, the pupils showed that they were under good discipline in reference to manners and dress. The mistresses of that school family, who presides over its domestic and social life, and the lady assistants in the course of teachers, have exerted the molding influence of a true Southern womanhood over those pupils. There was distinctly observable a marked excellence in the eleventh features of the exercises. This appeared in the select readings and recitations of pupils of different grades, and in original essays read by young ladies of the higher classes. The two years' work which President Newell has done in this school has won for him the confidence and support of the people amongst whom he has labored, and raises before us the prospect of increased usefulness.

The school-building is one of the amplest and handsomest in the State; it is a model of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is in good working order. Grenada is rapidly recovering from the waste and depression left by the destructive epidemic of 1878. Since that mournful event, her health record will compare favorably with that of other towns of the State. One thing seems singular and unreasonable, viz: that our children are sent out of the State during the holiday part of the year on the plea of finding schools in healthy regions, and then are brought home to spend vacation during the only season when health is in any more peril here than in the mountains. Here is a school, which, by the competency of its management and its training, is doing a great and good work for girls and boys in the line of primary and higher education. Such a school is a factor of incalculable value in every form of private and public interest. It is a Christian school, denominational, but not sectarian; it receives girls and boys, but only girls are taken to board in the school-building. The president, Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., is a worthy member of the North Mississippi Conference, and by the hearty voice of the people of Grenada, who know his qualifications, and by the choice of the Board of Trustees, has been pressed into this service. He will be glad to hear from those who have children to send to school.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.
COURTATTA, LOUISIANA.

Our Young People.

TRUE LOVE.

"How much I love you, mother dear,"
A little prattler said;
"I love you in the morning bright,
And when I go to bed."
"I love you when I'm near to you,
I love you when I am at work,
And when I am at play."
And then she stily, sweetly raised
Her lovely eyes of blue,
"I love you when you love me best,
And when you would not love me."
The mother kissed her darling child,
And swooped a tear to hide;
"My precious one, I love you most,
When I am forced to chide."
"I would not let my darling child
Go to and fro all day;
And this is why I sometimes chide
Because I love you so."

Our Boys.

DEAR BOYS: I am going to write you a few short articles about those sins that God begins to punish sinners for in this world. After what St. John has said we have no doubt in deciding what sin is. "Whoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law." If you voluntarily do what the Bible says you ought not to do it is a sin of commission; and if you voluntarily neglect to do what the Bible says you ought to do, it is a sin of omission. These sins bring guilt and condemnation on you, and must be repented of and forsaken, or the wrath of God must follow. I suppose the reason that God begins the punishment of some sins in this world is not only to show their "exceeding sinfulness," but to warn others against committing them. Sabbath-breaking is one of the sins that God often punishes men for in this world. The law of the Sabbath is, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." No ordinary work or worldly amusements are allowable on the Sabbath. Only works of mercy or necessity may be done on the holy day of rest. It is intended to be a day of quiet rest from the cares and toils of life, and to be filled up with holy contemplations and devotional duties both private and public. Observed in this way it is helpful and healing to both body and soul, and is a fit emblem of, and a foretaste of the eternal Sabbath in heaven reserved for all the truly good of this world. But if men will violate the sanctities of the holy Sabbath God will punish them for it, as he has ever done since he ordered Moses to have the man, who was found getting in his wood on Sunday, stoned to death. The penalty under the Mosaic law for Sabbath-breaking was death by the appointment of God, which shows how utterly he abhors Sabbath-breaking. The long, oppressive and dreary bondage of the Jews in Babylon was, at least in part, a punishment for their notorious Sabbath-breaking. Many of the terrible steamboat and railroad disasters in connection with Sabbath excursions, I think, are evidences of God's displeasure against notorious and persistent Sabbath-breakers. I only call your attention to the fact that Sabbath-breaking is often punished in this world and leave it with you to notice the many proof texts as you read your Bible. Fix your attention on the subject and you will learn that Sabbath-breaking is a very aggravating sin; one that subjects the perpetrator to the severest penalties. This being the case let us, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

A. O. JONES.
TULLESTOWN, MISS., July 7, 1884.

Mr. Editor: As my letter was published, and I want to ask and answer some questions, it has encouraged me to write another. We have a flourishing Sunday-school. I go every Sunday, and hope it will continue to flourish. We had preaching at the Methodist Church last Sunday, and will have preaching at the Baptist next Sunday. Our Methodist pastor is Mr. J. W. Strider, and the Baptist, Mr. E. F. Baber. I went to a Sunday-school picnic Friday at Collinge, and spent a very pleasant day. Now I will ask some questions: For what did the Midianites enter Canaan? Where did the Israelites first set up the tabernacle? Now I will answer Willio G. Burk's question: The evil Psalm has in it four verses alike. Allee Grant's question is found in II Kings ix, 30. Crossley Given's question is found in Exodus xxxii, 20. And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strewn it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. Dora Wimberly, "wormwood" is found in Jer. xxiii, 15. The answer to Julia Jones question is found in Daniel v, 5.

Your friend,
KATIE R. CLUM.
FARMERVILLE, ALABAMA.

Mr. Editor: I will write to your most worthy paper. We have Sunday-school every Sunday. My mother has been quite sick for two or three weeks, so you see I could not attend Sunday-school regularly. The superintendent of our Sunday-school is Mr. B. C. Lee, and our pastor is Rev. A. C. Conroy. I am a member of the Methodist Church. I joined last September at camp meeting, and I expect to live and die a Christian. My mother has been taking the Christian Advocate for the last eight or ten years. I have one question to ask: Who was John Mark? Was he one of the twelve apostles, or when did he come in as one of the apostles? I remain, Yours truly,
THOMAS R. CLAYTON.
COURTATTA, LOUISIANA.

Mr. Editor: I have been away from my home in Natchez since September attending school at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.; and if a little girl has to be away from her home, I think Whitworth is the best place she can find. I love to read the letters in our column, and I have found a great many of the answers to the questions asked in them. My mamma takes your valuable paper. Now I will answer Sallo Noyland's questions: The word "centenary" is found in Numbers xi, 3, and Isaiah l, 8. "Chicken" is found in Lev. xi, 16, and Lev. xiv, 15. Now I will ask a question or two: Where is the word "pins" found in the Bible? Where is the word "water-pots" found in the Bible? Mr. Editor you must excuse all mistakes, as this is the first letter I have ever written to any paper. Hoping to see this in print, I remain,
Your little friend,
N. THORNTON,
Brookhaven, Mississippi.

A Practical Help.

About five years ago one cold Sunday morning, a young man crept out of a market house in Philadelphia, into the nippling air, just as the church bells began to ring for church. He had slept under a small all night, or rather lain there in a stupor from a long debauch.

His face, which had once been delicate and refined, was blue from cold and blotched with sores; his clothes were of the texture, but they hung on him in rags covered with mud.

He staggered, faint with hunger and exhaustion; the snowy streets, the early dressed crowds thronging to church, swam before his eyes; his brain was dazed for the want of the usual stimulant.

He gasped with a horrible sick thirst, a mad craving for liquor which the sober man can not imagine. He looked down at the ragged coat flapping about him, at his footless hat, to find something he could pawn for whiskey, but he had nothing. Then he stopped upon a stone step, leaning, as it happened, into a church.

Some worshippers were going in. Some elegantly dressed of course, some the wretched set, drew their garments closer and hurried by on the other side. One elderly woman turned to look at him just as two young men of his own age halted.

"That is George," said one.
"Five years ago he was a promising lawyer in P. . . His mother and sister live there. They think he is dead."

"What did it do?"
"Trying to live in a fashionable set first, then brandy. Come on. We shall be late for church."

The lady went up to George C. and took his arm. "Come inside," she said, sternly, with a secret loathing at her heart. "The gospel is for such as you. Come and pray to God that perhaps at this late day he may lead you to redemption."

He passed stupidly after her. She lectured him for some time, sharply trying to compass the truths of Christianity into a few terse sentences. But the man's brain did not want truth or the gospel, it wanted physical stimulant. His head dropped on his breast; he lay propped with a despairing sigh into the church.

A few minutes later a gentleman came up, who had different ideas of teaching Christ. He saw with a glance the deadly pallor under the bloated skin.

"You have not had breakfast yet, my friend," he said briskly. "Come, we'll go together and find some."

George C. muttered something about "a trifle" and "a tavern." But his friend drew his arm within his own and hurried him trembling and resisting down the street to a little hotel where a table was set with strong coffee and a hot, savory meal. It was surrounded by men and women as wretched as himself.

He ate and drank ravenously. When he had finished, his eyes were almost clear, and his step steady, as he came up his new friend and said:

"Thank you. You have helped me."

"Let me help you farther. Sit down with me and listen to some music."

Somebody ordered a few plaintive notes on an old organ, and a hymn was sung, one of the old simple strains with which mothers sing to their children and bring themselves nearer to God. The tears stood in George C.'s eyes. He listened while a few of the words of Jesus were read. Then he rose to go. "I was a man once like you," he said, holding out his hand. "I believed in Christ; but it's too late now."

"It is not too late!" cried his friend. "It is needless to tell how he pleaded with him, nor how for months he renewed his efforts."

He succeeded at last. George C. has been for four years a sober man. He fills a position of trust in the town where he was born, and his mother's heart is made glad in her old age.

Every Sunday morning the breakfast is set and wretched men and women whom the world rejects are gathered in to it. Surely it is a work which Christ would set his followers upon that day.

—Youth's Companion.

Marcus Annulus Vorns, afterward to be known as the great Emperor Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, was in all respects a model boy. Not the nimby-pamby model that all human boys desire, but a right-minded, right-mannered, healthy, wealthy, and wise young Roman of the second century of the Christian era. At that time (for the world was not yet Christianized) there flourished a race of teachers and philosophers known as Stoics, whose old pagans, who held that the perfect man must be free from passion, unmoved by either joy or grief, taking everything just as it came, with supreme and utter indifference. A hard rule that, but this lad's teachers had been mainly of the "School of the Stoics," as it was called, and their wise sayings had made so deep an impression on this little Marcus that, when only twelve years old, he set up for a full-fledged Stoic. He put on the coarse mantle that was the peculiar dress of the sect, practiced all their severe rules of self-denial, and even slept on the hard floor or the bare ground, denying himself the comfort of a bed, until his good mother, who knew what was best for little fellows, even though they were stoics, persuaded him to compromise on a quilt. He loved exercise and manly sport; but he was above all a wonderful student—too much of a student, in fact; for, as the old record states, "his excess in study was the only fault of his youth."—St. Nicholas.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors: REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER. REV. W. L. C. HERRICK.

THURSDAY JULY 24, 1884.

Dr. J. W. Lambuth will close his thirty years of mission labor in China on the seventeenth of September.

The police of Vienna have been ordered to arrest all Mormon missionaries detected in endeavoring to secure converts. A little State interference of that sort at home would be wholesome and creditable.

This, from an exchange, is worth thinking about: "Think of a member of the church paying $145 a year for tobacco and 66 cents for church extension, and another, of the same church, paying $191 for tobacco and $1 for missions!"

As we go to press the National Convention of Prohibitionists is in session at Pittsburg. We do not favor a separate party organization to secure the legal suppression of the liquor traffic, but for the zeal of those who do we have profoundest respect.

The progress of the Asiatic cholera in France seems to be unchecked, and grave apprehensions are felt that it will reach our shores. Every precaution is being taken by national and State authorities, and prayers from every Christian home will ascend, that our goodly land shall escape this scourge.

The following we find in the Pittsburg Christian Advocate:

A card issued by one of the suburban churches near Chicago has this for its motto: "I am only one, but I am one; I can not do everything, but I can do something; what I can do I ought to do, and what I ought to do, by the grace of God, I will do"—a text that invites practice rather than comment.

Our liberal brother whose "Advocate fund" is blessing so many homes sends the editor a private letter, from which we extract as follows: "You may know or can find some poor, struggling Christian youth, desirous of an education, to whom the enclosed $50 will be truly a God-send. It is sent in his name, with his blessing invoked."

The following, from the St. Louis Christian Advocate, we commend to candidates in the beginning of a sharp political contest:

Once James Madison, afterward President of the United States, was a candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates from the county of Orange. He refused to "treat" during the canvass, and no elector got drunk at Mr. Madison's expense. Mr. Madison was defeated by a competitor who did "treat." Let a non-treating candidate try the plan now and see if he can not succeed better than did Madison.

The Arctic expedition in search of the Greely party has returned, bringing the six survivors of that ill-fated cruise. Only seven of the twenty-four were found alive, and one of those died after days of suffering. Lieut. Greely seems to think that his discoveries are very valuable, but to what extent and in what direction we fail to see. Surely it is high time for these polar expeditions to cease. The expenditure of men and treasure finds no adequate compensation in geographical and commercial discovery.

The defeat of the Franchise Bill in the House of Lords has aroused widespread indignation in England. It is proposed to modify or abolish the aristocratic body altogether, which has twice in the past few years obstructed the popular will on the enlargement of the franchise. One thing is certainly demanded—the clerical members, the "lords spiritual," should be excluded. "Bishops and other clergy" ought not to be political agitators or legislators.

We are indebted to the Southern Methodist Publishing House for an early copy of Dr. Neely's sermons. The introduction is written by Bishop McTear, and the biographical note by Dr. J. B. McFerrin. Dr. Neely was one of the most eloquent and gifted preachers in the South, and this volume contains some of the sermons that gave national fame as a pulpit orator. Orders may be addressed to Mrs. J. Alice Neely, 71 Prytania street, New Orleans, La., or Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. City subscribers to the volume can get the same by calling at 112 Camp street.

The Sabbath and the Cotton Centennial Again.

As the question of opening the gates of the Exposition on Sunday is of great and imminent importance, we desire to add something more to the discussion. If the Exposition was a New Orleans enterprise purely, local sentiment and authority might and should control this matter entirely. But as it is national in its scope, and the national government has endorsed it by appropriate legislation, a loan of $1,000,000, and an appropriation of $300,000 for a government exhibit, citizens outside of New Orleans have a right to be heard, and their opinions must be respected. Besides, a number of States have appropriated money out of the public treasury for displays of their industries and wealth, and appointed commissioners to represent them. Every one of these States respect and protect the Sabbath by statute. The citizens of these several States and of the national government, therefore, who are taxed for these exhibits, have a right to demand that their national and civil day be not outraged by the management of the Exposition. To ridicule them as fools and fanatics is to oppose the statute law of every State in the Union except Louisiana, and flaunt defiance into the face of the nation's dominant moral sentiment. What individual members of the Board of Management may think is one thing, and what their action should be as appointees of the President of the United States, is quite a different thing. We maintain that they can not defy a plain statute of every State in the Union save one, and violate the Sabbath, sentiment of the nation without violating the spirit of their appointment. Nor can they in all moral fairness, in so doing, accept the money help of these States and the general government. When the great Centennial Exposition was held in Philadelphia, under the immediate auspices of the national government—an event that commemorated the one hundred years of our national existence—the national day was respected and the gates closed on Sunday. The Louisville Exposition last year was closed on Sunday, and the whole nation applauded the act of the Board of Management. Now, will the Exposition managers in New Orleans yield to the Sabbath desecrating sentiment of the city, and defy the sentiment of the whole country? We respectfully dissent from a recent editorial intimation of the Times-Democrat, and challenge the facts stated as to the decline of American sentiment on the Sunday question. Instead of there being "an occasional spurt of Sabatarianism, when a State or city adopts a Sunday law," the day has wider recognition and profounder reverence than ever before. To disregard its authority, except in certain localities, is not respectable. All remember what a sensation was created last year when the President of the United States was reported to have accompanied a party of friends on a Sunday excursion. So shocked was the moral sense of the people at such reported misconduct in their Chief Magistrate, and so general was the disapprobation and condemnation that the President made haste to deny the statement and correct the false impression. That was simple respect for his position and the moral conviction of the great people whose Chief Executive he was proud to be.

The ordinary objector to Sunday laws makes it a religious question. Now, as citizens, we have nothing to do with religious observance. Sunday is a civil day, and yet this distinction is not always made. As against the enforcement of law, these objectors raise the cry of "puritanism," "religious persecution," and "abridging the rights of conscience." And all such prating—for, with all respect, it is nothing more—displays more spleen than brains. Apart from its divine enactment, the Sabbath has social and civil relations and potency that exalt and enthroned it as the "lord of days." If there were no heaven and no eternity, its observance would still be a benediction to men and nations. The law of the Sabbath is older than all codes and decalogues, all constitutions and creeds. It is founded upon, and wrought into, the very constitution of man's nature. He can not ignore or despise it without doing violence to the very law of his being. It is the physical, mental and moral recuperative by which man secures length of days and achieves the largest results. Between this septenary law and our social, as well as our physical well-being, there is an intimate, vital connection. As to the value of this law to the State we desire to give the matured judgment of certain distinguished writers:

Blackstone, the greatest of all writers on the principles of law, has said: "A corruption of morals usual ly follows a profanation of the Sabbath."

Daniel Webster: "It is by the reiterated instructions and impressions which the Sabbath imparts to the population of a nation, by the moral principles which it forms, by the conscience which it maintains, by the habits of method, cleanliness and industry it creates, by the rest and renovated vigor it bestows upon exhausted human nature, by the lengthened life and higher health it affords, by the holiness it inspires, and the cheering hopes of heaven, and the protection and favor of God which its observance insures, that the Sabbath is rendered the moral conservator of nations."

Bishop, another distinguished jurist, has said: "It is the corner-stone of public morality and happiness; viewed merely as a civil regulation, its observance contributes to the public repose, health, morals and convenience, as well as religion."

The London Standard: "We believe that dull English Sunday, as it is stigmatized by the fribbles and fools, is the principle cause of the superior health and longevity of the English people."

To these we might add the testimony of Macaulay, Lord Beaconsfield, Edward Everett, and the opinions of the Supreme Courts of Illinois, Massachusetts and Indiana. We shall have more to say in subsequent issues. In the meantime let all Christian people, especially in the Gulf States, speak out on the subject in no uncertain sound.

A Political Blunder.

In the Democratic platform, adopted by the National Convention at Chicago that nominated Cleveland and Hendricks for the two highest offices of the nation, we find this plank:

"We oppose sumptuary laws, which vex the citizen and interfere with individual liberty."

That declaration is sufficiently explicit for the most obtuse voter who has any knowledge of the English language. In its highest council the Democratic party denounces prohibitory legislation, and, of course, allies itself openly with the friends of free whisky. The position of Mr. Hendricks on that question is well known, but how Gov. Cleveland regards it we are not advised. The vice-presidential candidate left his home in Indiana a year or two ago and made speeches over the State of Iowa against the proposed prohibitory amendment to the constitution. This plank, therefore, will meet his cordial approval. At least there is no probability of his declining the nomination on that account.

The purpose of this "declaration of principles" is very evident, but the results are very problematical. It was designed to entrap the foreign vote in the large Northern cities, especially the Germans, who have generally supported the Republican ticket. How well the device is likely to succeed can not be forecasted. But one thing is certain, for every new whisky voter gained in the city the party will probably lose a hitherto solid supporter in the country. The Republican Convention avoided any deliverance on the question, and in so doing displayed more sagacity. By this aggressive action the Democratic party will doubtless alienate tried and straggled friends. We have persistently opposed a party organization on that issue, believing it better to keep the question aloof from political entanglements. That the Convention should have adopted this plank, therefore, was at once a surprise and sorrow. It complicates and precipitates an issue that should be above the contests for place and power. It is a slap in the face of all prohibitionists, and an advertisement that they prefer whisky to "fanatical folly." The Vicksburg Herald thus felicitates itself on that deliverance:

The prohibitionists are crowding the citizens by persistent demands to control by law the drinking of wine, beer, whisky, brandy and so forth. The Democratic party says boldly in its National Convention that it is opposed to this, and, in saying so, it plants itself firmly in the hearts of the masses. A vast majority of citizens resent the middle-class attempts to prescribe whether or not they shall drink anything but water, and just how much.

Partisan politics have never been discussed in these columns, nor will they be. But the cause of prohibition, for which Christians are praying and patriots are toiling—the cause of humanity, of truest philanthropy, of relief to the suffering, of shelter to the sorrowing, of redemption to the fallen—is far above the domain of party struggles. It is a great moral enterprise that cares nothing for office, has no governmental policy, further than putting down the crying curse of the land and saving the next generation from debauchery and degradation. If against this profound moral purpose one party sees fit to array itself, so much the worse for that party.

Funeral Reform.

Some years ago, before our connection with this ADVOCATE, we published an article on this subject, and have been requested to reproduce its substance for our editorial columns. Believing the matter important, though exceedingly delicate, we willingly consent. So imperative is the need for reform that in certain communities ministers of the several denominations have counseled together and passed resolutions for the governance of their own action. We offer some thoughts on the general subject:

1. The funeral address. A minister has no duty to discharge more difficult and delicate than conducting funeral services. If, according to prevailing custom, an address or sermon is to be delivered, he is in danger of saying either too much or too little—too much for truth and too little for the gratification of the bereaved. Should he indulge in extravagant eulogy, unless the deceased was conspicuous for piety, he lowers the standard of religion and makes his warnings of none effect. Much harm has been done just here. It has at times even provoked the ridicule of the irreligious, and given publicity to the Universalists' taunt that "no matter how orthodox ministers may preach, they are all good Universalists at funerals." On the other hand, families have been alienated from a church because the pastor did not glorify and canonize their dead. This double danger indicates our duty. Only on rare occasions should any address be delivered. If the deceased has been a useful, well-known and tried Christian, or an exemplary and faithful office-bearer in the church, a public tribute to such worth and character may be demanded. And even then our aim should be more to commend the bereaved to the gospel for consolation, than to indulge in fulsome eulogy of the departed. Happily in this respect we are improving. Years ago ministers were expected to preach an elaborate sermon at the burial of every infant and patriarch, saint and sinner. And if his presence could not be secured on the day of interment, a memorial service was appointed weeks or months afterward. During the first year of our ministry we were requested by a brother to "preach the funeral" of his mother. We inquired: "Brother, how long has your mother been dead?" He replied: "About ten years; but her funeral has never been preached. And I've got a good many kinfolks, cousins and uncles and aunts, who've died; I want you to preach their funerals too."

Much to the good brother's disgust for new-fangled notions and preachers, his request was kindly but positively refused. We have outgrown those days, but further reform is yet needed.

2. Funeral expenses. This matter has become both alarming and iniquitous. In many cities it costs more to die than to live. Families have been financially embarrassed, if not bankrupted, by expensive funerals. The floral display alone at one such occasion in New York compelled an outlay of $10,000. Among the aristocratic a large number of empty carriages are employed to lengthen the procession while passing through the principal streets. The poorer, in their endeavor to imitate, become ruinously involved. This is not only folly, but a sinful waste of the Lord's money. The vast sums thus annually squandered for the gratification of a ridiculous vanity would support and educate the orphans of the land. Why these magnificent caaskets, with costly mountings? They do not make any more peaceful the sleep of the dead. A long line of carriages, filled often with those who want a free ride to the cemetery, is but an empty pageant, which can not add one flower to the chaplet of the departed, or assuage one pang of grief in the bosom of the bereaved. All this is not so much a tribute to the memory of the dead as to the pride of the living. From the Jews we might learn an important lesson. All their burials are conducted with the utmost modesty and inexpensive, unostentatious simplicity. Rich and poor are buried with equal honor and display. The Rothschilds, or other Jewish bankers or merchant princes, are carried to the grave as quietly and inexpensively as the humblest peddler.

But another wrong in funeral expenses is chargeable to those engaged in the business, to undertakers, sextons, hackmen, etc. The per cent. charged for service, materials, etc., if report be true, is absolutely shameful. In most of the towns and cities a carriage engaged for a funeral costs $5, but for any other occasion can be employed for $1 an hour. A writer in a prominent religious journal has investigated this subject thoroughly, and makes the following statement: "A caasket for which $45 is ordinarily charged costs the dealer $8. Those sold for $150 he purchased for $50, and so on with an increased per cent. for the more costly." If true, this is a shameless extortion—a mean speculation in human tears and sorrow. Of course time and means employed in the business should have adequate remuneration, but not the grasping of iniquitous greed. This, we know, is a very delicate subject. The bereaved, though imposed upon, have not the heart to enter complaint. Others hesitate to speak, and so the wrong continues. But its delicacy should not prevent discussion, and an appeal to the public to inaugurate reform.

3. Funeral proprieties. Here, of course, will be diversity of tastes, which can not be disregarded. Whatever may be the fancies or eccentricities of grief, they will be sacredly respected. But a few observations may not be altogether profitless: 1. Funeral services should not be appointed on the Sabbath unless necessary, and then never to interfere with regular public worship. 2. The custom of opening the coffin at the close of the religious services in the church should be discouraged and discontinued. It only gratifies an idle curiosity to gaze at the dead, and their adornments, which is offensive to the sacredness of grief and the stillness of death.

Delayed Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR: The Committee on Fraternal Relations so arranged matters that the representatives of the Canadian Church should be received the same evening with the Southern delegates. The English delegates were given an entire evening to themselves, and right good use did they make of it, for their addresses alone consumed two hours and a quarter. They were capital speeches, abounding in facts, incidents, illustrations, humor, poetry, eloquence and prophecy. The beautiful church was crowded to its utmost capacity, but the length of the time consumed by the exercises wearied a great many people, and thus had a bad effect upon the audience for the next evening. It was a simple sum, that anybody could work out; if two speakers hold an audience till half-past ten P. M. how long will it take four speakers to get through? The answer had a marked effect upon the number of persons attending. The fifteenth was the day, the whole of which was passed in the exciting work of electing Bishops. The Conference did not get through this work until six in the evening, and of course many who had been detained so late in the Conference-room felt very little inclined to sit up late in the night to listen to "fraternal gush" from any body. Notwithstanding these discouraging circumstances when the time came we had a tolerably large audience. It fell to my lot to make the opening address, which was done in forty minutes, and seemed to be well received. Gov. Colquhoun followed in his old-hand style, and carried the house by storm. The governor's fine presence and clear voice and ready wit and eloquent plea for a return to the old landmarks of Methodism captivated all in the audience. He was followed by Dr. Nelles, delegate from Canada, who spoke interestingly for half an hour. This brought us to such a late hour that an adjournment was moved, and the other delegate from Canada was tided over until the next evening. Some of our people think that these fraternal messengers and their messages do not avail much, and favor the plan of sending messages of love and sympathy by correspondence. After this experience I am convinced that a fraternal message embodied in a fraternal person is the better way. The Apostle John said: "Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you and to speak face to face, that our joy may be full." If we really want fraternity, we must send the fraternal messenger—not the fraternal letter.

I would very much like to give your readers a description of this General Conference and its doings if I were able to do so. I find that it is a very easy matter to make mistakes in forming opinions of men and measures. Hence it may not be wise thing to give all the impressions which were made upon my mind. Sitting on the platform and looking over the body, I was struck with the number of young-looking men. The old men were not wanting, but they were a mere sprinkle as compared to the younger ones. Here and there was a hoary head, but the black heads were very many. Some of these old men seemed to be leaders, and were always listened to with reverent attention. Taken altogether, it was a body of fine-looking men, and a body of fine-looking men always makes a fine-looking body of men! I observed here about the average speaker. Some were as keen and incisive as a new blade; some as dull and heavy as possible. Some seemed to comprehend a subject in all its relations at once; others seemed to comprehend nothing after all possible explanations. Some of the speeches I heard would have sounded irreverent and sacrilegious to a Southern audience, and provoked hisses even there; others would have aroused an intense satisfaction. The Conference knew how to expedite business, and I think very little time was wasted in unprofitable debate. The question of licensing women to preach was disposed of in a very summary yet satisfactory way. The proposal to fix an episcopal residence in India was defeated by the laymen, much to the chagrin of the clergy. The action taken in regard to the old question of color was contradictory altogether, and simply showed that these people are still at sea in regard to that question. If they will just let it alone it will settle itself, and that settlement will be satisfactory all around.

I had the pleasure of listening to several sermons. If what I heard was a fair sample of the preaching of these Methodists then I am frank to say that the average Southern Methodist preacher is not one whit behind in preaching power. I observed that there was a tendency toward a humorous sensationalism—a desire and effort to say things in such a way as to create a laugh. I never saw this but once in a Southern congregation. They seemed to think this was the proper thing to do, and the audience seemed to think it a proper thing to receive, and several times, during the sermon they responded right lustily. I once heard a brother speak of all such efforts as "sanctified clap-trap."

On Sunday evening I visited Mr. Wanamaker's Sunday-school. He is a Presbyterian, and has a school famous all over the country. His first rule is you must be in time; you can't get in until after the opening exercises are over. Not knowing the time, we were detained outside during the opening exercises. Another rule is that every scholar shall bring his own Bible. Another rule is a twenty minutes' conference and prayer meeting after the school closes, to which all are invited to remain. He has a band of musicians to accompany the organ and the school, and to me the effect was simply grand. I was informed that the school numbered fifteen hundred. The Bible class and infant classes were huge. I watched the superintendent very closely, and I am satisfied that he was "called of the Holy Spirit to this office and ministry."

The Bishops of the Methodist Church are held in high esteem by the preachers and laymen, and while sharing their reiterated respect that a Bishop is no more than an elder. Whenever Bishop Simpson came upon the platform there was applause from the body. The two Bishops are men of mark and power, and their election was the occasion of many congratulations from friends and admirers. Putting everything together, adding what should be added and subtracting what should be subtracted and multiplying here and dividing there, making allowances for climate and custom and trade and usages, I came away from Philadelphia very favorably impressed. The horizon of my vision has been expanded, and my hope for the future of Methodism is clearer and brighter than ever before. One hundred years of life have developed a mighty power, and on that account the future needs to be watched with sleepless vigilance.

I returned home by a route different from the one I went. Taking the Pennsylvania railroad, I went right across the great State from east to west, through Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Columbus, Xenia, Cincinnati, Louisville, Nashville, Montgomery, home. I have seen many things and many men; many places and many cities; much grand scenery and much civilization; passed through portions of many States, and came back perfectly satisfied that Louisiana is the hells of the Union.

C. W. CARTER.

We clip this little personal from the Northwestern Christian Advocate as evidencing the growing culture of our American womanhood:

Miss Anne Martin, daughter of Rev. Dr. A. Martin, president of De Pauw University, has been elected instructor in Greek and Latin at Xenia College, Ohio.

Mississippi Conference Minutes.

Thanks to the kindness of brethren, I have been supplied with the pamphlet Minutes of the following years, viz: 1858, 1859, 1868, 1869, 1870, and from 1872 to 1883 inclusive. If any one has a copy of the missing numbers to spare it will be very acceptable.

C. O. ANDREWS.

Vicksburg, Miss., July 15, 1884.

—Dr. Leo Rosser, of Virginia, has a volume of revival sermons in press, "the product of 40 years."

—The Crystal Springs Camp Meeting will commence August 7 instead of July 31, as previously reported.

—Rev. J. W. Ellison requests us to announce the indefinite postponement of St. Matthew's Camp Meeting.

—The Rev. I. L. Peebles, of the Mississippi Conference, and Mrs. M. A. Hancock were married at Ellisville, July 16, 1884, the interesting ceremony being performed by Rev. J. H. Holland.

—Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews is the agent for "The Life and Times of Bishop Kavanaugh" in the Mississippi Conference. Those desiring the work or wish to canvass for it, should apply to Dr. Andrews, at Vicksburg, Miss.

—We have the proceedings of the Corinth District Conference on file for the next issue. The Conference was followed by a glorious revival in the town of Ripley, resulting, up to last report, in forty-five conversions and thirty accessions.

—The Seashore Camp Meeting closed on Thursday morning, of last week, with a sermon by Rev. B. S. Rayner, presiding elder of the Seashore district. The meeting resulted in about forty conversions and the consecration of many Christians. Nothing occurred to disturb the harmony of a delightful occasion, full of spiritual edification and helpful religious association.

—These grateful sentences close a charming personal letter from a fair friend of the Advocate and its editor: "Sometimes when I am praying, I think of you as you sit in the streets; just one another in the broad ways, seem like torches and run like the lightning." And I pray as a friend for one he loved who was going on a journey, "May Heaven rivet the train to the track." God bless you."

Sharon Circuit, Mississippi Conference.

"Let the promise of a shower, drops already from above." At the request of Bro. Caldwell, the pastor, I gratefully record a blessed revival at Shady Grove, in which it was my privilege to participate, July 5-11. Twenty-five or more souls professed conversion. The spiritual quickening was general. The preacher in charge is wisely conserving the fruits. Bro. Clark, of Carthage, rendered efficient aid. Bro. Chambers, of Camden, was present on Sunday. His Centenary sermon was followed by an offering, cash and subscribed, of $50.

JOHN A. ELLIS.
Canton, Miss., July 18, 1884.

Seashore Camp Ground.

We abstract the following from the proceedings of the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground, held July 17, 1884:

Resolved, That it is against the sense of this board to rent tents or furnish keys for same on the Sabbath, and that Sunday excursionists can not enter the grounds on that day, and the keeper is hereby so instructed. This is out to include the Sabbath during the session of camp meeting.

On motion a vote of thanks was tendered the publishers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for the liberal contribution of one-half the value of the bell, and for their active exertions in procuring it, and that this resolution be published in the Advocate.

Books and Periodicals.

ACHON. A Sequel to the Triple E. By Mrs. C. B. Graham. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co., Price, 15 c.

Those who have Triple E will be eager to get this charming story. The same characters which gave life and interest to that book reappear in these pages. The aim of the author has been to show the strengthening and brightening influence of Christianity in the world. It is beautifully bound in uniform style with the Yensie Walton series.

SALT LAKE FRUITS. Boston: Rand, Avery & Co.

We wish most heartily that this book could have extensive circulation and rareful reselling. It will serve to awaken the indifference of the American people to the enormity of the Mormon menace to our higher civilization. It is sold only by subscription. Persons desiring an agency should write to Rand, Avery & Co., Boston, Mass.

—The English Illustrated Magazine, for July, published by Macmillan & Co., 112 Fourth Avenue, New York, is a beautifully illustrated number, and contains articles that are well worth reading. This magazine, while good from the first, improves with each number.

Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh.

Several years previous to his death, Bishop Kavanaugh entrusted to Rev. A. H. Redford, D. D., the task of writing his life, and one year ago, while in Florida, renewed the request. The work is just now completed, and the first thousand subscribed for. The work is published in two styles of binding, and sold by subscription only. The advertisement will be found in another column.

TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER! CONTAIN AMMONIA.

NEW YORK'S
GREAT CHEMIST,
R. OGDEN DOREMUS, M. D., LL.D.

DELLVUE HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE, May 24, 1884.

SIR:—This is to certify that I have analyzed "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder." I find it composed of PURE MATERIALS, and compounded on CORRECT SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES. I have also analyzed the "Royal Baking Powder," and find it composed of PURE MATERIALS, and compounded on CORRECT SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES. The ingredients of "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder" are PURER than those of the Royal. The "Royal Baking Powder" which heated, yields sufficient AMMONIA to be detected by the sense of SMELL, and PLAINLY DISCOVERED IN BISCUITS OR CAKES MADE THEREFROM. The AMMONIA is derived from IMPURITIES in the "Royal Baking Powder."

As the chief aim of a Baking Powder is to produce a HARMLESS GAS, which will give porosity to the bread, biscuits or cakes made therefrom, "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder" in this respect also surpasses the Royal.

I have examined biscuits from the two powders, and prefer those made from "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder," for the following reasons:

1st. The materials in "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder" are PURER than those of the "Royal Baking Powder," and therefore MORE WHOLESOME.

2d. THE INGREDIENTS are more ACCURATELY and SCIENTIFICALLY PROPORTIONED, hence bread or biscuits prepared with them are BETTER SUITED FOR DIGESTION.

3d. The yield of carbonic acid gas is greater, therefore the BISCUITS ARE LIGHTER.

In my opinion, "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder" is SUPERIOR to the "Royal Baking Powder" IN EVERY RESPECT.

I have the honor to remain, Yours respectfully,

R. OGDEN DOREMUS, M. D., LL.D.,
Prof. of Chemistry and Toxicology in the New York Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and Prof. Chemistry and Physics in the College of the City of New York.

HOUSEKEEPER'S TEST.

Place a spoonful of the "Royal" or "Andrews' Pearl" Baking Powder on a hot stove until heated; then remove the cover and smell. A chemist will not be required to detect the presence of AMMONIA.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Does not contain Ammonia, Lime, Alum or Potash. It is clean and wholesome.

Wesleyan Female College, Georgia.

The Forty-seventh Annual Session begins Oct. 1st. Most of our students are from the South. All students receive instruction in Literature, Music and Art. Special attention to health and comfort of pupils. Moderate charges. Apply early. W. C. HARRIS.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

Trade Mark. QUALITY NOT QUANTITY. In Every Bottle.

CHICKEN AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND IT.

—THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining iron with pure vegetable bitters, quickly and completely cures Anemia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Chlorosis, Child and Female, and Neuritis.

It is a mild and powerful remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.

It is invaluable for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

It is a powerful remedy for those suffering from Anemia, and all who feel weak and nervous.

EDUCATIONAL. MEDICAL DEPARTMENT—University of Louisiana NEW ORLEANS.

As it is universally admitted that Practical Medicine and Surgery can not be learned elsewhere than at the bedside of the sick and wounded, the Institution justly claims unrivalled advantages. In the introduction of its classes into the wards of the great Charity Hospital, whose Eight Hundred beds and an annual admission of Eight Thousand patients enjoys unrivalled clinical material. Clinicians sent upon application.

Louisiana State University

—AND—
Agricultural and Mechanical College,
BATON ROUGE, LA.

Session Opens October 5th, and Closes July, 4th 1885.

For further information, address
D. F. BOYD, President.

CENTURY COLLEGE, JACKSON, LA.

OPENS First Monday in September, 1884. Ample Faculty. Excellent Preparatory Department. Complete Classical, Scientific and Business Courses. Composition and Education a specialty. Morality and Religion made prominent. Prompt attention in sickness. Refined and cultured society. Telegraphic connection. Access by Mississippi Valley Railroad. For terms of tuition and tuition sent for Catalogue.

D. M. RUSSELL, President.

JUDSON INSTITUTE MARION, ALA.

Forty-seventh session begins October 1st, 1884. Faculty of fifteen. Collegiate course for Young Ladies. Kindergarten and Preparatory Department. School of Music, Drawing, and Painting. and Telegraphy. For catalogues send to ROBERT FLAZER, President.

WASHINGTON & LEE UNIVERSITY, LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA.

Instructions in the usual academic studies, and in the professional schools of Law and Engineering. Location healthy. Expenses moderate. Session opens Sept. 18th. For Catalogue, address Chief of the Faculty.

W. C. LEE, President.

BETHEL Classical and Military Academy, HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

In a country noted for beauty and health. Course of study, 10 months. Superior preparation for the University. Location healthy. Expenses moderate. Session opens Sept. 18th. For Catalogue, address Chief of the Faculty.

W. C. LEE, President.

SULLINS Female College, BRITTON-GOODSON, VA.

Offers to those parents in the South who wish educational advantages for their daughters, a first-class school at rates very moderate. Very popular, owing for thirty years to the high quality of its instruction, to furnish place for all applicants. For Catalogue address, Rev. D. S. HEARON, A. M., President, Britton, Tenn.

Kavanaugh College.

A High Grade Male and Female College, situated in the healthy Pine Region of Southern Mississippi, 21 miles South of Hattiesburg, and 1/2 miles East of Bogalusa.

The First Term Begins Sept. 29, 1884.

Buildings plain, but neat and comfortable. Fare good and moderate. It is to be a college for the masses, where the poor boy and girl may get an education as well as the wealthy. It is a college where the student will be happy, and where the teacher will be proud.

RATES PER MONTH:

Board, including fuel, lights and fuel, $10.00

Tuition in College Department, 2.00

Tuition in Preparatory Department, 1.00

Music, 1.00

French, 1.00

Spanish, 1.00

Latin, 1.00

German, 1.00

Italian, 1.00

Portuguese, 1.00

Hebrew, 1.00

Arabic, 1.00

Sanskrit, 1.00

Persian, 1.00

Chinese, 1.00

Japanese, 1.00

Korean, 1.00

Siamese, 1.00

Thai, 1.00

Laotian, 1.00

Khmer, 1.00

Malay, 1.00

Indonesian, 1.00

Philippine, 1.00

Malagasy, 1.00

Madagascan, 1.00

Comorian, 1.00

Shona, 1.00

Yoruba, 1.00

Ibo, 1.00

Hausa, 1.00

Fula, 1.00

Swahili, 1.00

Amharic, 1.00

Tigrinya, 1.00

Afar, 1.00

Somali, 1.00

Oromo, 1.00

Shan, 1.00

Tibetan, 1.00

Chinese, 1.00

Japanese, 1.00

Korean, 1.00

Siamese, 1.00

Thai, 1.00

Laotian, 1.00

Khmer, 1.00

Malay, 1.00

Indonesian, 1.00

Philippine, 1.00

Malagasy, 1.00

EDUCATIONAL. VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

PERMANENT ENDOWMENT, $500,000.

THE Academic, Medical and Law Departments open September 1st. The Medical, Dental and Pharmaceutical Departments open October 1st. Fees: Academic Department, $65; Medical, $125; Law, $100; Medical, $100; Dental, $65; Pharmaceutical, $65. The Schools of Science are supplied with the most approved apparatus. The School of Engineering is supplied with a workshop for practical instruction. Two Post-graduate Fellowships, worth $500 each, and four Graduate Fellowships, worth $300 each, are annually awarded. Board from $12 to $20 per month. The Annual Register is sent up upon application to John W. Shipley, Secretary of the Faculty.

L. C. GARLAND, Chancellor.

Mansfield Female College.

FACULTY:
F. M. GRACE, D. D., President.
S. E. GRACE, A. M., Professor.

TEACHERS:
MISS A. R. WILLIAMS, MISS ELLA FOSTER,
MISS ELLA SMITH, MISS EMMA SUTHERLAND,
MISS R. J. HARP, Music.
MISS R. M. DILLON, Music.
MISS DELLE PRINNINGTON, Art.
MISS K. L. HARLOW, Government and Principal of the Normal School.
MISS FLORENCE BARLOW, Assistant.

FALL TERM OPENS SEPT. 10, 1884.

RATES: $170, $220 and $250 per session of 35 weeks. The thirty year begins under most favorable auspices. For Catalogue, address:

F. M. GRACE, President.

Collegiate Institute

AT
BATON ROUGE, LA.

July Session, beginning October 1, 1884.

This is a select Family Founding School for BOYS. Located in a beautiful spot, where they are prepared for the best colleges of the country or for professional pursuits of life. The per cent care of the Principal is given to the health, morals and manners of his pupils. The health record of the school is unrivaled.

For particulars and circular apply to W. H. N. MARRIOTT, Principal, or J. B. MARRIOTT, A. M., assistant.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE, HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA.

THIRTY-FIFTH SESSION BEGINS WEDNESDAY, September 3, 1884. Faculty well furnished, for each of the sciences. Instruction in all departments of Female Education. A select, Christian home for pupils. For Catalogue and special information, apply to:

REV. A. H. JONES, A. M., President.

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, nearville, La., a town on the railroad that runs from Monroe and Shreveport.

The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with no indulgence.

For circulars, address

R. A. SMITH, Principal.

THE MESSRS. WEBB'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS, COLUMBIA, TENN.

Next session begins August 25th.

Dr. Garland, Chancellor of Vanderbilt, says: "The Academy of the Messrs. Webb has no superior, within my knowledge, in the Southern States. It is a school where the poor boy and girl may get an education as well as the wealthy. It is a school where the student will be happy, and where the teacher will be proud."

Prof. H. H. HARRIS, formerly of the Vanderbilt, now of the University of Texas, and President of the American Philosophical Society, says: "The school of the Messrs. Webb, of Columbia, is a school of the highest preparation in the South. It is a school where the student will be happy, and where the teacher will be proud."

For circulars, address

REV. A. H. JONES, A. M., President.

ELKIN & CO.

100-CANAL STREET-100

Involve attention to their large stock of fresh, imported goods, extra quantities and quality.

CHINA MATTINGS.

All varieties of CARPETING at very low prices.

Oil Cloths, Window Shades, Curtains, &c.

NEW CHINA MATTING

AT LOW PRICES.

A. Brousseau's Son

22 and 25 Chartres Street 22 and 25

LACE CURTAINS

From $1.50 Pair up.

WINDOW SHADES, OIL CLOTHS, CARPETS.

All the Latest Styles and Novelties.

ART DECORATIONS

—IN—

WALL PAPER, WINDOW SHADES AND COORNIOS, MATS AND MATTINGS, Hall and Chimney FRINGES, ready-made PICTURE FRAMES and CARPETS below cost, in close to the branch of my business.

E. HEATH,

75 CAMP STREET.

LIFE AND TIMES OF BISHOP H. H. KAVANAUGH, D. D.

By A.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER TO-DAY!

THE TEST:

Place a can of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder in a hot water bath, and if it rises, it is good. If it does not, it is bad.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

DOES NOT CONTAIN AMMONIA.

THE TEST OF THE OVEN.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.,

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts.

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems

FOR SALE BY CROCCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

DR. PRICE'S LUPULIN YEAST GEMS

THE BEST DRY HOP YEAST IN THE WORLD.

CROCCERS SELL THEM.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Reductions.

To those in want of FURNITURE we would say that the PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED on every article in our stock, though Furniture has advanced in value ten to twenty per cent. Our reason for making these reductions is NOT on account of being overstocked, but our aim is to show our customers an entirely new stock every season.

To those contemplating purchases in our line we would say CALL AND BE CONVINCED that our reductions are not imaginary ones, but are from figures that are at all times guaranteed to be the lowest. THE CHEAPEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN THE SOUTH.

W. G. TEBAUT,

Wholesale and Retail Furniture,

37, 39 and 41 Royal Street,

New Orleans, La.

CARVER & BAKER,

Cotton Factors

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

44 Perdido Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

MECHANIC'S & TRADER'S

Insurance Company.

14 CARONDELET STREET,

New Orleans, La.

Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks,

AT LOWEST TARIFF RATES.

FACTORIES:

J. M. Allen, J. A. Brantley, J. H. Gritton, T. J. Carver, J. H. Cobb, H. T. Goussier, H. Dudley Coleman, O. Elmer, J. M. Frankenhof, P. G. Gilbert, J. Harrison Hill, Chas. Holloway, I. L. Lyons, Leontine Lacombe, T. L. Macou, Lloyd R. Coleman.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY,

Bellevue, La.

BLUMYER MFG CO.

Bellevue, La.

Household.

GRUEL.—These are thin porridges. They may be made in the same manner, adding two or three times as much water. They are seldom used except for fever patients.

BOILED GREEN CORN.—Trim off the husks and silk; put the ears in hot water, and boil them twenty or thirty minutes; or the ears may be steamed one-half to three-fourths of an hour. The kernels are then cut from the cob, scraped the cob after cutting, a little hot water added, and cooked by boiling ten or fifteen minutes.

BARLEY BROTH.—Take four ounces of pearl barley; two turnips, and three ounces of corn-meal; steep the barley (after being washed) twelve hours; put it on the fire in five quarts of water; add the turnips chopped fine; boil one hour; stir in the meal; then if necessary with more water, and let it simmer gently twenty minutes.

GREEN BEAN SOUP.—Boil one quart of garden or kidney beans, and put them through the colander; add an equal quantity of vegetable broth; dredge in a little Graham flour or oatmeal; stir the dish until it boils; then add one ounce of spinach and one ounce of parsley, chopped fine; add salt if these are done, and send to the table.

SPINACH SOUP.—Take two quarts of spinach, half a pound of parsley, two carrots, two turnips, and one root of celery; stew all of them in a pint of water until quite soft; rub them through a coarse sieve; add one quart of hot water, and boil them twenty minutes.

TOMATO SOUP.—Scald and peel good ripe tomatoes; stew them one hour, strain through a coarse sieve; add grated potatoes to thicken sufficiently, and cook half an hour longer.

SPLIT PEA SOUP.—Wash one pint of split peas, and boil in three quarts of water three hours.

CITRON AND OTHER FRUIT IN CAKE.—To prevent citron or other fruit setting to the bottom of a cake or pudding, rub the citron well with flour after cutting.

SOLIMIFIED BEEF TEA.—One way to beguile an invalid into taking more beef tea than he is willing for is to add gelatine to it and let it cool in a mold. When it is hard and like jelly serve it with salt and waters.

FILLING FOR PIER OR TURNOVERS.—A quarter of a pound of raisins stoned and chopped, a cracker rolled fine, an egg, the juice and grated rind of a lemon, and nearly a cupful of sugar. It used for pie, naps top crust.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COTTAGE

ON

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND

FOR RENT OR SALE.

PARTLY FURNISHED.

WANTED.

WHITE OAK STAVES

Delivered in Mobile or New Orleans.

DANNER & CO.,

54 Carondelet street,

NEW ORLEANS,

or MOBILE, ALA.

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

CROCKERY, China and Glass Ware

General Furnishers for

HOUSE, HOTEL AND STEAMBOATS.

CROCKERY WARE

YELLOW WARE

GLASS WARE

TIN WARE.

Coal Oil Stoves and Garden Pumps,

Wanted Agents in every town in the State.

CHEAPEST CASH HOUSE IN THE CITY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Christian Editor's Opinion.

Twenty-five Years a Citizen of Georgia

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the memorial for the removal of the statue of John R. Lynch, published in the Atlanta Christian Advocate, we have received the following letter, which is a most excellent specimen of the kind of reasoning which is to be expected from the people of the South.

RAILROADS.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO

Mobile, Montgomery, Pensacola, Nashville, Louisville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Savannah, St. Louis, Jacksonville, Fla., Lynchburg, and Washington, D. C., IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common st., where Sleeping Car accommodations can be secured

C. P. ATMORE, Gen. Pass. Agent.

J. H. SMITH, Ticket Agent.

J. T. HARAHAN, Gen'l Superintendent.

JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent, New Orleans.

O. M. DUNN, Sup't N. O. and M. Division.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

TO THE NORTH AND NORTHWEST, Via N. O. and N. E., and Mobile and Ohio Railroads.

Meridian Route.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

For further information apply to W. J. O'BRIEN, Ticket Agent, Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway,

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN and CENTRAL TEXAS, and all points in Arizona, Old and New Mexico and California.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from Jackson Depot at 11 A. M., through to San Francisco via Alexandria, Shreveport and Marshall.

Through Express arrives New Orleans at 1:30 P. M. For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot.

A. B. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, Marshall, Texas.

H. M. HOXIE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

The Short Line—

TO ALL POINTS—

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS'

North and East and in the Northwest

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE.

Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains.

with Pullman Palace Cars.

Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga, and Cincinnati.

Simple Screw Press, $150.

Independent Screw Press $165.

FOR POWER OR STEAM POWER, are COLEMAN'S FRICTION GEARED POWER PRESS,

Of which THREE SIZES are made—Namely 9 in., 10 in., and 11 in. Packing Boxes

The two larger sizes having SCREW or PISTON FIVE INCH DIAMET—All sizes are of wrought iron, threaded in the lathe.

Patented improvements attached to these presses cause them to give the utmost satisfaction. Active, free oiling agents wanted to sell these presses on commission wherever they are not already represented. Address the manufacturer,

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets, DIRECTORS IN NEW ORLEANS.

J. F. SCHROEDER, Chairman.

Newton Buckner, A. Delville, Rodolphe Wenz, Asses in the United States, $1,000,000.

Assets in the United States, $1,000,000.

Surplus over all liabilities, $1,000,000.

HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary, 117 N. P. O. Bldg.

TULANE F. ROSEN, Assistant Secretary, 117 N. P. O. Bldg.

CLARENCE E. LOW, Deputy Asst. Secretary, 117 N. P. O. Bldg.

WOODEN and WILLOW WARE, Cordage, Demijohns, Paper, Tinware, Twines.

J.C. MORRIS' 40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas Street

HARTER'S IRON TONIC

Will purify the BLOOD, regulate the LIVER and KIDNEYS, and restore the HEALTH.

LADIES

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

"GINGER CLUB" SODA

"CANTRELL & COCHRAN" DUBLIN & BELFAST

E. & J. BURKE, General Agents, NEW YORK.

OPIMUM

PATENTS

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST"

ENGINES, THRESHERS, SAW MILLS, and other machinery.

Holmes' Sure Cure Mouth Wash AND DENTIFRICE.

Fast Potato Digging

THE MONARCH POTATO DIGGER

SENT ON 60 Days' Test Trial.

Agents Wanted.

Write postal card for FREE illustrated Catalogue, in six brilliant colors, that cost us $2,000 to publish.

206 State St. Monarch Manufacturing Co., CHICAGO, ILL.

How to rear Poultry Profitably. Send a ten-cent postal card for a copy of this book.

H. H. Stoddard, Hartford, Conn.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Meridian Route.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

Meridian Route.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS'

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE.

Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga, and Cincinnati.

Simple Screw Press, $150.

Independent Screw Press $165.

FOR POWER OR STEAM POWER, are COLEMAN'S FRICTION GEARED POWER PRESS,

Of which THREE SIZES are made—Namely 9 in., 10 in., and 11 in. Packing Boxes

The two larger sizes having SCREW or PISTON FIVE INCH DIAMET—All sizes are of wrought iron, threaded in the lathe.

Patented improvements attached to these presses cause them to give the utmost satisfaction. Active, free oiling agents wanted to sell these presses on commission wherever they are not already represented. Address the manufacturer,

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN, FOUNDRY AND PLANTATION MACHINERY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Meridian Route.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Christian Advocate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE 1 IN A 1000!
"TO LOVE AND BE LOVED"

Beautiful Song and Chorus by T. P. Wendlandt.
Author of "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen."
EXQUISITE WORDS AND MUSIC.
To be loved and loved is the greatest pleasure of existence. It is a melody that is never lost. Sent by mail to any address postpaid, on receipt of fifty cents.

THE NEW MUSICAL CURRICULUM.
THE IDEAL PIANO INSTRUCTOR.

When this method first appeared, it was the result of the greatest musical genius. It has been the standard method in America and Europe, as the BEST and MOST POPULAR PIANO METHOD IS KNOWN.

It is a PROGRESSIVE, in character, and is the only one that is perfectly adapted to the needs of the student. Sent by mail, post-paid $3.00.
Published by
JOHN CHURCH & CO.,
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

JOY TO THE WORLD.
ROUND NOTE EDITION

AND
CHARACTER NOTE EDITION.

MORE THAN 100 TUNES
AND 238 HYMNS.

THE BEST
FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS
AND SOCIAL MEETINGS.

A choice collection of Spiritual Songs and Hymns, edited by T. P. O'KANE, C. C.
McKAY, and J. W. KENNY.
Contains the most popular of new pieces, it contains large numbers of the best of the old. The popularity and rapid sale of the "Round Note" edition of this book has led to the
"Character Note Edition."

If you want the best and cheapest give
this a trial.
Character Note Edition—Full Octavo, 144
pages, only $2.50, $2.50 a hundred.
Round Note Edition—2mo, 128 pages,
$2.50 a hundred, $2.50 a hundred.
FOR SALE AT BOOKSTORES.

CRANSTON & STOWE, Publishers,
CINCINNATI, CHICAGO, AND ST. LOUIS.

"ASHEVILLE FEMALE" COLLEGE,
IN THE "LAND OF THE SKY,"
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The fall session opens September 10th. Faculty large and experienced. Course thorough. Musical advantages and rates. The place beautiful, and well calculated for healthfulness. Charges low.
For Catalogue, Address
REV. JAMES ATKINS, JR.,
Asheville, N. C.

ALABAMA
CENTRAL FEMALE COLLEGE,
TUSCALOOSA, ALABAMA.

Course liberal. Faculty large and experienced.
For Catalogue, Address
REV. JAMES ATKINS, JR.,
Asheville, N. C.

AW SCHOOL
OF WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY.

OF WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY.
OF WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY.
OF WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE,
FARMINGTON, MISS.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE,
FARMINGTON, MISS.
WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE,
FARMINGTON, MISS.

Nashville College
FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Nashville College
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
Nashville College
FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

WARD'S SEMINARY

WARD'S SEMINARY
WARD'S SEMINARY
WARD'S SEMINARY

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches

Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches
Rockford Watches

THE PILLOW-INHALER!
ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

THE PILLOW-INHALER is one of the most effective medical inventions of the age. It is a triumph of science over disease. It is the most perfect of all inhalers, for it is the cure of Catarrh and the whole-torture of kindred ailments.

ONE THING IT DOES—IT CURES!
It is a Mechanical Pillow that is used the same as one's ordinary bed-pillow. It contains reservoirs for volatile medicines and by means of a special action, the medicines are inhaled respirators are the most healing and disinfesting that science and experience have been able to formulate for the purpose required. They are entirely safe and the Inhaler is perfectly comfortable; a child can use it. There are no pipes or tubes for the mouth or nose. Each night, the dangerous period of the disease, the body of the patient is held in the reservoirs of the Inhaler, and the volatile medicine is inhaled with every breath he draws. It cures disease by a continuous application of curative air to the diseased membranes of the respiratory organs, and whilst spreading stimulating and soothing agents upon inflamed tissues and neutralizing the poisons through every drop in the body for vestiges of disease and annihilates them.

HERE IS ONE TESTIMONY OUT OF HUNDREDS.
A CURE OF THE WORST TYPE OF CATARRH.

I had Catarrh of the worst kind, and then I used the Pillow-Inhaler, and gave up all other medicines, and now I am in perfect health. I have suffered with Catarrh for years, but I feel I cannot do too much to spread the knowledge of this invaluable cure. The pastor in my church, in Baltimore, knows how I suffered. The pastor in my church, in Baltimore, knows how I suffered. The pastor in my church, in Baltimore, knows how I suffered.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., 1520 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

When writing please mention the name of this paper.

THE COUNTRY ORDER BUREAU

AT DANZIGER'S

NEW PANIC PRICES!

READ! MARK! LEARN!

WHITE GOODS.
Victoria Lawns, 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100, 102, 104, 106, 108, 110, 112, 114, 116, 118, 120, 122, 124, 126, 128, 130, 132, 134, 136, 138, 140, 142, 144, 146, 148, 150, 152, 154, 156, 158, 160, 162, 164, 166, 168, 170, 172, 174, 176, 178, 180, 182, 184, 186, 188, 190, 192, 194, 196, 198, 200, 202, 204, 206, 208, 210, 212, 214, 216, 218, 220, 222, 224, 226, 228, 230, 232, 234, 236, 238, 240, 242, 244, 246, 248, 250, 252, 254, 256, 258, 260, 262, 264, 266, 268, 270, 272, 274, 276, 278, 280, 282, 284, 286, 288, 290, 292, 294, 296, 298, 300, 302, 304, 306, 308, 310, 312, 314, 316, 318, 320, 322, 324, 326, 328, 330, 332, 334, 336, 338, 340, 342, 344, 346, 348, 350, 352, 354, 356, 358, 360, 362, 364, 366, 368, 370, 372, 374, 376, 378, 380, 382, 384, 386, 388, 390, 392, 394, 396, 398, 400, 402, 404, 406, 408, 410, 412, 414, 416, 418, 420, 422, 424, 426, 428, 430, 432, 434, 436, 438, 440, 442, 444, 446, 448, 450, 452, 454, 456, 458, 460, 462, 464, 466, 468, 470, 472, 474, 476, 478, 480, 482, 484, 486, 488, 490, 492, 494, 496, 498, 500, 502, 504, 506, 508, 510, 512, 514, 516, 518, 520, 522, 524, 526, 528, 530, 532, 534, 536, 538, 540, 542, 544, 546, 548, 550, 552, 554, 556, 558, 560, 562, 564, 566, 568, 570, 572, 574, 576, 578, 580, 582, 584, 586, 588, 590, 592, 594, 596, 598, 600, 602, 604, 606, 608, 610, 612, 614, 616, 618, 620, 622, 624, 626, 628, 630, 632, 634, 636, 638, 640, 642, 644, 646, 648, 650, 652, 654, 656, 658, 660, 662, 664, 666, 668, 670, 672, 674, 676, 678, 680, 682, 684, 686, 688, 690, 692, 694, 696, 698, 700, 702, 704, 706, 708, 710, 712, 714, 716, 718, 720, 722, 724, 726, 728, 730, 732, 734, 736, 738, 740, 742, 744, 746, 748, 750, 752, 754, 756, 758, 760, 762, 764, 766, 768, 770, 772, 774, 776, 778, 780, 782, 784, 786, 788, 790, 792, 794, 796, 798, 800, 802, 804, 806, 808, 810, 812, 814, 816, 818, 820, 822, 824, 826, 828, 830, 832, 834, 836, 838, 840, 842, 844, 846, 848, 850, 852, 854, 856, 858, 860, 862, 864, 866, 868, 870, 872, 874, 876, 878, 880, 882, 884, 886, 888, 890, 892, 894, 896, 898, 900, 902, 904, 906, 908, 910, 912, 914, 916, 918, 920, 922, 924, 926, 928, 930, 932, 934, 936, 938, 940, 942, 944, 946, 948, 950, 952, 954, 956, 958, 960, 962, 964, 966, 968, 970, 972, 974, 976, 978, 980, 982, 984, 986, 988, 990, 992, 994, 996, 998, 1000.

These special inducements are from
The Popular and Progressive Dry Goods Emporium of
D. DANZIGER,
131 Canal Street.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 CANAL STREET,
15 Bourbon Street, - - - 15 Dourphine Street
NEW ORLEANS.

Keep at all times a most complete assortment of European and Domestic
DRY GOODS

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals, Purchasers will find
Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

Samples Sent Throughout the Country, and Orders Promptly Executed.
The BONNET and DRESS-MAKING Departments are placed in most SKILLFUL HANDS.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE,
STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

Wesleyan Female Institute,
Staunton, Virginia.
Wesleyan Female Institute,
Staunton, Virginia.

GULLETT'S IMPROVED

GULLETT'S IMPROVED
GULLETT'S IMPROVED
GULLETT'S IMPROVED

MAGNOLIA GINS.

MAGNOLIA GINS.
MAGNOLIA GINS.
MAGNOLIA GINS.

CONDENSERS.

CONDENSERS.
CONDENSERS.
CONDENSERS.

FEEDERS.

FEEDERS.
FEEDERS.
FEEDERS.

THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.

THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.
THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.
THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.

The most highly improved Gin made. DOES NOT BREAK
THE ROLL in ginning, nor will it choke under the severest test.
Gins Fast, cleans the seed perfectly and produces a superior sample of lint. Claimed by those who use it to bring in any market one-eighth to one-half cent per pound more than when same cotton is ginned by other gins.

For further information, address
GULLETT GIN CO.,
Amite, Louisiana.

Christian Advocate.

THE CHILDREN.—Since Dickens invented his representation of woman with a mission, who was interested in everybody but her own children, and contaminated all societies for the amelioration of humanity at the expense of her own household, who was never so much at home as away from home, and who allowed the charge God had phrenically put into her care to go to the winds, she has been to missions and meetings and societies that would have been much better without her—who does not know the type and pty the home? But are there any more transgressors? Are there any more justified than mothers in vacating the air of their family? Are there any more who neglect the moral and philanthropic societies that allowed offenses to supersede the claims of those who ought to find in the father their guide, counselor, friend, teacher, and example? If God has given you a family, based on your solemn trust of father, and if you know that there are pre-eminently that of all your duties, and in its discharge you ought to find your labor and your joy. In your home is your work, outside is your distraction. We are strongly convinced that, as a rule, Christian parents of society spend too little time with their children, and leave them to the chance influences by which they are surrounded.
It is felt to be a kind of infraction of dignity to be seen with one's children as companions, a kind of suppression of the nursery and of schoolmaster.
The younger the child's mind the more susceptible of impression it is, and unless you begin to mould their character early you can do little with it except for evil.—Christian Leader.

Appetite and Digestion.

With few exceptions, the first effects of the new Vitalizing Treatment of Drs.
Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard St., Philadelphia, is an improvement in appetite and digestion. A change in the whole personal appearance soon follows. The skin grows clearer, the eyes brighter, the movements more elastic. There is a sense of lightness and comfort. The chest begins to expand and the weight to diminish. All the depressed or sluggish functions of the body take on a better action, and there is a gradual return to a more healthy condition. If the treatment is continued, and the laws of health carefully observed, restoration, unless the physical system is too far broken down, will follow in nearly every case. All desired information in regard to this remarkable Treatment will be furnished by Drs.
Starkey & Palen. Write to them, and your communication will get a prompt response.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARTHUR WACKERBARTH. L. H. JOSEPH
WACKERBARTH & JOSEPH.
MANUFACTURERS

Wholesale Dealers in
Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes, Etc.

45 MAGAZINE STREET,
New Orleans.

THE NEW HIGH ARM
SINGER SEWING MACHINE

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!
—FOR—
Range of Work, Perfection of
Stitch, Ease of Operation,
Rapidity, and almost Noiseless.

GREAT REDUCTION

27-19 pieces of NEEDLES for all
Machines, and parts for the Singer Machine. Singer
Family Sewing Machine, No. 2, 2 1/2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

Send for Circular and Price List.
Singer Sewing Machine Co.,
185 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
S. E. RINDLE, Agent.

Factors' and Traders'
INSURANCE COMPANY.

49 CARONDELET STREET,
Paid Up Capital $1,000,000

ED. A. PALFREY, President,
JOHN CLAFFE, Vice President,
THOS. F. WALKER, Secretary.

Issues Policies Covering Fire, River and Marine Risks at the Lowest Tariff Rates.

HEADQUARTERS
FOR—
Sunday-School Supplies:

Consulting in part of GOSPEL HYMNS, Single and Combined,
With and without Music.

Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teachers'
Bibles Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible
Classroom, etc.

Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books;
Union Spelling Books; Union Question Books;
Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards;
Tables, etc. Also a large assortment of Books suitable for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents to children. Pulpit and Family Bibles, from $2.50 to $10.00. Liberal discount to ministers, churches, and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.

W. D. SKILLMAN,
Business Manager,
94 Canal Street, New Orleans.

THE LEADING CAMPAIGN BOOK!!

History of Growth, Development and Resources of the Republic. Its great and varied Problems. Review of past Administration. Blueprints of Campaigns, 1861. Platform of Majority. Statistics of Agriculture, Manufactures, Commerce, its Branches, Churches, Schools, etc. 200 pages. Price 10 cents. For full catalogue begin work Age 14. Send address for full catalogue begin work Age 14. Send address for full catalogue begin work Age 14. Send address for full catalogue

Facts and Reasons.

Effects Produced by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and by Nothing Else so Perfectly.

It strengthens and invigorates sufferers from emaciation, languor, weakness, and mental depression.
It has an almost magical effect in curing eruptive and cutaneous disorders.
It purifies the blood, and cures the taint of that terrible destructive disease, Hereditary Scrofula.
It expels from the system the baneful poison of Mercury, which is as serious as that of Scrofula.
It purifies and regenerates the life current polluted by the corruption of contagious disease.
It stimulates the secretory organs, effects the removal of all impurities from the blood and makes it new, rich, and pure.
It restores health to sufferers from thin blood and impaired vitality.

Advantages that AYER'S SARSAPARILLA
Possesses over all Others.

It is composed of the most efficacious alterative, diuretic, and tonic drugs known in pharmacy, which are the genuine Hordnas, Scrofula, Yellow Doek, Stillingsia, and the Iodides of Potassium and Iron.
It is a highly concentrated medicine, scientifically and honestly compounded so as to secure to it the highest degree of activity and perfect uniformity.
It has received the hearty endorsement of the leading men in the medical profession, who recognize it as a standard pharmacological preparation, and prescribe it in their practice.
It contains no poisonous minerals or other dangerous drugs, the use of which for temporary effect in the mummy crude produces effects on the system of a worse nature than the diseases they are offered to cure.
It costs no more than any other, but would still be the cheapest blood-purifying medicine in the world, even were its price three times greater, since it is the only one that does "read, lasting good."

It has been before the public for nearly forty years, and has constantly grown in popular favor, both at home and abroad, until there is hardly a place in the civilized world where it has not a host of friends, made so by its marvellous cures.
It has been used in, and approved by,
at least 4,000,000 families in the United States, and 7,000,000 throughout the world.
Women have special reasons for commending it.
It has proven its potency in curing obstinate, deeply-seated, and long-standing diseases caused by vitiation of the blood. It must not, however, be expected and is not claimed that a single bottle will cure such cases; but patients should persevere in the use of this remedy until a radical cure is effected.
It is the only blood-purifier that has won and retained the confidence of the people of all tropical countries, where such medicines are much required.
It is the only medicine of its class that suffers, as a rule, have any faith in—and they are right.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., [Analytical Chemists] LOWELL, MASS.
Sold by all Druggists: Price $1.00, six bottles for $5.

WM. H. PIERSON,
SUCCESSOR TO
WHEELER & PIERSON

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,
Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 15.
6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.
Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent C. O. D.

No. 56 USE THE GLASSES

A WONDERFUL and
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE LABORATORY OF MRS. P. H. AYER, AND possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, and of curing all eye diseases.
They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European chemists, who have found that the MEDIC-
CAL EYE GLASSES have no equal, and can, in every case, restore the sight, if it is not too far gone.
The chemicals used in the treatment of the eye, are perfectly harmless, and do not in any way harm the eye, or the system. They are perfectly safe, and do not in any way harm the eye, or the system.
The chemicals used in the treatment of the eye, are perfectly harmless, and do not in any way harm the eye, or the system. They are perfectly safe, and do not in any way harm the eye, or the system.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS—NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.
THE MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame with the name H. ROUSSEAU, MEDICATED.
Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who may wish to procure these spectacles, can send for a circular containing description, prices, etc., and directions for testing a perfect fit, and have them sent by mail, by addressing

HERC. HOUSAH,
CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY.

56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
In writing mention this paper.

A. BALDWIN & Co.

74 Canal, 91, 93, 95 Common Street, New Orleans—also 77 and 79 Bond Street, New York.
IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE,

CUTLERY, GUNS, PISTOLS, IRON, NAILS, SHEET AND BOLT CUTTER.
Steel Bar Fence Wire and Agricultural Implements.

AGENTS FOR—E. & J. Brooks' Anchor Brand Nails and spikes. Also the City, Windsor, Crown, B. D. and S. S. S. S. S. S. S. S

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 31.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1461.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

PRINTED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

JES. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
J. ARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX B. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D.D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN EKKER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. G. B. GALLOWAY, D.D.,
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D.D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE GOODLY LAND.

BY SYDNEY DAVID.

To a goodly pleasant land that we pilgrims journey through,
And our Father's constant blessings fall around us
Like the dew;
But its sunshine and its beauty to our hearts no joy can bring,
Like the splendors that await us in the palace of the King.

Oh, the palace of the King, royal palace of the King,
Where our Father in his mercy all the ransomed Ones will bring;
Where our sorrows and our trials like a dream will pass away,
And our souls shall dwell forever in the realms of endless day.

—Christian Age.

Sunday and the World's Exposition.

Mr. Editor: From information I have received I believe my letter to Col. E. Richardson, president of the World's Exposition Association, has been greatly misunderstood and, when its aim is not wholly misconceived, so misconstrued as to lead to false conclusions. But for such facts I would not notice it further, nor the criticisms made upon its purpose and practicability.

As to my relative position, I go farther than yourself, or any member of the Sunday League, of New Orleans, so far as I know the opinions of that society. I claim the "stopping of all machinery." That will release from toil and care and attention from 5,000 to 10,000 employees who are entitled to rest one day in seven. They will only be paid for six days' work, and if the other day is extended and wrong from them, it will not be a very bright page in the record of the Exposition. It is further evident, in its face, that if the machinery is stopped, no tickets can be sold. That is indisputable. Can or does the Sunday League ask more? You ask no more. But I do; I go further, and I ask the use of the great hall from sunrise to twelve o'clock in the night for the worship of God on the holy Sabbath, for the preaching of truth and for anthems of praise.

The Exposition is designed to material things to represent and be an abridgement of the world—the world's progress, growth, status and promise. Several millions of people from the four quarters of the globe are expected to visit and take part in the display. Not one in a hundred will be able to find sitting room in the churches of New Orleans. But what an occasion it will be for men of broad catholic sentiments, though of diverse creeds and opinions—yet all lovers of truth and worshippers of God—to meet together, look each other in the face, offer their devotions together and clasp hands as brethren—children of a divine and eternal Father!

But "Sunday worship conducted by Jews, Greeks and Mohammedans is impracticable," says one. Why so? If Russia shall send her contribution, and a ship manned by Greek Church Christians, with a priest accompanying them, lands at the Exposition grounds, how will it be impracticable to allow—nay, to urge the priest to use the hall as may be agreed upon for their special use? Or as Arabia and Constantinople send their great exhibits, as I am told they will, what, if I give to the vast company of attendants the watchful care and, if need be, the consolations in peril of a priest, the Grand Master shall send such a priest, a learned doctor and teacher? Would it not become us much to bestow every facility upon him, and then and give them a comfortable place and respectful welcome? I would. If Cardinal McCloskey will preach there, he will have a respectful hearing. If the Bishops, doctors and distinguished ministers of the Protestant Church will accept invitations and fill the pulpit, they will be greeted with pleasure.

"But you will empty the churches of the city, and the people will go as people go to a circus." Camp meetings do that very thing. Last year a camp meeting, in Kentucky, employed Dr. Talmage at $500 to perform divine service one Sunday for them. As to emptying the churches, that is too small for comment. Think of one fact. Say six thousand men, women and children will be sent to New Orleans as an employed force to conduct the Exposition and display the articles collected and exhibited. Experts all—only such could do the work. These must board and lodge near the grounds. Many of them will be Christians. Where will they go to church on Sunday if not in the great hall? Not down in the city; not in Carrollton; not anywhere. There is not the shadow of a chance for them for either free or "forced and formal worship."

I said I did not believe the "Board of Management" would be able to resist the pressure of the countless multitudes that will desire to spend a part of the holy day upon the Exposition grounds. You will observe I speak only of the grounds, parks, groves, trees, and not of any place where exhibitions are made and tickets sold. The people had far better promenade there than in many dusty walks or on the lake shore. They will go out "forced and formal" or free and reverently voluntary, and as the grounds will be adorned with flowers and rare growths from far away, I simply said, let the people visit the grounds on Sunday if they will. Of many evils choose the least.

Now, let us see what will be done with the hall if you decline its use on the Lord's day. However, I will not prolong this question. (A word to the wise.) But I stand firmly by every word of the letter addressed to the president of the Exposition Association, and, as an act of justice, I ask the publication of that letter that my friends may judge of my position for themselves. Daily communications received satisfy me that a calm perusal of the letter, with these explanations to correct erroneous impressions, will set me all right with many esteemed friends who have been led to think that I have "gone overboard on the Sabbath question."

Very respectfully yours,

C. K. MARSHALL.

Dr. Marshall's Open Letter.

Mr. Editor: Dr. Marshall has already had criticism, favorable and adverse. But I have his "Open Letter" directed to me with his own hand. It may be sent simply because he is my good friend. If so, I thank him fully acknowledge the honor. It may be sent because I was the author of a resolution, asking the managers of the Exposition to close the gates on Sunday. If so, it calls for a reply, which I hope will not offend.

1. "The Board can not resist the pressure of the countless multitudes at home and from abroad who will desire to spend a part of the holy day upon the Exposition grounds." This assumes the whole thing, for those "countless multitudes" either have or have not religious convictions. If they have, they will come either as Christians or as those who could not conscientiously engage in the worship proposed by Dr. Marshall. If they have no convictions, they can not be reached at all, and hence when admitted to the grounds they would with impunity and without compunction proceed to desecrate the Sabbath as they chose. Or again: The management either has or has not convictions. If they have, their convictions, under the law, ought to be as imperative as the clamor of the multitudes against the law. If they have no religious convictions, they certainly have legal conscience which does not construe, but relates to the execution of the law. This conscience can not discriminate as to the Sunday law any more than it can to murder. Both laws are alike in obligation. Once more: Of these countless multitudes many are citizens of the United States. It will be indeed humiliating to know that, instead of being on their good behavior, they would raise a seditious mob against the officers and the laws. And would it not be a stigma and a casus belli if foreigners, who are received as guests of the United States, conspire with the lawless of our own land to force the Board of Managers to violate a law enacted by both Church and State?

2. "Forced and formal worship is as hateful to God as the hollow pretenses of hypocrisy." Agreed. But who said one word about compelling people to go to church? We merely ask that one of the ten commandments be not broken officially. If we had said, "Allow no pocket-picking," or, "See that the murderers are restrained," would any one have said, "Hold! you are forcing people to worship?" But because we say, "Remember the Sabbath," Dr. Marshall rises as if the Inquisitorial College is in session. I take it for granted that there will be a fixed hour every night for closing the grounds. When that hour is announced will it be after the following manner: "Every body is commanded to go to bed; and whoever fails to say his prayers shall be taken out and forced to say them?"

3. Some one terms the doctor's plan "a happy expedient." Let us see: Friday and polygamy for the Turks; Saturday and fossil ceremonials for the Jews; Sunday for Christian whales and porpoises to spout and blow; Monday for the Indian medicine man; Tuesday for Bushmen and holysnakes, and so on. No machinery will be run except the grand organ. This is no burlesque; it is the program made by Dr. Marshall, who claims that no distinction can be made since it is the World's Exposition.

4. The preservation of the serious, etc., would be one of the unfortunate concomitants of the plan proposed. The book should go into my library after the Officiel Gazette of the U. S. Patent Office. Congress would doubtless vote an appropriation for its publication. To pay any printer is a "worthy charity"—especially a Washington document printer.

5. Once upon a time there was a hen named Speck Incubator. She was a genius in that line. She would incubate the small boy's glass marbles when she could find nothing else. It was incubating season. Mater familias had bought six dozen eggs, but not one of the sort to be incubated. The basket had gone up town after a beef roast. The eggs we laid temporarily under the lounge. Some time afterward there was heard a noise as of a clucking and a rilling which grew continually more vigorous. Mater familias went to see. Speck was spreading herself, wings, tail, claws, bill and even eyes, but in vain. Six dozen eggs were beyond her capacity for sitting. Providence permitting, Speck will be at the Exposition.

6. "We are Christians only in name." Sorry to agree with it; but better keep the name when nothing is to be made by throwing it away. Shall we gain by becoming anti-Christians or a mixture of everything? Suppose it to be only in name, would the doctor like it better? If the poor hunted Christians spurned the proposal of the Roman emperor to place Christ among the heathen gods, shall we of the nineteenth century turn now and ask that it be done? Doubtless Turkey is really more Mahometan than the United States are Christian. But what of that? Does the doctor propose that for that reason Turkish religion ought to have the same official respect as the Christian? I am no stickler for names; but God forefend that there should ever be a day of public worship in the United States when the crescent shall substitute the cross! Can any one think without his blood curdling of a repetition of the French blasphemy of a trumpet sitting upon God's altar and receiving the homage of the leaders of the mad multitudes? We are Christians in name—thank God for that much! Let us keep the name and seek the reality.

Again, let me say, I am no bigot. I am willing to leave it to a vote of the American people. If a majority say, "Open on Sunday," I shall submit. But I do not feel like violating my conscience to please a clamorous tenth of the people; for I do not believe that more than one in ten would deliberately vote to disregard the day. A man who puts in six days at the Exposition will be willing to rest his eyes. Let us have the wish of the majority and the law respected.

T. A. S. ADAMS.

Woman's Work for Heathen Women.

Mr. Editor: On the evening of July 1 the Woman's Missionary Society, of the North Mississippi Conference, began a most pleasant session in Corinth, which lasted two days. The meeting began, progressed and closed with the manifest presence of God. The business was transacted with ability and Christian meekness. Large congregations attended every session and were delighted with the deliberations. After the business was all finished, Thursday, July 4, about noon, they held an experience meeting. That was the best of the feast. It was conducted by the ladies in a most impressive manner. Every one present seemed to be happy, and many rejoiced aloud.

One among many other good things was the organization of a woman's missionary society in Corinth, which at the first meeting numbered forty-one. We already had a juvenile society with about seventy members. I was glad to see in a previous number of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE a good confession from "Penitence." Permit me to say that neither Bro. Kendall nor I wrote that confession, for we were converted before that meeting. May the Lord continue to bless the woman's missionary work!

J. A. BOWEN.

CORINTH, MISS., July 28, 1884.

Whitewashing.

BY BLACK GRASS.

Whitewashing is in itself a very useful and innocent process if kept within its original design and confined to its appropriate objects. It is better adapted to trees, fences and houses than to character and reputation. The object of the operation is to cover evidences of decay, weather-beaten stains or signs of age and dilapidation. To simulate the appearance of newness, order, beauty and to conceal the traces of decline and debility, in the new, white, shining coat which glitters in the sun, certainly is very laudable, so far as it ministers pleasure to the eye and comfort to the home life.

The process is annual, and is as much the evidence of return of spring as the coming of the swallows is harbinger of the summer. It is at once health giving as well as pleasure producing. It recalls youth and signs of purity, and reflects its cheering influence through the household and around the premises. The neatness and care of the housekeeper are made evident.

Care is necessary both in the mixing of the ingredients and the application of the materials. If error is in material, it falls to prevent the smooth, permanent form so desirable in opposition to heat and rains. Instead of being a permanent adornment it liberally bestows itself upon everything that touches it. When rightly compounded and applied it does not scale or fall off, but retains its firm position and temporary ornament.

Whitewashing, from its pleasant effects and kindly influence upon material matters, has, by metaphor, been extended to persons and characters. A spot on reputation, a disreputable or dishonorable act, may be for the time concealed; still if the wash is not often applied, the very attempt at concealment calls attention to the disgrace or dishonor of the past occurrence. How true is it that the possession of talent, position or wealth is often made the occasion and means of whitewashing doubtful character or of concealing immoral action! Every department of society may suffer from this false use or, rather, real abuse of true charity. The church of God itself may receive great and permanent injury from attempts to conceal or excuse what ought to have been brought to light and reproof and punished. Immorality and crime lose none of their real nature by being whitewashed with soft words and gentle explanations and mild excuses. Selfishness and lust can never get rid of their deformity and wicked nature by the most artistic efforts at character whitewashing.

Let the evergreen and the flowers in their beauty put on increased attractions by the newly whitewashed trellis or fence; let the circulating negro spatter himself as he makes everything white and fresh with his brush. He is, in one sense, a public benefactor, and his profession is kin, however removed, to the true arts. But let not so valuable and useful a department of human industry and skill be abused in ignoble effort to conceal intentional wrong or to hide guilt from its appropriate punishment. "No whitewashing done at Conference" is a good motto for pious action.

Seashore District Conference.

The Seashore District Conference held its session at Moss Point, July 3-6, B. S. Rayner presiding. The session was pleasant and profitable. The attendance was not full; the district is large and the traveling expenses heavy. Eight of seventeen ministers and nine of forty-two laymen were present. The spiritual state of the church, its financial state and its systems of finance, Sunday-school methods, working and literature, church building, etc., were examined with care, and, indeed, all the interests of the church were looked after with diligence. Several changes are prosperous every way: revivals, conversions and additions to the church followed the faithful united labors of ministers and people. Other changes are less prosperous, and yet others seem only to hold their own. Our finances are behind everywhere except at Moss Point. Our Sunday-schools are prospering in comparison with former years. Many of our Sunday-school scholars are members of the church. There were some conversions among them during the present year. Our own literature is used in every school except two, and our preachers and people, with few exceptions, think that our own literature is as well adapted to our schools as our own preachers to our pulpits. Yet, though our Sunday-schools are doing good work, our ministers think much more might and ought to be done in bringing children and youth to Christ and in training them for usefulness in the church.

The Committee on the State of the Church hold the following language: We have reason to be devoutly thankful to God that his presence and power are still with us; that prayers are being made and the means diligently employed that sinners may be converted and Christ's kingdom enlarged.

The Committee on Sunday-schools says as follows: Comparing the state of things at present with what it was a few years ago, the Conference has reason to congratulate itself and to be thankful for the great progress that has been made in Sunday-school work.

The Committee on the Observance of the Sabbath says: God ordained it as a day of rest and religious devotion; but that it is greatly disregarded along our Gulf coast, and they urgently request our church members to enforce its observance both by precept and example.

The Committee on Temperance express the belief that the evils of intemperance are, upon the whole, abating, and the hope that in suppressing this monster all Christian people will heartily unite. In this report the use of tobacco in every form is discouraged.

During the present year a district parsonage has been built at Hattiesburg; not yet furnished. Also a parsonage on Ellisville circuit and several churches on the district. A resolution was adopted commendatory of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and its editor, and that we will use due diligence to give it as wide a circulation as possible; also a resolution endorsing East Mississippi Female College as eminently worthy of patronage, and as a proper object on which to bestow our centennial educational contributions; also a resolution requesting the managers of the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition to close the gates on Sundays in honor of God and his holy day; also resolutions of thanks to the citizens of Moss Point for generous and touching hospitality during the session of our Conference. Our session closed before that liberal centennial contribution of $1,000 was made.

H. JONES, Sec.

Mississippi Conference Brotherhood.

I hope that the members of the brotherhood will pay up Assessment No. 1, upon the death of Bro. Gilmore, promptly, without waiting until the meeting of Conference this fall. A moment's reflection will show the propriety of this. Sister Gilmore resided in this town, and hence I know something of her affairs. She can not decide what course to take for the future until she ascertains what is to be realized from this source. If payment is delayed until Conference, it will be the first of January before the money comes into her hands, and she ought to be enabled to decide upon some course for the future before that time. A little promptness just now will be of incalculable benefit to the family of our dear brother.

I am glad to report that every member of the brotherhood in Woodville district has paid up promptly. Some of these brethren are as hard pressed for money as any preachers in the Conference, and yet they paid promptly and cheerfully. I beg the brethren to give the matter immediate consideration.

D. A. LITTLE.

CHICKEN, LA., July 29, 1884.

From Monroe, La.

Mr. Editor: We have nothing very encouraging from our work. We were cut off from all resources of trade for months by the overflow; then lost at least six thousand dollars in milch cows by the gnats. This was followed by a great small-pox scare, and now we are having a low typhoid type of fever in our midst. All taken together, our people have but little hope for any prosperity financially. We are organized for work in the various enterprises of the church and hope to bring up our assessments. If we do this, we will do well indeed. We have had some accessions to the church; have buried some of our purest and best. Our Sunday-school is large.

The children are working for missions bravely. Our ladies are making a "crazy patchwork quilt" as an offering in behalf of our widows and orphan's fund. They have organized for the relief of the sick, systematically, and for all church work. Providential circumstances have led to the postponement of some of our enterprises. Crops are very inferior and backward; rains continue in floods. Our trust is in God.

Yours in Christ,

O. P. WHITE.

MONROE, LA., July 29, 1884.

We regret to record the death of Mrs. Emilie Hamilton, widow of the late Dr. Jefferson Hamilton, of the Alabama Conference. She was a lady of rare culture and deep piety, and during his long and distinguished career was a true and valuable helpmeet to her gifted husband, Bro. Rush, of the Alabama Advocate, who knew her well, thus speaks of her with discriminative appreciation:

She was a native of Massachusetts, and came South with her husband many years ago, living the first year in New Orleans. Soon afterward they removed to this State, and served the church in most of the prominent appointments of the Alabama Conference. She was a woman of the early advantages, read much, conversed well, and was a faithful wife and true helpmeet to her distinguished husband. Her knowledge of Methodist history and literature was large. She was a fine worker in the church, loved its class meetings, love-feasts and revivals. She had a deep, personal experience of the things of God, and was a woman of great faith and prayer. Her home now is in heaven, and there she is no stranger. Her body was taken to Mobile for interment beside her husband's.

MORNING HYMN.

Centenary Papers.—Francis Asbury.

BY DR. ABEL STEVENA.

than the country regions. All the ecclesiastical antecedents of the colonies were favorable to a stationary pastorate. We can not wonder, then, that the crowded city societies claimed continuous care of their preachers, and that the latter were inclined to stationary labors. Boardman returned to England, but Pilmoor accepted a stationary position.

in the field of American history. When he arrived there were about a hundred Methodists, with ten preachers, in the colonies; when he fell, death it was at the head of a host more than two hundred and eleven thousand combatants, and more than seven hundred "jinnants," and he had preached almost daily for more than twenty years, had traveled

Now I aurnill, if we may hope to obtain better results from any effort, the part of Christian men by any attempt to enforce the total discontinuance of visitors to the ground on the Sabbath day? In this way shall we not be able to do more than that prohibition is a failure and license works satisfactorily?

—Philadelphia is cursed by over liquor saloons. More than 7,000 are kept by foreigners and 200 by Americans—that is, over 3,000 saloons to one American!

—In the will of Harvey D. Parker, proprietor of the Parker Hotel in Boston, there is a bequest of $100,000 to the city of Boston.

HERB AND THERB

* But when you waken at daylight,
And the old sun is rising fair,
Perhaps in the Chinese twilight
Each child is saying a prayer.

Our Boys,

DEAR BOYS: Another sin that God usually punishes in this world is that of dishonoring and disobeying parents. It is presumed that parents will try to restrain their children from doing what is wrong and command them to do what is right, in which cases God makes it the imperative duty of "children to obey their parents in the Lord." The original law of God on this subject is, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Religious Intelligence.

—The will of the late Samuel J. Sweet, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., makes bequests to local institutions, amounting in the aggregate to $240,000. His children, eleven in all, the Massachusetts eldest $50,000, and the Massachusetts Medical Hospital, and $20,000 to the General Alumni of Harvard College. The residue of the estate, estimated at $500,000, is to be divided equally between the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions and the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society. The American Board has also an individual bequest of $100,000.

—The National Baptist insists that missionaries should return home at stated intervals, for the restoration of their health, and not less, for the reinvigorating of the mind and soul. They have for years lived amid those who were babes spiritually and mentally. The missionary has had to give, to impart; he has felt virtue going out of him, oozing from his fingers' ends. He needs to receive, to fill up, to recuperate. He needs also to be in sympathy with the churches at home, to be in their atmosphere.

—It is announced that the American Old Testament Revision Committee, having finished its work, all that remains is to arrange the variations from the British revisers to be printed in the appendix. A delegation from the committee is appointed to attend the final meeting of the British committee in London the first week in July. It consists of Drs. Schaaf, Green, Day, Chambers, Aiken and Mend. It is expected that the revised Old Testament will be given to the public in January next.

—At Saratoga Rock, Mr. Henry, an aboriginal from China, said there are 15,000,000 women and children in China ready to receive instruction. There have been started in Canton and vicinity twenty-five schools for girls with from fifteen to forty pupils in each. They are taught for the most part by pupils instructed in the boarding-schools previously established. Ninety per cent of these children have become Christians. Every graduate from the girls' school can repeat the entire New Testament, and some of them add Genesis, Exodus, Proverbs, Psalms and Isaiah.

—In the Kioto Training School, Japan, there has been a remarkable work of grace, and of one hundred and forty students all but six or eight—the youngest are now Christians. Osaka already reports forty conversions, and there is a marked interest in five or six other cities. In Okayama some twenty male members of the church have formed themselves in three companies for holding preaching services in various parts of the city and suburbs.

—Sir Bartle Frere has observed that he has rarely seen or heard of a missionary institution in South Africa which did not by its measure of success fully justify the means employed to carry it on; and that the worst managed and least efficient missionary institutions he had seen appeared to him far superior as civilizing agencies to anything which could be devised by the unassisted secular power of the government.

—The people of Terra del Fuego, who had an unenviable reputation of being lower in the scale of civilization than any other people on the face of the earth, have now been so brought under the influence of Christianity that there is in that region church and regularly organized district, with schools, orphanage, Bible and mothers' meetings, and indeed the whole machinery of a parish to be found in any town.

—Hospitality for some ecclesiastical bodies amounts to no small item, cost the late Presbyterian General Assembly, at Saratoga, $35,000 for entertainment. It will rise in Cincinnati next year. There are still 500 delegates as the effort to reduce the number is failed. The plan at Cincinnati will to provide for 200 in hospitable Presbyterian families, and the remaining at hotels.

— Mrs. Spurgeon, the invalid wife of the famous London preacher, has established a "Book Fund," from which she supplies books to poor ministers and all donations. By making frames for photographs she has earned $5, which she has devoted to this work. Last year she gave away more than 1,000 books, and during the past year she has distributed nearly 42,000.

— At the International Sunday School Convention, which met at Louisville, Ky., Dr. E. W. Holly, New York, presented a memorial in

—There are fifteen times as many loops in Chicago as there are in the free State of Kansas. Does this pro that prohibition is a failure and li license works satisfactorily?

—Philadelphia is cursed by over 800 liquor saloons. More than 7,000 men are kept by foreigners and almost 200 by Americans—that is, over 350 foreigners to one American!

—In the will of Harvey D. Parker, late proprietor of the Parker Hotel in Boston, there is a bequest of $100,000 to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

recite. The first boy got as far as, "In the beginning was the word," and let ^{down} Whack! went the hickory switch over his back, and he was told to take his seat. The second boy got to the third verse, and the down. Whack! went the switch upon him, and he took his seat. All the class, but one girl got whipped that day. The boys said he whipped harder on Sunday than he did on week days. Yours,

Mr. Editor: As you were so kind as to publish my letter last year, I will write again, and tell you more about our little missionary society, the "Mississippi Zondan Workers," at Woodland, on Fayette street. We held our second election by officers at our last meeting, on August 1st, 1870. The meeting, the following: Miss Janie Robertson, Pres.; Masters A. J. Darden and Jesse West, Vice Pres.; Miss Nettie Darden Sec.; Miss Susie West, Cor. Sec.; and Norman Daynport, Treasurer. We have decided to assist in educating a little Chinese girl. We propose to pay $200 a year, which is half the amount required for one year's schooling. We contrive different ways to make missionary money. I took some plans to sow and got 75¢ for them. Sister Loo-ee and I have some eggs we expect to sell, and this fall we want our missionary hens to raise some little chickens. We got two dollars for our chickens last year. Our society made a quilt, and the kind lady friends quilted it, and then we sold it for five dollars. I saw little French Ma-

Minnie Rogers, of Hinds county, sent me a dollar, and we elected her an honorary member of the society. We are glad to have her sympathies enlisted in our favor. We now have 13 honorary members. I will answer two of Melvin Simpson's questions: Moses was not permitted to enter the promised land because he failed to sacrifice God before the people when he shot them out of the waters of Marah. Numbers 33: 2-13. The only two persons of the children of Israel that were permitted to enter the promised land who were grown up when they left Egypt, were Caleb and Joshua. Numbers 14: 6. Tell Irene Ramsey that it is the 117th Psalm that has but two verses. No, with some of the 119th, friends.

with some of the little things answered these questions? How old was David when he died? With what priest did Samuel live when he was a child? What were the names of this priest's two wicked sons? How did they die?

NORMAN F. HAVENPORT,
FOYETTE, Mississippi.

Selfishness Rebuked.

Selfishness Rebuked.

Somehow, in his "Apology for the Hog," says that its "eyes have taken the lower flattery and the curl of its lip has shown pride how to express itself. He might have gone farther, and referred the surly selfishness which marked certain persons to their sympathy with the hog's grunting, uncommunicative tone."

Missouri railroad. The mistake of a Pullman agent at Kansas City, the lower berth which had been assigned to her had also been checked by him. The conductor had examined her ticket and seated her in the place assigned.

"Mr. H., standing near, thereupon protested that that berth belonged to him: "I paid for it, and must have it."

"It's mine," somebody remarked the lady

"I hold the check for this lower berth No. 6, and I paid for it, too."

"The seat and the berth certainly long to the lady," said the conductor, exhibiting both her check and the Kansas City agent's diagram of the car.

"I have a check, too," growled H.

"see, here it is—No. 6—and this is the berth."

The conductor examined his clock and, sure enough, it was for No. 6 lower berth. He then again examined

Mr. H. — marked for lower berth No. 7.

Now, No. 7, directly opposite No. 6, was in every respect a first-class her — just as good as the other — but —

“I didn’t want it — wouldn’t lie it anyhow — would have what he paid for or nothing.”

The lady was a quiet and amiable little person, and she and the conductor vainly tried to persuade him to take

"Well, Mr. Conductor," mildly remarked the young woman, opening her little money-bag, "the only way I can see out of the difficulty is to give to that gentleman his money back—here, $1.50, the price of the berth—please hand it to him with these compliments."

"I heard the remark, as she understood, and saw the lady's action. 'I—don't—want—yet—ma'am!' I growled, and strode out of the car. I one who had a stuporous grievance against all mankind. We heard of him an hour later, going into one of the ordinary cars, where, occupying a whole row of cushions, boots, a

The quiet, sponky little lady, as afterwards learned, was from Mequon and Mr. H. was the President of the bank in ——— Youth's Company.

—Man's love to God is like a changing winds; his is like the sea rock. Man's love is like the passing meteor with its fitful gleam; his like the fixed stars, stirring above, clear and serene, from age to age, in their own changeless firmament.

—If the way to heaven is narrow that straight, it opens into endless li Beveridge.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors: REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER. REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY JULY 31, 1884.

At the World's Exposition in Paris, some years ago, the English department was closed every Sunday. If they make an exhibit in New Orleans their national conscience will be shown like respect. But what a rebuke it would be to our civilization if the gates should be opened at all. On that subject we commend the article by Dr. Walker in another column.

In speaking of her late father, Mary Clemens says: "In my whole life I never heard him speak to the detriment of any human being. The absent were always safe in his gentle and kindly speech." That latter sentence deserves to be written in gold. Would God it could be said of us all. If the absent were always as safe in the world's speech as the present, the millennium would dawn, and we would have a new heaven and a new earth. Present we hear soft words and fulsome compliments; absent we are critically and cruelly assailed.

We publish on our third page Dr. Marshall's "open letter" on the Sabbath and the Cotton Centennial, and on the first page another article from his pen in reply to certain criticisms. Now, that the merits of the doctor's proposition have been fully discussed, we hope all will diligently labor to have the gates hermetically sealed on the Sabbath. The Baptist State Convention of Mississippi, representing a membership of about sixty thousand, passed a resolution urging it last week. Thus testimonies and appeals are coming in which can not be lightly esteemed. "All at it and always at it" for a few weeks, and we may accomplish the desired end.

On our third page will be found an admirable paper on Francis Asbury, by the great Methodist historian, Dr. Abel Stevens. It recounts some facts in the establishment of our itinerancy, or, as Bishop Asbury called it, "a circulation of preachers," that will heighten our appreciation of "the Joshua of our Methodist Israel," and be helpful in studying the demands of the church to-day. Then, as now, men shrunk from the burdens of the itinerancy; but now, as then, it is the mighty power of the church. It is significant that of the first two regular itinerants sent over by Mr. Wesley to America, Boardman and Plimoor, one returned to England and the other became an Episcopal rector in Philadelphia. They could not bear the toll and self-denial of circulation. To Francis Asbury are we indebted for our marvelous system of ministerial supply.

The National Prohibition Convention which met last week in Pittsburgh, in character, ability, numbers and spirit, far exceeded general expectation. Most of the States were represented, and the proceedings were characterized by perfect harmony and genuine enthusiasm. Profound religious conviction and purpose were prominent. The prayers offered were not formal platitudes and rhetorical generalities, but heart appeals to God, full of unction and power. A platform of principles was adopted, candidates nominated, an executive committee appointed and a full party organization perfected. Gov. J. P. St. John, of Kansas, was nominated for President of the United States, and Hon. William Daniels, of Maryland, for Vice-President. Of course no one expects the ticket to get a single electoral vote, but it will certainly command a large support. Many who have long affiliated with the two leading parties will vote the prohibition ticket. The Republican Convention ignored the question and the Democratic Convention pronounced positively against all summary legislation. While yet we are firmly of the opinion that a party organization on this issue alone is premature, the fact is patent that the friends of prohibition are multiplying rapidly, and the question is becoming more potent in all legislative councils. The Washington Sentinel, a recognized organ of the brewers, thus acknowledges the inevitable: "There can be no longer any doubt that the prohibition question will be the great political issue of the day." Thus much we emphasize: "no prohibitionist can vote for an avowed whiskey advocate."

"The Ministry of the Axes."

In that fresh and suggestive volume issued by the Southern Methodist Publishing House, entitled "Studies in Matthew," by the distinguished Welshman, Rev. J. Cynddylan Jones, there is a chapter on John the Baptist in which occurs this passage:

"And now also the axe is laid unto the roots of the trees." John the Baptist was wielding the axe to cut down with fell strokes the mighty overshadowing trees of Jewish superstition and corruption. Luther also was swinging the axe to clear Europe of the mighty overshadowing trees of Popish superstition and corruption. I am not sure but the great need of the present day is a powerful, ponderous axe; and the next great need a strong, robust man to wield it with a firm, resolute purpose against the colossal falsehoods which bring disaster into trade and dishonor upon religion. "Oh! for the ministry of the axes once more!"

This he said in paying tribute to the singularly sincere and faithful ministry of the Baptist. Trained in the wilderness and by immediate communion with his Lord—aloof from the blandishments and deceits of fashionable society—his was a transparent character and an honest purpose. He meant to do an imperative and thorough work. The idea of compromise, condonement or concealment never occurred to his candid mind. And what his clear, rigid spiritual discernment saw to be evil, he rebuked with vigor and courage. To his honest eye sin was just as sinful under the purple of royalty as under the rags of poverty. The accidents of position or fortune were no protection from his searching glance and withering rebuke. No wonder, therefore, that he suffered imprisonment and yielded up his life a glorious martyrdom to duty. He would rebuke the sin of Herod as readily as the humblest, most obscure peasant. His was a thorough and sincere, not a superficial and perfunctory work. He laid the axe unto the roots of the trees. Sin was not to be bruised, but exterminated—not condoned, but uprooted.

We quite agree with our author that such a ministry is "the great need of the present day." Times and seasons do not affect essential truth. Its method of presentation may vary, but the truth itself must be as prominent and luminous as the eternal fires of heaven. With the growth of wealth and social refinement, sin becomes more subtle and perilous. Its ghastliness assumes a fair exterior, and with almost infinite plausibility it is enthroned in our domestic, social, commercial and civil habits and customs. Think of the methods employed and applauded in political conventions and campaigns, and by professedly Christian men. How devils and devilish are the ways of commercial ingenuity, the inventions often of active office-bearers in the church of Christ! In fashionable high life, the nets and snares that entangle and entice youthful virtue and ambition into prodigality and profligacy are not infrequently woven by the fair, deft fingers of artful church women. To war and save the people from these dangers and evils, made more dangerous and deadly by the approval and applause of the multitude, we need "the ministry of the axes." Scarying will not do, the diseased limb must be amputated or death will ensue. Pruning a thorn bush will not make it produce grapes; it must be uprooted and replaced by a different plant. The hurt must not be healed slightly. Nothing less than a ponderous axe laid at the roots of the trees will accomplish the mighty results so much needed.

"The ministry of axes" preaches the gospel of conviction of sin. Men are not flattered with the idea that sin is a slight spiritual aberration, but a transgression of the law of God worthy of eternal death. And just here is the secret of so much superficial religion in the church. The depth of conviction is the measure of faith and consequent zeal. If the axe is laid unto the root of every tree and conviction is thorough, vivid and profound, conversion will be clear, faith will be strong and zeal will be fervent and active. St. Jerome has wisely said: "He that hath slight thoughts of sin never had great thoughts of God." Our appreciation of a Saviour is measured by our perceptions of sin and its infinite consequences. We call ours a great salvation, because it rescued us from imminent and great loss.

Revivals of religion are only born of such preaching. Men must first know that they are sinners before they will fly to a Saviour. Sin must be seen and heard in order to appreciate and love the peaceful brow of Calvary. We plead, therefore, for a revival of "the ministry of the axes."

The Heaviest Tariff of All.

VOTERS' AGENCIES TO BE DISCONTINUED.

All tariffs are in their nature inequitable and oppressive, free trade being natural and for the best interests of mankind. Tariffs were invented in order that governments might be supported by taxes, often enormously large, added to the price of commodities before they are bought by the consumer. By such a scheme citizens may be deluded, to almost any extent, as to the amount they pay for the support of the government, while the government itself becomes a bloated monster, stealthily robbing its citizens with an insatiable rapacity. Tariffs of all sorts are now undergoing investigation. Whenever a man buys a thing which does him no good the entire price of the article goes as tariff to somebody. In regard to one very great article of commerce in the United States this is eminently true. The entire price of whiskey is a tariff upon those who buy it. The discontinuance of the whiskey tariff is now the greatest question before the people of the United States. We say discontinuance, lest some honestly jealous for liberty should imagine that these words might imply the taking away of some natural or civil right. All government requires the surrender of some personal freedom for the good of ourselves or others. The right to make and sell alcoholic liquors, if it ever existed, was long since virtually taken away in this country by the imposition of extraordinary, enormous or prohibitory taxes upon every form of the business. The public judgment and conscience have long been against the traffic, yet it has been continued, by special legislation, solely for the sake of gain to the sellers, and the great revenues it has been made to yield to both the general and State governments. Can the blinding and misleading of our legislators in this matter be attributed to aught else than the special agency of the author of all evil?

But now, when in righteous indignation an oppressed people have determined to throw off the burden of all such tariffs as impoverish the poor to enrich the rich, they will no longer fail to perceive that the most unnecessary and ruinous of all the tariffs of the civilized world is that tariff which every citizen of the United States pays upon whiskey. Figures are burdened and imagination staggers in the effort to express and apprehend the stupendous waste and curse of whiskey. Official statistics show that whiskey costs the fifty-five millions of people in the United States about seventeen dollars a head, or nearly one thousand millions of dollars annually. We tax ourselves yearly over half the amount of our entire national debt for that which profits none and curses all. The loss to the country in the health, the happiness and the lives of her citizens is simply immeasurable. If whiskey is so good a thing that it ought to be licensed at such a cost, it is good enough to be free. Let us hereafter have free whiskey or none. The government has long enough fixed a bribe for herself, for which she will legalize wrong.

This is the great practical question now before the people. It transcends all the transient issues of party politics. It involves the permanent weal or woe of all men of all parties, as well as the lives and fortunes of millions yet unborn. When in the coming century the school-boy shall be perplexed to tell who was President of these United States during the years now passing, he shall not fail to answer with alacrity that in such a year the whiskey traffic was discontinued in America, and in such a year the opium trade was abolished in China. Some virtues which are hardest to make shine now, will shine the brightest and the longest in the future. It is with gratitude to that God who guides the honest scientist in his search after truth that we may now boldly affirm that according to the highest medical authority alcohol is justly ranked among the least valuable of all the remedies known to the materia medica. King Alcohol, whose throne so long rested upon the authority of the medical faculty, is fast losing his supporters, and his kingdom totters to its fall. Usquebaugh, water of life, is at last found and declared to be the draught of death, and that too by the highest authorities of the world. In every State in the Union there is a great and general awakening to a sense of the alarming fact that we make and sell poison for the destruction of our people and the ruin of our country. In some States the traffic is almost entirely discontinued; in all the work of reform goes earnestly on.

In Mississippi every drinking saloon is nothing else than a voter's agency. The law prohibits the sale of ardent spirits in any quantity, except upon the written permission of a majority of the qualified voters. So that whoever signs such a petition virtually makes the whiskey seller his agent to do that thing. Now it is proposed not to take away anybody's right to do anything, but simply to cease to authorize men to sell whiskey for us. Thoughtful patriots and honest Christians can not afford longer to do that thing. Let such a pledge as the following be circulated for signatures throughout every county in the State: "I hereby promise on my truth and honor not to sign any person's petition for license to sell intoxicating liquors in the county of — for the next five years."

W. L. C. H.

What School?

The question of most serious concern to many parents just now is, Where shall the children be sent to school? Their education can not wait. Unless the matter now receives immediate and careful attention, it will never be done. It is only a few years from youth to manhood and womanhood, and they pass by, oh! how swiftly. If neglected or unwisely improved, the time can never be recalled or redeemed. So the thoughtful parent is not only concerned that his child is being educated, but how—not simply that he is at school, but what school, and where.

The what and how of education are little thought of by the average parent as compared with the when. It is a point of conscience and judgment that the time should be spent at school, without considering how, and amid what influences and associations. But the latter may be vastly more important. Indeed, it may be better to have no education than a training by certain hands and in certain environments. Ignorance is far preferable to a poisoned and poisonous scholastic discipline. Ambitions, wealthy parents have sent their sons abroad devout, home-trained Christians to see them return egotistical rationalists and vain babblers. The so-called higher education was a perilsous experiment. What they gained in University edat they lost in Christian character and common sense.

Atmosphere is more valuable than a curriculum. Teachers are studied more and more carefully than textbooks, so the Christian parent is desirous of knowing the life of the instructor in the chair rather than the character of the book in the child's hand. Every institution has its own moral atmosphere, created and preserved by its faculty. What that is parents should know before venturing their children away from home. First and foremost let it be ascertained. Do not sacrifice everything to the matter of expense. Cheapness now may in the end be very costly. In saving cash you may lose character.

Rev. T. L. Mellen, writing from Natchez, has this to say of his prosperous charge:

The members and worshippers at Wesley Chapel have been enjoying a visit and a series of sermons from Bro. A. B. Nicholson, who has been with us since Saturday. Results: five conversions and eight or ten conversions, and the cheering of many hearts. Indeed, Bro. Nicholson's visit has been a benediction to our people, many of whom had heard him preach in the days of his early manhood, and were rejoiced to hear from his lips once more the gospel of our Lord. We all wished he could have stayed longer with us. We pray that with him it may be light at eventide.

Rev. D. L. Cogdell sends us the following inspiring bulletin from Ripley:

Forty-six conversions and thirty-six additions to our church in Ripley. Our District Conference was attended by the presence and power of Christ. We protracted the meeting. Bros. J. H. Mitchell and C. H. Owen, of our Conference, and Bro. Sullivan, of the Memphis Conference, remained with us a few days and did good service for the Master. Thursday morning Bro. E. G. Kilgore, of Columbus, came to our assistance, and preached eighteen sermons, and has done here a most wonderful work. The work is still going on in the hearts of the people.

At the Woodstock Fourth of July Celebration Joseph Cook uttered these words:

Imagine here the face of George Washington; suppose that you see the last candidate for the presidency of the United States. These two men, one immortal and one mortal, look into each other's eyes. Whose eyes go down? No man is fit to be President of the United States who can not look into the eyes of the first President and not blush. May the better man win!

Whereupon our esteemed cotemporary, the Christian at Work, remarks that the gaze of some presidential aspirants would make the eyes of Washington "go down in humiliation, and would stare an archangel out of countenance any day."

The Exposition and the Sabbath.

The importance of closing the gates of the great Cotton Centennial Exposition on Sundays can be justly urged from various considerations. We of New Orleans and the Gulf States desire that the tens of thousands of visitors from afar may be favorably impressed with our climate, country and our population in its social, intellectual and moral aspects. Nothing shocks a visitor from the Northwest, from New England and Old England, so much as the desecration of the Sabbath in New Orleans by labor, business and all sorts of amusements on this sacred day. It gives them a low and damaging opinion of our Christian civilization, and induces them to locate their families among us, or to invest their capital in New Orleans or in the Gulf States. The open and public disregard of the sanctity of the Sabbath by the Exposition authorities will almost certainly defeat the hopes which the Exposition ought to create and realize. Setting aside all mere religious considerations, our most obvious policy is respect for the Sabbath if we would win the favor of our visitors and secure the material advantages we wish to obtain. There are well authenticated instances in eastern and western Louisiana of considerable colonies of families who were negotiating the purchase of large bodies of land, who broke off these negotiations and refused to purchase and settle among us when they learned we had no Sabbath laws. If we wish people to come among us, and make their homes in New Orleans and Louisiana, we must show such respect for the Sabbath as shall make them willing to rear their children in our midst. Of course to all above the moral level of mere materialism, the Divine institution and moral obligation to observe the Sabbath to keep it holy, is reason enough for its sacred observance. It will be a sad pity if so much care, labor and capital shall fail to bring us permanent benefits, good because we will not respect the convictions of so many thousands of worthy people.

J. B. WALKER.

Our Colleges Advertised.

By reference to our advertising columns the reader will see the rare advantages offered for the higher Christian education, and also how these progressive institutions appreciate the ADVOCATE as a medium of communication with their patrons.

Vanderbilt University, in its ample endowment and admirable equipment, stands at the head of Southern institutions of learning. Every facility is there afforded for the fullest proficiency in any or all branches of study. Chancellor Garland is the Arnold of Rugby among Southern educators, and impresses his great character upon his students. Send advertisement for all particulars.

Mansfield Female College has prospered under the presidency of Dr. Grace, and begins its thirtieth year most auspiciously. This institution has a strong hold upon Louisiana Methodists, and for the church it has done a noble work. Its alumni are among the most cultured women of the Southwest. We commend it as worthy of the largest patronage.

Emory and Henry College is one of the oldest and most honored of Southern Methodist colleges. The next will be the forty-seventh session. Everywhere we meet the alumni of Emory and Henry, and they are worthy of such a foster mother. Those desiring a higher, healthy latitude, for their sons are commended to this institution.

Huntsville Female College is located in one of the most beautiful and healthy towns in North Alabama. Long established and liberally patronized, it stands among the best of our colleges. Rev. A. B. Jones has genius for administration in addition to a life-long training.

Centenary College is too well known to our readers for any special comment or commendation. President Rush adorns his position, and the college is giving eminent satisfaction to its patrons. The outlook for the next term is quite flattering. The new railroad from New Orleans to Vicksburg has been completed, and runs within four miles of Jackson.

Nashville College for Young Ladies, correlated with Vanderbilt University, in charge of that elegant gentleman and superb belles lettres scholar, Dr. G. W. F. Price, is a great and growing success. The buildings are new, spacious and magnificent, the curriculum extensive and the instruction thorough. We know Dr. Price, and the character of his work.

The Messrs. Webb's School for Boys, at Colliock, Tenn., is one of the finest training academies in the country. It very wisely does the work of an academy without aspiring to be a college. Training rather than finishing schools are the demand of our educational system.

Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Ga., is the mother of female colleges in this country. Liberally aided and partially endowed by Mr. Seney, its facilities have been greatly increased. Dr. Bass, the president, is the man for the place.

Whitworth College has been a phenomenal success under Dr. Johnson, and its patronage increases. Last term there were one hundred and seventy-five pupils in the boarding department. With a full and able faculty, chemical and physical apparatus, and everything necessary to thorough equipment, Whitworth offers the finest advantages. The next term promises a yet larger attendance. See advertisement in another column.

Ward's Seminary, Nashville, Tenn., will commence its twentieth year this fall. For a thorough-going, progressive school we can recommend it highly. During the last year a magnificent new building has been erected with a dining-room equal to any first-class hotel. Parents will find a home school at Ward's Seminary. Address Dr. Ward for catalogue.

Southern Normal School and Business College, Bowling Green, Ky. This was formerly the Glasgow Kentucky Normal School, but, owing to lack of room in Glasgow, and the inducements offered by the citizens of Bowling Green, they have lately moved to that place. In Bowling Green they will have the largest facilities for rooms of any institution in the land. Under its new name and with ample facilities the success of the Southern Normal School and Business College will be ever increasing.

Judson Female Institute, Marion, Ala., numbers among its alumni many of the best women of our Southern States. It aims at refined taste, accurate scholarship, true culture, and receives patronage of our best families.

Science Hill School, Shelbyville, Ky., is the oldest private school in the South, having been founded by Mrs. Julia A. Tevis in 1825, and presided over by her for over fifty years. In its present hands it is again taking rank among the first educational institutions of the land. Its faculty is selected from the best colleges of the East, and the teaching is of the highest order. Parents desiring a thorough school should send for a catalogue of this institution.

Next week we will refer to our colleges advertised. In the meantime look at each card.

—The Salvation Army in England is to have a "ballet-jah" large and tri-cyclic corps.

—A new comet has been discovered by Prof. E. E. Barnard of Vanderbilt University.

—There is a marked temperance revival in Germany. Beer-drinking apologists are invited to take notice.

—The Texas Advocate again teems with notices of revivals. Our Methodism seems to grow apace in that great empire.

—There has been a fine revival at Crawford, in the North Mississippi Conference. Rev. H. R. Tucker, the pastor, has sent us a full report of it, which will appear next week.

—We see it stated that the trustees of the British Museum have recently purchased Milton's Bible. It contains the names and birth-dates of his children in the poet's own handwriting.

—Our Northern Methodist do handsome things for their Bishops, albeit they spell the word with a little b. We see it stated that Bishop Foss lives at Minneapolis in a $50,000 house, purchased for him by the church.

—The British Old Testament Revisers have just held their eighty-fifth and last session in the Jerusalem Chamber, Westminster Abbey. Their work of revision is completed, but the book will not be given to the public before next year.

—Col. R. C. Clark, Mr. S. B. Higgins, Mr. H. M. Hanle and Rev. Joseph Miller were elected lay delegates to the North Mississippi Conference at the late session of the Aberdeen District Conference. Col. J. L. S. Hill and Dr. J. W. Miller, alternates.

—The Nashville Advocate reports a missionary wedding at Vanderbilt University. On the evening of July 19 Rev. George B. Winton, of Mississippi, newly appointed pastor of the English congregation in the city of Mexico, and Miss Jessie McClain, were married by Bishop McTear. They left at once for their new home in the City of Mexico. We trust our brother will be a worthy successor of the lamented Freeman, who was "fell on sleep."

MISCELLANEOUS.

TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER TO-DAY!

Be sure it is absolutely pure CONTAIN AMMONIA.

THE TEST:
Place a teaspoonful in a hot water bottle; then pour in a quart of water. A chemical action will be observed to detect the presence of ammonia.

DOES NOT CONTAIN AMMONIA.
ITS PURITY HAS NEVER BEEN QUESTIONED.

THE TEST OF THE OVEN.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Yeast Gems.

For Light, Healthy Bread. The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS.

CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Household.

APPLE FRITTERS.—Pare, core, and parboil some juicy tart apples in a very little water; chop fine. Beat seven eggs very light, and add to them slowly

three-quarters of a pound of sifted prepared flour. Beat very light; put in apple enough to thicken the batter, and the grated yellow-rind and juice of a lemon. Have the very best lard at a perfectly boiling point, and put in it a thick slice of raw apple; this subdues

the strong odor of the fat. Put a large spoonful of the batter in at a time, and use many spoonfuls as the pan will hold.

They take but a few moments to do, and need not be turned over. They must be made at the moment you wish to use them, and sent to the table at once,—each painful sent in as quickly as baked. Powdered sugar, with cinnamon and nutmeg in it, is nice for them.

POTATOES.—Choose the whitest and most floury potatoes you can,

which are free from spots; put the whole into cold water over a good fire; directly they crack around the water and put them into a clean steamer by the side of the fire until they are quite dry and fall to pieces, then rub them through a fine wire sieve into the dish in which they are to be served, which should have been previously well heated.

POTATOES DRESSED ITALIAN FASH-ION.—These are merely baked and their tops cut off; the inside is then scooped out and mixed with thoroughly beaten eggs, seasoned with a little grated cheese, pepper and salt. The mixture is put back into the potatoes, the tops are replaced and they are put back into the oven to heat through again and are served when ready.

BARRED TOMATOES.—Put six large, ripe tomatoes, with the stalks, in a dish; sprinkle with salt, pepper and pepper and salt over them and cover with finely grated bread crumbs; bake from half to three-quarters of an hour in a moderately hot oven. Some slice the tomatoes before baking; they cook quicker when so treated.

PLAIN TOMATOES SLICED.—If the taste of garlic is not disliked, rub a dash slightly with cut garlic, slice the tomatoes into very thin slices, lay these slices on the dish, sprinkle well with pepper and pour some vinegar over just before the dish is served, but do not let the tomatoes stand in the vinegar.

POTATO ESCALOPS.—The potatoes

only require parboiling and rasping, and can be varied by mixing with other vegetables, parsley, savory herbs, mushrooms or cheese, moistening with butter or cream, baking in escabeche and browning over before serving.

FROSTING FOR CAKE.—Beat the white of an egg to a very stiff froth; add a cupful of powdered sugar, and beat it in well; then a teaspoonful each of powdered starch and dissolved gum-arabic; wet a knife in cold water, and spread evenly on the cake.

KUMMEL.—Boil one-half pound of stinger in half a pint of water. Mix this while hot with one ounce of caraway seeds and a quart of brandy. Cork it close at once. Let it stand for a full week, after which it may be filtered.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Christian Editor's Opinion.

Mr. G. R. Lynch, publisher of the Alabama

Christian Advocate, at Birmingham, writes:

"I travel all over the state, and my friends say they had your Lemmon Kit in my pocket more. My book-keeper and foreman both use it in place of calomel, pills, etc.

Twenty-five Years a Citizen of Georgia and the past twenty years I have suffered continually from indigestion, and bronchitis of a most severe type. I was treated by two prominent physicians, and had taken all the potent medicines recommended for these diseases. I got no relief, and continued to grow worse until I commenced the use of Dr. Muzzey's Lemon Kit. One dozen bottles has made a final cure of both diseases.

R. HILL,

No. 12 Connally St., Atlanta, Ga.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis's prominent citizens the following statement is published: It is the only remedy, thoroughly reliable and economical, recently has been used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

Dr. Muzzey's Lemon Kit, prepared at his drug store, 114 Whitehall street, Atlanta, Ga.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion,

headache, malaria, if they are due, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration, regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one-half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by L. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

THE VERY CHEAPEST TOBACCO GROWN

in this belt is found by Black-well's Durham Tobacco Co., and

sold in their celebrated "Golden Tobacco"

box. It is the best tobacco in the world. It is known the world over. Get the genuine with the "H. F." mark. They will be sure of having absolutely pure tobacco.

When you come to think of it, it is not old that literary people prefer a pipe to a clear. It is harder to smoke when they are writing, and ever so much clearer.

And then it comes to the true essence

and flavor of the tobacco.

The most fastidious smokers among all nations and all classes of men agree that

the tobacco grown on the Golden Tobacco

farm of North Carolina is the most delicious and refined in the world. Lighter than Turkish, more fragrant than Havana,

freer from irritants and alkaline than any other, it is just what the connoisseur

prizes and the best kind of smoke.

The very choicest tobacco grown

in this belt is found by Black-

well's Durham Tobacco Co., and

sold in their celebrated "Golden Tobacco"

box. It is the best tobacco in the world. It is known the world over. Get the genuine with

the "H. F." mark. They will be sure of having absolutely pure tobacco.

When you come to think of it, it is not

old that literary people prefer a pipe to a clear. It is harder to smoke when they are writing, and ever so much clearer.

And then it comes to the true essence

and flavor of the tobacco.

The most fastidious smokers among all nations and all classes of men agree that

the tobacco grown on the Golden Tobacco

farm of North Carolina is the most delicious and refined in the world. Lighter

than Turkish, more fragrant than Havana,

freer from irritants and alkaline than any other, it is just what the connoisseur

prizes and the best kind of smoke.

The very choicest tobacco grown

in this belt is found by Black-

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Old Reliable Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO

Mobile, Montgomery, Pensacola, Nashville,

Louisville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Savannah, St. Louis, Jacksonville,

Fla., Lynchburg, and

Washington, D. C.,

IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW OR

LEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

Leave. Arrive.

Express. 10:30 A. M. 9:50 P. M.

Coast Accommodation. 8:35 P. M. 9:05 A. M.

Fast Mail. 6:25 P. M. 9:45 A. M.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN

AND EASTERN CITIES.

Ticket office corner A. Charles and Common sts.

where Sleeping Car accommodations can be secured.

C. P. ATMORE, Gen. Pass. Agent.

J. H. AMITH, Ticket Agent.

J. T. HARRAHAN, Gen'l Superintendent.

JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent,

New Orleans.

O. M. DUNN, Sup't N. O. and M. Division.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

</

MISCELLANEOUS.

ELKIN & CO.

100-CANAL STREET-100

Large selection to their large stock of fresh fine, extra quantities and joint-

CHINA MATTINGS.

All styles of CARPETING at very low prices.

Oilcloths,

Window Shades,

Curtains, &c.

NEW CHINA

MATTING

AT LOW PRICES.

A. Brousseau's Son

Hand 25 Chartres Street 30 and 35

LACE CURTAINS

From $1.50 Pair up.

WINDOW SHADES, OIL CLOTHS, CARPETS,

All the latest styles and novelties.

ART DECORATIONS

-IN-

WALL PAPER,

WINDOW SHADES AND CORNICES,

MATS AND MATTINGS,

Wall and Ceiling FRINGS, ready made

PICTURE FRAMES and CARPETS below cost, in this branch of my business.

E. HEATH,

75 CANAL STREET.

JOY TO THE WORLD.

ROUND NOTE EDITION

AND

CHARACTER NOTE EDITION.

MORE THAN 100 TUNES

AND 238 HYMNS.

THE BEST

FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS

AND SOCIAL MEETINGS.

A choice collection of Spiritual Songs and

Hymns, called by the name of "JOY TO THE WORLD," and "CHARACTER NOTE EDITION," contains a large number of new pieces, and is the most popular and useful of the "Round

Note" editions of this book, and is published by the "Character Note Edition."

If you want the best and cheapest give

this a trial.

Character Note Edition—Full Octavo, 114

pages, only $2.00, bound, $2.50 a hundred.

ROUND NOTE EDITION—Full Octavo, 114

pages, only $1.50, bound, $2.00 a hundred.

For sale at all bookstores.

CRANSTON & STOWE, Publishers,

CINCINNATI, CINCINNATI, and ST. LOUIS.

ALABAMA

CENTRAL FEMALE COLLEGE,

Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

The College was founded in 1858, and has since that time been steadily increasing in size and importance. It is now one of the leading educational institutions of the South.

The College is open to students of all ages, and is especially adapted to the education of young ladies. It is a thorough and practical institution, and is well equipped with all the modern facilities. For a full and complete

description of the College, and for a list of the names of the students, apply

to the President, or to the Faculty.

The College is open from September 1st

to June 1st. For a full and complete

description of the College, and for a

list of the names of the students, apply

to the President, or to the Faculty.

The College is open from September 1st

to June 1st. For a full and complete

description of the College, and for a

list of the names of the students, apply

to the President, or to the Faculty.

The College is open from September 1st

to June 1st. For a full and complete

description of the College, and for a

list of the names of the students, apply

to the President, or to the Faculty.

The College is open from September 1st

to June 1st. For a full and complete

description of the College, and for a

list of the names of the students, apply

to the President, or to the Faculty.

The College is open from September 1st

to June 1st. For a full and complete

description of the College, and for a

list of the names of the students, apply

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

THE Pillow-Inhaler is one of the most effective medical inventions of the age. It is a triumph of science over disease. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the

inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the

age. It is the most powerful and reliable of all the inventions of the age. It is the most powerful and

Christian Advocate.

THE GROWTH OF BRAIN-POWER.

So far, I have been tacitly but intentionally taking for granted the very principle which I set out to prove, in order fully to put the reader in possession of the required point of view. The question now arises, Where in this series of events is there room for any fresh element to come in? Can any man ever be anything other than what some of his ancestors have been before him? And, if not, how is progress or mental improvement possible? That man has a greater degree of brain power is a matter of fact, and the question is, How is it that some men are so much more intelligent than others? And that some individuals have outstripped other races is equally clear.

And that some individuals have surpassed their fellows of the same race and time is also obvious. How are we to account for these facts without admitting that the elements of brain power are not the same in every man?

The answer to this question is really one of the most important in the whole history of mankind. For on the solution of the apparent paradox thus propounded depend two or three most fundamental questions. It is by this means alone that we can account, first,

for the existence of great races like the Greeks or the Jews. It is by this means alone that we can account, secondly, for genius in individuals. And it is by this means alone that we can account, thirdly, for the possibility of general progress in the race. It is surprising therefore that the question has not been engaged the attention of evolutionary psychologists at the present day.

There are only two conceivable ways in which any increment of brain-power can ever have arisen in any individual.

The one is the Darwinian way, by spontaneous variations. This is to say, by variations due to minute physical circumstances affecting the individual in the germ. The other is the Spencerian way, by functional increment—that is to say, by the effect of increased use and constant exposure to varying circumstances during conscious life.

I venture to think that the first way, if we look it clearly in the face, will be seen to be practically unthinkable; and that we have therefore no alternative but to accept the second.—Prof. Grant

Allen, in Popular Science Monthly.

NOT A SPASM OF COUGHING SINCE

USING COMPOUND OXYGEN.

So writes a gentleman from Archie,

Missouri, whose whole system was run down that he was not able to do any kind of work. In a little over a month after commencing the Oxygen

Treatment he made this report:

"I have not had a spasm of coughing since the first time I inhaled the Oxygen. The entire complaint was cured, and I can now describe the feeling, but it was a most miserable one; also left me right away. You think my recovery will be slow; I am going to try and disappoint you. Three days after I lost my leg, six surgeons gave me till next day at noon to live. When my stump was dressed well I got a terrible fall. Again the hospital surgeons said I could not live; but I am here

yet. I can't say all right, but by the help of the Compound Oxygen I hope to be soon. I am much stronger, and stick all day at anything that is not too heavy."

Our "Treatise on Compound Oxygen,"

containing a history of the discovery

and mode of action of this remarkable

curative agent, and a large record of

surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuritis, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a full range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address, DIS-

SENGER & PAULSEN, 110 and 111 Girard

St., Philadelphia.

THE NEW DYNAMITE GUN.—This

new instrument of destruction is a portable, seamless brass tube 41 feet long and 3 inches in diameter, mounted on an angle-iron trestle, and connected with an air-pressure containing

15 shafts. It is a simple and easily operated machine, and is well adapted for the running out of one of the engines, where there was a steam aircompressor. The projectile was a thin brass tube three feet long, in which the dynamite cartridges were placed against a percussion fuse to be detonated

by fulminate of mercury at the muzzle.

The iron head should strike the object aimed at. This dynamite arrow was propelled by a long wooden sabot.

Experiments were made by army and naval officers at Fort Lafayette. Compressed air was suddenly admitted to the long pneumatic cylinder by pulling the lever. An explosion followed, and after a brief interval, another much louder as the projectile struck the bank, and the dynamite dug a deep hole in the earth. Five shots were fired, each striking within three feet of the point aimed at. The experiments were reported as "

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 32.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1462.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX B. HILL.
REV. ORAS W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KENNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY.
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

"WHY ART THOU CAST DOWN?"

BY WALTER BURNHAM.

What is it that thou, heart? why dost thou weep?
All my sweet hopes are withered and strewn,
Sweetest my visions are oftentimes dross,
Now they have left me and I am alone.

Barren the earth appears, aching around,
Barren the heavens seem, aching above,
Deeds the music that thy soul with sound,
Silent forever the whistles of love.

Hark, how forgotten, heart? God is not dead!
Gloom and dark may the present appear,
But from the present the future shall be led
Into a daylight unexpectably clear.

Over thee, under thee, close at thy side,
Never a moment he leaves or forsakes;
Trust him, abide in him, leave him to guide,
Follow the way that in wisdom he takes.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: Two days more, and what a change in the sea and in our little missionary band!

This sea became so rough and the ship pitched and rolled so violently that we could not read our Bibles with any comfort or satisfaction. It seemed like the last comfort was taken from us. All our little band were sick again except Dr. Kelley and myself. There was one consolation: the ship was moving on at good speed toward the land of our adoption. The next day was the Sabbath; but so rough was the sea that we could not have service in the morning. Late in the evening Dr. Kelley preached on the observance of God's commandments. On Monday the great ocean of water was boiling and foaming fiercely all day. One moment we would be on the top of a mountain wave, and the next we would descend down and down, as though we would go to the bottom of the deep. The captain hauled in sail, close reefed some of the sails and some he clung up, for our masts were cracking as if they would break to pieces. There was no such thing as sleeping at night, and I felt sore from head to foot. I said to Mrs. Lambuth: "This, I suppose, is what they call 'a life on the ocean wave'; but I think we will wait until we get ashore to sing it." The poor sailors—I pity them from the bottom of my heart! Their lives are worse than those of slaves, for they, as a general thing, work under a tyrant. They sleep in the "forecastle," and no landsman knows what that means until he sees it for himself. It is a room, or hole, in the bow of the ship into which you descend by a ladder (not stairway,) where bunks are arranged one above another. I went once or twice to see the place, talk to the sailors and lend them books to read; but I was glad to get out. The place was wet and the poor sailors' bed-clothes were saturated with sea water, and there was a damp, unhealthy smell in the room. I would not be a sailor for all the wealth of India.

In latitude 12, south, we saw the Southern Cross for the first time. The sea here is a deep, deep blue, and the bright phosphorescent light sparkles with great brilliancy. Shortly after passing this latitude the sea became exceedingly rough. For several days the ship would pitch and rock from side to side so violently that we could not stand, sit or lie down with any pleasure. We had to lay hold of something to keep from being thrown with great force against the side of the ship. Chairs would slide from one side of the cabin to the other, the crockery in the pantry would slip and slide and every timber in the vessel seemed to be cracking. The waves washed the deck back and forth over our heads; the sound of the dashing water and the voices of the captain and sailors all united to drive sleep from our eyes. There was one redeeming feature in all this rough sea life which always cheered our hearts, and that was the merry songs of the sailors in the midst of the roughest weather. It did seem as if they thought to cheer our little missionary band in the midst of all this gloom and commotion. We thanked them many times for it, and, indeed, it did bring joy and hope to our sea-sick hearts; and, though it has now been thirty years since the song of the "sailor boy" comes back fresh to my mind.

Our state-room was only six feet by five, and, when on account of severe weather we had to remain there with closed windows and doors, it was almost suffocating. When we could get on deck we enjoyed looking at the cape pigeons, the albatross and the mullinok, which sailed around us in great numbers. The albatross and the mullinok measure from twelve to sixteen feet from tip to tip of their wings.

We had a great deal of rough weather while rounding the Cape of Good Hope, and one often gets an experience he never forgets. While at table one day I received into my lap a butter plate and its contents, a plate of ham, knives, forks, etc. We partook of meals there under difficulties, holding on with one hand and eating with the other. The storm at this time seemed to increase in violence. I could only get as far as the door of the gangway, for I did not dare trust myself on deck. As far as the eye could reach the sea was lashed into a sheet of foam by the driving wind. As the night drew on our vessel would almost lie on her broadside, and immense waves would roll over and almost sweep everything from our decks. Every sail was close reefed except the mainmast, and that was single reefed. We had not before experienced such rough weather; but we felt all the time we were in the hands of our kind heavenly Father. Our trust was in him, for we knew he would protect and keep us from all harm. At night the waves would strike the vessel so furiously as to shake every timber in her, and then would fall with such a weight upon her deck that it seemed as if she must go under; but the Christian's God was our helper in this hour of great danger. The weather was so rough on the Sabbath that we could not have service on deck; but we met with each other in the cabin for prayer and thanksgiving to God through Jesus Christ. I am sure that we all felt the Spirit of God rested upon our little meeting, and our hearts were knit together in the love of Christ. It became so cold with the wind blowing off some iceberg south of us, and, having no stove, the captain kindly heated some cannon balls to warm the cabin.

We had plenty of time to read God's word. The more I studied the more precious it became to me. Especially did I read and meditate with joy of the resurrection, ascension and second coming of our blessed Lord, and to this day it has been a theme upon which my heart loves to dwell. Such a voyage at sea is not always a profitless one. A sperm whale was seen in the distance, and the captain told us the peculiar action of the whale was good evidence of an approaching storm, and this was after we had been having about two days of pleasant weather. This was not very comforting news to us, and we began to think there was more to be learned upon the great deep than we ever dreamed of. Sure enough, the next day we had strong winds, much rain and a high sea. We were tossed from side to side, scarcely able to keep stationary, and while writing in my diary I had to prop myself against the side of the ship with two chairs. On the first night I wrote in my diary as follows: "Blowing a gale of wind; only three sails set; every door and window closed except the door of the gangway leading to the cabin. It was so dark in the cabin that we had to have a lamp lighted during the day. Everything in utmost confusion on deck, and the water, coming in great quantity down the gangway, has flooded the cabin and state-rooms. Seven P. M., the second night, the wind roars through the rigging, and the waves beat with such violence against the side of our vessel that it seemed every timber would be started from its place. Above all this we could hear the stentorian voice of our captain, giving orders to the men." On this third night I find this entry in my journal: "I retired at nine P. M., and tried to sleep; but was tossed from side to side until one A. M., and not being able to sleep, determined to rise. I found the cabin and state-rooms flooded with water. Immense volumes of water washed the deck. All without was in utmost confusion. I started up the gangway, and my whole frame shook when the furious waves dashed against the side of the vessel. In the midst of all this confusion I was led to admire the beautiful light of the phosphorescent fire as it flashed upon the deck and sparkled with intense brilliancy. After a few minutes I returned to tell Mrs. Lambuth of the beautiful phosphorescent light on deck. I tried to cheer her by saying I thought the heaviest part of the storm was over and the bright moon could be seen. This was cheering news to her, as it is to any one at sea in a storm. Little did I dream of what was just ahead of me! I attempted to return to the door at the head of the gangway. The ship was staggering, like a drunken man, from side to side. I had gone more than half way up when a tremendous sea came over the bow and side of the vessel, entered the door of the gangway, knocked off my hat, threw me against the side of the vessel, gave me a thorough drenching and stunned me completely for a few moments. As soon as I recovered I found there was great confusion on deck, and I could distinctly hear some one groaning, as if seriously injured. I went up as soon as I could and found that a heavy sea had washed several men against the side of the ship, and one was badly injured. The captain had been washed against the cabin, but had sustained no injury. The sea had crushed the pig-pen almost to atoms, and several of our pigs washed overboard. Portions of our bulwarks were torn away, leaving great openings through which the water rushed in and out. The big gun was torn from its fastenings, and four men were required to make it secure again."

The storm continued all the third day and the fourth night. On Sabbath morning—the twenty-seventh day out—the storm abated, the sun came out and shed his cheering rays on us for awhile—only a few minutes. The sky was again darkened, and the rain came down in torrents. The captain set to work to mend the broken places, for as long as it remained in that condition the sea rolled over our decks continually. We had gone too far south, and had met with storm after storm; and so the captain changed his course a little to the north. Sabbath evening we had a prayer meeting, and there we poured out our souls in thanksgiving to God for his abundant goodness to us all. All well, and not one missing from our little band. On this occasion we were all drawn nearer to each other than ever before, and with one heart and mind we praised God for his kind, preserving care during the storm. After prayer meeting, about nine P. M., I ventured on deck for a little fresh air. I had been on deck but a few minutes when a heavy sea came over, and I was drenched from head to foot. Sea water never makes one sick. We had not gone far north when the sea became comparatively smooth, and we were all able to walk the deck again. How thankful I felt that it was so for the sake of my dear wife and for the ladies and children of our party. Confined, as they had been, for four days and nights to their rooms was very trying.

Now, that the sea was more calm, I tried to learn something of the Chinese language. We had three Chinese aboard, and I found them more kind and pleasant than I had anticipated. They were treated very unkindly by the sailors, and yet they seldom complained. I learned some Chinese from them by hearing them converse. Yours in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, June 2, 1884.

The Mississippi Baptist State Convention.

This body met at Kosciusko, July 23, and adjourned July 27. Mr. W. H. Hardy, of Meridian, was the president of last year. He delivered a brief, but able, address upon vacating the chair. In one or two points it struck the writer—especially as emanating from Baptist source. 1. It urged co-operative organization, such that every pastor and member should feel that Baptist interest and plans are one. (I give the substance as I remember it.) He said some feared centralization; but it was a bugbear of which he was not afraid. Much power was lost for want of proper union of effort and aim. 2. The speaker commended the zeal of the church in its evangelic work and its progressiveness, even while it adhered so inflexibly to scriptural methods; but he felt that more might and should be done if the church came up to the full measure of its duty and opportunity. The speaker was endorsed by re-election. He is a fine presiding officer.

The spirituality of the convention was notable. They passed one half hour in devotional exercises every morning before engaging in the business of the convention. It is good to stop long enough to realize that devotion is a part of Christian business everywhere. Methodists, I fear, are forgetting this.

The school question was well ventilated. Your scribe thinks that Mississippi Baptists are wiser than Mississippi Methodists (Bishops thrown in) upon this important subject. Though in a hopeless minority and severely sat upon, your humble servant still squeaks out that Mississippi Methodists would be wise to have a Mississippi College. Nobody need shed ink or waste dynamite over this effusion. It is the poor fellow's plea for a quiet nunc dimittis. He hopes brethren and Bishops will think kindly of him as he subsides. Then when the great arise and graciously permit a college to be reared on Mississippi soil this writer will, if alive, shed tears of grateful joy. Till then in pace quiescat.

Mississippi Baptists are stronger, numerically, than any other denomination. They are, in round numbers, sixty-one thousand. Among these are found many whose names are not unknown in State as well as in Church. Gen. M. P. Lowry, of Blue Mountain, was a Confederate brigadier, and is now a successful teacher of Mississippi girls. Drs. Johnson and Quince, of Oxford University, are well known in educational circles. Prof. R. M. Leavelle, of Mississippi College, is an old college friend of the writer. Drs. Webb and Hillman, of Clinton, need no letters of commendation from us. Dr. Tichenor, of Atlanta, Ga., was present. So, too, Mr. Gray, of Louisville, Ky.—a young man who impressed me as specially brainy. I should not forget to mention some ladies; but there were some whose acquaintance I did not make, and it would seem invidious. While on this topic let me say that women are coming up to their place in the Baptist economy. Methodist progressivism is overflowing, and, as water seeks its level, the Baptists will ditch it off into basins. They are doubtless next to us in all these enterprises.

Of course on missions they are progressive; but their assessment upon this entire State is only $8,000—just half of what we propose to raise. But this I note: The young men are coming to the front on this line. Mr. Gray, of Louisville, Ky., made one of the plainest, most practical and, withal, most earnest addresses I have been permitted to hear for a long time. He did not rant or go off into splendid generalities; but your correspondent realized that missionary zeal should have a particular aim and method.

Mr. David, missionary from Africa, was present. He gave us many interesting facts relative to the dark continent. Had he not packed a "bloody shirt" with his clothes he would have delighted us. But he gave us a scare. "Bloody shirtism" in religion does not pay—especially when he who is shaking it confesses in the same breath that he was engaged in proselyting from other Christian denominations. This the speaker did. He ought to learn his lesson better in other respects, e. g.: He says that native Africans are more intellectual and moral than the American negro. Indeed! Then the American white man is an inferior moral example. This gun shoots harder from the breech than the muzzle. If true, we ought to get Africa to send missionaries to us. But I shall not enlarge upon this topic. Bro. David is young, and will come back only now and then.

The convention is sound on prohibition. There is a healthy sentiment pervading the entire body upon this subject; and here I wish to note the fact that if the church holds firm and educates its people on this subject, this issue is not doubtful. This body also insists that the Exposition, at New Orleans, respect the Christian Sabbath. This will add sixty thousand to the vote already taken. It will certainly deserve respectful attention.

There were many things worth notice which I must omit. The zeal and spirituality of the body impressed me, and at one time I thought they were not burdened with eloquence that needed airing like an ordinary Methodist Conference. But in this I was mistaken. They had it by the tank, tun, barrel, carboy, and they let it off. A strong western breeze blew meanwhile and one or two light showers fell. The only drawback on this point was a motion to prevent women from speaking—all of which turned out well, since had women spoken some of the brethren, finding no outlet for the constant accumulation of explosives, might have had catastrophe.

T. A. S. A.

Is It Heck or Hick?

MR. EDITOR: As we are, this centennial year, carefully investigating our Methodist history, we should endeavor to correct all errors which we discover in our historic dates and names. I notice that our earliest writers spell the name of our mother of American Methodism, "Barbara Hick," while later writers spell it, "Heck."

Seeing this difference in the orthography of this historic name, I wrote a letter of inquiry, some months ago, to the Nashville Christian Advocate, which the editor has not deemed of sufficient importance to publish. I shall not trouble him any further on the subject, but will try our own official organ. I think the truth of history requires that we get the correct orthography of this historic name, for Barbara Hick and her "wining ways" will go down to posterity as an important fact in Methodist history—to the end of her ecclesiastical career.

Those who spell and pronounce the name, "Heck," do it out of the authority of Dr. Stevens, who published his "History of Methodism" ninety years after the important facts connected with Barbara Hick occurred in New York, and I think his authority is feeble when contrasted with the authorities on the other side. All that I see he says about it is in the following foot note in Vol. I, page 427: "Not Hick, as she is called in all former Methodist books which mention her. The name appears to have been changed by her son, and her descendants call themselves Heck. A portion of the Heck family emigrated to Canada, and retain their original name." I have only this much to say about Dr. Stevens' authority. Rev. J. B. Wakeley, in his "Lost Chapters of Early Methodist History Recovered," gives us two hundred and sixty names who subscribed to the building of the first Methodist Church, in New York, in 1785, and among them we find the name of Jacob Heck and also that of Paul Hick, the son of Barbara Hick. From this there seems to have been two families in New York with names similar in orthography and pronunciation; but we have nothing to do with Jacob Heck, or the Heck that emigrated to Canada. We only wish to preserve the true orthography of the name of our historic family. Dr. Stevens admits that she is called Hick "in all former Methodist books which mention her." New York was the headquarters of Methodism when Barbara Hick and her famous son, Paul, were such noted factors in the upbuilding of the church, and the writers of "all former Methodist books"—especially the ministers—were much in and about New York, and were, doubtless, intimately acquainted with such conspicuous church members as the Hicks, and transmitted the correct orthography.

But now, for the direct testimony in favor of Hick being the proper name. Rev. J. B. Wakeley, in his book of "Lost Chapters Recovered," tells us that he got possession of the original manuscript copy of the official records of Wesley Chapel, the first Methodist Church in New York, from 1785 to 1797, and in this old recording steward's book the name often occurs, and is always written, "Hick." Paul Hick, the son of Barbara, joined the first church in his early youth, and soon became one of the leading official members as class leader, steward and trustee, and in this official record his name is always written "Hick." He lived in New York to the ripe age—seventy-four, and was a great favorite with his pastors, with whom he corresponded after their pastorates ended and they left the city. Mr. Wakeley obtained a loan of this correspondence and made liberal extracts, showing that all his letters from his former pastors were addressed to Paul Hick. Mr. Wakeley further says that in July, 1774, Paul Hick married Miss Hannah Dean, a deeply pious member of the church, who always preserved her love-letters, both before and after her marriage. After her marriage every ticket had the name of "Hannah Hick" written on it by the pastor.

Dr. Nathan Bangs, who lived in New York City, and was long personally intimate with Paul Hick before his death, in Vol. I, page 51, of his "History of the Methodist Episcopal Church," has this to say of Barbara Hick and her family in a long foot note, from which I make extracts: "The name of this pious woman was Hick, the mother of the late Paul Hick." (This italics were evidently made by him to emphasize the name.) "He has often conversed with the writer respecting the circumstances and early days of Methodism; he has children and grandchildren now members of the church in New York. Several of the facts above narrated were received from Mr. Hick and other members of the family." Thus far Dr. Bangs. The Hicks were his neighbors and intimate associates, and his certainly knew the correct orthography of the name. Except Dr. Stevens' bare assertion, I see no evidence that Paul Hick ever changed the family name, but much to show that he never did. The first mention of the name in the old steward's book, which occurred in 1785, was "Hick," and so continued until 1797. Dr. Bangs published his history in 1853; Dr. Stevens his in 1858—twenty years later. I give the preference to Dr. Bangs, the personal associate of the historic Paul Hick.

J. O. IONES.

HARRISBURG, MISS., July 22, 1884.

A Reminder.

This attention of those brethren of the Louisiana Conference who subscribed certain small sums (not yet paid) in behalf of J. B. Lockhart, a young preacher attending Centenary College, Jackson, La., is called to the fact that he is in immediate need of money.

D. M. RUSH.

July 23, 1884.
The Texas Christian Advocate thus represents the conscience of an hundred thousand Methodists in the Lone Star State:
"The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE takes strong grounds against the opening of the Cotton Centennial on the Sabbath-day. This is no time to compromise. There is an evil in the land. The trumpet of each watchman should give no uncertain sound. The Southern Methodist press represent faithfully the Sabbath of the Bible."

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1884.

A GATHERED FLOWER.

BY JOHN ACKNORTH.

"And ye shall be gathered one by one."—Isaiah xxvii, 12.

"Bring another flower," said the Bridegroom King. To twine in this bride's wreath. And away sped his angel on swift wing. To fetch the fragrant Death.

"A flower is wanted, oh! fragrant one, one fit for the bride of the Bride— One whose color is rich and bright and glad, And whose fragrance shall ever abide."

Then here is one that shall meet their want. For, though laid among neighbors' feet, Though a lowly flower, clinging plant, 'Tis the sweetest and fairest of all."

So that flower was gathered in fragrant Death. And away that angel sped. To fetch the fragrant Death. That shall deck the Bride. —London Methodist Recorder.

Domestic Missionary Appropriations.

Will some member of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Missions please give us some light on this subject? We are often asked why some of our comparatively good circuits have appropriations made to them, while others more destitute receive little or no help from the Missionary Board. We have in our mind now two circuits. One is in the north-western portion of the Conference, where lands are good and most of the membership well-to-do. This circuit paid the preacher last year $320. The other circuit is in the southeastern portion of the Conference, in poor, pine woods lands. The people are poor, and have to practice the most rigid economy to live. This circuit paid the preacher last year $218. The former has church property valued at $5,000, which is a low estimate. The latter has church property valued at $850, a fair valuation. The poorer charge has 333 members. The other has 211 members. Both circuits are served by married men: the same men traveled them last year. There is an appropriation of $100 to each of these circuits. Now, if they pay the same this year that they paid last the preacher on the poor circuit, after getting his appropriation, will have received $2 less than the more needy charge paid seven hundred percent more money into the missionary treasury, and receive no more help than the charge that pays one-third more quarterly. We are not grumbling about preachers getting so much money, all of them receive little enough, but we would like to know why the board makes such distinctions. We tell our people when we take the collections that the money is for the support, in part, of the preachers on the poor circuits and missions. The Minutes of our Conference are a published contradiction of such statements. Would it not be better to state that the domestic missionary collections are for a few of the weakest charges, several of the better ones, and for the presiding elders, three of whom receive more than one-fourth of the whole amount collected? Brethren, please explain. We want to know why you make such distinctions. We want to state facts to our people. J. N.

Revival at Crawford.

To-day we closed a meeting of thirteen days' duration in the town of Crawford, which resulted in untold good to the church and community. Twelve persons were received on profession of faith, and at the close of the meeting all of them, together with a large number of Christians and reclaimed backsliders, bowed around the communion table to commemorate the suffering and death of our crucified Lord. In taking charge of this circuit, two years ago, we found the church greatly in need of a revival, but, blessed be God, a long prayed for victory has been gained, and Christians are rejoicing and giving God the praise. Bro. Gaines, a local preacher and faithful man of God, remarked before this meeting that "he had known Crawford for forty years, but had never seen religion at such a low ebb," but through the faithful preaching of the gospel by Bro. J. B. Stone, of Verona, and the prayers and harmonious efforts of Christians of the various denominations, the work of God has been powerfully revived. The meeting exerted a wonderful influence over the community, and became the subject of conversation on the streets and in the homes of the people. Such a meeting has not been held in this community for years past. Bro. L. D. Worsham, of Starkville, was with us in the beginning of the meeting, and did faithful preaching, which was highly appreciated by the people. Bro. Wier, our presiding elder, preached one excellent sermon during the meeting. At the close of the meeting we appointed a weekly meeting for the instruction of the converts, hoping in this way to cultivate them that they may be faithful and become useful members of the church. We have here many noble people, and many good things could be said of their faithfulness and zeal during the meeting. On yesterday the ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society were delighted to have Sister Stone with them and hear words of encouragement from her. We trust the ladies will start out from this meeting with renewed zeal in the noble work in which they are engaged. We are looking forward to a revival throughout this circuit. HE-LEP R. TUCKER.

District Conference.

The District Conference for Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, was convened at Waynesboro, July 26, 1884, James A. Godfrey, P. E., presiding; W. S. Davis, secretary; J. A. Gully, assistant secretary. The usual committees were appointed, who made reports promptly to the Conference. The several charges gave a good report of the spiritual condition of the church. The financial report was very good in some places, particularly at Enterprise station. Their total assessment for all purposes is $882, and they have raised $754.

The committee on East Mississippi Female College made a stirring report, stating that it had just closed a very successful year, and with its worthy president, A. D. McVey, they looked for brighter prospects in the future. A resolution was adopted requesting our pastors, in taking up the Centennial collections for education this year, to indicate to their congregations that it would be applied to East Mississippi Female College. A resolution of thanks was offered to Dr. H. F. Johnson for his gift to Whitworth College.

Lauderdale was selected as the place for holding the next District Conference. S. T. Taylor, C. R. Rencher, R. F. Cochran and J. F. Robinson were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Alternates: S. B. Watts and J. A. Gully.

The business of the Conference being over, a Sunday-School Convention was held on Saturday, which was very interesting to all. Reports of preachers and laymen showed that our people are awake to their duty in this behalf. On our circuit (Clarke) the preacher reports eleven schools, with six hundred teachers and scholars. President McVey, of East Mississippi Female College, and Dr. Galloway, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, were present, and each of these brethren did good service in the pulpit, as well as in advocating the claims of the college and paper. A large congregation assembled on Sabbath to hear Dr. Galloway's Centennial sermon, and all were well pleased.

W. S. DAVIS, Sec.

The Brotherhood.

Bro. Downer's article in the last issue of the ADVOCATE, in reference to the "Mississippi Conference Brotherhood," induces me to write a few words. I was heartily glad when the matter was mentioned to me at Conference, for I had been thinking that we ought to have such an institution. I went into it heartily. The pleasant thought came into my mind thinking it might be providential. I will go home and tell Mary, the sharer in my ministerial toils, if I fall before you do my brethren of the brotherhood will give you five dollars each, an institution of love, with no salaries or officers; the amount you will get will be of great benefit to you. I saw a look of pleasant satisfaction in her face. My understanding of the matter was that, although we were not yet complete in our organization, and having to have it chartered, yet if a brother died during the year his widow or children would get the benefit, and not wait till next year before our organization could go into effect. With this understanding I willingly divided with the widow and orphans of the deceased brother, and I believe every brother that belongs to it will do the same. I don't doubt Bro. Downer's understanding of the matter. I believe he is honest in his statement, though I think he is mistaken. I wish, Mr. Editor, you could see the letter our bereaved sister wrote me, acknowledging the receipt of the five dollars I took pleasure in sending her. It was so touching, and filled with the spirit of Christian love and thankfulness, I got more than five dollars' worth of precious comfort to my soul. She said also "loved the dear brotherhood that remembered her in her sad bereavement."

Lay brethren are permitted to become honorary members, and not beneficiaries, so you see they have the privilege of giving to this noble cause, not expecting anything in return. "It is more blessed to give than to receive"—having the consciousness of doing that which pleases Christ—Lord. This is a blessed motive. Bro. Nugent, of Jackson, and J. F. Moore, of Newton, joined us, and we hope many more lay members will do the same. We invite the ladies also to aid in this good work. Our preachers will feel better over it knowing that when they fall in the work their loved ones left behind will be provided for. Our brotherhood, I think, is now a fixed fact, having obtained a charter for the same. We have now between eighty and one hundred members. I would say that I am in favor that where a member is not able to pay the death assessment that we give him until Conference, closing up the matter by giving his note, if it will suit him, so that he may not lose his membership by inability to pay. I heartily approve the suggestion that Bro. Downer makes; that is, that "the death assessment of five dollars per member will prove a blessing to the widow and orphans of a deceased preacher that can scarcely be measured, and yet if out of the meager salary received his own family might be deprived, etc., some one will miss a golden opportunity to bear a heavy burden and get a blessing from Christ." He also suggests that "some young lady constitute herself a special committee to raise this death assessment from the church by small assessments (say contributions) from each member and outsiders too. And let the pastor give due notice thereof to his congregation." I believe that such a call as this will meet with a hearty response from any congregation, and if more is paid in than will take to pay the assessment let the church elect the same young lady the church elect the same, to await another call, and thus a deeper interest will be felt in the church in behalf of the dear ones of our departed brethren. The loving Saviour declares: "Inasmuch as ye have done it to the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me." His smiles and love will be upon that church. With such a provision as this in all our churches I think that there will be less disposition to locate and go into secular matters. So then let every preacher try to do his duty in keeping up our organization, and let every church come in as a helpmeet. What church will speak out first? We wait to hear.

GEO. HANCOCK, Treasurer.

"D. D."—Amen.

DEAR BRO. CARRADINE: Allow us publicly to extend to you our hearty thanks—for the sake of all that is sincere and honest as opposed to all that is superficial and make-appear—for your timely and pointed article on the indiscriminate conferring of degrees. Let me assure you that many have been the sons who, seating themselves beside the son receiving instruction in the article on "D. D.," have listened admiringly and exultingly while the father explained the "why and wherefore" and meaning and manner of application of that suffix. We knew all the time that it was a "brand," but we simply had not thought of our word. What you said was just what we wanted to say, and had the will, if not the ability, to say it in terms just as striking and sarcastic; but you have done the work for us, and we have only to breathe a sigh of relief, lay aside our feebler pens of righteous indignation and return to you a little note of thanks. Believe me that your words constitute a vent-valve to many a cauld, truth-loving soul among the "six thousand—and I trust many thousands more—who have never bowed the knee to this Baal" of sham and gild, and a disposition to bestow fulsome eulogy on the lucky—not plucky. O! that we might have due regard to the fitness of things in our every manner of conduct. As says St. Paul: "Let all things be done decently and in order." If we can find a man, or do find him, who has made wonderful attainments in the field of mind-culture, who possesses a stock of knowledge deeply stored, who has soared high and delved deep and quaffed broad, a man so profound that he can reveal prophecy and dispense doubts, and, withal, so truly pious that he can grapple with the hidden things of God, a Jonathan Edwards or a Chalmers or a Linfield, by all means let us or our Universities, Harvard or Princeton or Vanderbilt or any other, confer on such a man the title of "D. D." On the other hand, if we find a man distinguished for his goodness, who has saved many souls or bestowed much charity, let us bestow on such the praise of the Master—is there any higher?—"Well done, good and faithful servant." If we find a man social, genial, kind, between whom and ourselves springs up unbidden the tie and bond of kindred spirits, let us clasp hands with such an one and exclaim: "Brother!" Suitable praise always to whom it is due. And if we find a man unworthy let us say nothing, or only offer a word of kindly entreaty, willing from a heart of charity and interest. "Let all things be done decently and in order."

Brother, write us again on any one of the various abuses of our times. And may your worthy name never suffer a detractor by a title invidiously bestowed, or coming from a source all-ignorant that it possesses not the power to bequeath the honor. Yours sincerely, MAC.

East Mississippi Female College.

REPORT OF CONFERENCE VISITING COMMITTEE.

Another year of the existence of this deservedly popular institution has passed into history in a manner gratifying to its friends, and that insures a prosperous future. Its matriculation for the year ending June 19, 1884, was one hundred and twenty-two, with a graduating class of seven. The essays and examinations of the pupils evidenced that assiduous application and sweep of comprehension that only first-class institutions of learning can inspire and impress upon the youthful mind, while everything about the college and the exercises during the conference showed that President McVey was eminently fitted to be in charge of such a school, and that he had succeeded in impressing his own excellent traits of head and heart upon these women of the future.

This school is under the control of the Mississippi Conference, and, by its location and the important work it is doing, commends itself to the interest and patronage of every one interested in a thorough education of woman, sanctified by the higher graces of the Christian religion. While its management is inspired by that broad catholicity that keeps it fully up to the requirements of the age, it gives out no dubious impressions that might influence untrained minds to ignore responsibility to the God of the Bible. In this age, when the minds and hearts of so many young people are poisoned by one of the numerous phases of infidelity, and not a few imagine that their culture and intelligence are evidences of strength, it is refreshing to visit a first-class college, filled with the young women of the country, and find every boarder converted and a member of some branch of the Christian church. It is our pleasure to bear this high testimonial to the moral as well as the intellectual excellency of East Mississippi Female College.

The sermon on Sunday, by Rev. F. R. Hill, D. D., and the address on "Post Education," by the Rev. C. B. Galloway, D. D., were worthy efforts of these Christian gentlemen, and can not be added to by the pen of your committee.

J. M. WELLS.

J. W. HARMON.

Woman's Work in Louisiana.

The Woman's Missionary Convention of the Louisiana Conference met at Mansfield, La., June 7-9. The excessive rain prevented the attendance we had anticipated. Only a few visitors were present, but, with the help of attending ministers, we arranged all the business necessary to the best of our ability. It was suggested by some of our former officers that we should elect our executive officers in or near the central part of the State, as being more accessible than heretofore. July, 1885, was appointed for the next meeting, to be held in Minden, La. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. T. P. Fullilove, of Keachi, La.; vice-presidents, Miss Eliza Logan, of Mansfield, La., Mrs. Sue R. Wren, of Homer, La., Mrs. Robert Randle, of Trenton, La., Mrs. W. H. Foster, of New Orleans, La.; Mrs. J. N. Pharr, of Opelousas, La.; Mrs. M. C. Thraher, of Atlanta, La.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. J. Foster, of Shreveport, La.; recording secretary, Miss Lizzie Paxson, of Keachi, La.; treasurer, Mrs. S. B. McCutchen, of Shreveport, La. It was suggested that the treasurer of each auxiliary society be considered a committee of one to canvass for the Woman's Missionary Advocate.

LIZZIE PAXSON, Sec.

KEACHI, LA., July 22, 1884.

From the Work.

DENNISVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: On July 2 I closed a very gracious series of services at Rodney. The Spirit was with us, the congregations were excellent and the results very gratifying. There were a number of conversions and thirteen accessions to the church. Part of the time I was ably assisted by Bro. T. L. Melieu, and Bro. J. M. Smith, of the Presbyterian Church. We have no building there, but Bro. Smith's congregation make us perfectly at home in their commodious edifice, and a delightfully harmonious Christian spirit prevails. Two lots of ground have been given us, on which we hope to build this fall. We have there one of the best Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies in the Vicksburg district.

Our third quarterly Conference was held under the shade of the wide-spreading beeches at Flower Hill, July 9-10. The congregations were large and attentive, and the dinners simply superb. The services were continued through Sunday, and thirteen were added to the church, while many more were seriously awakened. Dr. C. G. Andrews gave us four deep-thrilling sermons, and Bro. Hunnicutt and President Bradford assisted until the close. A building committee was appointed, who went vigorously to work to raise funds for building by December 1. Two lots at Russum's depot were generously donated by Mr. Wm. Russum. At Dennisville the Mizpah Church, a tasty little edifice, stands as a monument to the indomitable will, unflagging energy and generous liberality of Bro. Horace C. Millsaps. The ladies are furnishing the pulpit, etc., and we expect to dedicate it on the third Sabbath in August. Our young people here have an interesting Juvenile Missionary Society, of which Miss Mable M. Johnson is president and Miss Katie N. Millsaps corresponding secretary.

The warm hospitality and hearty cooperation of the people render the charge this year a delightful one, and we hope, with God's blessing, to have reports commensurate with the demands of the Centenary year.

J. V. PENN, Pastor.

RICHMOND HILL, July 24, 1884.

MORTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I was appointed at our last Conference to Forest and Morton, two excellent little towns on the Vicksburg and Meridian railroad. We have held a series of services in each place, looking to a revival of religion. We had some of the best revivalists among our preachers to assist. Our people are moral, kind, hospitable. I never lived with kinder people. Even those that do not belong to the church manifest their constant regard for the gospel and the preacher, who lives among them. Their lives conform to the strict rules of morals, even more so than many that belong to the church. More liberal in supporting the gospel, attend upon the services of the church, yet they won't be religious. Now, I ask some questions: 1. Are they not in a more dangerous condition than if they were great sinners? 2. What can be done to get them to become religious? When all the ordinary processes of the gospel fail, can anything else be done? I love my people; I want them saved. They are too good to let the evil one ruin their hopes beyond the grave.

I spent a few days' last week in Natchez, helping Bro. T. L. Melieu in a meeting at or in his new mission church. He is doing a splendid work. Possibly he is doing about the best work in our Conference. We had an old-fashioned Methodist meeting. Sinners came to the altar crying for mercy; directly they were rejoicing with the people of God. Bro. Melieu is much beloved by his people, is full of zeal and devoted to his work. He is the right man for that work at this time.

The prospects for crops in east Mississippi is good; much better than last year. The health of the country is good. Preachers are planning for their camp and protracted meetings. There is a camp ground on almost every circuit in the Brandon district, and a parsonage on all but two. Mine is one of the best works in the district.

A. H. NICHOLSON.

Obituaries.

BEALE—HATTIE CYNTHIA, only daughter of James A. and Minerva J. Beale, was born in Madison county, Miss., November 13, 1868, and died at the home of her birth, June 3, 1884. It seems to us only a few days since we first greeted our little child, and she came to our hearts and homes; only a little while since we fondly and proudly watched and guided her footsteps in the first "journey" she took from "mamma" to "papa." How sweet the music of her bird-like voice! How her first utterance thrilled our hearts! The language of "baby land"—the language that ever fell on the ears of parents! Ah! to us, who only saw with eyes of love, she was an angel disguised! Like a fair, precious bird, we watched with loving, anxious eyes, its gradual unfolding, praying the blessings of Heaven to descend as the sunbeams and shower; that the Father's smile be as the sunshine falling in golden gladness into the life of our precious blossom, keeping her "unspotted from the world!" In my mind she was associated with the sweetest, purest flowers. Like a spotless lily, she stood in her virgin purity on the threshold of maidenhood; like the modest violet, the fragrance of her pure young life drew around her the affections and admiration of those who knew and loved her, and like a rose flooded with sunshine, her heart was aglow with "unselfish" and "selfless" love. But our "lily" is broken, our "violet" crushed, our "rose" lies fading in the tomb, and the flowers she loved and planted bear sweet "memorial flowers" of her, "who was herself the sweetest flower of all."

She will come no more to bring me her floral offerings, as she so often did, and "shall miss her, oh, so sadly! But it is joy to think that her pure spirit is roaming in the sweet fields of Eden, gathering the fair flower-like flowers of that "summer land of life." It was through great suffering, yet our dear one was "made perfect," yet through the long weary weeks, from Easter tide until the sweet May flowers crowned the brow of June, she suffered in silence, calmly, patiently, more than human tongue or pen can express. All that loving, tender heart and gentle, skillful hands could do for her comfort was done; but, alas! the last farewell must be spoken, for "the night of death drew near."

At first she said, in answer to her father's anxious inquiry as to her willingness to die, that she was not willing to go; but there on that death-bed, in the night of death, she mingled her tears of grief and contrition—fond father and idolized child!—he pointing her to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world," until she found "that peace which passeth knowledge." Then she no longer feared, "the valley of the shadow of death," but was anxious and willing to go, to the Saviour she had found so precious. How her face beamed with the new hope and peace within! To her and to those who gathered around that death-bed it was no longer draped in shadows, no longer gloomy and gloomy vale—the mount of transfiguration—and praise. After calling the names of loved ones—even the absent—she looked the fond "farewell" she would have spoken; then raised her eyes, dark, beautiful and eloquent, as if to catch the first gleams of glory, being revealed to her. Kind, gentle hands, she raised her precious darling in spotless white, loving hands wreathed for her sweet white flowers; then placed our "jewel" in a casket bearing the beautiful inscription: "Not lost, but gone before," and "At rest."

She was buried near that home left desolate, while the heavens seemed to "weep with those that wept"—fond parents, the two little brothers who loved "sister" so dearly, relatives and friends. There could be no burial service for the "rain," falling in holy baptism upon the "coming sacrifice," fair as lephthal's daughter in her youth and virgin purity. Innocent as the wood-doves that make their home among the "sighing boughs" that shade her grave, pure as the flowers that will offer their odors and breathe her tomb, we know she is "at rest"—"not lost, but gone before!"

INVALID.

DAWKINS—Mrs. WINIFRED DAWKINS, daughter of James and Elizabeth Simmons, was born in the State of Georgia in 1811; removed with her parents to the State of Tennessee in 1813; thence to North Alabama in 1820; thence to South Alabama in 1833. The following year, 1834, she was married to A. F. Temple, who departed this life in 1841, leaving her with three children. She was again married, in 1847, to Daniel Dawkins, who departed this life in 1868.

Sister Dawkins united with the church in early life, and for more than fifty years lived a consistent member of the Methodist Church. On July 11, at the residence of her step-son, William Dawkins, in Jasper county, Miss., she fell on sleep. She died as she had lived, and to-day she is numbered with the saints in heaven. Our loss is a heavy one. She was a pure woman, a kind and affectionate mother, a fond and loving wife, a devoted sister and a sincere Christian. She was loved by all who knew her. She was kind to all, and in her death we have lost a good woman; but heaven has gained a saint. Sister Dawkins has left many loved ones to sorrow, but not of that hope, and unto you I would say: Mourn not at the work of God. Your loved one has fulfilled her mission on earth, and God has called her home. She is gone, but she has left a name that is rather to be chosen than great riches; she has left a holy example that we should all follow. She led a life of self-denial, bore her cross with patience and when the messenger of death came she was ready. She died the death of the righteous, and is now enjoying her reward in the presence of her Lord. Her funeral was preached from Matthew xxiv, 44, by her pastor, H. S. GALE.

AUSTIN—Bro. JAMES GAMBLE AUSTIN was born in Davie county, N. C., July 19, 1818, and fell asleep at his home, near Raymond, Hinds county, Miss., May 6, 1884, being a little more than sixty-six years old. When about sixteen years old he came to Komper county, Miss.; removed to Madison in 1852, and to Hinds county in 1854, where he spent the residue of his days among a large circle of kindred and dear friends. He was three married; first to Miss Elizabeth D. Lewis, of Madison county, in 1835, who left him several children. His second wife was Mrs. N. Kerr, of Raymond, in 1852 he was again married to Mrs. Beatrice Erwin, the daughter of our pioneer, Bro. Nixon. She, with four children of his first marriage, tarried behind in grief that one so kind and true should be taken from them.

Thorough honesty in all his business dealings was a prominent part of his religion. He was not very demonstrative; but the gospel preacher found in him such a listener as gave inspiration and help. He was warm and faithful in his friendships, outspoken in denouncing wrong and corruption. He was a kind husband and father. Though suffering for years with a disease that predisposes to melancholy, he yet strove against this in making his family and friends enjoy themselves in his house. There was free-hearted hospitality! His summons came suddenly at last. He was able to walk about at sunset, at nine o'clock he was motionless in death. His fond brother, Dr. Thomas Austin, was sitting by him and thought he had fallen asleep. But the angels came all unawares to the loved ones and conveyed him home. He was ready. We will not weep for our friend and loved one, but strive to meet him in the realms of joy. J. P. DEARIE.

TURNER—Many hearts were filled with sadness when on last week's morn, June 23, 1884, it was announced that during the night the "dear messenger" had visited a home in Jackson, and taken from it one of its brightest lights and a fireside angel, Little MATTIE, second daughter of Matthew H. and Helen A. Turner, aged three years, two months and twenty-eight days. Only one short week before "Pattie" was in health, and what bright hopes and anticipations these fond parents had for the future of their darling! With what solicitude and anxiety did they watch over the couch of their patient, suffering little one. But it was all in vain, for an all-wise and good God had otherwise decreed. Now her little chair is vacant, her sweet voice hushed in death and the shadows of sorrow are resting upon the household. We can not forget that lovely face, that pleasant smile and all her little winning ways. Home is not like home without "Pattie." In such distress it is hard to realize the hand of "Providence."

Yes, "Pattie" our loss is mighty; but we do not wish thy return. Heaven is being continually made richer by these contributions from earth, and "of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

HENRY—CASSIE JANE HENRY, once more death has taken away from the home a wife and mother. This time his summons was quick, sharp, decisive. Retiring as usual at night, before the dawn had appeared she was in the presence of her God. This event happened on July 21, 1884. The subject of this sketch was born in West Feliciana parish, July 25, 1847. Three years ago she was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Henry. They had been playmates and companions while children, and on seeing one another after a lapse of some years their childhood's friendship ripened into a closer intimacy and a warmer tie. She leaves two children to mourn her loss—both girls: one a child by a former marriage, and the younger a result of the last union.

May the God of the fatherless and orphans sustain them in their grief, and give them through life a number of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. "He knoweth our frame and remembereth we are dust." To his love and mercy we commend her soul. S. J. DAVIES.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"Practice makes perfect." The manufacturers of the Ivory Soap have been making soap continuously since 1837, and the result of their long practical experience and intelligent experiments is the remarkable Ivory Soap, which chemists of national reputation pronounce to be without a superior.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer or druggist. Send no money. Please mention this paper.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND BAPTIST MINISTRIES CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HURRICUT.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1884.

$900!

At the Providence Camp Meeting last Sunday $730.20 were subscribed as a Centenary thank offering, which with the amount previously raised and reported by the pastor, Rev. H. P. Lewis, aggregates $900 so far. Well done for Providence circuit. Other amounts will follow, until every member of the church and child in the Sunday-school has had an opportunity of making a Centenary donation.

Dr. Talmage very aptly classifies among the hiding places of iniquity "unhappy and undisciplined homes." A pure home-life is the bulwark of social order and good government. A nation of homes has the guarantee of perpetual glory.

We find the following in the Christian at Work:

Assistant Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson, of the Mississippi diocese, in a recent sermon, warned his hearers, with zealous warmth, against "an anxious-bench religion." But an anxious-bench religion is as much better than a sound-sleep religion as the Wesley revival was better than the classically cold religiosity of a century ago.

The "second service" is up for discussion again among our Northern religious exchanges, and there seems to be a growing disposition to discontinue it. In this latitude it often occurs that the evening service is quite as well attended as the morning, and by an almost entirely different congregation. We have the best opportunity of reaching "the world" at the evening appointment.

The press dispatches announce that a disappointed, desperate "mining prospector" committed suicide in Denver, on Saturday last. He left a letter in which he says: "The world I no longer desire. I die with my boots on. I am not afraid of what is before me, believing in nothing, and knowing everything to be a fraud." And that is the only prospect of unbelief. How striking the contrast with triumphant Christian assurance at the hour of departing!

A little extra effort just now on the part of pastors will greatly aid the ADVOCATE in some contemplated improvements. Lists of new subscribers are earnestly solicited, but especially would we request agents to forward all monies in hand. These amounts are individually small, but they aggregate the sum in immediate demand. We hope every pastor will see to it that not a single subscriber be lost, and that additions be made to his list. An ADVOCATE in every family will repay richly all outlay of time and effort. Those are the intelligent, liberal, loyal, active members who read their church papers. If any reader of these lines is about to let his subscription expire, let him renew through his pastor at once, or write directly to this office.

Mr. Spurgeon's fiftieth birthday anniversary called forth fraternal and congratulatory expressions from all Christian people and in all lands. His marvelous success and thoroughly evangelical spirit have placed him at the head of great living preachers. Only from the Churchman, of New York, have we seen invidious comparison and depreciation of his work. We quote as follows:

He reaches a certain class of people, and organizes them under the lead of a certain belief, and, as far as his work goes, it may be called good; but the people he brings together do not care to advance much in the religious life, and he takes them only a little way. This should be remembered when his vast congregations are considered. He furnishes religious entertainment to a class of people who crave just that sort of thing, and so they rally around him. Compare the work of Mr. Spurgeon with that which the Church of England has done among the laboring men in the large towns or in east London, and one can see the difference in the same social class between the influence of a magnetic leader and the influence of sound Christian instruction in promoting the higher elements of the Christian life. This is the fair test of Mr. Spurgeon's work, the test also that reduces its proportions.

While we have not accepted some of Mr. Spurgeon's theology, in his catholic spirit and wonderful achievements we freely rejoice. The bigotry of the above is pitiable.

Editorial Correspondence.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This Conference was held at Wesley Chapel, in the southern part of Yazoo county, beginning on Thursday of last week. Rev. Dr. O. G. Andrews, presiding elder, presided, and Bro. T. A. Holloman was elected secretary, with Rev. B. F. Jones as his assistant. In company with a number of delegates from the Natchez end of the "shoe-string district," we left Jackson on Wednesday morning by way of the new Yazoo and Mississippi railroad for Bentonla. There friends and conveyances were in readiness to carry the goodly company out to the seat of Conference, some sixteen or eighteen miles distant. The day was warm and the hilly road quite dusty, but the hours and the miles sped by quite merrily. It was strikingly significant, as Yazoo is the Indian euphemism for death, that a mile post should have an outly and very prominent advertisement of "coffins for sale." But it was the simple device of a shrewd tradesman, for the country was quite healthy, and the veteran Methodist of threescore and ten driving our team had lived in that section for forty-four years, and has yet the spring and movement of young manhood. As a successful revival meeting was in progress at Mt. Olivet it was arranged for us to take that in en route. We reached there in time to hear Dr. C. K. Marshall discourse eloquently to an immense and most attentive congregation. Then, after an old-fashioned, sumptuous "dinner on the ground," Rev. R. S. Woodward, of Vicksburg, presided on an effective sermon. Penitents crowded the altar, and joy reigned in the camp of Israel. A call at the home of Bro. T. R. Holloman, where we had the privilege of dedicating to God in baptism the motherless little twin daughters of our beloved Conference comrade, Rev. T. B. Holloman, of Yazoo City, a night under the hospitable roof of that honored patriarch, Bro. Hugh Foster, and a drive of seven miles brought us to Wesley Chapel.

The opening exercises of the District Conference had a clear spiritual tone. The praying spirit was breathed upon all present, and the session began with every token of a Conference revival. At the fore and afternoon preaching services penitents came to the altar and pleaded for pardon. The attendance of delegates was not large, but strong, and the reports indicated substantial prosperity in the several charges. There was pointed inquiry into the spiritual life of the church, and a very candid presentation of things good and bad. Having to leave in the afternoon, we were denied many long-coveted social pleasures. That is one of the very best neighborhoods in the State, and in loyal, liberal, spiritual Methodist Wesley Chapel sits upon a hill that is eminent, if not pre-eminent. For the privilege of presenting the ADVOCATE, and the cordial resolution of endorsement by the Conference, we are most grateful. A night spent with the popular and pious pastor, Rev. P. Howard, and a pleasant homeward journey, completed a delightful episode in life. In addition to the preachers present of that ably manned district, President Rash, of Centenary College, and President McVoy, of East Mississippi Female College, were in attendance. Dr. Andrews adorns the chair presidential, and in secretarial aptness we have known few superior to Thomas A. Holloman.

We append the following resolutions adopted by the Conference:

Resolved, That we are glad to have among us our friend and brother, Rev. Dr. C. E. Galloway, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and once more commend that journal to our people as a religious paper which ought to be in every family in the patronizing Churches.

Whereas, The World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition will be formally opened and proclaimed in New Orleans, La., December 1, 1884, and the Christian people of all parts of the world, especially in these United States, have through proper legislative channels, national and State, made liberal appropriations of money to insure the success of the enterprise; and whereas, We, as a Christian people, are interested in the proper observance of the Sabbath in accordance with the commandments of God and the statutes of all the States of the Union; therefore be it

Resolved, By the Vicksburg District Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, representing 39 preachers, 2,500 members and a population of about 10,000 more, That the Board of Management of said Exposition be and they are hereby earnestly and respectfully requested to close the gates of the Exposition grounds and buildings on the Sabbath.

That was either a large tree or a very small church, or probably both: A single tree that grew on Pigeon river, North Carolina, supplied all the timber for a large Methodist Church in Heywood county, shuttles, pulpit, pews and all. So, at least, a correspondent of the Raleigh Chronicle alleges.

Another Feast of Tabernacles.

Returning from the Vicksburg District Conference on Friday afternoon, we continued southward that night en route to the Providence Camp Meeting, via Hazlehurst. We had long desired to meet the brethren at that encampment, where powerful pentecostal seasons are so frequent and gracious. The meeting had been in progress since Wednesday night, and, though the results in conversions and accessions were not large, the work in the church was profitable and joyous. That is a place "beautiful for situation." The tents are built on the three sides of a square, with the spacious tabernacle in the center of the other side and on the declivity of a hill. The whole wears a picturesque expression more attractive than any other grounds we have seen. The presiding elder, Rev. J. A. B. Jones, and the pastor, Rev. H. P. Lewis, were in charge, and marshalling the hosts with practiced hands. The preaching was pointed, pungent, positive, declarative—no apologies or tilts with the scientists. Each preacher had his heart on immediate results.

On Sunday, at eleven o'clock, there was a Centenary service. After a discourse appropriate to the occasion there was a more gratifying collection. The subscriptions amounted to $730.20, which, with the sum previously raised, aggregated $900. With open mouths we all sang the old doxology. Everybody rejoiced at the liberal thank offering. Nor were the spiritual exercises in any wise unfavorably affected or interrupted by the occasion. A camp meeting that can't stand a good Centenary collection just so far suffers discount. Providence is a strong church of admirable type. The Catchings, Alfords, Bessleys, Normans and Steeles, the latter relatives of the seraphic Elijah Steele, largely compose its membership.

From Hazlehurst to Providence we passed through the tracks of the two destructive cyclones of last year. How sad were their ravages! On the camp ground we met the remnants of several families almost entirely swept away in their restless march. How any escaped seemed quite miraculous. No wonder the people were so nervous about a little storm one evening. Some forsook their tents for places of supposed security.

State Prohibition Convention.

The friends of prohibition in Mississippi assembled in State Convention at the capitol, July 29. The Convention was not full, but the different sections of the State were represented, and by most excellent men. E. A. Rowan, of Copiah, an active and influential member of the last Legislature, was elected to preside over the Convention, with a vice-president from each congressional district. The Hon. A. J. Wadlington, of Yazoo, was elected secretary, and Mr. B. T. Hobbs, of the Brookhaven Leader, was assistant secretary.

The Committee on Resolutions, after long and careful deliberation, brought in a ringing declaration of principles, which in political phrase is "an admirable campaign document." Party politics were entirely eschewed, and the Convention took high ground in enthroning the question far above the contests for place and power. Without regard to party affiliations, all good citizens were called upon to urge forward the great reform. The cause of prohibition is gaining ground daily and intelligently throughout the State. It is only a question of time and labor until the commonwealth is redeemed from the curse of the saloon.

A new and active Executive Committee was appointed, which at once organized and adopted measures for aggressive work. Altogether, in the composition of the body, the business-like character of the proceedings, and the vigor of profound conviction in every utterance, we have not seen a better Convention assembled in that Senate chamber.

Revival at Corinth.

On Tuesday morning Rev. J. A. Bowen telegraphed us as follows:

One hundred conversions. Bro. Sam Jones leaves to-night. Meeting continues.

What glorious tidings! For some days we had been reading the press dispatches from Corinth reporting the progress of the meeting, but failed to get the statistical results. The congregations outgrew the largest church in the town so they had to occupy the court-house. From a hundred miles distant persons came on railways to attend the meeting. One feature of the revival movement in North Mississippi is noticeable and is occasion for true rejoicing—it is taking the towns. The social tyranny, frivolity and superficial religion in our towns are at war with vital godliness, and our churches have felt the baneful effects. They need the old Methodist fire to warm them into active, vigorous, joyous, spiritual life. We are obliged to Bro. Bowen for his thoughtful kindness in sending us the good news, and with him rejoice in the blessed pentecost. Bro. Sam Jones is a power in evangelistic work. He has a welcome awaiting him in all our churches.

Let the Young Men Keep Cool.

The heated discussion now going on in the columns of the Nashville Christian Advocate over the questions of original sin, depravity and the moral status of infants has sent many of our young preachers back to the old books, particularly to the word of God. The spirit of this controversy is out of harmony with the Spirit of Christ and the intimate relations that ought to exist between brethren. The young men are not disposed to take their theology at second hand. They want information from original sources. So far as I know there is not a Methodist preacher in all the land who does not most heartily accept our seventh article as the best expression of faith on the subject of original sin. There are some differences among us as to the interpretations put upon that ancient document. The article was intended to be a denial of Pelagianism, or what Pelagianism was supposed to be. It is a negative definition of original sin so far as the heresy or error of the Pelagians is concerned. This article appears to assume that the Pelagians taught that original sin was the first sin of each individual of the race. It was the following of Adam, whatever that meant. This was understood to be a denial of the doctrine of hereditary depravity of the innate corruption of human nature. In the sense of the seventh article no system that admits the inborn corruption of man's nature is chargeable with the Pelagian heresy.

The article affirms original sin to be the corruption of nature that comes by natural generation—a natural, inborn propensity to evil, to sin. This is called Arminianism. There are some who say that this inborn corruption renders every human being liable to endless perdition. This is denominated Calvinism. Our seventh article is the middle ground between the extremes of Pelagianism and Calvinism. It seems unreasonable that one should be held responsible for that which comes by natural generation. A human being can not be, can not exist without a depraved nature. Original sin is a state and not an act, so defined by this article. It would appear equally unreasonable to place a perfectly pure and holy being in such a world as ours now is. If each one is holy like Adam, and stands or falls for himself, he ought to have Adam's chance, amid better surroundings than the present. The fact is our state in this life is one of the prevalent gifts of grace through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is not the Christless state some suppose it to be. Our present sinful state is modified by a wide expanse of grace on all sides. We are in this state, as we are and what we are, by the grace of God through Christ. It is sheer speculation to say that what would have been without Christ, for without him we would not have been at all. We deserve no praise for our gracious surroundings. Generation without Christ, doubtless, would have been the propagation of a bad order of devils, but fortunately Christ was before creation, and the scheme of redemption was a hidden mystery in the Divine mind and heart before the foundations of the earth were laid. It was a forethought and not an after thought, a part of the plan and not an expedient to meet an unforeseen emergency. God did not decree that man should sin that he might save him, but, foreseeing that he would sin, he before provided the remedy for sin. The possibility of sin was involved in the making of man. Adam deserved no blame for his original state, as we deserve none for our state. These statements are self-evident to most men now. However, the middle men are under the fire of the two extremes. One says, "You are a Pelagian," and the other says, "You are a Calvinist." To a Calvinist all beyond is Pelagianism, and to a Pelagian all behind is Calvinism. The question as to the state or condition of infants is one about which we are now having much controversy, and yet there is no very wide difference between the parties. Some contend that justification and regeneration are concomitants, that they always go together, and that one implies the other, hence they say infants are in a state of "initial justification," and this state necessarily implies "initial regeneration," all, however, a prevent gift of grace through Christ. Others say infants are in a state of justification, are not guilty of original sin, not to blame for being depraved, but they are not in a regenerate state. These do not believe the term regeneration to be applicable to the present state or condition of infant children. If I am not mistaken as to the state of the controversy among Methodist preachers it is more about the proper use of terms than about things. They are agreed as to the thing, but they differ about the name of it. The standard authors, known and recognized as such among us, do not apply the terms regenerate and regeneration to the initial condition of infants. This controversy is, after all, as between Methodists, mainly a war of words.

GILDEROY.

Titular Decoration.

The article on this subject, in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE, by Bro. Carradine, has called forth extensive commendation and commendation. Many letters have been received giving it cordial endorsement. All, of like thinking, will therefore enjoy the following from Prof. E. E. Hoss, of Emory & Henry College, in a letter to the St. Louis Christian Advocate:

We conferred no doctorate, although solicited to do so by the friends of several brethren. By the way, did you ever think how numerous are the pleas used to secure these ornamental appendages? I could almost make Diogenes relax his cynicism, and indulge in a hearty laugh, if I were to tell all that I know on that line. One of the most eminent men in our church asked us to give the degree of D. D. to a comparatively unknown man, on the ground that he was "a man of respectable ability." The president of a female college asked it for himself and added: "Please to let me know early whether you will grant my request. I wish, in case you refuse me this favor, to make application elsewhere." A young man urged his father's claims, specially stating that he needed the honor, "to enable him to face a hostile faction in his Conference." Another presented a friend for titular decoration, and begged the kindness as a Centennial favor. If these degrees mean anything, they ought to mean high character, great ability, profound and painstaking scholarship. That they have been much belittled, no one will be inclined to deny. Can there be anything more ludicrous than the sight of a callow fledgling of a preacher, who makes no pretensions to thorough cultivation, swinging to his name the badge of academic distinction?

Our Colleges Advertised.

In addition to the notice made last week of the institutions whose cards appear in our columns, we mention the following:

Collegiate Institute, at Baton Rouge, La. This honored institution will begin its thirtieth session October 1. Prof. W. H. N. Magrider, LL.D., is a veteran and successful educator. See his card, and notice the special advantages offered.

Sullins Female College, Bristol, Va., is in charge of our old college friend, Rev. D. S. Hearn. He is a scholarly, well-poised, brainy man, with large and honorable experience in the work of education. We take pleasure in commending him to generous patronage.

Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Baton Rouge, is also advertised in our columns. President Nicholson has returned to the professorship of mathematics, a chair he signally adorns, and Col. Boyd, once connected with the college, has been called to the presidency. The patronage is large, and Louisianians are proud of its success.

Alabama Central Female College, Tuscaloosa, Ala., is a long established institution, is amply equipped and is doing fine work. The terms are low, the situation beautiful and instruction thorough. Send for catalogue.

The ADVOCATE for three months is only fifty cents.

Parliament will be prorogued from August 9 to October 23.

Dr. Carter has been attending the Oxford Camp Meeting for some days.

Dr. Dorchester's able article on the "Solidarity of Methodism" has been translated into the Japanese language.

Dr. Redford writes us that 1,780 copies of the Life of Bishop Kavanaugh were ordered before it came from the bindery.

The Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association proposes to erect a handsome memorial tabernacle to the late Bishop Simpson.

Rev. B. Marceon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and stationed at Springfield, Mo., has joined the Cumberland Presbyterians.

The diocese of Nebraska is having difficulty in securing a Bishop. Two selections have been made, and two dedications received. The Eastern presbytery are indisposed to go West even to become a diocesan.

A severe storm visited Oryka last Monday and blew down our new Methodist Church. That building was only completed and dedicated last year.

The Panama canal project is pursued amid many difficulties. Sickness and death among the workmen and the incessant rains have greatly retarded the work.

The words of Melancthon express universal Christian experience when he says: "Trouble and perplexity drive me to prayer, and prayer drives away perplexity and trouble."

The Centenary year is passing away and many Methodists never see a church paper. Brethren, help us extend our circulation into all such homes, and let all the people hear of the glorious achievements of their church.

Rev. J. T. Sawyer, writing from Bastrop, La., says the brethren there have concluded to build a brick church to cost between four and five thousand dollars. This is certainly a building year in our Southern Methodism. The Centenary spirit is abroad in the church.

"The Ecclesiastical Pump" is the title of a new pamphlet by Rev. J. H. Nichols, the author of "The Grub-Ax" and other publications. It is after the Socratic method of question and answer. Of course he completely vanquishes Campbellite, his antagonist, and leaves him not a single line of defense. Copies can be had from the Southern Methodist Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn.

Bishop Parker is at home again after a long tour of District Conferences in Texas. Though in labor abundant he looks well and in good trim for his round of Annual Conferences. He reports substantial progress in Texas Methodism. Amid the stringency of the times there is a real "boom" in the matter of church and parsonage building. At each of six successive District Conferences he had a new church to dedicate.

We learned from brethren attending the State Prohibition Convention that Rev. A. P. Sage, our excellent and successful pastor at Batesville, has been near his end. At one time all hope was given up, and his death seemed sure and very near. But the last reports were reassuring, and we hope his most valuable life may be prolonged. North Mississippi Methodism has no more faithful, energetic and successful man than A. P. Sage. In the very forefront of conflict he has been ever found.

Henry M. Stanley, the great African explorer, has returned to England, and was tendered an ovation on his landing at Plymouth. He has completed the work of establishing traveling stations along the Congo river from its mouth to Stanley Pool, a distance of fourteen hundred miles by river. When interviewed about the condition of Gen. Gordon, he stated that he commands perfectly practicable routes of escape from Khartoum, whether by way of Zanzibar on the east or down the Congo to the west coast, if the Nile is blocked.

North Mississippi Conference—Notice.

The committee appointed to examine applicants for admission on trial in the North Mississippi Conference wish to call the attention of such applicants to the topics on which they will be examined. In the Discipline, paragraph 239, you will find the subjects for your study and examination. Master their meaning, possess their thought and spirit. A hazy glimpse is not enough. Give special attention to "the ordinary branches of an English education." This part of your examination will embrace spelling, reading, English grammar, arithmetic and geography. Experience makes it important to name these items, lest the very germs of "English education" should be overlooked and neglected. Allow us to urge you to lay the foundation well. Do not think that to know God in the pardon of sin and in the regeneration of the soul is all that the preacher of the gospel needs. All kinds of knowledge are of use to him. Knowledge is to be gained by study, and is then to be communicated by the use of language. Facts and methods must be carefully studied. We begin with some of the elements, and urge a thorough acquaintance of these as the lowest test to be demanded for entrance on the work of the Christian ministry in these times. No young man can afford to neglect more or less of literary education as a means of success in that sacred ministry. There is a unity of knowledge in which the spiritual is the altar and the secular is the gift laid thereon, where it is to be consumed in the sacrifice of consecrated use, and glorified by the presence of the life-giving Sheshkinah.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Chair'm.

Centenary College of Louisiana.

FINANCIAL AGENCY AND ENDOWMENT FUND.

To the brethren of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, I would say that I was authorized by the Board of Trustees of this college, at its last meeting, June, 1884, to act as financial agent to solicit and receive funds for repairs and endowment. I shall endeavor to visit as many parishes as I am ready to receive, and request, for all sums that may be directed to this college. I request correspondence with any and all persons who may be able to aid me in this great and important work. I request, moreover, the earnest prayers of our people that the way may be readily and fully opened for the endowment of Centenary College.

At the recent District Conference, Woodville, Miss., an appeal in behalf of the college was made, and the response was very gratifying. The endowment fund was begun by the contribution of two dollars on the part of two little twin sisters, Odell and Ida, daughters of the late Gen. J. B. Hood. Their home is with Hon. G. T. McGehee, of Woodville, Miss. This touching and romantic beginning was followed up by handsome centennial gifts and endowment notes aggregating $3,650, and the amount was increased by some good friends in Jackson, La., to four thousand dollars. This is what has been done at home by very little effort. It is gratifying that the start should have been made by the Woodville district, within whose limits the college is located. This is an unanswerable argument that Centenary College has the confidence and hopes of its own town and immediate country.

Let every Methodist do something, however little, towards the endowment of our only male college. Let each unite in erecting, to the honor of our church in this country, a monument of our gratitude in the form of a handsome endowment fund for Centenary College of Louisiana.

July 21, 1884. D. M. RUSH.

Neely's Seminars.

Mr. Editor: I wish to request brethren who subscribed for Neely's Seminars, at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, to send their present postoffice address, to Rev. H. F. Johnson, D. D., Brookhaven, Miss., who has the list of said subscribers, and amounts paid, to me for the book. Several postoffice addresses were changed by the appointments, and I am unable to give them as they now are.

Goodman, Miss., July 27. S. CAMERON.

Our conferees of the Central Christian Advocate, St. Louis, thus endorse an important movement:

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE deserves the highest commendation for its persistent efforts to have the coming Exposition in that city close its gates on Sunday.

Rev. H. E. Smith, of Carrollton, North Mississippi Conference, writes me as follows:

We have just closed a meeting at Centerville, twelve miles southwest of Carrollton, which continued eleven days, and resulted in twenty-six conversions and ten admissions to our church. This meeting was attended with great displays of divine power from the commencement to the close. We're indebted to Rev. Q. A. Oats, of the North Mississippi Conference, for valuable assistance rendered in this meeting. The brethren will begin the erection of a new house of worship in a few weeks, two miles from where this meeting was held.

Carrollton, Miss., Aug. 2, 1884.

The following is the report of the Young Men's Christian Association for the half year ending July 31, 1884: Number of visitors to reading-room, 9,962; number of visitors to gymnasium, 999; 23 young men's prayer meetings held, average attendance, 18; 18 meetings for Bible study, average attendance, 13; 19 meetings held at Parish Prison, average attendance, 133; 22 meetings held at Buys' House of Refuge, average attendance, 70; 20 meetings held at Alma House, average attendance, 21; 21 meetings held at Police Jail, average attendance, 133; 25 meetings held at Charity Hospital, average attendance, 28; visits made by R. Parker to Hospital, 239; writing material supplied free to 333; employment fund for 10; hoarding-houses found for 18; 5 social entertainments held at rooms, average attendance, 20; 6 meetings of Lyceum, average attendance, 18; new members added, 136; baths taken, 88; arrangements made for 6 persons to get homes; supplied with clothing, 7; meals supplied, 120; tracts, newspapers and magazines distributed, 11,341.

JAMES SHEPARD, Gen. Sec.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—Up to the present time 2,000 persons of both sexes, suspected of conspiring against the peace of the Czar, have been expelled from Germany.

NO AMMONIA!
NO POISONOUS DRUG!
NO POTASH!
NO LIME!

IN
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER.

THE ROYAL BAKING POWDER CONTAINS Ammonia,
Tartrate of Lime,
Bitartrate of Potash.

THEY DARE NOT DENY IT.

Do not take our word for it. Every housekeeper can prove it by this test:

1st. Place a can of "Royal" or "Andrews' Pearl" top down on a hot stove until heated; then remove the cover and SMELL. A chemist will not be required to detect the presence of AMMONIA.

"Ammonia is obtained in largest quantities by the putrefaction of the urine of animals."—Encyclopedia Britannica.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.,
CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE, STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE,
STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

GULLETT'S IMPROVED
CONDENSERS,
AND—FEEDERS

MAGNOLIA GINS.

THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.

The most highly improved Gin made. DOES NOT BREAK THE ROLL in ginning, nor will it choke under the severest test. GINS FAST, cleans the seed perfectly and produces a SUPERIOR SAMPLE of lint. Claimed by those who use it to bring in any market one-eighth to one-half cent per pound more than when same cotton is ginned by other gins.

For further information, address
GULLETT GIN CO.,
Amite, Louisiana.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

DAVER & JAMERSON,
Publishers.

Objection is made in New York to drawing stray dogs, for fear so many barks may obstruct navigation.

The nutritive properties of GOLDEN'S Liquid Bary Tonic sustain the body without solid food. Golden's; no other.

Clear spring water is not more pure than Parker's Hair Balsam. The only reliable hair restorer for 60 cents. An elegant dressing.

A New Haven paper publishes an item headed: "Bolt Sneak Thieving," and yet New Haven is a University town.

Complexions beautified by GLENN'S SUPERIOR SOAP.
HILL'S HAIR AND WIGGING DYE, 50 cts.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

We heard of a man, the other day, who was said to be mean enough to steal a coat of paint. But he can't equal the party who tried to steal a dog's pants.

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate. Cough, Croup, Lung, full dose, 50 p. route, cost free.

"Why does Diana get more beauty than I?" asked the slender sister. "I don't know, unless it is she is a little archer," said mamma, with a quiver of her lips.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal and 18 Bourbon St., New Orleans, has a good Tactile rosewood piano for $125; an elegant new 74 octave rosewood piano for $200 cash; an elegant new piano for $250, or $2.00 a week or $5.00 per month, for the first year; another elegant piano, formerly $500 for $300 cash. Also a large assortment of first class pianos and organs at correspondingly low prices. The Clattering Weber, Mathis, Beckers, Hardman, Werlein, Hale, Schmecker, Belling and Calais pianos. The Mason & Hamlin, Sterling and Day State organs. Mr. Werlein's guarantee goes with every instrument he sells, and he will take all his customers. Immense stock of sheet music and musical instruments. Old pianos and organs taken in exchange, or part payment for new ones. His prices are the lowest, and free catalogues are sent to any address.

W. C. Shopart sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Send the ADVOCATE for your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resort. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents to making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.
Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colic, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most useful, pleasant and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with none more beneficial to the system by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and K. H. TRICE, New York.

Commencing Saturday, July 26, passenger service over Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad will be resumed from the depot at foot of Elysian Fields street. All tickets in the mail collected by the cars as having been repaired. Tickets will further notice will be:

Leave New Orleans..... 10:00 A.M.
Arrive at New Orleans..... 11:50 A.M.
First inland train will arrive LUNDAV, July 27
J. D. SHREVEY, T. M.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARTHUR WACKERBARTH. L. H. JOSEPH
WACKERBARTH & JOSEPH
MANUFACTURERS

Wholesale Dealers in
Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes, Etc.
45 MAGAZINE STREET,
New Orleans.

THE NEW HIGH ARM
SINGER SEWING MACHINE
IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!
—FOR—
Range of Work, Perfection of
Stitch, Ease of Operation,
Rapidity, and almost
Noiseless.

GREAT REDUCTION
In prices of NEW SINGERS for all
Machines and parts for the Singer Sewing Machine. New Family Sewing Machine, 15c per doz., two doz 25c. All other sizes from 15c to 25c. Oil, 5c a bottle. Singer Sewing Machine, 15c each.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Price List! Ask for the new "Genius" Sewing Machine (History of the Sewing Machine).
McCall's Sewing Patterns, Catalogue Free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.
135 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
S. M. RUSSELL, Agent.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS.
SIZES AND PRICES.
Diam. of Wgt. with Cost of Bell.
No. 6, 24 in., 250 lbs., $25.00
No. 7, 26 in., 300 lbs., 30.00
No. 8, 28 in., 350 lbs., 35.00
No. 9, 30 in., 400 lbs., 40.00
No. 10, 32 in., 450 lbs., 45.00
No. 11, 34 in., 500 lbs., 50.00
No. 12, 36 in., 550 lbs., 55.00
No. 13, 38 in., 600 lbs., 60.00
No. 14, 40 in., 650 lbs., 65.00
No. 15, 42 in., 700 lbs., 70.00
No. 16, 44 in., 750 lbs., 75.00
No. 17, 46 in., 800 lbs., 80.00
No. 18, 48 in., 850 lbs., 85.00
No. 19, 50 in., 900 lbs., 90.00
No. 20, 52 in., 950 lbs., 95.00
No. 21, 54 in., 1000 lbs., 100.00
No. 22, 56 in., 1050 lbs., 105.00
No. 23, 58 in., 1100 lbs., 110.00
No. 24, 60 in., 1150 lbs., 115.00
No. 25, 62 in., 1200 lbs., 120.00
No. 26, 64 in., 1250 lbs., 125.00
No. 27, 66 in., 1300 lbs., 130.00
No. 28, 68 in., 1350 lbs., 135.00
No. 29, 70 in., 1400 lbs., 140.00
No. 30, 72 in., 1450 lbs., 145.00
No. 31, 74 in., 1500 lbs., 150.00
No. 32, 76 in., 1550 lbs., 155.00
No. 33, 78 in., 1600 lbs., 160.00
No. 34, 80 in., 1650 lbs., 165.00
No. 35, 82 in., 1700 lbs., 170.00
No. 36, 84 in., 1750 lbs., 175.00
No. 37, 86 in., 1800 lbs., 180.00
No. 38, 88 in., 1850 lbs., 185.00
No. 39, 90 in., 1900 lbs., 190.00
No. 40, 92 in., 1950 lbs., 195.00
No. 41, 94 in., 2000 lbs., 200.00
No. 42, 96 in., 2050 lbs., 205.00
No. 43, 98 in., 2100 lbs., 210.00
No. 44, 100 in., 2150 lbs., 215.00
No. 45, 102 in., 2200 lbs., 220.00
No. 46, 104 in., 2250 lbs., 225.00
No. 47, 106 in., 2300 lbs., 230.00
No. 48, 108 in., 2350 lbs., 235.00
No. 49, 110 in., 2400 lbs., 240.00
No. 50, 112 in., 2450 lbs., 245.00
No. 51, 114 in., 2500 lbs., 250.00
No. 52, 116 in., 2550 lbs., 255.00
No. 53, 118 in., 2600 lbs., 260.00
No. 54, 120 in., 2650 lbs., 265.00
No. 55, 122 in., 2700 lbs., 270.00
No. 56, 124 in., 2750 lbs., 275.00
No. 57, 126 in., 2800 lbs., 280.00
No. 58, 128 in., 2850 lbs., 285.00
No. 59, 130 in., 2900 lbs., 290.00
No. 60, 132 in., 2950 lbs., 295.00
No. 61, 134 in., 3000 lbs., 300.00
No. 62, 136 in., 3050 lbs., 305.00
No. 63, 138 in., 3100 lbs., 310.00
No. 64, 140 in., 3150 lbs., 315.00
No. 65, 142 in., 3200 lbs., 320.00
No. 66, 144 in., 3250 lbs., 325.00
No. 67, 146 in., 3300 lbs., 330.00
No. 68, 148 in., 3350 lbs., 335.00
No. 69, 150 in., 3400 lbs., 340.00
No. 70, 152 in., 3450 lbs., 345.00
No. 71, 154 in., 3500 lbs., 350.00
No. 72, 156 in., 3550 lbs., 355.00
No. 73, 158 in., 3600 lbs., 360.00
No. 74, 160 in., 3650 lbs., 365.00
No. 75, 162 in., 3700 lbs., 370.00
No. 76, 164 in., 3750 lbs., 375.00
No. 77, 166 in., 3800 lbs., 380.00
No. 78, 168 in., 3850 lbs., 385.00
No. 79, 170 in., 3900 lbs., 390.00
No. 80, 172 in., 3950 lbs., 395.00
No. 81, 174 in., 4000 lbs., 400.00
No. 82, 176 in., 4050 lbs., 405.00
No. 83, 178 in., 4100 lbs., 410.00
No. 84, 180 in., 4150 lbs., 415.00
No. 85, 182 in., 4200 lbs., 420.00
No. 86, 184 in., 4250 lbs., 425.00
No. 87, 186 in., 4300 lbs., 430.00
No. 88, 188 in., 4350 lbs., 435.00
No. 89, 190 in., 4400 lbs., 440.00
No. 90, 192 in., 4450 lbs., 445.00
No. 91, 194 in., 4500 lbs., 450.00
No. 92, 196 in., 4550 lbs., 455.00
No. 93, 198 in., 4600 lbs., 460.00
No. 94, 200 in., 4650 lbs., 465.00
No. 95, 202 in., 4700 lbs., 470.00
No. 96, 204 in., 4750 lbs., 475.00
No. 97, 206 in., 4800 lbs., 480.00
No. 98, 208 in., 4850 lbs., 485.00
No. 99, 210 in., 4900 lbs., 490.00
No. 100, 212 in., 4950 lbs., 495.00
No. 101, 214 in., 5000 lbs., 500.00
No. 102, 216 in., 5050 lbs., 505.00
No. 103, 218 in., 5100 lbs., 510.00
No. 104, 220 in., 5150 lbs., 515.00
No. 105, 222 in., 5200 lbs., 520.00
No. 106, 224 in., 5250 lbs., 525.00
No. 107, 226 in., 5300 lbs., 530.00
No. 108, 228 in., 5350 lbs., 535.00
No. 109, 230 in., 5400 lbs., 540.00
No. 110, 232 in., 5450 lbs., 545.00
No. 111, 234 in., 5500 lbs., 550.00
No. 112, 236 in., 5550 lbs., 555.00
No. 113, 238 in., 5600 lbs., 560.00
No. 114, 240 in., 5650 lbs., 565.00
No. 115, 242 in., 5700 lbs., 570.00
No. 116, 244 in., 5750 lbs., 575.00
No. 117, 246 in., 5800 lbs., 580.00
No. 118, 248 in., 5850 lbs., 585.00
No. 119, 250 in., 5900 lbs., 590.00
No. 120, 252 in., 5950 lbs., 595.00
No. 121, 254 in., 6000 lbs., 600.00
No. 122, 256 in., 6050 lbs., 605.00
No. 123, 258 in., 6100 lbs., 610.00
No. 124, 260 in., 6150 lbs., 615.00
No. 125, 262 in., 6200 lbs., 620.00
No. 126, 264 in., 6250 lbs., 625.00
No. 127, 266 in., 6300 lbs., 630.00
No. 128, 268 in., 6350 lbs., 635.00
No. 129, 270 in., 6400 lbs., 640.00
No. 130, 272 in., 6450 lbs., 645.00
No. 131, 274 in., 6500 lbs., 650.00
No. 132, 276 in., 6550 lbs., 655.00
No. 133, 278 in., 6600 lbs., 660.00
No. 134, 280 in., 6650 lbs., 665.00
No. 135, 282 in., 6700 lbs., 670.00
No. 136, 284 in., 6750 lbs., 675.00
No. 137, 286 in., 6800 lbs., 680.00
No. 138, 288 in., 6850 lbs., 685.00
No. 139, 290 in., 6900 lbs., 690.00
No. 140, 292 in., 6950 lbs., 695.00
No. 141, 294 in., 7000 lbs., 700.00
No. 142, 296 in., 7050 lbs., 705.00
No. 143, 298 in., 7100 lbs., 710.00
No. 144, 300 in., 7150 lbs., 715.00
No. 145, 302 in., 7200 lbs., 720.00
No. 146, 304 in., 7250 lbs., 725.00
No. 147, 306 in., 7300 lbs., 730.00
No. 148, 308 in., 7350 lbs., 735.00
No. 149, 310 in., 7400 lbs., 740.00
No. 150, 312 in., 7450 lbs., 745.00
No. 151, 314 in., 7500 lbs., 750.00
No. 152, 316 in., 7550 lbs., 755.00
No. 153, 318 in., 7600 lbs., 760.00
No. 154, 320 in., 7650 lbs., 765.00
No. 155, 322 in., 7700 lbs., 770.00
No. 156, 324 in., 7750 lbs., 775.00
No. 157, 326 in., 7800 lbs., 780.00
No. 158, 328 in., 7850 lbs., 785.00
No. 159, 330 in., 7900 lbs., 790.00
No. 160, 332 in., 7950 lbs., 795.00
No. 161, 334 in., 8000 lbs., 800.00
No. 162, 336 in., 8050 lbs., 805.00
No. 163, 338 in., 8100 lbs., 810.00
No. 164, 340 in., 8150 lbs., 815.00
No. 165, 342 in., 8200 lbs., 820.00
No. 166, 344 in., 8250 lbs., 825.00
No. 167, 346 in., 8300 lbs., 830.00
No. 168, 348 in., 8350 lbs., 835.00
No. 169, 350 in., 8400 lbs., 840.00
No. 170, 352 in., 8450 lbs., 845.00
No. 171, 354 in., 8500 lbs., 850.00
No. 172, 356 in., 8550 lbs., 855.00
No. 173, 358 in., 8600 lbs., 860.00
No. 174, 360 in., 8650 lbs., 865.00
No. 175, 362 in., 8700 lbs., 870.00
No. 176, 364 in., 8750 lbs., 875.00
No. 177, 366 in., 8800 lbs., 880.00
No. 178, 368 in., 8850 lbs., 885.00
No. 179, 370 in., 8900 lbs., 890.00
No. 180, 372 in., 8950 lbs., 895.00
No. 181, 374 in., 9000 lbs., 900.00
No. 182, 376 in., 9050 lbs., 905.00
No. 183, 378 in., 9100 lbs., 910.00
No. 184, 380 in., 9150 lbs., 915.00
No. 185, 382 in., 9200 lbs., 920.00
No. 186, 384 in., 9250 lbs., 925.00
No. 187, 386 in., 9300 lbs., 930.00
No. 188, 388 in., 9350 lbs., 935.00
No. 189, 390 in., 9400 lbs., 940.00
No. 190, 392 in., 9450 lbs., 945.00
No. 191, 394 in., 9500 lbs., 950.00
No. 192, 396 in., 9550 lbs., 955.00
No. 193, 398 in., 9600 lbs., 960.00
No. 194, 400 in., 9650 lbs., 965.00
No. 195, 402 in., 9700 lbs., 970.00
No. 196, 404 in., 9750 lbs., 975.00
No. 197, 406 in., 9800 lbs., 980.00
No. 198, 408 in., 9850 lbs., 985.00
No. 199, 410 in., 9900 lbs., 990.00
No. 200, 412 in., 9950 lbs., 995.00
No. 201, 414 in., 10000 lbs., 1000.00
No. 202, 416 in., 10050 lbs., 1005.00
No. 203, 418 in., 10100 lbs., 1010.00
No. 204, 420 in., 10150 lbs., 1015.00
No. 205, 422 in., 10200 lbs., 1020.00
No. 206, 424 in., 10250 lbs., 1025.00
No. 207, 426 in., 10300 lbs., 1030.00
No. 208, 428 in., 10350 lbs., 1035.00
No. 209, 430 in., 10400 lbs., 1040.00
No. 210, 432 in., 10450 lbs., 1045.00
No. 211, 434 in., 10500 lbs., 1050.00
No. 212, 436 in., 10550 lbs., 1055.00
No. 213, 438 in., 10600 lbs., 1060.00
No. 214, 440 in., 10650 lbs., 1065.00
No. 215, 442 in., 10700 lbs., 1070.00
No. 216, 444 in., 10750 lbs., 1075.00
No. 217, 446 in., 10800 lbs., 1080.00
No. 218, 448 in., 10850 lbs., 1085.00
No. 219, 450 in., 10900 lbs., 1090.00
No. 220, 452 in., 10950 lbs., 1095.00
No. 221, 454 in., 11000 lbs., 1100.00
No. 222, 456 in., 11050 lbs., 1105.00
No. 223, 458 in., 11100 lbs., 1110.00
No. 224, 460 in., 11150 lbs., 1115.00
No. 225, 462 in., 11200 lbs., 1120.00
No. 226, 464 in., 11250 lbs., 1125.00
No. 227, 466 in., 11300 lbs., 1130.00
No. 228, 468 in., 11350 lbs., 1135.00
No. 229, 470 in., 11400 lbs., 1140.00
No. 230, 472 in., 11450 lbs., 1145.00
No. 231, 474 in., 11500 lbs., 1150.00
No. 232, 476 in., 11550 lbs., 1155.00
No. 233, 478 in., 11600 lbs., 1160.00
No. 234, 480 in., 11650 lbs., 1165.00
No. 235, 482 in., 11700 lbs., 1170.00
No. 236, 484 in., 11750 lbs., 1175.00
No. 237, 486 in., 11800 lbs., 1180.00
No. 238, 488 in., 11850 lbs., 1185.00
No. 239, 490 in., 11900 lbs., 1190.00
No. 240, 492 in., 11950 lbs., 1195.00
No. 241, 494 in., 12000 lbs., 1200.00
No. 242, 496 in., 12050 lbs., 1205.00
No. 243, 498 in., 12100 lbs., 1210.00
No. 244, 500 in., 12150 lbs., 1215.00
No. 245, 502 in., 12200 lbs., 1220.00
No. 246, 504 in., 12250 lbs., 1225.00
No. 247, 506 in., 12300 lbs., 1230.00
No. 248, 508 in., 12350 lbs., 1235.00
No. 249, 510 in., 12400 lbs., 1240.00
No. 250, 512 in., 12450 lbs., 1245.00
No. 251, 514 in., 12500 lbs., 1250.00
No. 252, 516 in., 12550 lbs., 1255.00
No. 253, 518 in., 12600 lbs., 1260.00
No. 254, 520 in., 12650 lbs., 1265.00
No. 255, 522 in., 12700 lbs., 1270.00
No. 256, 524 in., 12750 lbs., 1275.00
No. 257, 526 in., 12800 lbs., 1280.00
No. 258, 528 in., 12850 lbs., 1285.00
No. 259, 530 in., 12900 lbs., 1290.00
No. 260, 532 in., 12950 lbs., 1295.00
No. 261, 534 in., 13000 lbs., 1300.00
No. 262, 536 in.,

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending August 5, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	74 60
Ordinary	81
Good ordinary	84
Low middling	92
Middling	10 11-16
Good middling	10 15-16
Middling fair	11 3-16
Fair	11 9-16
Galveston middling	104
Mobile middling	104
St. Louis middling	104

SUGAR.
Inferior	—
Common	—
Good common	—
Fair	41 42
Good fair	44 45
Fully fair	46 47
Strictly Prime	51 52
Choice	54 55
Seconds	51 52
Yellow clarified	52 53
Gray clarified	51 52
Choice whites	54 55
Granulated	61

MOLASSES.
Syrup	—
Fair	—
Prime	—
Choice	—
Fancy	—

RICE.
Choice	—
Prime	51 52
Good	54 55
Fair	51 52
Ordinary	54 55
Common	41 42
No. 2	44 45

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 50
Minnesota patents	6 50
Extra fancy	6 00
Winter wheat patents	6 63
Choice	4 97
Fancy	5 15

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 75
Corn meal	3 50
Grits	3 90
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn:
White	76
Yellow	—
Mixed	63
Oats:
Western	43
Texas corn-proof	44
Texas No. 2	43
Barley:
Choice	75
Hay:
Choice	19 00
Prime	18 00

PROVISIONS.
Pork:
Mess	17 00
Prime mess	15 50
Rumps	15 50
Bacon:
Choice breakfast	11
Shoulders	74
Sides, clear	104
Sides, clear rib	104
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	—
Dry salt meat:
Shoulders	142
Sides, clear	91
Sides, clear rib	91

FISH.
Mackerel:
No. 1, in bls.	14 25
Half bls.	7 75
No. 2, in bls.	13 75
Half bls.	6 25
No. 3, in bls., large	13 25
Half bls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
Coffee:
Rio, choice	91
Cordova, choice	12
Java, choice	22
Butter:
Western dairy	18
New York dairy	18
Country	22
Lard:
Choice	8
Tallow:
Choice	50
Fair	25
Oils:
Coal, cases	18
Coal, bls.	13
Cotton seed	45
Lard	80

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western	3 00
Country	—
POTATOES:
Louisiana	—
Western	2 00
KROUT:
hbl.	5 50
ONIONS:
hbl.	2 25

BALING STUFFS.
12 b.	104
2 b.	111
BALING TWINE:
hbl.	134
12 b.	130

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 50
Young	3 25
Chickens, Southern	3 25
Young	1 25
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
Eggs:
Western	10
Southern	12
Wool:
Lake	154
Louisiana	16
Berry	7
Hides:
Green salted	7
Dry salted	10
Staves:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, casks	50 00
Oak, hogheads	75 00
Hoop poles:
Hoghead	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 50
Penitentiaries:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal	23 10
Pure ground bone	42 00
Marine acid	3
Sulphuric acid	24
Bone black	84

When the Women of the House are low-spirited and cross, the real trouble is probably indigestion and nervous disorder. Don't scold, but give them the remedy—a bottle of Parker's Tonic.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

BATON ROUGE, July 31.—The City of Yazoo, plying between New Orleans and Vicksburg, in place of the Natchez, struck a snag at O. Mary's store, near Brusie Landing, this morning, and sank. The officers and passengers were brought to this city on the steamer John H. Harris and tug Will H. Wood. The Will H. Wood returned to the wreck at 1 o'clock this evening, taking down barges, on which will be loaded all freight and furniture that can be saved. It is thought the most of the cargo will be recovered. The Yazoo had on board 10 cabin and 20 steerage passengers, 39 bales cotton, 624 barrels oil, 6 hales moss, 1000 sacks seed, and sundries to order. The tug Will H. Wood returned from the wreck this evening and reports the work of removing the freight progressing rapidly.

New York, Aug. 1.—The six-story building, No. 89 Water street, the upper stories of which are occupied by two families, while the rest are devoted to business, caught fire this morning. Batholomew O'Keefe, the janitor, was fatally burned; Annie Gibbons and children—George, aged six, and John, aged two—were terribly burned; James Gibbons, aged four, was burned to death.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 2.—Lieut. Greely sat under the trees on the lawn for an hour with his wife, his mother and his children around him, while he conversed with Gen. Hazen. He was gazed on with great interest by a vast crowd around the house. To a reporter, Lieut. Greely stated that he was feeling better than at any time since his rescue. "And," he said, "I am just as happy as a man could be possibly, the only drawback being the memory of the seventeen men who are not here to enjoy the fruits of their courage and devotion."

Sergeant Brainard, in conversation with a reporter, said that the party did not suffer much on the journey down from Lady Franklin Bay, there having been but little inconvenience from cold. "It was when we began to starve, one and all," he said, "that we were all ready to go with them and could start to-morrow, if necessary." All of them look strong and hearty.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The back part of the United States Hotel building fell to this evening without warning, and buried in the ruins a number of the inmates. The part of the building which fell contained chiefly rooms appropriated to the use of employees of the hotel, and it is believed that none of the guests have been either killed or injured. The United States Hotel is one of the oldest structures in the city, and it is said to have been for a long time in an unsafe condition. The building, which was erected about twenty-five years ago, and was five stories in height.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, July 31.—A person who hides his name has presented to the Royal Society a collection of 30,000 volumes. The membership of the Wesleyan body has increased during the year by 3,000.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 1.—The rebels attacked Suakin last night in great force. They lost four men killed, and had several wounded. The thermometer registers 120° in the shade and many cases of sunstroke have occurred among the troops.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—A dispatch to-day from Foo Chow asserts that the general impression in that city is that war between France and China is inevitable. Both natives and foreigners are leaving the city. Marines have been landed from the British corvette Champion, and, assisted by the garrison, are guarding the foreign settlement; that a great panic prevails and all foreigners are arming for defense. All the ladies are leaving and the French consul is preparing to go aboard a gunboat.

China has refused to pay the indemnity demanded by France. The time granted China by France to decide upon the matter is not beyond Aug. 1. A secret edict has been issued ordering the Chinese not to molest foreigners or French civilians. The mandarins, however, assert that the lives of foreigners are not safe.

The trial of the dynamiters at Warwick was concluded to-day. McDonnell, who pleaded guilty to treason and felony, was released on bail to appear at any time if called upon. James Egan was sentenced to penal servitude for twenty years, and John Daly for life.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 1.—The son of the British Vice Consul at Rodosta has been captured by brigands, who demand £7000 ransom.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—It has been decided to establish military pigeon stations at all army centres at home and abroad. Capt. Cahill has been sent to France to Germany to study the system of employing pigeons, adopted in those countries. It is estimated that 30,000 pigeons will be required to stock the various stations.

On an appeal from the Jews of Jerusalem the Sultan has annulled the sale of that part of the Mount of Olives which contains the graves of the Prophets Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi. The purchasers were the Russian plenipotentiary. The burial places of the prophets have been secured to the Jews in perpetuity.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Agitation by the friends and opponents of the franchise bill is vigorously carried on. There were many demonstrations for and against the measure to-day.

TOLSON, Aug. 4.—There were four deaths of cholera here last night. There were no deaths from cholera here to-day. The total number of cases now under treatment is 109. There was one death to-day at Laetone and two at Montfort Durling.

MARSEILLES, Aug. 4.—During the past twenty-four hours there were 23 deaths from cholera. The fact that the swallows which migrated at the outbreak of the pestilence, have not yet returned, and there are no sparrows at all in the city, is adduced as an evidence that the atmosphere is still impregnated.

This migration of birds made a deep impression upon the public and led to the demand for cleansing the atmosphere by houthies.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 170 Grand St., N. Y., for price list of Goodwyn's Baking Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positively free from Alum or any other hurtful ingredient. It not only invites, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

BAKING POWDERS CONTAINING LIME.

Why "Royal" is Absolutely Pure.

Analysis shows the presence of Tartrate of Lime in several brands of Baking Powder placed upon the market.

"DR. PRICE'S" Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.

"PEARL" Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.

"GROFF'S SNOW-FLAKE" Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.

"DE LAND'S" Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.

All BULK Baking Powders contain Tartrate of Lime.

The presence of this substance in the above-named Baking Powders results from the use of inferior Cream of Tartar in their manufacture. The Cream of Tartar of the market, from which they are made, contains Tartrate of Lime in amounts varying from six to ten per cent, and hence these powders contain this impurity as a foreign substance to a corresponding extent, which is of no value, but a positive detriment in any powder in which it is found.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from Cream of Tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes by which the Tartrate of Lime is totally eliminated. This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor, and expense. In money alone a quarter of a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery and appliances by which the crude Cream of Tartar, being procured direct from the wine districts of Europe and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable Tartrate of Lime, but from other foreign substances.

This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing Royal Baking Powder; but, as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care, and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance, and chemically pure in all respects. No lime, earth, alum, or impurity of any kind can, by inadvertence, or by the use of adulterated articles or otherwise, be introduced into the "Royal," and it contains no ingredients except those certified by the Government and other eminent chemists necessary to make a pure, wholesome, and perfect Baking Powder.

It costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other, but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the only "absolutely pure" Baking Powder made.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., New York.

The list on the left is a partial record of the presents to be given to the subscribers of the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE, Sept. 1st. The publisher will pay the following extra 1711 Cash Premiums to its new subscribers, FIVE HILL, DEER HILLS, for the first correct answer, $400 for the second correct answer, and $200 for the third correct answer, and $100 for the fourth, and $50 for the fifth, and $10 for the sixth, and $5 for the seventh, and $2 for the eighth, and $1 for the ninth, and 50 cents for the tenth. The prize for the first correct answer to this question: "Where is the first place in the Bible that Paradise is mentioned?" The prize for the first correct answer to this question: "Where is the first place in the Bible that Paradise is mentioned?" The prize for the first correct answer to this question: "Where is the first place in the Bible that Paradise is mentioned?"

The annual meeting of the Palmer Camp Ground will commence on October 3, 1884, and continue until Wednesday morning following. This camp ground is beautifully located on or near a beautiful creek, with its never failing crystal waters. The meeting of the committee, on the first Saturday in July, was well attended; all the official business attended to. Several new tents are expected to be built and considerable improvements have been done on the public part of the ground, which will make an admirable one for the accommodation for the people that may attend. Preachers and people generally are earnestly invited to come and help us out with this glorious work of the Lord. The tenters (as before) upon taking care of the people free of charge. Nothing said on the ground and during the meeting, except a three-fold, unless some other thing run short of provisions, and that he probably could get in the neighborhood nearer than from home.

N. B.—All preachers coming by rail will please give notice to the secretary, at Summit Hill, Miss. In advance from Summit Hill City in camp ground. This camp ground is about fifteen miles north of Mississippi City. Come every body, and let us worship together. JAMES WALKER, Sec. of Camp. U. W. WALKER, President.

The camp meeting at Mt. Zion Camp Ground, near Beech Springs, N. W. Miss. county, Miss., will commence on Friday night before the second Sabbath in September. Ministers are invited and will be well cared for. M. J. MILLER, P. C.

The Downsville Camp Meeting will begin on Friday before the third Sabbath in August. All ministers are invited and will be well cared for. C. R. COOPER, P. C.

The Ouchit Academy Camp Meeting commences Friday night before the first Sabbath in September. Ministers have a special invitation to come and preach the word. You will be well cared for. A. C. COUET.

The camp meeting for the Trenton Camp Ground, Trenton circuit, Mississippi Conference, will commence on Friday night before the first Sabbath in September. All ministers are invited. We will have them at Morton station, on Saturday morning, with convenience. A. B. MILLER.

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Rayville circuit, Delta district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted strictly on the self-sustaining plan. All ministers and their families will be cared for. Brethren are earnestly solicited to come and help us.

The Chion Grove Camp Meeting will commence Friday night before the first Sabbath in August. All ministers are invited and will be well cared for. W. W. SIMMONS, P. C.

The Lake Camp Meeting will begin on Friday before the first Sabbath in August. Preachers generally are invited. W. W. CAMMACK, P. C.

Quarterly Conferences.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

OPLOUSAS DIST.—THIRD ROUND.
Washington	Aug. 3, 10
Opelousas	36 17
St. Louis	25 24
Grand Chien	20 21
Lake Charles	Sept. 9, 7
Abbeville	20 21
Jefferson	20 21
New Iberia	27 28
Morgan City	Oct. 4, 5
Sugar Town	11 12
Franklin	12 13
Bayou	12 13

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—THIRD ROUND.
Columbia, at Master's Chapel	July 19, 20
Alexandria and Pineville at Alexandria	26 27
Houquill, at New Orleans (Tuesday)	29
Evergreen, at Simon port	Ang. 2, 10
Bayou Boire, at Cedar Grove Co. Conv.	4, 5
Clair, at New Orleans	16 17
Calais and Monticourt, at Calais (D. C.)	23 24
Rapides, at Pineville	30 31
Jefferson, at Liberty Chapel	30 31
Winfield, at Liberty Chapel	30 31
Black river, at Wilson's	Oct. 27, 28
Vidalsville, at Troy	11 12

Preachers in charge will please see that Quarterly Conference records are conveyed to District Conference.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—THIRD ROUND.
Louisiana Avenue	Aug. 3, 4
Haiton Rouge	16 17
Plaquemine and Natchez Co. Conv.	24, 25
St. Charles Avenue	24, 25
Lafayette, at Tigerville	Sept. 7, 8
Carondelet	14 15
Felicity	26 27

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
WINONA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Kosciusko and Durant	Sept. 6, 7
Richland	12 13
Lettington	20 21
West	20 21
Belmont	12 13
Miner City	Oct. 4, 5
Greenwood	12 13
Carrollville	12 13
Black Hawk	25 26
Winona circuit	Nov. 1, 2
Walton and Yalobusha	8 9
Walton	8 9
French Camp	15 16
Newport	17 18
Tipton and Black Jack	27 28
Atala	27 28

HOLLY SPRINGS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
New Salem circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30 31
Holly Springs	Sept. 6, 7
Hill Springs circuit, at Pleasant Grove	13 14
Cornerville	20 21
Hickory Flat at Friendship	27 28
Shady Creek at Rock Jack	Oct. 4, 5
Amelia at Union Hill	11 12
Shaw Creek at Sardis	14 15
Blue Mountain	20 21
Bullala and Victoria, at Victoria	Nov. 1, 2
Rivers circuit	8 9
Marshall circuit	15 16
Early Grove circuit	22 23

ABERDEEN DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Shannon circuit	Aug. 23, 24
Aberdeen station	25 26
Houston and Valley	Sept. 6, 7
Houston circuit	20 21
Proctor circuit	20 21
Oklaoma station	Oct. 4, 5
Elmore circuit	11 12
Bureau Vista circuit	11 12
Saville circuit (Thursday)	12 13
Richmond circuit	13 14
Oklaoma circuit	14 15
Fullon circuit	Nov. 1, 2
Smithville circuit	13 14
Athens circuit	15 16
Vernon and Tupelo (Thursday)	6 7
Prairie circuit	22 23

CORINTH DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Iuka station	Sept. 6, 7
Bonville and Reel, at Reel	12 13
Corinth station	20 21
Corinth circuit, at Reel's Chapel	27 28
Sardis, at Sardis	Oct. 4, 5
Knox, at Knox	11 12
Johnson (Thursday)	14 15
Stiles and Blue Mountain	14 15
New Albany	25 26
Baldwin	Nov. 1, 2
Stockland (Thursday)	8 9
Bay Springs	15 16
Iuka circuit	22 23

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.
The presiding officers of the North Mississippi Conference will please send promptly the names in full, of the several delegates elect to the ensuing Conference, and of their alternates.	J. M. HANCOCK.

The Home District Conference will convene at Libou on Thursday, August 14, at 9 o'clock A. M.	A. A. CORNETT, P. C.
The Alexandria District Conference will convene at Colfax, August 27, 1884.	F. C. CORNELL, P. C.

CAMP MEETINGS.
The Hinson Camp Meeting will begin Friday before the third Sunday in September, 1884. All ministers, both local and itinerant, are earnestly requested to attend. This camp ground is situated about thirty miles west of Alexandria, in the parish of Rapides. The meeting will be conducted on the self-sustaining plan. A portable boarding tent and stock lot will be kept for the convenience of persons attending the camp meeting.	J. A. MONROE, President.

The annual meeting for the Palmer Camp Ground will commence on October 3, 1884, and continue until Wednesday morning following. This camp ground is beautifully located on or near a beautiful creek, with its never failing crystal waters. The meeting of the committee, on the first Saturday in July, was well attended; all the official business attended to. Several new tents are expected to be built and considerable improvements have been done on the public part of the ground, which will make an admirable one for the accommodation for the people that may attend. Preachers and people generally are earnestly invited to come and help us out with this glorious work of the Lord. The tenters (as before) upon taking care of the people free of charge. Nothing said on the ground and during the meeting, except a three-fold, unless some other thing run short of provisions, and that he probably could get in the neighborhood nearer than from home.	N. B.—All preachers coming by rail will please give notice to the secretary, at Summit Hill, Miss. In advance from Summit Hill City in camp ground. This camp ground is about fifteen miles north of Mississippi City. Come every body, and let us worship together. JAMES WALKER, Sec. of Camp. U. W. WALKER, President.
--	---

The camp meeting at Mt. Zion Camp Ground, near Beech Springs, N. W. Miss. county, Miss., will commence on Friday night before the second Sabbath in September. Ministers are invited and will be well cared for. M. J. MILLER, P. C.
--	--

The Downsville Camp Meeting will begin on Friday before the third Sabbath in August. All ministers are invited and will be well cared for. C. R. COOPER, P. C.
--	--

The Ouchit Academy Camp Meeting commences Friday night before the first Sabbath in September. Ministers have a special invitation to come and preach the word. You will be well cared for. A. C. COUET.
---	--

The camp meeting for the Trenton Camp Ground, Trenton circuit, Mississippi Conference, will commence on Friday night before the first Sabbath in September. All ministers are invited. We will have them at Morton station, on Saturday morning, with convenience. A. B. MILLER.
--	--

The Little Creek Camp Meeting, Rayville circuit, Delta district, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday night before the third Sabbath in August, and will be conducted

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 33.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1463.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

RECEIVED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers Adm. price

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FRANK B. HILL.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

PERFECT PEACE.

Throughout the tangled ways of life,
Restless, we come and go;
And, mid our cares, and toil, and strife,
We little quiet know.
But, when in silence, soft and sweet,
Is ended life's short lease,
Gentle as day the night doth meet,
We pass to perfect peace.

Eyes that are closed to earthly sight
Can never wake to weep;
Nor pain, nor woe, nor grief, nor blight,
Can move that slumber deep.
Eyes that to every sound are still'd
Can nevermore be stirr'd;
With sorrow never can be fill'd,
Nor grieve by cruel word.

So hearts of dust all grief forsake,
They never break in blood;
The living hearts that throbb and ache
Our tender pity need.
O, rest! O, calm repose!
Where all life's trials cease,
Thy silver stream forever flows
To land of perfect peace!

Then let us in good deeds forget
The grief that fills our eyes;
And from these days of sad regret
Shut all forgiveness away;
And sanctified life we will live,
With pure and holy claims,
Until, at last, we come to see
All human needs and claims.

And find in them our power to make
The lives of others blest;
So they will wish to hope shall wake,
To scenes of joy and rest,
And whether pathless sleep is death,
Or quickened life's increase,
Its gentle touch is but the breath
That leads to perfect peace.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: Our calm was of short duration. The wind freshened and the barometer went down, and the captain walked the deck as if uneasy. He had most of the sails close reefed, the decks were cleared and a sharp lookout was kept. The ship began to roll and pitch, and when night came on all was dark and threatening. Nothing could be seen a few feet from our ship. Now and then we could hear the voice of the captain calling to the men aloft, "Be alive there, men!" The wind whistled through the rigging, and we dared not venture on deck. I will quote from my journal: "The roaring elements combined with the voices of the captain and men was truly terrific, and, as we went plunging into the mad waves, it did seem as if the ship would be blown to pieces. It seemed to-night was tenfold darker than usual, and the rain poured in torrents. About eight P. M. the whole heavens seemed to be in a blaze of light. Soon a red ball of light was seen at the mainmast and mizen-mast head, and then at the fore-mast head. The electric light was playing from one mast to another, and up and down the chains and from the yard-arms. It was truly a grand sight, for we were completely enveloped in an electric light. The cloud which passed over us must have been very low and highly charged with electricity. In about an hour it disappeared, and we were again left in darkness. The storm was so terrific the captain thought it best to let the ship drive before the wind."

Every day brought us nearer our adopted home in China—to us an untold land—and I thank God that I felt more influenced every day by the Spirit of God to live a holy and consecrated life. There was an abiding assurance of the presence of God in our midst, and we felt that he was protecting us in all times of danger. Were it not for his assurance our lives would have been miserable. I felt deeply for the poor sailors. They have kind hearts, but, strange to say, full of all evil and superstition, and many of them are devoid of all moral principle. They have little regard for religion, and but few seem to think of the salvation of their souls. We talked to them when we could get an opportunity, and that is only when they are off duty. No one is allowed to speak with them while on duty, and especially is this the case with the man at the wheel. Sailors are full of superstition. In bad weather they look upon us as Jonahs, and when it is calm weather it is because we are aboard. I suppose the Christian will always be a Jonah while the world stands as it is. The first officer of our ship was an infidel, and scattered corrupt seed in the mind and heart of Dr. J.'s eldest son, Frederick. I talked with him and warned him against associating with such men; but he said there was no danger. That young man led an immoral, unhappy life in China, became partially paralyzed and about ten years since died in a state of intoxication. What a sad end!

The eighty-third day out, and no land to be seen. Hoped soon to see Christmas Island. For more than five weeks we had scarcely a pleasant day. On the night of the eighty-fourth day the wind blew with such force through the rigging that the captain, fearing everything would be blown to pieces, found it necessary to lie to all night and let the ship drive before the wind. Immense bodies of water swept the deck fore and aft. The night was dark, cold and stormy; but the poor sailor had to keep his watch on deck. Everything had to be made secure above and below. On such occasions two men take the helm and another man takes his station as lookout in the bow. It was a comforting thought to know that we were in the hands of our kind, loving heavenly Father. Though in the Indian Ocean, nearly fourteen thousand miles from our native land, we felt that God was still with us and willing to bless. It was indeed a great comfort to us to know that loved ones in our far-off home were praying for us, and that thousands of God's people were lifting up their hearts in earnest prayer for the preservation of our little missionary band. Approaching near the Islands of St. Paul and Amsterdam, we saw floating upon the water large quantities of kelp, with leaves as large as a common-sized dining-table and roots of an enormous size. From this I deduce is made.

I thank God that this long voyage was not devoid of benefit to my soul. The Lord gave me a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and I longed to have a constant realization of the presence of the Holy Spirit, creating in me an earnest desire for true holiness and a sincerely consecrated life to his service. The voyage was rich with blessings to my soul. My heart continually went out in thankfulness to God that he had brought us thus far on our way to labor among the heathen in China.

The thirtieth day brought us into delightful weather. Since leaving home in Mississippi we passed through winter, then spring, then summer, winter again, then spring and summer, and when we reached Shanghai we had to pass through another winter—all in one year. The sailors all seemed happy. I went often to see them at six P. M., when the cook would hand to each man his pan of provisions and a cup of black coffee. His daily meal consisted of fat salt pork or salt beef ("salt junk," as it is called), beans and "hard tack," or, in other words, dry crackers, sometimes alive with bugs. Jack takes this, seats himself on the deck—for he has no chair or table and no clean table-cloth—and there he seems to eat his meals with a relish. In bad weather they take their meals to the "fore-castle." On Thursday and Sunday the cook gave them a plum duff, "without the plums," as the sailors say.

Ninety-eighth day out; beautiful, rainy weather, and our ship under sail. Sailors all at work, for their work is never finished. Some aloft "rattling down the rigging," others on deck scraping the sides of the vessel, the sparker boom, jib and masts; some are varnishing newly-made rigging, while others, seated on deck with needle and thread in hand, are mending the sails torn by the recent storms. Sailors and passengers all seemed to be inspired with the hope of soon seeing land.

On the evening of the ninety-ninth day out we had a most singular phenomenon. As far as the eye could see the ocean had a white, milky appearance. This continued until the clouds were shut out from our view. We were thus plunged into a twofold darkness. The captain could not account for it, and said it was something that might not be seen again in fifty years of sea life. I thought at the time that it was a fog proceeding from the land; but since that time I have often seen fogs without seeing that strange appearance of the water. There was no appearance of it during the day. In the afternoon and at night there was a dark cloud near the horizon which might have caused a peculiar state of the atmosphere. Some thought it was the presence of animatule, and others that it was probably the action of the phosphorescent light on the atmosphere; but this could not have been the cause. We drew up some of the water, but could discover nothing peculiar. This strange whiteness of the water continued for two evenings, but was always dissipated by the rising moon and sun. I could not understand it then; but now, thirty years since, the peculiar volcanic action which occurred on the island of Java, last year, and so completely swept away the village of Anjers and changed the whole face of nature, I think, will account for it. That white appearance of the water must have been caused by some volcanic action on the island, which produced some change in the atmosphere. It was not the water.

The one hundredth day out was the Sabbath. While engaged in our devotional exercises in the forenoon the words were heard on deck—"Land O!" At noon we were sixteen miles distant from it, and at two P. M. we were abreast of it. It was Christmas Island. What a beautiful sight was presented to our view, and how refreshing to our eyes! It was land sure enough, and all covered with green. It was a grand feast for all aboard, but especially was it so for our little missionary band. Every man, woman and child, captain, mates and sailors, cooks, stewards and assistants, missionaries and heathen Chinese—all gazed upon this spot of green earth as, perhaps, they had never done before upon any other place. Some were aft; some forward and some aloft in the rigging—all looking with intense delight at the beautiful scene before them. We ran within three-quarters of a mile of the shore; so we could distinctly see coconuts and lime trees. Thousands of birds covered the island and sailed around us in great numbers as we passed. It is not inhabited. At half-past three P. M. I preached, and for three-quarters of an hour all present gave their undivided attention. It was indeed a lovely Sabbath, and one long to be remembered by us all.

On the one hundred and first day, about eleven A. M., the cry of "Land O!" was heard. It proved to be Klapp's Island, and, before passing this, Java Head was sighted. At seven P. M. we entered Prince's Passage. The lofty peaks on Java presented a beautiful view, and it did seem to us as if we would never tire looking at them. We had Java on one side and Sumatra on the other. Some of these peaks are three thousand feet high. Every one aboard gazed all day on the lovely scene, and our joy and admiration was unbounded. Scarcely a breath of air all day, and nearly forty miles from Anjers, the port.

Three hours before daylight, Tuesday, August 15, we received a visit from one of the natives, an agent of the harbor-master of the Dutch government. I was up long before daylight, and found we were eighteen miles from the port. We did not come to anchor until three P. M., one hundred and two days out from New York. When light dawned many native boats were seen approaching the ship from all directions; some with sail hoisted on bamboo rafts, some in birch-bark canoes and some in "dug-outs."

Each boat and raft was crowded with men, monkeys, chickens, Java sparrows and doves. They had also bananas, plantains, coconuts, pineapples, oranges about the size of a hickory nut, and many other kinds of fruit and many shells. These people are Malays, are of a dark, copper color and are subjects of the Dutch government. Some of them are tall, but of slight frame. They were the first pagans we had seen, and I wondered if they all bowed down and worshiped idols. Most of them were half naked, for their dress consisted entirely of a piece of cloth around their loins and a handkerchief around their heads. Their teeth were as black as charcoal, for they say, "Dogs leave white teeth." Their teeth are blackened by the use of the bettenuit, mixed with a little lime. Every one we met had a wad of this between their teeth, which caused them to present a very singular appearance. Some of the natives were dressed very oddly in European clothes, and, as they walked the deck of our ship, would present a very grotesque appearance. One man had a dress coat on next to his skin, and a long white shirt outside of that. Some wanted foreign clothes in exchange for their cargo, and, when purchased, would put them on at once with intense delight and joy.

Yours in Christian fellowship,
J. W. LAMBUTH.
SHANGHAI, CHINA, June 10, 1884.

"They Say and Do Not."

The great point in the days of the Saviour was to secure an audience. Everybody was talking at once or trying to do so. Everybody was bored with what the rest had to say. Each thought the others ought to learn somewhat before they displayed their inability. Everybody was right. Yet no one had what would fill the others.

The securing of an audience was the end sought. If men would listen, that was all except to applaud when the speaker was done. There might have been a desire on the part of some really to benefit; but the majority never thought of anything better than the gratification of their vanity or the giving somebody else the cue. If they expected others to do what they said, it was in the hope that they themselves might be better able to accomplish their own selfish designs.

Just at present there is a scramble to "get the floor," or, perhaps, to become conspicuous as a shaper of public opinion through the press. Every one urges his claims. There is an astonishing quantity of self-praise. Some are afraid they will say a wise thing and that somebody else will get the credit of it. Should any one happen to quote it and give the wrong credit, he is reminded place arma Aeneas deficit. "But they do not." I do not suppose that Jesus intended to convey the idea that the Jewish teachers were indolent or idle. They were energetic and full of business. But it was a solemn farce and farcical solemnity. They accomplished nothing either by word or work. Genuine words are a tremendous force. Jesus' sayings accomplished something. Like a two-edged sword they cut to the dividing asunder the joints and the marrow. But how different the rapid mumblings of the rabbi! No quickening soul power, no sin-killing power, vain glorious vapors, foolish questions, genealogies and traditions. They worked in the same way and to the same end. Ostentation, display, feasting, compliments, numerals and ad captandum methods for defraying the expenses of these follies or vices. For in the days of Jesus one of the prevailing vices was the religion as exemplified by the so-called teachers.

Let the church of to-day take heed. There is no time for jubilation. The forces of the enemy were never better drilled or more determined. Let no man dream that he is not needed, neither let the church think she can spare the men, the means or the time merely to have a festive occasion. I remember that a frequent cause of demoralization of the common soldiery during the war was the disposition of too many officers to arrange for balls and dinners with the rich, from whose doors the private, however brave, was spurned. The words passed from soldier to soldier, "Rich man's war—poor man's fight," and these six words were equal to the finest army corps of Federals. Let our talking men do.

T. A. S. A.

Woodville District Conference.

The Woodville District Conference was held at Woodville, Miss., July 24-26. Rev. D. A. Little, P. E., was in the chair. All the traveling preachers, except one, were present, also many of the local preachers and a majority of the lay delegates.

The Conference was unusually interesting from beginning to end. The members of the Conference were in good spirits, and the magnanimous people of Woodville fully appreciated the occasion, and left nothing undone to make it a success. There were large audiences morning and evening to hear the gospel. The business sessions were well attended by the citizens, evincing more than ordinary interest in the various items of consideration.

One day (Friday) of the session was devoted almost exclusively to the discussion of Centenary topics, such as, "Methodism and Theology," "Methodism and Church Extension," "Methodism and Education," "Methodism and Missions," "Methodism and Creeds," "Methodism and Church Purity," "Methodism and Temperance." This day, by way of distinction, was called "Centenary Day." It proved to be the most entertaining part of the Conference. Persons of all denominations were present to hear of the triumphs of Methodism. The entire Conference was undoubtedly the best in this district for many years, and as an ecclesiastical interest the equal of which has never been seen in Woodville.

The delegates elected to the Annual Conference are F. D. Brame, G. T. McGhee, H. C. Newson and George Anders. The next meeting is to be held at Greensburg, La.

The Secretary's Column.

A gentleman who has made three separate journeys to Europe—who has finished a tour round the world—left our office a few moments ago. We were always fond of celebrated travelers and their books. In former years we listened to the lectures of Bayard Taylor and Robert Baird by the week. For two years we have been reading up on all the countries. Indeed there is still a lingering hope within us, that on some fine morning in the distant future, we shall set out to go somewhere. So you may be sure we detained our traveling gentleman until railroad time compelled him to leave.

He was direct from China—had been the guest of Dr. Allen in Shanghai—knew all about the Anglo-Chinese University. The situation is well chosen. The grounds are large and substantially enclosed. The right wing is finished—an imposing structure built of brick. Likewise two or three buildings in the rear used as dormitories. Two small artificial lakes have been formed where the earth had been excavated. Just across the street is the residence of Dr. Allen—large but not extravagant. It is thought Prof. Bonnell will occupy a part of this building. The outbuildings are comfortable—noticeably so. Every dollar of money sent from this country has been carefully and judiciously expended. Our visitor saw no single missionary enterprise in all the East that promised so much as this.

For want of room the school is limited to two hundred students. He saw them all. They are from every part of the empire, and from every circle of society—the sons of mandarins dressed in silk, and the sons of shop-keepers in blue cotton. They all pay their expenses, just as students do in this country. So the institution is self-supporting. Dr. Allen wants the church to finish paying for the grounds, buildings and furniture during the Centenary year, and this we have pledged ourselves to do. Indeed the last payment is due August 23. How will our treasurer feel—what will our treasurer do—if all the money is not sent in? Borrow at eight per cent., and then get censured for it? No, brethren! We hope the funds will be here in ample time to pay the last dollar. This and more. The contributions of the Centenary year ought to flush up the mission headquarters in the City of Mexico and the Girls' College in Rio. We believe they will.

Our visitor was present one afternoon, and witnessed the closing exercises of the school. All present and on their best behavior. The Bible was read. The scholars sang, "Jesus loves me," first in Chinese, then in English. Dr. Allen closed with prayer. In the evening a prayer meeting was held at the residence. The attendance was voluntary, but every seat was occupied. A gospel meeting in one of the street chapels was witnessed—at first somewhat amusing, but afterward convincing and edifying. Dr. Lambuth, the presiding elder, is abundant in labors—traveling, preaching, organizing all the time. Favorable reports from our work in Soochow and Nantzang were also heard.

Our visitor has been connected with the press for the last fifteen years—has made full sketches of all his observations—will be ready for the press in about one year. He was so much pleased with the mission work in China that he promises the entire profits to it.

R. A. YOUNG.

Centenary at Black Hawk.

MR. EDITOR: Wednesday, July 30, was the time appointed for the Centenary mass meeting on Black Hawk Circuit. The committee agreed to hold it at Acorn, as the most central point on the circuit, and selected as orators for the occasion Rev. T. J. Newell, Hon. R. A. Anderson and Capt. H. H. Estes. Such papers as would give information were previously distributed, the meeting advertised all over the work and every family requested to take dinner. In the meantime Acorn neighborhood decorated the church most beautifully, linking by a golden chain Asbury and Pierce, with the motto, "The world for Christ."

The day came, and with it a vast multitude of people and two of the speakers. Capt. H. H. Estes gave to the children a beautiful, heart-searching, mellow Christian talk, characteristic of the man. After a short intermission we were called in to hear from Bro. Newell. He was at home, being in the midst of his old friends and relatives. His subject was fittingly chosen, and it would be useless in this brief sketch to attempt to describe his eloquence. He certainly reached beyond himself. Grandly beautiful metaphors, portrayed with charming emphasis, fell upon the ears of the listening assembly. The indoor exercises closed with a collection of two hundred and eighty dollars, after which we were invited to tables, large, long and groaning beneath the weight of the delicious viands—the very best of the county. Yours truly,

BLACK HAWK, MISS., Aug. 4, 1884.

Genuine Fraternity.

The Rev. John A. Miller, of Haynesville, La., sends us the following, which is gladly given prominent space. It breathes a Christly spirit, and is a cordial tribute to the evangelical power of Methodism.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a note just received from a brother deacon in the Baptist Church, which shows the fraternal spirit and brotherly love existing in the minds and hearts of some of our Baptist friends. I believe that many in this section feel the same, and if it were more frequently expressed it would strengthen the bonds of Christian fellowship. Accompanying this note was a Centennial offering "to the cause of Methodism." He says:

BRO. MILLER: I make this offering: 1. Because Methodism has been an agency of great and widespread good. 2. It numbers a great many of the wisest and best of Christian men and women. 3. The zeal and Christian spirit of its adherents pervades every nook and corner of our civilized land, and is penetrating foreign fields and dark corners of the earth. 4. Many of my most esteemed friends and earthly relatives are members of its fold. 5. My early religious training was much directed by the pious adherents of Methodism. 6. They are in this country very pronounced, and I think lead all other denominations in the great work of temperance reform.

Fraternally, W. S.

In an editorial paragraph the Nashville Advocate says: The admission of the Cumberland Presbyterians into the Pan-Presbyterian Council, at Belfast, shows progress. The present tendency among all Protestant Christians is centripetal—for which God be praised!

To which we respond with a hearty Amen! provided there is no compromise of doctrinal integrity. Ecclesiastical unity let there be, but with clear, distinct denominational convictions. Methodism has lost much by a boasted liberality that has degenerated into latitudinarianism.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1884.

BENEDICTS AND TRIALS.

BY HOLLIS FREEMAN.

Have you never, O heart, a song to raise,
As you careless pass,
In the sunshine bright of your summer days,
Over the sunlit, green grass?
A song of praise that will rise to God,
Through life's sunlit hours,
Over the waving branches, o'er the valley and
And the perfumed flowers?

For so, with what sunshine of luminous gold
He bathes his way,
And, fencing it round with his love untold,
Has made glad your day.
With blessings numbering your path is spread
Without stint or delay,
On what countless dews do your feet tread
As the swift years fly.

Never a song when the shadow of fear
He doth keep at bay,
When into life's cup each trial and tear
He doth count and weigh?
Ah! never one drop in any cup of woe
God overleth not,
Let the brimful draught should our hearts overflow
In joy deep a lot.

Ah! never a song where the sharp thorns turn
The sleep to his fold,
And the heat of the furnace flaming burn
The drops from our forehead,
Then come forth, O heart, from the shadowed night,
Where thou faintest seek,
And lift up thy voice in the laughing light,
And the good God thank.

—Christian Register.

Sumptuary Laws.

MR. EDITOR: In your editorial of the twenty-fourth instant, headed "A Political Blunder," occur the following expressions:

In the Democratic platform, adopted by the National Convention, at Chicago, that nominated Cleveland and Hendricks for the two highest offices in the nation, we find this plank:

"We oppose sumptuary laws which vex the citizen and interfere with individual liberty."

That declaration is sufficiently explicit for the most obtuse voter who has any knowledge of the English language. In its highest commendation, legislative legislation and, of course, allies itself openly with the friends of free whiskey.

Were it not that one of the battlefields of this prohibition war is over this very word, "sumptuary," it would seem to be hypercritical to call attention to the fact for which we beg your indulgence—that it is rather by "reading between the lines" than by our "knowledge of the English language" that we come to the conclusion that the plank quoted has reference to "prohibitory liquor legislation." The importance of the distinction appears when we remember that sumptuary laws, properly so called, are and have been for nearly a century uniformly condemned by all writers upon political economy as contrary to the genius of Christian civilization. So, if we should admit the charge that the laws in question are "sumptuary," we admit ourselves "out of count." But, in point of fact, no distinction could be more clearly marked.

Briefly, we may state the case thus: Sumptuary laws relate to the buyer; prohibitory liquor laws relate to the seller, and are classed among the police regulations of government.

Webster's definition of "sumptuary" is as follows: "(L. sumptuarius, expense; Fr. sumptueux.) Relating to expense. Sumptuary laws or regulations are such as restrain or limit the expenses of citizens in apparel, food, furniture, etc. Sumptuary laws are abridgements of liberty, and of very difficult execution. They can be justified only on the ground of extreme necessity." Worcester's definition reads: "Sumptuary—Pertaining to or regulating expense or expenses. Sumptuary laws—Laws passed by a government to restrain the expenditure of its subjects or citizens, either in apparel, food, or otherwise. (Burrill.) Bouvier Law Dictionary verb. Sumptuary law says: "Those relating to expenses and made to restrain excess in apparel. 2. In the United States the expenses of every man is left to his own good judgment, and not regulated by arbitrary laws."

Sumptuary laws were the natural outgrowth of the austere civilization of ancient Greece and Rome. Hence we find them extolled in ancient literature. So profoundly impressed upon the consciousness of that age was the belief that plain, abstemious habits of life were essential to the development and preservation of true manliness that it was deemed the proper province of government to enforce such habits by authority. Hence, from the fifth hundredth and sixty-sixth year of the city down to the time of the emperors, luxury and extravagance in dress, furniture and food were prohibited under severe penalties. A single provision of these ancient "sumptuary laws" will serve as a specimen. The Lex Arvalia and the Lex Fannia (161 B. C.) restricted the expenditures at festivals, and provided that at ordinary entertainments no other food than one hen should be served up, and even this could not be specially fattened for the occasion.

In England sumptuary laws were in favor from the time of Edward III. down to the time of James I., when most of them were repealed by Stat. I, James I., C. xxv; but a sufficient number continued in force to draw the spirited attack of Adam Smith, in his "Wealth of Nations" (1776), and a few remained on the statute books as late as 1856. Smith says (B. II, ch. III): "It is the highest impertinence and presumption in kings and ministers to pretend to watch over the economy of private people, and to restrain their expense either by sumptuary laws or by prohibiting the importation of foreign luxuries." The Statute X, Ed. III, entitled Statutum de cibariis et gaudiis, C. III, narrates that "through the excessive and over-many costly meats, which the people of the realm have used more than elsewhere, many mischiefs have happened; for the great men by these excesses have been sore grieved, and the lesser people, who only endeavor to imitate the great ones in such sorts of meat, are much impoverished, whereby they are not able to help themselves nor their liege lord (kings ours) in time of need, as they might, and many other evils have happened as well to their souls as to their bodies," etc. So this paternal law enacts that "no man of whatever condition and estate shall be allowed more than two courses at dinner or supper, or more than two kinds of food in each course, except on the principal festivals of the year, when three courses at the utmost are to be allowed. All who did not enjoy the free estate of £100 per annum were prohibited from wearing furs' skin or silk, and the use of foreign cloth was allowed to the royal family alone." Act XXXVII, Ed. III, which was, however, repealed the year after, undertook to regulate most minutely the clothing of all classes, including even the women and children.

In France, by an edict of Charles VI, dinners were restricted to soup and two dishes. In Scotland the Parliament attempted to regulate the dress of the ladies to save the purses of the "puit gentlemen, their husbands and fathers." What wonderful courage these men must have had!

But enough has been said to emphasize the distinction which we deem most important between "sumptuary laws" and those which arise under the police powers of government, such as "prohibitory liquor legislation." Those interested in a further examination of the subject will do well to consult Kent's Commentaries, Vol. II, pages 257, 258; Lab. Universalis Knowl. (Chambers), Vol. XIV, page 78, to which, in particular, we are largely indebted for the extracts from laws quoted in this article; Choley's Constitution, page 483; Montory's Sp. of Laws, B. VII; IV Blackstone, 170; Hallam's Middle Ages, Ch. IX, Pt. II; Encyc. Metrop., Vol. X, page 110; Wealth of Nations, by Adam Smith, B. II, C. III; Reign of Law, by Duke of Argyll, page 324.

The other side of the question—the justification of restrictive legislation as to the sale of alcoholic liquors—would require a separate article.

W. H. GOODALE.

Baton Rouge, La., July 29, 1884.

That "Brotherhood."

Some ministers of the gospel seem to fear that if they devote their lives to the service of the Lord, he will not take care of them; therefore they propose to form of themselves a "brotherhood," in which to repose more trust than they do in God.

Has it never occurred to those preachers who, instead of trusting in the Lord for "food and raiment" (having which, St. Paul says, "let us be therewith content"), resort outside to supplement their support that they make even a worse mistake than these laborers who leave the field of their "boss" (as they call the proprietor of the plantation) to fend outside for a few dimes, and lose tenfold more by neglecting the crop at home? When the laborer sticks to the field of the "boss" he fairs better and makes more money.

Ah! brethren of the pulpit, if the agricultural laborer had better stick to the field of his "boss," "ye servants of the living God" had far better "abide under the shadow of the Almighty." "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shall you dwell in the Lord, and verily, you shall be fed." Be faithful to your high commission: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Devote your undivided time and attention and labor to the vineyard of the Lord, trusting implicitly in the Saviour who said: "Provide neither gold, nor extra clothing, nor weapons of defense, for the workman is worthy of his meat." "Lo! I am with you always, even until the end of the world." "I will never leave you nor forsake you." Why did he give these explicit directions and make these precious promises if he did not mean to let you know that he would take care of you? What else could he have meant? Can you think that he would advise you to not encumber yourselves with the providing of the necessary means of life and protection unless he had intended to have them provided for you? What else can he mean by telling you that "he is with you always" and "will never leave you nor forsake you" but that he will protect you and provide for you and aid and cheer and comfort you in your heaven-born work of saving souls?

The Psalmist gave it as his experience, in the centuries away back yonder, that he "had rather be a door-keeper in the house of God than to dwell in tents of wickedness. For the Lord is a sun and shield; the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly." And, in our day, St. Paul declares that "we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." What more can you ask? "Dianthus all your doubts and fears and cease worrying your lives out and paralyzing your usefulness by "taking thought about what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, and wherewithal shall ye be clothed." "For your heavenly Father knoweth ye have need of all these things." And do you think that "he will withhold any good thing from you if you "walk uprightly?" Do you think that the Psalmist David was mistaken when he declared he would not? Then what about St. Paul's assurance that "we know that all things work together for them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose?" Why entertain any more doubt about your support than about your call? The one was as positively promised as the other was emphatically made. If you do not believe the Scriptures, you had better not stop to "take thought about what shall you eat, or what shall you drink, or wherewithal you shall be clothed," for "food and raiment" and life itself is trash compared to the great interests of the soul, which need your first attention.

Infinitely more than those paltry things. There must be something not right somewhere. The good Lord certainly never intended nor desired that his servants should be so discontented and unhappy. Do make haste and find out what is the matter, and what is the remedy, and apply it speedily. Do you think that the "brotherhood" will meet the case? Do you not think that faith will fill the indolence far better? Is it not your experience that, just in proportion as your love to God and zeal for his cause glow in your hearts, and you devote yourselves wholly to his service, your faith in the Saviour increases joyously and your trust in his providence strengthens into confident assurance that "all things work together for good" to you, and that "no good thing will be withheld" from you?

If all the preachers, in this centennial year, would just only believe and practice "with all their hearts and with all their souls and with all their might" the religion they preach, that one gigantic stride would surpass a century of good otherwise; for then the world would become converted into the Lord in a day.

No, brethren, of both the pulpit and the press, the trouble is we do not have half as much faith in God as we ought to have. We offend him every day in declaring by our acts that we do not believe scarcely a word of his professions of great love for us, of his precious promises to us; and, therefore, we do not have half as much love and devotion to him as we ought to cherish and exercise. Are not our hearts continually whispering to us: "What is the Almighty, that we should worship him? and what profit shall we have if we pray unto him?"

If we did really believe "with all our hearts and minds and souls" the religion we profess, we would not be discontented nor unhappy, nor "living at this poor, dying rate," for our religion is full of glorious realities and rich promises, which it is our exalted privilege, and our bounden duty, also, to realize and enjoy that we may be living and joyful witnesses of the truth of its Divine origin and all-sufficiency for the happiness and salvation of all mankind. Then even Mr. Ingersoll would be convinced and gladly join us, and plead as eloquently for Christianity as he now disclaims against it. The poor, unfortunate infidel is more to be pitied than blamed for not embracing the dry, dull, gloomy, comfortless so-called religion we pretend to believe and practice. "Lord, we believe; help thou our unbelief!" INCOGNITUS.

The Conference Brotherhood.

MR. EDITOR: I am surprised and pained that members of our Mississippi Conference Brotherhood should insist upon extension of time—limit for payment of mortuary dues. The wives and fatherless little ones of our loved dead at once need and should have our assistance. We should not, we can not, shut our ears till Conference against their cries for food and raiment. The mourning widow and weeping children, with hearts crushed with grief and want, cry: "Brethren, help us; for the sake of him whom you loved, and who fought and fell by your side in the very thickest of the battle, help us!" Who, with "heart of flesh," can say, "Wait till Conference?"

Brethren, let us contract rather than extend the limit; let it be thirty days instead of forty. Think of her whose days are dark and whose cup is bitter; think of the little one in desolate orphanage that the father in dying breath committed to your care, and go, continue to go, go day and night, until you find and send five dollars to relieve either the actual wants or painful apprehensions of the bereaved. If you can send it in thirty days, do so; or even in ten days. A speedy contribution to the relief of widow and orphan bears with it an expression of tender sympathy that gratefully and soothingly comes to the bereaved. By delay we lose the opportunity of pouring oil into the wound when it most needs it. I am sure the brethren can get money for this purpose at any time of the year. There is no charge in the Mississippi Conference that does not have in it some man whose heart has enough of sympathy to lend his pastor five dollars to meet such demand.

I challenge the Mississippi Conference on a poor pay record; and yet I have never seen the time when I could not raise five dollars to feed and comfort the hungry and mourning loved ones of our precious dead. Let him who shall be appointed to Dover circuit have no fearful apprehensions of trouble in raising this fee. He will find a dozen men who will cheerfully lend him the money; and, I think, Dover is no exception in this, for all would do likewise.

I was very much pained to know that all the brethren had not responded to Bro. Cooper's call upon Bro. Gilmore's death. I sincerely hope that Jackson district is clear. As a member of the brotherhood, I feel deeply interested in the payment of those dues, and do hope the brethren will pay at once.

DOVER, MISS., AUG. 1, 1884.

From the Work.

MURRAH'S CHAPEL.

MR. EDITOR: This is a new church in the Columbus circuit, located near the home of the venerable Dr. William Murrah, a superannuated member of the North Mississippi Conference, and in honor of whom the church took its name. This writer visited the community last September, when there was no church organization in reach of many of the people. After preaching five sermons we succeeded in organizing with a membership of eighteen. A committee was then appointed to investigate the propriety of entering at once upon the work of building a house of worship, to locate the place of such building and solicit contributions. We were very fortunate in the selection of this committee; hence when we returned a month later we found the question of location settled and part of the lumber on the ground. The house was soon in process of erection, and before its completion we had money enough (the proceeds of a Christmas supper given by the ladies) to furnish it with Bible, hymn books, pulpit, sofa, table, chandelier, etc. They have since bought an organ. So you see we now have a beautiful house of worship, painted and furnished.

Dr. Murrah preached the dedication sermon on the fourth Sunday in May. His subject was, "The Reign of Christ." It was an able effort. The old gentleman seemed to forget that he had lived his fourscore years. We have just closed a protracted meeting at this appointment. It was a quarterly meeting occasion. Dr. Wier, the presiding elder, was on hand preaching to the delight of all who heard him. This being his first visit to this appointment, the people think it hard that our economy makes it impossible for him to be with them in this capacity another year. The meeting resulted in some valuable additions to the church, and we now have an excellent appointment here.

E. G. KILGORE.

COLUMBUS, MISS., AUG. 1, 1884.

STONE, ALA.

MR. EDITOR: Service was held in Hebron Church last week. Rev. B. P. Phillips, our highly-appreciated pastor, secured the assistance of Rev. E. H. Casey, of Brooksville, Miss. In consequence of the farming interest, rain and roads the usual full attendance on such occasions was curtailed. The meeting, in the general acceptance, was not a success. There was only one accession to the church, and not a single conversion. Mr. Casey's sermons were not of logic, truth, beauty and telling illustrations, and those who were privileged to hear him will ever remember the pathos of the sermon on the prodigal son. And oh! the beauty and truth that walked hand in hand in the sermons from the text: "Oh, God, my heart is fixed," and "God is a help in time of need." Then came in his last faithful warnings, startling awakenings from "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." We feel that this labor was not in vain, and, though we can not report a successful meeting, yet the power of this preaching was productive of much good to hearts that needed that kind of preaching. One characteristic of Mr. Casey's sermons is the mercy of Jesus. After Mr. Casey left us Bro. Phillips preached with all that earnestness, zeal and ardor that causes his people to love him as their pastor and trust him as a man of God.

JULY 23, 1884.

WALTHALL, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I am happy to report good success in our protracted meetings. Have held only two, and truly we have been refreshed from the presence of the Lord, resulting in twenty-six converts and twenty-four accessions to the church. I have preached one sermon at each meeting on infant baptism, and baptized twenty infants. Let us take courage and move forward, for God is with us. God bless the ADVOCATE!

JULY 23, 1884.

MARRIAGES.

FATHERSON-DUTTON. At the residence of the bride's father, July 21, 1884, by Rev. R. T. Parish, Mr. W. W. Fatherson to Miss A. Dutton, both of Claiborne parish, La.

WILDER-GIBBS. At Raymond, Miss., July 22, 1884, by Rev. D. P. Bradford, Capt. B. F. Wilder, of Macon, Ga., to Miss E. D. Gibbs, of Raymond.

FAIRRELL-SHACKLEFORD. At the residence of William Smith, Esq., in Caldo parish, La., July 10, 1884, by Rev. G. M. Liverman, Mr. William Fairrell to Miss M. E. Shackelford.

OBITUARIES.

WALKER—EULA, only child of Dr. J. M. and Mrs. Annie Walker, died July 17, 1884. This sweet little child was only allowed to play with us two or three times, and I have a painful memory to grow and bloom, where there is no killing frosts nor blighting winds.

W. S. SHIPMAN.

HOLDINESS—Died, near Shubalak, Miss., at one o'clock P. M., March 23, 1884, JOHN M. HOLDINESS, son of Mack and Martha Holdiness, aged twenty years, one month and thirteen days.

The subject of this obituary was born in Ouachita parish, La., February 10, 1864. In the year 1880, at about the age of two years, he was moved with his father's family to Natchez county, Miss., where he grew up and remained until the time of his death.

His last illness was of some four weeks' duration, and at first was pronounced to be intermittent fever, accompanied by neuralgia of the head. About one week before he died it was discovered that his brain was badly affected, and the last stage of his illness was pronounced to be that dreaded disease, meningitis. He was unconscious most of the time the last week, and lost the power of speech two or three days before he died. Had the true nature of his disease been understood in time there might have been some remedy used that would have saved his life.

The earnest prayers of a Christian mother and devoted sister and brother, and the unceasing attention of an anxious father and the aid of an able physician, together with the nursing of friends, all failed and we had to give him up. It is hard to be resigned to the will of the Father in this dispensation of his providence; yet we know that he is too wise to err and too good to do wrong.

It is sad to consign one so young and full of promise to the grave. "Johnnie" was an obedient son, an affectionate brother and a true and intimate friend. He was truthful and honest. To know him was to love him. He was cheerful and innocent and witty. He was handsome and neat in his person and gentlemanly and courteous in his behavior. He had never made an open profession of religion; yet we have a hope that he is saved. He was beautiful and patient and obedient during his last sickness, and, though he was not much out of his mind, he was not heard to utter even one ugly word. Several times did he extend his hand and grasp that of some member of the family and shake just as though he was bidding them farewell. The several times pointed up with the forefinger of the "beautiful hand beyond the river." We prayed earnestly that he might awake to consciousness and leave a dying testimony, but were denied this privilege. We would have gladly talked with him about his hopes for heaven; but it was too late when we discovered he was dangerously ill, and we could only give him comfort and console his afflicted and heart-broken mother, his bereaved father, his affectionate and devoted sister and his two brothers! We commended him for consolation to the Christian religion. May his many young friends and associates take warning at this his early dissolution and give their hearts to God and prepare for death! We buried his body on the morning of March 25, in Macedonia Cemetery, amid a large assembly of friends and relatives, to await the morn of the resurrection.

A. FRIEND.

WALKER—MRS. MATTIE LEE WALKER. "Our people die well!" that is proof sufficient of our apostolic succession. Mattie Lee Bailey was born September 19, 1861, near Livingston, Sumpter county, Ala.; was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1884, and to the day of her happy and triumphant death, July 15, 1884, lived a consistent, consecrated, happy Christian; kind and charitable to all, not an enemy in the world, always at peace with all, and all mankind. I had the privilege of celebrating her marriage with my friend, W. H. Walker, on February 8, 1883. A long life of usefulness and married bliss seemed before them. They were much devoted to each other. During her illness she prayed fervently for her husband and all around her to live lives devoted to our Lord and his church. She gave every evidence of her readiness to depart and be at rest. She requested that the writer preach her funeral at the grave from her favorite text—"But your trust in the Lord"—which was done in the presence of a large congregation of devoted friends. Just before dying she had the loved ones around her to sing, "Jesus, lover of my soul," to the chorus, "I am trusting, Lord, in thee." She knew her last hour had come and was anxious to go, and said, "I am ready to go, and I am ready to go." "The gates are open; I see the beautiful ships; the angels surround me." After bidding husband, family and nurses farewell she quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

The influence of a life so full of faith and a death so happy and triumphant must prove of great good. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!" Her former pastor, T. A. HOGAN.

BENTON—MRS. P. M. BENTON, acc. Jett, was born in Lawrence county, Miss., December 28, 1813; died July 19, 1884. In childhood she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, but was not converted for several years after. She was married to Mr. W. H. Benton, September 23, 1861. She had ten children—most of whom survive her. They and their father sadly miss her, for she was a true and faithful wife and mother as she had been an affectionate and obedient daughter.

For several years she had been in feeble health, and at times a great sufferer; but in all her afflictions she recognized the hand of her heavenly Father whom she loved and served, and, although her sufferings were not joyous, but grievous, yet, being exercised thereby, they wrought for her an eternal and exceeding weight of glory. During her last illness she was patient and resigned to the will of God. We have good hope that, through grace, she has entered into the rest that remains for the people of God. Let this be the consolation of her bereaved friends and disconsolate children. Let them remember that their loved one has gained the victory. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!"

J. L. FORTY.

CANNON—THOMAS CANNON, was born in Humphreys county, Tenn., March 10, 1810; was married to Miss Mary Howard, March 17, 1817; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1836, and professed conversion some time afterward (date not remembered). His marriage took place in Mississippi. In 1865 he removed to St. Landry, La., where he died surrounded by family and friends. His demise took place March 12, 1884.

I have been informed by those who lived near him that he was a sincere man in his business transactions, in morals and religion, and I have no cause to doubt it. He leaves a devoted widow to mourn his absence; also a son and others to regret his departure.

JAMES E. BRADLEY.

FALCONER—THOMAS P. FALCONER, son of Thomas S. and Mrs. R. C. A. Falconer, of Shubalak, Miss., was born January 17, 1860, and died of typho-malarial fever, at the residence of his aunt, Mrs. Cragh, in Demopolis, Ala., July 10, 1884.

He joined the Baptist Church in 1877, but never realized his full acceptance with God. About two years ago, when he attended a Methodist camp meeting at Andrew's Chapel Camp Ground, in Clarke county, Miss., during which he was soundly converted to God. He was always a model young man, and from the day of his conversion to the end of his earthly career he lived the life of a Christian. He was full of the assurance of entering into that rest which remains for the people of God. His father died, in the war, and he leaves a devoted Christian mother, two brothers and two sisters—one of which is his twin sister, Mrs. C. R. Parker, of DeSoto, Miss. He lived right; he died well.

J. B. ANDERSON.

FLEMING—At a meeting, this day, held by the Female Financial Association, Fayette circuit, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted: "Whereas, God, in his inscrutable and infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from the circuit and our association our sister, Mrs. EMMA E. R. FLEMING, who has been our faithful and efficient secretary for several years, and who in life was all that was consistent and beautiful as a Christian and a faithful co-worker with us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to these dispensations of our heavenly Father, knowing that he doeth all things for the best.

Resolved, That it will be difficult to fill the place of this beloved sister and efficient collaborer in this association.

Resolved, That we sincerely sorrow and deeply sympathize with her mother (our beloved president); also her husband and numerous other relatives and friends.

Resolved, That we request the secretary of this association to furnish the facility of our sister with a copy of these resolutions, and that a copy be forwarded to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

MRS. S. R. DAVENPORT, For Committee.

JOHNSON—At a meeting of the Fayette Female Financial Association, held, this day, at Fayette, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted: "Whereas, Sister Emma Johnson, our beloved sister and co-laborer in this society, Mrs. MARY A. JOHNSON; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, as a society and individuals, we grieve that one so pure and holy in heart and useful in life has been taken from us; and, in recognition of our loss, we receive it submissively from our Father's hand and rejoice in the assurance of the "exceeding and eternal weight of glory," into the enjoyment of which she has entered.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with her aged husband and many children and relatives in their affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the association to the family, to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the society.

MRS. SUSAN R. DAVENPORT, For Committee.

TABOR—Died, at his residence, in East Baton Rouge parish, La., May 23, 1884, ANNE JENNIE TABOR. The subject of this memoir was born in the State of Georgia, 1807. When quite young he came with his parents to this State, and lived until he arrived at the state of manhood near Jackson, La. He was the son of Rev. Beverly Tabor, an illustrious minister of the Mississippi Conference for many years. He attached himself to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, early in life, of which he was a consistent member until death. He was married, in 1837, to Maria Kirshen, of Livingston parish, La., by which marriage he had six children—four of whom still survive him, and one of whom was with him in his last hours. In the year 1855 he lost his wife by death, and in 1858 he married Mrs. Eliza R. Tabor, of Baton Rouge parish, La., who still survives him. He had no children by his last marriage.

Funeral discourse was preached at the family residence by the writer from Job xiv, 14.

A. STONER.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

When the pores of the skin are open by perspiration, the condition is favorable for absorbing into the system any impurities in the soap used which the laundress may have failed to thoroughly rinse out of the garments. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says "The Ivory Soap" is of remarkable purity, and may be safely used for any purpose.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap sold to any one who can get it of their grocer, or send stamps to pay postage.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per week, made selling our goods. Write to J. C. McFarley & Co., St. Louis, Missouri.

IS IT, INDEED, THY PEACE?

Is it, indeed, thy peace? I have not tried
To analyze my faith, direct my trust,
Or measure it by the full and just;
And therefore claim thy peace. But thou hast died,
And know that this is true, and true for me,
And knowing it, I come, and cast my all on thee.

It is not that I feel less weak, but thou
Wilt be my strength; it is not that I see Less sin, but there is pardon life love with thee,
And all sufficient grace: Enough? And now
I do not think or pray, I only rest,
And feel that thou art near, and know that I am blest.

Sunday.

Give up the Sabbath day to keep it holy.—Exodus 16:23. "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath."—Mark 2:27.

The Sabbath is God's gracious gift to a working and a weary world. Night gives us rest from toil; but the Sabbath gives us rest from care as well. It is the grand restorative to the weary; it is a beautiful remnant of Eden; it is a weekly reminiscence of the rest and peace of the paradise lost. Wasting toil is the curse and outcome of sin;
the Sabbath and hope are nearly all that is left to us unmarred by the fall.
Each Sabbath should recall the good God originally designed for us, the good we have lost by sin. Each new given Sabbath should inspire us with lively hopes of the blessedness of the endless rest of which the present is in-some sort, the sample, the pledge and the herald.

It is an important point to settle whether the Sabbath is an institution of divine appointment, and its observance a divinely commanded duty, or whether it is a part of the Jewish ritualistic system, and only meant to be of local application and temporary use. It was as much commanded as any other command in the sacred decalogue, and there is no more evidence to believe it was local and temporary than is the obligation to refrain from perjury and speak the truth. This fourth command, like the other nine, was engraved by the finger of God on the tables of stone, while the things merely ritualistic were written on parchment, thereby expressing the perpetuity of the decalogue and the temporary obligation of the ritual. The ritualistic system could be abolished without disturbing civil or social order; not so with the ten commandments; not one of them can be abolished and universally disregarded without the most widespread disaster to civil and social order. The notion that the decalogue, or any part of it was temporary, is too improbable to be entertained.

The fact that the prophets, through all the ages of the Jewish national history commanded, the holy remembrance of the Sabbath, and severely rebuked its desecration, the fact that Christ observed it, and his disciples observed it, is proof of its perpetual obligation.

We now keep (and all the Christian church has kept from primitive times)
the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ.
This usage and this commemoration is of apostolic origin and authority, and is therefore binding.

Let us proceed to consider its observance. As it is to be kept holy, it is to be observed differently from the six secular days. In these six days we are "commanded to labor and do all our work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord our God, in it we are to do no work. The Saviour taught the Sabbath was made for man, and by example taught that works of charity and necessity might be innocently performed.
But the Sabbath is not a secular day,
it is not a day for labor, for business,
for getting gain; but it is rather a day for bodily rest, for domestic joy and devotion. Individuals and corporations should not be licensed and allowed to pursue their secular callings beyond what may be imperatively necessary. All farm work, building, buying, manufacturing and needless transportation and travel should be forbidden on the day of rest. To the rich and confidential classes, the domestic pleasure, the rest and refreshment of the first day of the week may seem comparatively important, but to the toiling millions who must earn their bread by the sweat of their brows the weekly rest is a boon of priceless value. It promotes health, it prolongs life, it enlivens cheerfulness by rolling off for a day the burdens and cares of life.
It increases our enjoyment and love of home, and with it our love of country.
It is a matter of profound regret to every Bible patriot in our wide land that the sanctity and rest of the Sabbath is being more and more invaded and disregarded. The vast influx of Europeans, who in their own countries devote the Sabbath to all sorts of secu-larities, is the immediate cause of this increasing Sunday laxness, and increased Sunday desecration, and increased Sunday dissipation and crime.
If this condition of things continues and grows it will result in the practical an-nullification of the blessedness of the day of rest and devotion, or it will rouse Sabbath lovers from ocean to ocean, and from Alaska to Mexico, to organize a great native party who will imperatively and potentially demand the observance of the first day of the week as a day of rest. There are millions of hard and overworked employees who will hail with delight the organization of such a party, and through by tens of thousands to uphold its peaceful banners and insist on its impartial and reasonable demands.

The whole system as it prevails in Louisiana, of licensing individuals and corporations to pursue all sorts of secular callings on Sundays, is scripturally wrong and detrimental to the public good, and ought to be abolished. In New Orleans there are fourteen public markets open on Sunday. That this is totally unnecessary is demonstrated by the fact that other Southern cities got on comfortably well without Sabbath markets, and from the fact that many families in New Orleans, representing all classes, never go to market on Sunday, and live as well and have as good cheer as those who do. There are in New Orleans hundreds, if not thousands, of "family groceries" open each Sabbath.
That this is needless is proved by the fact that other Southern towns and cities get on without this Sunday buying and selling. Our grocers do not sell a pound or quart more, and do not make a dollar more by this system. The people of other States, and of other towns and cities, eat and drink as much as do the same classes in New Orleans and other Louisiana towns.

Then we allow horse races, theatricals, shows, sports, gaming, and all sorts of demoralizing amusements, until in this regard New Orleans is a byword of reproach. Population is kept down by non-immigration, and we are kept poor by non-investment of capital from outside of our State.

The age in which we live, and the wonderful inventions and improvements have done away with the excuse for Sunday desecrations and secularities, which former and less favored ages might have urged. There is no need for Sunday travel now. We can leave New Orleans on Monday, and be in Mexico, in California, or Montreal by Saturday evening. If business demands greater dispatch, we have the electric mail service, and can send and receive messages to or from almost any part of the world in one or two days.
By ice factories we can be supplied at a small cost with ice for the preservation of any edible commodity for twenty-four hours.

But look at the wrong and oppression of this secularizing the Sabbath. There are a half million of able-bodied young men in railroad service, at least a quarter of a million of these young men are kept at work three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. No recreation, no home rest in the bosom of their families, no opportunity of public worship, and for all this toil and discoun-fort not a dollar of additional pay, but a simple forced gift of fifty-two days, nearly two months of hard labor to rich corporations. Let some of our rich stewards, vestrymen, deacons, and ruling elders, who are stockholders, turn this matter over as they sit in their softly cushioned pews and devoutly sing:

"Sweet is the day of sacred rest,
No mortal cares shall seize my breast."
How about those thousands of hard-worked men forced by the needs of their families to accept your exacting conditions? Alas! they can not sing:
"This is the day which God hath blessed,
The brightest of the seven."

No; it is as other days to them—full of care and toil. Think of the thousands in the markets, groceries, drain saloons, confectionaries, fruit stands, and multitudes who have no
"sweet Sabbath of rest." Nothing to remind them that they have been made in the image of God. Nothing to tell them that they are making character and shaping destiny. Nothing to point "to fairer worlds on high," and tell them they may be the heirs of the fruitions of life eternal. Let all who may be concerned, remember that God shall bring every work into judgment, that each one of us must give an account of himself to God.

Let us just here consider some of the material and economic aspects of the day of rest. There are, perhaps, a large number who, though willing to admit that the Sabbath is religiously and morally a useful institution, think it is nevertheless a business hindrance and a financial loss. A little examination will show that this is a hasty and mistaken conclusion. 1. Physiologists, who have carefully investigated the sanitary effects of the weekly rest, have said that the repose and freedom of Sunday is necessary to restore "the balance of the circulation," as it is technically called, which has been perturbed and disturbed by the strain of six days work. The rest of the night is not quite sufficient. The rest of the Sabbath is a savings bank—a reserve corps of human strength and health.
The man who habitually works seven days in the week is burning his life candle at both ends, it must rapidly consume. 2. Actual experiments have demonstrated that oxen and horses will last longer and do better and more profitable work that rest one-seventh of their time. So sheep and cattle driven to market over a long distance, if rested a seventh part of the time will reach their destination sooner and in a more saleable condition than those allowed no such rest. 3. This holds true in its application to laboring men;
those who rest a seventh of their time have better health, better spirits, and do better work than those who do not enjoy this recuperative rest. In large manufacturing establishments, where fine articles are fabricated that require delicate and careful handling, it is no doubt better goods are turned out in the first days of the week than at a later period, because attention flags with continuous application, and the muscles tire and stiffen with prolonged labor. 4. It is said experiments have shown that students who rest from their studies on Sunday are so rejuvenated and refreshed that they can do more and better intellectual work than those who take no such rest. 5.

I have been told by sugar planters, (who were not church members,) that sugar making on Sundays was a pestilence instead of a gain. That at the end of three months grinding, of unceasing labor day and night, there was a general exhaustion of strength, of carefulness, and close attention, and breakdowns, and losses resulting from this system, lost more than was gained.

The Sabbath is the laboring man's short reprieve from his lot of toil, and raises him, at least for one-seventh of his time, to the more comfortable level of the leisure classes. This rest gives him what the constant toil of six days had denied him, the joys of social and domestic intercourse. The Sabbath promotes cleanliness, health and order.
It elevates, refines and humanizes the hard-handed sons of toil. Now the man for one day is clearly, if not naturally, attracted. He sits at the table with his wife and children; he feels like a man, a husband and a father. In winter time the chat with his wife and children is around the fireside; in summer in the green fields and under the shade of the trees. He has some leisure for reading, and an opportunity for public instruction and worship.

We know that the entry of many is for more pic-nics, excursions and various sensual amusements. On this point we wish to submit two remarks:
1. These pic-nics, shows and amusements, lead to greater expenses than the masses can wisely, in view of other claims, safely incur. Then they are generally lacking in restfulness, and parties come back more weary than when they went out. Some how these shows, games and amusements must always have connected with them drinking and some sort of betting.
The moral effect, especially on the young, of these scenes and associations is not good. Next we have to observe in the words of President Washington in his "farewell address" to his countrymen: "Good government can not exist without morality, and morality is powerless without the sanctions of religion." Public worship, as the public recognition of God, and his claims on us, and our obligations to him, is essential to the maintenance of religion among the masses of men. Without it the light would grow dimmer, and the force weaker, until the multitude would drift fair towards atheism.
Civilization could not be maintained;
civil and social order would fail. But these manifold amusements and occupations of time on the Sabbath leave no time and no repose for worship, and their certain trend is towards the elimination of public worship from the habit and usage of men. The religious observance of the weekly rest is one of the strongest bulwarks against atheism and immorality. Robert Dale Owen, in his debate with Alexander Campbell, said skeptics never would have a fair showing, or any reasonable chance for success, as long as weekly worship and pulpit teaching continued.
Let those of us who love our holy religion, and love the best interest of our families and our country, hear Owen's significant words in mind.

Allowing man to be immortal, and this life a probationary state, a state of preparation for the tremendous awards of eternity, public worship assumed a significance whose importance can not be overstated. It brings men together not as rich or poor, as learned or un-learned, as high or low in civil or social station, but as the creatures of God, as the common Father and final Judge of all men. It brings us together upon the same moral level, as alike needing salvation, and as having been redeemed by the same precious blood.
Public worship is educative and sanc-tifying. It lifts us up to the contemplation of things divine and eternal; separating us for a season from our fields, our shops, our offices and our home cares, and raising us above the more material needs of our earthly being. It tends to make us wise unto salvation, and plunges us with the greatest of all motives, stir and prompts us to duty in the direction of the grandest of all concerns.

Physicians and students of mental science have said the most useful thing for a flagrant and weary mind is to turn from its exhausting work to something as disimilar as possible.
If this is true, then worship is more restful and recuperating than any of the amusements and distractions to which men resort. All these things have a certain earthliness and affinity to the material aspects of life; but the worship of God in the sanctuary is in every way separated from common life. The place, the house of God, unlike any other house in its new; the assembly, unlike any other in its purpose, to worship; then the lessons and exercises of the place. The book of God is read, which says more about God than any other subject, and more than any other book. The songs are less worldly, more spiritual and divine than any other songs. The prayers are an attempt to have audience and hold communion with God. Then the preached word is a lesson of instruction about some doctrine, some duty, some sin, or some promise, or some hope, all in relation to spiritual, holy and heavenly things. Altogether, nothing else is so complete a change of thought and occupation. If this is the best for the mind, then nothing is equal to worship in this respect. The Sabbath then is to be prized and cherished not only as a rest to tell worn bodies, but to care worn and weary minds.

The sum of what we have written is this, God has ordained the Sabbath and commanded its observance from the days of Moses to Christ. Christ and his disciples observed it. Under the gospel dispensation the Sabbath was changed from the seventh to the first day of the week to commemorate the resurrection of Christ, who rose on the first day of the week, and only met his disciples on that day. The inspired apostles and founders of the churches observed the first instead of the seventh day of the week. The disregard of the day of rest is hurtful to health, and shortens life. It is cause of dissipation and crime, and only needs to be universal to destroy worship, and with it religion and morals make good government and civil society impossible among a free people.

But the observance of the day of rest promotes health, cheerfulness, self-respect, domestic happiness, love of country, good morals and true religion. If we accept these conclusions, every consideration of interest and duty should prompt us to the faithful maintenance and religious remembrance of the "Lord's Day."

Woman's Work in Texas.

Mr. Editor: I have seen but few reports from the Woman's Missionary Society of Texas in your paper, and think some of your readers, who do not take the Woman's Missionary Advocate, would like to know how "Woman's Work for Woman" is progressing in the "Lone Star State." I have decided to tell you what we are doing at this place for missions. Our Woman's Missionary Society has been organized two years this month, and we now have seventy-four members. We had an interesting and very successful public meeting last night. Received twenty members, and raised nearly the entire sum of money that was promised by our Conference delegate to defray the expenses of Miss Hamilton, who goes from the Texas Conference to China.

The members are prompt in paying their dues, and donations are frequently made. We have a live church at this place; our pastor, E. C. DeJournet, is a worker, and consequently the people work. A neat parsonage has just been completed.

The Ladies Aid Society is in active operation. This society has cleared $140 this year, and this has added much to the comfort and beauty of our church. Our hearts were saddened last week by an accident which befell our pastor while attending District Conference at Dexter. He fell from a burning house and was seriously hurt, but we are hoping and praying that he may be restored to his soon.

Five years ago in Hazelhurst, Miss.,
I joined the Woman's Missionary Society, and it has ever proved a blessing to me. What a glorious field of usefulness is this for woman, for united with this noble band of workers we may remain at home, and by casting in our pennies from time to time, and by our influence combined, lo! we have a mighty torrent of good, which will sweep away the mists of heathen darkness. Let us not grow weary in this noble cause because we are feeble; let us remember that in "Unity there is strength," and we think in the great day to come some of us will be surprised to find, by the blessing of God, what wondrous things our pennies and our prayers have done. With best wishes for you and your excellent paper, I am, Respectfully,

LORETTA BARNES, Sec.

DECATUR, TEXAS, July 25, 1884.

Religious Intelligence.

—Of a Turk, who a year and a half ago became an avowed Protestant, a missionary says: "He is a quiet man, of very pleasant countenance. In his examination he was asked what he should do if persecution arose and he had to choose between death with Christ, and life and prosperity with Mohammedanism. His quiet answer was, 'Death with Christ.' But," said the questioner, "remember, it may be persecution, torture and cruel death."
Then, said he, "I go towards Christ."
This Turk has contributed $4 to the building fund.

—Bishop Whipple, when on a recent visitation to the Indian department of his missionary diocese, administered the communion to 27 Chippewa Indians. Fifteen years ago there was scarcely one communicant among them. There is one full-blooded Indian priest and seven deacons in the church mission to the Chippewa or Ojibway Indians in Minnesota. There are eight churches in Chippewa mission. One just being built will cost $10,000.

—Large numbers of the Esquimaux
It is said, are leaving their native land and settling in Alaska. The Mornavians, who have so long and so nobly cared for the spiritual interests of Greenland, are taking steps to follow these emigrants to their new sphere, and to provide them with gospel privileges.

—In Philadelphia there are 552 Sunday-schools, with a total membership of 163,681, and an average attendance of 123,312. These schools have given during the past year 2,779 scholars to the communicant membership of the churches, and have contributed $55,- 394 32 to purely benevolent causes.

—Dr. Sarah L. Woltraub, who recently sailed from Philadelphia as a medical missionary to Damascus, was born in Jerusalem twenty-three years ago, and speaks Arabic fluently, as well as English, German and French.
She has been thoroughly educated in this country.

Our Young People.

OUR MOTHER.

Hundreds of stars in the pretty sky;
Hundreds of shells on the shore together;
Hundreds of birds that go singing by;
Hundreds of bees in the sunny weather.
Hundreds of dewdrops to greet the dawn;
Hundreds of lambs in the purple clover;
Hundreds of butterflies on the lawn;
Not only one mother the wide world over!

Our Boys.

DEAR BOYS: Willful murder, above all other sins, is one that God really begins to punish men for in this life.
The original law on this subject, as given to Noah, is, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man." This subject is often referred to in the eternal laws given to Moses and in every instance the death penalty is annexed. Under a loose administration of law, and by various legal tricks, backed with plenty of money, the mur-derer may escape public execution, but he can not escape the avenging justice of God. Sooner or later it will overtake him in one form or another. The unalterable decree of God is, "He that sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." I have never known murder to be as common in our country as it seems to be now. As in the days of Ezekiel, "The land is full of blood," and as Hosea saith, "Blood toucheth blood." Yes, blood treadeth on the heels of blood all over this country. We can scarcely pick up a newspaper without seeing that a murder has just been committed somewhere. Highway men murder innocent travelers in order to rob them of what little money and other valuables they may have on hand. But the most of the murders we see published in the papers seem to originate in whisky, pistols and dirk knives. Men get excited with whisky, and begin to quarrel about little or nothing, and the next thing is to flit out a pistol or dirk knife and go to killing each other. By unheeded witnesses and plenty of money they may escape the penalty of our badly administered criminal laws, but they can not escape the justice of God. The mur-derer is doomed to a life of bitter remorse, and an early, if not tragical death. God is the avenger of all such.
Now, boys, the best way to keep from killing or being killed is to be a true Christian, that you may "Dwell in the secret place of the Most High and abide under the shadow of the Almighty," who can protect you from the violent man. The next best chance is to drink no whisky; carry no deadly weapons on your person, and never quarrel with any body. If others begin to quarrel with you do not quarrel back, but silently turn round and walk away determined to avoid such a person as you would avoid an ill-natured and snappish dog. "Go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away: for they sleep not, except they have done mischief."

J. G. JONES.

HAZELHURST, MISS., July, 1884.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl fourteen years old. I live with my brother in the nice new parsonage at Greenwood, Miss. My father and mother live near Raleigh, N. C. My grandpa Stuart lives near Carthage, N. C. My brother went home to see them all in March. When he came back to Mississippi he brought me with him. I saw many strange things on the way here, especially at Atlanta, Ga. When we got here the land was soon all covered with water, and I thought we had come from the mountains to the sea. I found the answers to Mattie Gibson's questions, but will not give them, as C. F.
McCruey has answered them first. He made one mistake. "Coffin" is first mentioned in Gen. 1, 26, and not xlix, as he said. I will answer his questions: Goliath was the Philistine's champion. "Artillery" is found in I
Sam. xx, 40. "Partridge" is found in
I Sam. xvi, 20; also in Jer. xli, 11.
We are going to build a Methodist Church here as our Centenary offering.
Your little friend,

GREENWOOD, Mississippi.

MAUDIE OATS.

Mr. Editor: As only three little letters were in the Advocate of July 24, I concluded that you had published all you had on hand, and hope you will find room for this. I enjoy the aerobics, and will send one. The answer to it is the name of our dear pastor.

1. Abraham's wife.
2. The first man created.
3. Samson's father.
4. A son of Abimelech.
5. A famous river of Asia.
6. First word of Psalms cxli.
7. Term of seven days.
8. Youngest son of Noah.
9. Fifth book in the New Testament.
10. That which is paid to rulers in token of subjection.
11. Son of Methuselah.
12. An ornament for the ear.
13. Woolen thread.

Your true friend,

BIO CASE, Louisiana.

ROSA MIXER.

Mr. Editor: I thought I would write you a little letter, as I see so many nice letters from the boys and girls. My grandma takes your good paper, and I like so much to have the letters read to me. I am a little girl eight years old. I have a little sister older, and a little brother younger than myself. We do not go to school, as we live too far to walk, but we say lessons to my mamma. I will not write a long letter, as it is my first. This letter will surprise my mamma and grandma very much, as they do not know that I have written to your good paper. I will close with many good wishes for the Advocate.

Yours little friend,

MARY T. MIXSON.

SCHWEDESBURG, Alabama.

Mr. Editor: I will write to the children's column, as I have never written before. I have not seen a letter from any of the little folks in a long time, and I thought I would try to answer some of Norman Davidson's questions:
"With what priest did Samuel live?"
He lived with Eli. The answer is found in I Sam. 1, 25. The names of the priests two sons were Hophni and Phinehas. It is found in I Sam. 1, 3.
"How did they die?" They were slain in battle. It is found in I Sam. iv, 11.
Will any of our little friends answer
this question: What was David's father?
Hoping that you will allow my first letter a small space in your dear paper,
I remain, Your little friend,

CANTON, Mississippi.

A. G. FORD.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl ten years old. I read a letter in your good paper to-day (July 29) from a Sunday-school mate of mine, M. Thornburg. I will answer her questions: The word
"plus" is found in Exodus xxvii, 19;
xxxv, 18; xxxviii, 20, 31; xxxix, 40.
Numbers iii, 37; iv, 32. The word
"water-pots" is found in St. John ii, 6,
7. I will now ask just one question:
Where in the Bible does it say, "Iron did swim." I have such a good, kind teacher. This is my first letter to your paper, so I hope you will not throw it in the waste-basket.

Yours little friend,

ANNIE E. MONTGOMERY.

NATCHEZ, Mississippi.

A MONKEY'S FEAR OF FIRE-ARMS.—
He was greatly frightened at a gun that I shot off one day at some sparrows. He hid at once in the straw of his cage, and never left it till the gun was hung up again. After that I had only to touch the stick, to make him hide again, when nothing could be seen in the straw, except a pair of sharp eyes watching all my motions. Just a touch of my finger or of a cane upon the cock of the gun was enough to deprive him of all quiet. I used to carry on my watch-chain a little pistol, on which a permission-cap would make a tolerably good report. The monkey had not yet found this out, and, sitting on my knees, would amuse itself with licking the silver barrel. One day in his presence I put a permission-cap on the nipple of the pistol. The monkey observed my movements with great attention, but without seeming disturbed by them. But when the cock, being raised, made two clicks, Molly dropped his eyebrows, while he continued sitting quietly. When the explosion took place, his fright was unbounded. Crying loudly, and full of anguish, he felt from my knees, ran across several rooms, leaped out of the window, clung to a water-pipe, slid down to the street and hid himself in a ditch in a neighboring garden. His nervousness lasted a long while, and I had to take off my watch-chain to appease it. From that day he was in such fear of the little pistol that to take hold of the chain was enough to make him disappear in the straw. But he very soon learned by experience that the source of the detenation was not in the chain but in the pistol, and could easily distinguish it from the other appendages of the chain, of which he was not afraid at all. Sitting on the straw in his cage, he would attentively watch my movements while I was handling these appendages. The closer my fingers approached the formidable object, the greater became his anxiety, and with his eyes riveted upon the instrument and with tense ears, he would dance continuously in the cage, all ready to go under the straw. He would assure himself beforehand, for greater security, that the cage-door was well shut; and one day, when the bolt had not been pushed in, he leaped out from the cage, which did not seem safe enough for him, and went and hid himself under the bed in the next room.
As I gradually removed my hand from the pistol, I would receive chuckles of approbation; and, with his lips pushed forward and the muscles of his ear moving by jerks, he would manifest a very great joy.—M. J. Fischer, in Popular Science Monthly.

OUR HISTORIAN.—George Bancroft, the historian, has done a large amount of work with his pen and brains, yet he is a hale, hearty man, just thirteen years ago, passed the psalmist's limit.
A Washington correspondent thus writes of the old man:

George Bancroft is now eighty-three years old, and he still continues his long, hard rides every afternoon of his life. He told me that he was feeling well, and it was he who would make out his hundred years.

He has not so much flesh as he had ten years ago, but what he has is all good solid muscle of the same materials as the famed slay of the good old deacon, which dropped to pieces all at once.

His wife, perhaps the most cultured woman in Washington, was eighty years old the latter part of last month, and she looks much the healthier of the two. Her eyes are bright, and her cheeks full and rosy.

She is a very pretty lady, and one would not think of taking her for more than sixty at the most. She has a wonderful eyesight, and can see at long distances without glasses, though she uses them to read by.

When she went to Newport last summer, she was far from well, and had to be lifted in and out of the carriage when she went to drive. Now she is in perfect health, and I suppose the receptions which Mr. Bancroft used to give will be resumed this winter.—The Youth's Companion.

God's works do not grow old. The green earth, the blue heavens, the silvery moon, the shining sun, look as new and fresh as if they came out of the Divine Factory yesterday. The everlasting clock-work of the skies never runs down, nor grows rusty, nor needs repairs, nor varies the least in marking the light of day. "The heavens declare the glory of God."—
Raleigh Advocate.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND WESLEYAN CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1884.

Centenary Offerings—$5,750.

The Centenary spirit is on the people and the offerings are beginning to flow. At the Woodville District Conference President Rush secured in cash and endowment notes for Centenary College $4,000; at the Vicksburg District Conference $1,500, and at last report from the Crystal Springs Camp Meeting $250—making a total of $5,750. When Centenary offerings are made we hope pastors will report promptly.

The "Fernley Lecture," at the Wesleyan Conference, this year, was delivered by Rev. B. Hillier.

Centenary offerings will multiply rapidly during the months to come. Our people are being aroused to the grand opportunity and will display a worthy liberality.

The friends of prohibition in East Feliciana parish are exhorted to pick their flints and try it again. The grandest victories are organized out of defeat. Agitation will win the field in the end.

Prof. Woodrow, of the Southern Presbyterian Church, is being severely handled for some heretical teachings on "Evolution." He occupies a position of great responsibility in a theological seminary, and should be held to rigid account for the character of his teachings. From present indications he will have to go.

Ireland has been a chronic appeal to the charity of the world for several years; but during the eighteen years of her periodical starvation she has spent $30,000,000 for the support of the church at home. Whatever the condition of the crops, Peter's pence must be forthcoming.

The Meridian Sun, a secular paper published at Meridian, Miss., in an editorial reply to a correspondent, makes a vicious plea in favor of closing the Exposition gates on Sunday. There is no uncertainty in that "leader." If every newspaper in the country would candidly express the convictions of its constituency, those gates could not be opened. We hope the Board of Management will not be controlled by local sentiment, but as appointees of the general government and representatives of the whole people, honor and exalt our national Sabbath. The Meridian Sun thus closes its emphatic reply to its correspondent "Liberty."

The fourth commandment is greater than your little machine or the stupendous World's Exposition to be at New Orleans.

The Catholic Examiner, in some comments upon the defeat of the falsely titled "Freedom of Worship Bill," in the New York Legislature, lays the blame at the doors of Catholic members, "who either injured it by silence or damned it by faint praise," and then adds: "Catholics, this year, should refuse to vote for any man who does not pledge himself to support this measure." There it is in language unmistakable—a leading Roman organ counseling certain citizens to vote as ecclesiastics. Just that danger has been foreseen, and the people faithfully warned of its sure coming. When Catholics, as Catholics, cast their ballots—when ecclesiastical rather than civil convictions control their citizenship—they become a dangerous, dynamic element in our body politic. In this Republic there is, theoretically, an entire separation of Church and State; but, if Roman power increases, the priest will stand guard at the polls and become the king of the caucus. What a cry would be heard in the land—and an alarm justly created—if Methodists or Presbyterians, en masse, were appealed to in support of a certain measure! What possible business can a church have in a legislative body apart from its chartered protection of property? But here Catholics are commanded to "send a few of these swash-bucklers to the rear, and fill their places with men who have the courage of their convictions." Alas! for American liberty when such papal order has influence outside of New York City and a few other Roman communities! Unless we throttle the voice of history, this appeal will become a danger signal.

Events in England.

We have studied with interest for some months the course of national affairs in England, with alternating hopes and fears for the fate of Mr. Gladstone's ministry. From the day Gen. Gordon was commissioned as a peace representative to the Sudan up to the recent failure of "The Conference of the Powers" on Egyptian complications the Conservative party has waged bitter and relentless war upon the Government. At one time, when individual sentimentalists were offering large sums of money for the rescue of Gen. Gordon, and the opposition were charging Mr. Gladstone with deserting and yielding him up to savage butchery, it looked as though Parliament would be dissolved with an appeal to the country. But, with a moral heroism and broad statesmanship unexcelled in all history, the Premier pursued his well-marked policy. While struggling with the Egyptian question he allayed the troubles in Ireland, and carried triumphantly through the House of Commons his famous "Franchise Bill." This last measure, defeated in the House of Lords, is now rocking England to her very foundations. For a score of years there have been no such demonstrations as those described within the past week. The tide has turned and the threatened parliamentary crisis has been converted into a signal victory. Instead of being delirious, Mr. Gladstone is yet the idol of his party and country. The extension of the franchise is a foregone conclusion. Though resisted by the landed aristocracy and the Conservative peers, its passage is assured. The English people demand it.

And, as is often the case, capacious opposition compounds its own folly. The results of evil far exceed the expectations of evil-doers. In obstructing the popular will, and twice defeating a measure for the extension of the franchise, the House of Lords has aroused indignant demand for its own modification or abolition. At a great reform demonstration in Birmingham, attended by twenty thousand persons, last week, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, president of the Board of Trade, and an influential member of the Gladstone Cabinet, made an able speech, in which he said: "The divine right of kings had been acknowledged to be dangerous; the divine right of the peers was a ridiculous figment. If the lords remained obstinate in opposition to the popular will, the present agitation should continue to the bitter end. I look forward with eager hope to the result of this agitation. England, the chosen home of a self-governed people, could never be subservient to the insolent pretensions of the hereditary class."

The same evening Hon. John Bright, England's great commoner and peerless orator, also delivered a characteristic address. It had the fire of youth and the intrepid onset of profound conviction. The old apostle of reform, and the hero of the famous "corn laws," never evinced more enthusiasm than at Birmingham. The limitation of the veto power of the Lords was argued with great eloquence and power. He said: "The Tory majority in the House of Lords was actuated by the same bitter hatred of Liberals as in 1832. Who were the peers? They were the spawn of the blunders, the wars and corruption of the dark ages of our history. They had entered the temple of honor, not through the temple of merit, but through the sepulchres of their ancestors. They were no better than their fathers, some of them were worse, for their privileges had produced ignorance and arrogance. The reform of the House of Lords was urgent and inevitable. In the creation of new peers to pass the franchise bill, the country would only get rid of the present difficulty. What was wanted was a limitation of the veto power of the lords. Should the people submit, or should they curb the nobles, as their fathers had curbed the kings of England?"

A genuine Christian, the champion of liberty and the advocate of the mildest foreign policy consistent with national interests and honor, we have desired to see Mr. Gladstone's plans thoroughly tested. If successful, humanity will rejoice and the Christian religion be enthroned.

Our neighbor, the Southwestern Christian Advocate, speaks out very emphatically against the "improper, unmodest and immoral" conduct of certain colored preachers in Georgia getting up a cheap excursion to attend a hanging. They deserve not only this journalistic censure, but a Conference investigation. The idea of converting a hanging into an occasion for making money by running an excursion would disgrace the most graceless charper of the turf or cock pit.

Denver Conference.

We find in the Colorado Methodist a full account of the Denver Annual Conference, which held its session in the Curtis Street Church, Denver, July 23-28, 1884. Bishop J. C. Granberry presided, and Rev. George Needham was elected secretary, with Revs. P. L. Stanton and W. F. Packard as assistants. Drs. McFerrin and Hendrix and Richard Boyne, a local Wesleyan minister from England, were among the distinguished visitors. Dr. George T. Gould, of Kentucky, transferred to that Conference, and was made president of Las Vegas Seminary. Thomas Griffith was admitted on trial. The statistical summaries are as follows:

Twelve local preachers against ten last year; number of members, 859, against 758 last year; adults baptized, 74 this year, 42 last; infants baptized this year, 45, 35 last; number of Sunday-school pupils, 1,300 this year, 1,116 last; number of churches, 18 this year, 12 last; seating capacity of churches, 3,827 this year, 2,520 last; number of parsonages, 6 this year, 5 last; value of other church property, $18,145 90 this year, $15,063 last; expended this year in building and repairs, $15 903; collected for Bishops' fund, $66 this year, $70 last; Conference collections, $190 this year, $23 30 last; collected for other objects, $1,496 44.

The report of the Board of Missions showed that $815 50 had been collected. The assessment was fixed at $650—$400 to the Denver district and $250 to New Mexico.

Bishop Granberry gave great satisfaction to the Conference, both in the chair and pulpit. Drs. McFerrin and Hendrix did good service on the platform. We note with rejoicing the solid growth of our cause in that great western field. The following is the list of APPOINTMENTS.

DENVER DISTRICT.—W. J. Jackson, P. E.; Denver, Curtis Street, J. C. Morris; Denver circuit, H. S. Lee; Sterling circuit, J. M. Major; Elbert circuit, C. B. Laport; Colorado Springs, J. J. Ansley; South Pueblo, D. L. Rader; Florence circuit, supplied by Rev. W. M. Smith; Greenhorn circuit, G. W. Burnett; Gardner circuit, A. H. Quillian; Le Veta and Alamosa, O. E. Semabugh; San Luis circuit, J. A. Jester; Saguache, W. M. Britt; Grand Junction circuit, J. A. Allison; Wet Mountain circuit, to be supplied; W. J. Jackson, agent for our schools at Pueblo.

NEW MEXICO DISTRICT.—George Needham, P. E.; Trinidad, J. R. A. Vaughan; Durango, R. A. Freeman; Durango circuit, Thomas Griffith; Mancos and Rico, W. H. Howard; Farmington, to be supplied; Las Vegas, G. T. Gould; Cerrillos, W. B. Wheeler; Albuquerque, W. F. Packard; Socorro and San Marcial, J. D. Bush, and one to be supplied; Denning, P. L. Stanton; White Oaks, to be supplied; Las Vegas Seminary, Dr. G. T. Gould, principal—J. R. A. Vaughan, agent.

Crystal Springs Camp Meeting.

We spent Saturday and Sunday, last, at this favored feast of tabernacles, and right royally were they enjoyed. If denied our annual visit to that gathering of the Lord's hosts, we feel a sense of loss, spiritual, social and connoisseurial. Beautiful for situation and the joy of a large section, it never fails to command immense congregations. We were sorry to note, however, that a Sunday excursion train was run and liberally patronized. It is well to have large congregations, but not at the expense of Sabbath desecration; for this, however, the camp meeting association was in no wise responsible.

The little friction caused last year by the small gate fee charged has quite passed away. Better understood, it is generally approved as the readiest and most equitable method of sustaining the enterprise. Instead of a few hearing the heavy burden, the vast multitude, by a penny offering, become the Lord's "purse bearers," and sharers in the blessed opportunity of aiding a good cause.

Most of the tents were occupied, and characteristic hospitality was dispensed. The presence of preachers in any number is not a burden, but a benediction. There is a contest among tent holders for the pleasure of entertaining the "sons of Levi."

How highly favored we are as the Lord's messengers! What generous attentions await and cheer us amid all our labors! These more than compensate for meagre stipends. No men on earth are so honored and appreciated as ministers of the word of God. Careful should we be in life and speech that confidence be not misplaced and the Lord's name suffer in the failings of his servants.

Quite a number of preachers were in attendance—all from the home Conference except the venerable Rev. G. D. Wade, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Dr. R. B. Crawford, of Mobile. The latter ministered with great profit and power, and won hosts of true friends. Up to the time of our leaving not many conversions had been reported, but all indications were favorable for a great refreshing. Sunday morning was observed as a Centenary occasion. President Rush, of Centenary College, represented the interests of that honored institution in a practical speech, and then followed a lengthy Centenary discourse. We hope the fruits of that service may be gathered in the near future. There are no "extempore listeners" at that encampment, but attentive, sympathetic, helpful. Bating the singling, which lacked the volume and heartiness of other years, the meeting was quite successful. Sad will be the day when we lose the right and title of being denominated "the hymn-singing Methodists."

A Purgatorial Organization.

We find in the New York Independent a circular appeal sent out by a Romish association, which proposes to do a "great charity." Alas! for the suffering saints! They have to be organized out of purgatory. When such folly is allowable in a church, we do not wonder that so many intelligent Catholics are turning to Protestantism. Since reading Dr. Dorchester's "Problem of Religious Progress" we have had little apprehension about the dominance of papal superstition in this country. Just such stupendous nonsense as the following is enough to fatigue the patience of a howling dervish:

THE PURGATORIAL ASSOCIATION—
SPREAD OF AN ORGANIZATION INTENDED TO DO A GREAT CHARITY.
McCONNELLVILLE, MORGAN CO., O.,
MAY 1, 1884.

To the Editor of the Catholic Review:—
The Purgatorial Association continues to grow rapidly. We are now dealing about fourteen thousand souls of the Rosary, every week, for the poor souls. Persons wishing to unite with us in this devotion may send their names, plainly written in English, to the Rev. S. S. Mattingly, McConnellville, Morgan county, O., and also enclose a postal directed to themselves for answer to their application.

The obligation on the part of the members is one "Our Father" and ten "Hail Marys," or one decade of the Rosary, every day, for the souls in purgatory. The benefits derived by the members of the association are: (1) One mass, once a week, pro defunctis for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the members, and according to each one's intention; (2) a momento is made every day in Holy Mass, according to the intention of each member. We take these Rosaries, said by the members of the association, every day to Holy Mass with us and ask God to hear our prayers and liberate these suffering souls. Other benefits for the members of this association are being sought for by us, and that we may be successful we ask the prayers of the members.

A Northern religious exchange, referring to the suspension of another paper after a desperate struggle against the inevitable, indulges in some pertinent reflections. Those who have any fear that editors and publishers will become "loaded bandholders," and will not suffer excellent poverty to keep them religious, are requested to read the following:

"This suspension suggests some lessons. One is this: It is something to publish a newspaper. This is a fact which to many persons will come with the suddenness of a revelation. Very many members of the human family have not the remotest suspicion that it costs a single cent to edit or print a newspaper. They can see no earthly reason why the paper should not be sent to everybody free of charge, or at less than cost; why it should not print everything that anybody wants printed, and send copies containing the publication gratis. Since we began this article we have received a letter from a lady of another denomination, saying that she is going to open a school, and that she has had losses, and that she desires to advertise largely, and that she relies upon us not to charge her for the advertisement, and that she would like to receive the paper occasionally. We will gladly do as she requests, provided the paper makes and the type founder and the postage and the printers and the gas and the baker and the milkman and the dealer, and all the rest of them, will deal with us on the same liberal basis. We do solemnly assure each and several of our friends that no method of publishing a paper free of cost has been discovered, though we do not know what discovery may be developed. In connection with the electrical exhibition.

In looking over the old files of the ADVOCATE, for 1858, we discovered this interesting item:

The New Orleans and Jackson Railroad was completed to Jackson, Miss., and the cars passed over it for the first time on March 31. Then arose a spirited contest in the Board of Directors as to whether the road should be extended or stop at Canton. The vote stood as follows: For extension, 25,160 shares; for non-extension, 16,657 shares—majority, 9,503; split tickets, not counted, 1,500.

The following are the names of the new directors elected: Louisiana—John Calhoun, N. C. Folger, C. M. Waterman, James H. Caldwell, S. F. Slater, Charles Pride, George W. Christy, J. M. Reid, Richard Strain, H. M. Samuels, Thomas Murray, Jackson Armstrong.

Mississippi—William McWillie, F. Ziegler, E. D. Brower, E. H. Sanders, R. D. Brown, C. B. Tarpley.

The Wesleyan Conference.

The one hundred and forty-first Wesleyan Conference was opened at Burslem, England, July 22, with six hundred ministers in attendance. Frederic Greeves, D. D., was elected president, and Robert Newton Young, secretary. The retiring president, Rev. Thomas McCullagh, made a very happy speech in introducing his successor and in presenting his insignia of office—the seal of the Conference and John Wesley's pocket Bible, which he used in field-preaching. In his short address the new president, Dr. Greeves, made some capital points. He counseled the Conference not to permit "revivalistic services to interfere with the diligent, effective and hopeful discharge of our ordinary pastorate." This paragraph is sententious and suggestive: "A very distinguished predecessor of mine—Mr. Garrett—in his opening address, gave us as the keynote of the year, 'A revival in every circuit.' If I could give one, it would be, 'Salvation in every house.'"

Vacancies in the Legal Hundred were then filled, and in the evening an open session was held, when Revs. Robert Newton Young and Sylvester Whitehead delivered addresses in relation to their deputations to the Methodist Episcopal Church in America. Other proceedings were not published in the last London Watchman received.

Stabat Mater vs. Quam Tediola.

While Bishop McTear was adorning his chair editorial, in the early months of 1858, he received a complimentary ticket to a grand sacred concert. The oratorio, Stabat Mater, was to be rendered by Mme. Frezzolini, Mme. Strakosch, Signors Peruzzi and Scola, supported by home talent. He went, and left early in disgust. The following were among his next day's reflections:

The fact is, our ears have been spoiled. These Italian singers can not reach our conception, for we have, for several years, preached to the negroes. Let any of those people who crowded Old Fellows' Hall, Saturday evening, at $1 and $1 50 per head, go with us to St. Paul's of a Sunday afternoon, and we will give them better song, more soul-inspiring music, and exhort them to nothing—absolutely nothing! Seats free.

At St. Paul's the programme is simple. Perhaps a touch of hard names might help it out: say "Veni Fides" (Come thou Faith, etc.) p. 447. Then pitched by Magnus Gebhardt (Big William—not to abbreviate further), and hymn carried by three thousand African voices, with three galleries thrown in. There is concert for you! Signor Peruzzi never led the like of it.

The "Quam Tediola" (How tedious, etc.) p. 441, raised by Melchior von Alexandrinius (allas, Aleck) with the same vocal accompaniment, would eclipse or, rather, drown out Strakosch, Frezzolini, Scola, Von La Harpe, with all their combination. * * * Sacred concerts are a sham at Old Fellows' Hall. While St. Paul's is open we shall not throw away another hour, even on a free ticket, hearing Frezzolini and such like. Give us music that touches the heart as well as the ear.

The Rev. Jerome Harbison, of Arkansas, was transferred to the Los Angeles Conference.

Rev. S. Kepler, of the Baltimore Conference, long a prominent and able preacher, died last week at the advanced age of eighty years.

Dr. Ledbetter has so far recovered as to be able to get out his scissors and pencil "for some minor work on the Advocate." We rejoice in his convalescence.

The Nashville Advocate announces that the published list of delegates to the Centenary Christmas Conference is official. As no Bishop's name was attached to the publication some doubt was raised.

Brethren in the Mississippi Conference desiring to make Centenary remittances, or to get Centenary notes in securing subscriptions, will communicate with the treasurer, Bro. H. H. Blues, at Jackson, Miss.

An honored friend of marked liberality has proposed through us to support a student at Palm Institute. He will select and send forward a pupil and meet all of his expenses. This work he will continue through some years. And such intelligent benevolence we want to commend.

In another column will be found an excellent and learned article from Hon. W. H. Goodale on "Sumptuary Laws." It evinces the erudition and discrimination for which our friend is distinguished. Another article on "the justification of restrictive legislation as to the sale of alcoholic liquor" we hope will be forthcoming. But, however proper the technical distinction made in the present communication, the convention that adopted the platform criticised, had reference to the legal suppression of the liquor traffic. Of this we are sure, for members of the convention have so stated to us personally.

President Rush, of Centenary College, is in the field canvassing for that honored institution of learning, and is doing efficient work. About six thousand dollars have been secured as an endowment fund. He has good hope of large success. The next term promises to be the best of its post bellum history.

Port Gibson Female College is advertised this week. The last session was prosperous under the administration of President Bradford, and the prospect for next term is quite hopeful. Ample preparations are made for a larger attendance. The president is in the field and is receiving flattering assurances.

The destruction of our German Methodist Church at Osyka, in a storm last week, is a great loss to that struggling congregation. They purpose to rebuild at once, and any assistance rendered them will be most wisely bestowed. Remittances may be made to Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, D. D., 112 Camp street.

The organization of the new City School Board, with Mr. J. G. Parham as president, meets with general and cordial endorsement. We look for intelligent, economical, painstaking administration. Nothing is more important to the city of New Orleans than the wise conservation of her educational facilities.

The business management of the Texas Christian Advocate has undergone some change. Mr. Bialock has entire charge of the office, and thus "the most harmonious relations have been established between the publishing and editorial departments of the paper." Dr. John is an alert, pungent, plucky, vigorous, evangelical editor. We read his page in every issue.

Bro. Christian Keener dropped into the office on Tuesday, of last week, just from a great meeting at Plaquemine, Brule, one of his appointments on the Opelousas district. The power of the Highest was manifest, the meeting resulting in forty accessions to the church. It was on this pastoral charge, at Rayne, we noted the dedication of a Centenary Church a few weeks ago and an organization elected with seventy-three members. We rejoice in the prosperity of our Zion in that section.

Rev. H. M. DaBoe, of Huntsville, Texas, gave us a pleasant call on Tuesday last. He was accompanied by his family on a visit to relatives in Mississippi. At the command of his congregation who furnished "the sinews of war," he will extend his trip to Monticello and on to Niagara Falls. Our old friend and Conference comrade is the picture of good health, tipping the scales at near two hundred. Besides a successful pastor and capital preacher, he is one of the brightest and most versatile newspaper correspondents in the Connection.

The press dispatches bring the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. Dr. J. G. Wilson, presiding elder of the St. Louis district, St. Louis Conference. For some weeks he had suffered a severe illness, but friends hoped the crisis had passed and recovery was assured. He died on Wednesday, of last week, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. Dr. Wilson was one of the strong men in Southern Methodism. Scholarly, evangelical, energetic and enterprising, he had capacity for any department of service and success everywhere attended his labors. For years he was one of our leading educators as the president of Huntsville Female College, and later of an institution at Bowling Green, Ky. In obedience to Episcopal authority he transferred to the St. Louis Conference and re-entered the pastoral work in which he gloriously fell asleep. To all human reckoning we can ill afford the loss of such leaders, but "God buries his workmen and carries on his work." It is ours to catch his falling mantle and emulate his heroic spirit.

From Bastrop, La.

There has been considerable sickness in this place all through the year, and for some weeks the flux has been prevalent. We have been called to bury a number, and not long since we laid away to await the resurrection morn two among the choicest of our flock. Sisters Sarah A. Cason and Martha Collier were lay members of the Bastrop Methodist Church. Fully ripe for heaven, they have "fallen asleep in Jesus," and the loss sustained by the loved ones and by the church is indeed heavy. Their pure spirits have been gathered unto God, and the sacred duty of us all is to follow in the same blessed way. As has many times been said, so now we say, "The Methodists die well." Oh! what a place heaven will be, peopled by only Methodists, but all who die well! Heaven shall be made up of those who have died victors in Christ. Let us all get home.

Rev. L. P. Miller, agent of the

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 34.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1464.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased preachers Ad. price

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CARMON.

THE KING'S DAUGHTER.

BY H. R. FAIRBANKS.

He wears no jewel upon his hand or brow,
No badge by which she may be known of men,
For though he walk in plain attire now,
So the daughter of a king; and when
He father calls her at his throne to wait,
He will be clothed as he left her state.

Her father sent her in his land to dwell,
Giving to her work that must be done;
And since the king loves all his people well,
Therefore she too, cares for them every one;
Thus when she stoops to lift from want and sin,
The brighter shines her royalty therein.

He walks erect through dangers manifold,
While many sink and fall on either hand;
He sheds no summer's beam nor winter's cold,
For both are subject to the king's command;
He need not tremble of anything,
Because he is the daughter of a king.

Even when the angel comes that men call Death,
And none with terror, it appears not here;
For when he looks at him with quivering breath,
Thinking it is the royal messenger,
He heart rejoices that his father calls,
For lack to live within the palace walls.

For when the land she dwells in is most fair,
Set round with meadows, a picture in a frame,
In her heart she feels a longing there,
For that imperial palace whence she came.
No trifling quest seems any earthly thing,
Because she is the daughter of a king.

Rev. Thomas Owens.

BY REV. H. M. BLOTH.

Having given pen sketches of three eminent ministers of the Mississippi Conference, Drs. Winans, Drake and Edgah Steele, who rose to distinction in their high calling in the great training school of the itinerancy—the most efficient power of ministerial development known among men in all the ages from the apostolic to the present time. The subject of this sketch is presented as a striking product of the same great school of the prophets. Thomas Owens was one of the first beneficiaries of the Mississippi Conference. The first notice we have of him is as a reckless, frolicsome, somewhat dissipated young man, living near Greenville, Jefferson county, Miss., the resort of the neighborhood where fun and frolic, dissipation, gaming and horse racing held high carnival. Bro. Owens was a leader among them; a reckless, daring rider, with a keen relish for the fray and the life of his associates.

His pious father, with many tears, pleaded with the wayward son, and in order to touch the sensibilities would say to him that he was responsible to God for his moral and religious training, and was fearful that he would be condemned in the day of final reckoning for failure to train him in the good and right way. The son, with the quick and ready wit and repartee so characteristic of him, said to the father: "No, father; when my case is being investigated before the judgment seat I will step in and relieve you of all censure for my conduct, assuming all the responsibility as you have done all a father could do to restrain my course." I can not give particulars of the change that passed upon his character in his remodeling by the power of the Holy Ghost and his inauguration into the ministerial life.

It was marked and decisive. The wayward and reckless young man became as famous for devotion to the cause of Christ as he had been in the service of the devil. His zeal for God was very great, and many were the trophies of his achievement in his service. He was emphatically a revivalist, and the name of little Tommie Owens was known far and near as an efficient worker in the Master's vineyard. The elements of his power were unique, original and strangely blended in their combination.

With native, strong practical sense he had studied human character and exercised a wonderful influence over the sensibilities of men. No man, however stolid, could resist the magic influence of this magnetic wand that controlled at will human passion, convulsed with laughter, or melted to tears his audience in quick transition, responded to the electric touches of his oratorical skill. No one could school himself to resist the power wielded over him. I have heard the venerable minister, Thomas Mixon, say the more you sought to stay the tidal wave of passion aroused by this eccentric and wonderful pulpit orator the more overwhelming would be the accumulated momentum. In the social circle, in the pulpit, upon the Conference floor this matter of human sensibility held undisputed sway. The most grave assemblies, including the presiding officers of our Conferences, were alike under the dominion of Uncle Tommie's facetious and affecting appeals.

I have seen that impersonation of dignified solemnity, Bishop Andrew, as much convulsed with laughter or melted tenderness as all the rest who gave full sway to the tumultuous and overwhelming torrents of feeling that bore down all before it. Bro. Owens was sui generis. Peerless in his line of thought and feeling, he could have no imitator. The man who attempted it only rendered himself ridiculous.

I have heard him on the Conference floor, in reply to captious criticisms for his facetiousness, say that he had tried to be an imitator of others, but come out little Tommie every time. The latter years of his life were spent in a luxurious home, the result of an admirable wedded life with a devoted Christian matron, who rejoiced with him in a happy experience of religion; shouting the praises of God as ethereal and lofty in her ecstatic joy as it is the privilege of the saints to realize on earth. It was my privilege to be associated intimately with Uncle Tommie Owens in the same neighborhood, in the same church of which I was class leader and he superannuated minister, and this church at Rocky Springs, Claiborne county, Miss., sent me out into the work of the ministry. No man enjoyed to a greater extent the confidence and affection of the people. He married more people and preached more funeral sermons than any other minister throughout the country. His large mansion was the home of hospitality and good cheer to the wayfarer itinerant. He was a most genial and mirth-provoking companion. About Conference time in those days of horseback traveling, when a crowd of preachers would accumulate on their way to Conference, Bro. Owens' house was a Methodist tavern and the owner, the life of the company of itinerants that sought his home and company. The old esprit de corps was re-awakened in the old itinerant who felt, to use his own quaint language, that if he had stumps of wings he could fly in the midst of heaven with the everlasting gospel to preach.

He passed through the fiery ordeal of Yankee spoliation just before the close of his long, laborious and useful life. Being met one day on his return from his plantation to his home by the Yankee army, riding, as he always did, a very fine horse, they caused him to dismount and take it aloft. This act of vandalism as the crowning one of many caused him to feel, with many thousands of others, an irrepressible antagonism that it was exceedingly difficult to stifle. As expressed by Bro. Owens it was the very last thing he expected to do to forgive the Yankees. But blessed be God it was accomplished. The dying man of God saw his way to heaven, using his own language "with the distinctness of a sunbeam."

Around us ever lies the enchanted land,
In marvels rich to those whose eyes are found;
In dwelling there are all things around us found,
In losing there are all things lost beyond.
—Jesse Verr.

Facts and Fans.

BY REV. J. H. A. AHRNS, D. D.

Too many carry on similar business with the same amount of capital and under similar circumstances; but while one of them prospers and attains to opulence, the other is going to wreck and indigence. Ignorant people then call the successful man fortunate, the other unfortunate: one had luck, the other had not, they say.

Close observation will teach us that what is called luck or good luck is but a subjective preparation for the business in question. Endowments, natural and acquired, rendered him specially fit for the same. To this was added the necessary enthusiasm which, by the way, is never lacking when the consciousness animates us that with our life's barque we have entered the true and destined channel. Industry and perseverance are inseparable concomitants. Success follows as a matter of course. The reverse is noticeable in the case of the man with bad luck. Perhaps there was in the outset plenty of ambition and zeal; but because sooner or later the consciousness asserting itself, that he lacks the elements necessary to success, that he is constantly transgressing the law of the eternal fitness of things, the flames of his enthusiasm are extinguished, his order subsides, his hand becomes idle, collapse inevitable.

As in business, so also in the ministerial avocation. Was the preacher called to his office by the Holy Ghost? Is he unspeakably wretched because men die in their sins without a Saviour? Does he feel that woe is him if he preach not the gospel? And are the natural endowments in harmony with the supernatural? Then success will characterize his ministry. He will prepare himself for his pulpit diligently. Yes, he will soon become a thorough theologian, making, as Spurgeon said, the pulpit his Thermopile. As pastor, he knows of no temperamental disqualification, of no lack of social qualities. Social qualities! Men are dying, dying in their sins, going to eternal shame. He will prayerfully visit them in their houses to apprise them of their impending danger. He visits as one sent from God. Of course, the church under his care thrives internally and externally, spiritually and temporally. Has he good luck? No. He is right, and he is right in the right way, and does right. The other preacher has bad luck. Well, something is wrong. But what? Who?

Recently sat on a snitry evening in a railroad car. Had ten minutes until departure. All the passengers seemed uncomfortably hot. A stupid-looking, dirty boy enters the car, with a voice grating on the ear: "Fans for sale! We felt that everybody wanted a fan; but there was something which prevented us and others from patronizing the disagreeable patrolman. He sold but two fans to the hundred passengers seated in the car. He was followed by a sprightly-looking lad with an armful of fans. He too vociferated: "Fans for sale! But doing so, he looked involuntarily into everybody's face and added: "The best fans in New Orleans. Only five cents apiece. Chilly atmosphere from distant ice-burgs. Here is comfort for the overheated. Reviving whispering from the billow which recently kissed the North Pole. Here are zephyrs from cool magnolia groves, cozy murmuring from the dense forests of pine. Here is Spanish Port atmosphere and West End breeze." The boy repeated this description of his wares several times, and in about three minutes his entire supply was sold. Everybody wanted of the "whispering of the billow which recently kissed the North Pole."

Leaving the car, he met the boy who had sold but two fans, lamenting that the times were bad, and accounting for his competitor's success by remarking that he had good luck. Failure of success in this case was not owing to the fans, they were good; nor to the price, they were cheap; nor lack of demand, the people needed fans and subsequently bought fans. It was the unsuccessful vendor who did not meet the demand. Unable to fully appreciate the situation, he developed the enthusiasm, displayed no skill.

Wonder if among preachers there is such a difference as there was among these two boy-peddlers? All men are more or less conscious of their need of a Saviour. They are unhappy. They yearn for true Comfort from the Comforter, that still, small voice to speak peace to the soul. In Christ there is hope for the perishing. Knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men. "Fans for sale!" Yet many preachers keep their "fans" and dolorously bewail unlucky circumstances. But, blessed be God, here and there there are some who know how to dispose of their "ware."

All At It—Sundays Closing.

BY MRS. L. CHARY SADLER.

One of the all begs the privilege of being at it. At what? For the present, at Col. E. Richardson, president of the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, New Orleans, La.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which met at Philadelphia, in May last, sent a request to the Board of Managers to have the gates closed on the Sabbath. Our own church, the Baptist Assembly and other influential bodies have made similar requests, and now it is in order for the daughters of Zion, enjoining in this vale of Louisiana and other Gulf States, to rise en masse and make the same request.

Let us second Dr. Walker's motion, made in the ADVOCATE last week, with an irresistible unanimity, and beseech Col. Richardson and the Board of Managers to grant this boon.

Columbia's daughters ask this in the name of Columbia's glorious land for which our fathers fought and bled. In the name of our stripes and stars that —Is known on every shore.

The standard of a gallant band.

In the name of our national coin that bears on its face the beautiful motto: "In God we trust." This coin will be handled by every one who goes inside those gates. Let them be closed on Sunday and show the world that we are a Christian people by universal sentiment as well as only in name.

We ask this boon in the name of our lovely State with its beautiful seat of sixteen stars, scales of justice and protective mother bird. Is it just to ignore the Christian sense and sentiment of the whole country, which is largely in the majority, for the sake of the almighty dollar and the few who hold that freedom shirks when liberal corns are in danger of being trod upon. If this can be done with a show of justice let us have a new seal of State. Erase those sixteen stars that shine for all. Take out the even-balanced scale of justice. Clip the wings of the protective mother bird and let the young ones perish, and instead, let a straight up and down square seal with the cap of liberty engraved thereon, and this beautiful motto underneath: Noncomitibus Sundaybus over usibus. Would not this be more suitable if our honor as a Christian nation is to be trampled upon?

Aside from all Christian consideration this question looms up like Bancho's ghost and will not down. For justice can not be meted out to all alike if those gates are opened on a Sunday, because the numerous employees need a day of rest and have a right to demand it. Then for those who wish have fun on Sunday there are hundreds of other places of amusement where they can go, and all that Christian people ask is that the gates may be closed so that all who wish may have freedom to worship God if they choose and as they choose.

Though "the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent taketh it by force," yet no one need fear that they will be forced to go to church because the gates of the Exposition are closed on Sunday. As there are no mountain heights in the Crescent City, where freedom can unfurl her standard to the air, she might sit upon the Clay monument or the top of St. Charles Hotel, where she could tear the azure robes to her heart's content, and nobody would say a word. In conclusion, one woman at it, in the name of all good women who ought to be "at it, and always at it," asks the gentlemen composing the Board of Managers of the Exposition that the fair fame of our beloved country, our beautiful Crescent City and the fair name of their wives, mothers, sisters and sweethearts may not have a stigma cast upon them by the public desecration of the holy day in keeping the gates of the Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition open on Sunday.

Vicksburg District Conference.

Mr. Editor: On Thursday, July 31, 1884, the Vicksburg District Conference began its annual session at Phoenix, Miss., and closed its proceedings on the evening of August 2. Our presiding elder, Rev. C. G. Andrews, presided over the deliberations with his accustomed dignity.

The disciplinary plan of procedure was observed. The preachers were in good spirits; looked well; preached well, and reported their works and labors during the present year with a good deal of zeal and interest. Our district is steadily on the upgrade spiritually, morally, numerically and financially. A great deal of interest and lively debate, catechizing and repartee were manifested by the preachers in the presentation of their reports and explanation of their modes and plans of collecting the various claims appertaining to their charges. They were full of zeal for the preaching of the gospel and the advancement of the kingdom of God.

The best preaching talent in the Conference was here, and the impress of their sermons and influence will be felt for good. The people entertained the Conference with pride and pleasure, and large audiences attended the preaching of the word. More than six hundred people were out on the Sabbath to hear Dr. Marshall and Rev. W. C. Black. The editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, President Rush, of Centenary College, and President McVoy, of East Mississippi Female College, honored us with their presence, and entertained us with the presentation of the interests which they represented.

About fifteen hundred dollars in cash and endowment notes were given to President Rush for Centenary College. Rev. T. C. Bradford came in after the adjournment. He secured the promise of several girls for Port Gibson Female College, and some subscriptions to aid in refurbishing and repairing the college building. The representation among the laymen was very small, although twelve or fifteen delegates who were absent live in less than fifty miles of Phoenix. C. K. Marshall, T. A. Holloman, Henry Key and T. R. Holloman were elected delegates to the next Annual Conference. Thomas Reed and H. G. Millsaps the alternates.

We inclose herewith the report of the Committee on Temperance to be published in the ADVOCATE as per request of the Conference. Resolutions endorsing Centenary College, East Mississippi Female College and Port Gibson Female College were approved, also recommending the publication of the History of Methodism in Mississippi, by John G. Jones. The following was approved by a rising vote, viz:

Resolved, That it is with our most cordial thanksgiving we offer a vote of profound gratitude to the kind people of Wesley Chapel neighborhood for their abundant hospitality which has even succeeded our most sanguine expectations.

Cane Ridge Church, Fayette circuit, was selected for the next place at which to meet. After a very harmonious session, full of interest, pleasure and profit to preachers and people the Conference adjourned.

THOS. A. HOLLOMAN, Sec.

PHOENIX, MISS., AUGUST 7, 1884.

Centenary College of Louisiana.

Let our patrons bear in mind that this school opens on Monday, September 1, and that it is very important that the students be present at the opening.

The Mississippi Valley railroad, which runs within five miles of Jackson, La., is now in full operation, and affords ready access to the college. Students will get off at McManis' flag station, which is directly opposite of Jackson. It would be well for them to write to Mr. Kemp Mattingly, who runs the hack blue, informing him on what day they expect to arrive.

Some five or six weeks ago the town of Jackson was in no little excitement over a case of small-pox, that of Dr. Joe S. Jones, who contracted it from a negro patient four miles in the country, and some greatly exaggerated reports went out through a few newspapers, making the impression that it was an epidemic; whereas there was but one case, and that a case of varicella. No other case has appeared, nor is it at all probable that there will be any other resulting, as the one we had was so carefully guarded.

Last week I reported as financial agent $1,000, which had been raised as an endowment fund for Centenary College. This week I am enabled to report $1,550 more—$1,550 of which was raised at the Vicksburg District Conference held in Phoenix, Miss., and the remainder $250 was contributed yesterday, August 10, at Crystal Springs Camp Meeting by Bro. Peter James, whose liberality, in other laudable directions, has already attracted attention, gladdened hearts and added fragrance to his name.

Let me earnestly appeal to the Methodists of our two Conferences, Mississippi and Louisiana, to rally to our only male college with the determination to endow it. It can be done; let us feel and say, it must be done! If we can have unity of action, prayerful and energetic efforts in presenting and pressing the claims of this college, for the next six months we shall raise not less than $100,000. Let our preachers lead the movement, taking advantage of the general disposition, to make Centenary offerings. Let us encourage the people to make these gifts and to direct them to this college for the purpose of endowment.

There is cause for great praise and devout gratitude for what has already been contributed. Let us thank God, take courage and renew our efforts. Now is the time to strike. Our people are poor, but the practicability of endowing the college is not a question of financial ability. Let all give something. If it be only $1, and the work will be done and nobody hurt. God is favoring us. The location of the Mississippi Valley railroad is itself a grand endowment. Send us students—send us money.

D. M. RUSH.

AUGUST 11, 1884.

THE TEACHING OF JESUS.—This was wholly different in its character from the teaching of the scribes, and was as much grander as the temple of the morning under which it was uttered was grander than the stifling synagogue or crowded school. It was preached on the hillside, or by the lake, or on the roads, or in the house of the Pharisee, or at the banquet of the publican; nor was it any sweeter or softer when it was addressed in the Royal Portico to the masters of Israel, than when its only hearers were the ignorant people whom the haughty Pharisees held to be accursed. And there was no reserve in its administration. It flowed forth as sweetly and as lavishly to single listeners as to enraptured crowds, and some of its richest revelations were vouchsafed neither to rulers nor to multitudes, but to the persecuted outcast of the synagogue, to the timid inquirer in the midnight and the frail woman by the noon-day well. It dealt with the human soul, and human destiny, and human life. There were no delusions in it, or explanations, or implanted mazes of difficult discussion, but a swift insight into the very depths of the human heart, appealing to the conscience with its irresistible simplicity and with an absolute mastery stirring the whole nature. Sprung from the depths of holy emotions, it thrilled the being of every true listener as with electric flame. In a word, its authority was the authority of the divine Incarnate; it was a voice of God, speaking in the utterance of man; its austere purity was pervaded with the tenderest sympathy and its awful severity with unutterable love. It is a great sea whose smiling surface breaks into refreshing ripples at the feet of our little ones, but into whose unfathomable depths the wisest may gaze with the shudder of amazement and the thrill of love.—Farrar's Life of Christ.

—God writes the gospel, not in the Bible alone, but on trees and flowers, on the clouds and stars.—Luther.

BY MATHIAS FALTINGHAM.

—Zach's II

"The Laborers of the Vineyard"

What a vast work this harvest of the Lord's vineyard is! How, in the great number of workers Often I sit in church and see the many pews around me which have no father, husband, brother or son as occupants, and when I recognize how few of the voices that join in the anthems of praise are male, I can but wonder, when we are all gathered to our final home, whether there will be broken family circles—whether there will be only a few hoarse and tenor voices of the males to mingle with the softer tones of alto and soprano of the females as in celestial choruses they join in everlasting praise. I regret to see this, for it is my own sex that is negligent; and I do not intend to speak of those who care naught for the future—who only wish to live for what they consider the pleasures of frail humanity, but to those men who are enrolled as soldiers in the great battle of life against death. I would appeal to them to arise from their stupor of indifference. It is high time to awake from this lethargic sleep to a sense of their duty to society around them, their duty to the church which they attend and their all-important duty to the great God who created them. I would appeal to the fathers to think of the example they offer to their children when they follow in their footsteps when they stay from the house of God, and disregard their duties as reliable laborers of Christianity. I would appeal to young men, who are forming character for eternity, to give their vigorous strength to all this great cause. Do not wait until your youth wanes before you commence, especially to work in the

NINTH PAPER.

After dinner I invited him to the room of the sick man. After examining him the doctor called me to one side, and said, "It is a well-defined case of yellow fever;" thought it best not to make it known, as it might

MANUAL, TEXAS.

We are weak and helpless, and if left to ourselves, in attempting to work out the salvation of our souls, in view of many difficulties that surround us, we might well, indeed, yield to despair for our own strength is insufficient. But while this is the case, we are saved of divine help, for God works in us, drawing our hearts to himself, exciting in us holy desires and purposes, and enabling us with mighty aid his Spirit to do this will. We are assured that his strength shall be made known in our weakness, and that on our day, so shall our strength be. This is the source of our encouragement.

J. V. God is with us, and we need not be afraid of our enemies. True, we are sinners, we shall sin, but we shall never be overcome by sin. True, we are weak, but we shall succeed. Remember, you have a great work to do, do not neglect it. The time is short. We while it is day, let the night come when no man can work.—Method Recorder.

TEXAS CIRCUIT.

AUGUST 9, 1834.

• BROOKSVILLE, MISS.

R. Tucker, from Crawford circuit. He preached us two good sermons. He being compelled to leave us, we were left alone. But, in looking over the congregation, our eyes rested on the face of Rev. Mr. Bagdikian, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He remained with us the rest of the meeting, doing us good service and carrying away with him the good wishes of the community. In summing up the result of the meeting shows twelve conversions and fourteen millions to the church, and the church greatly revived. Our young men have organized a prayer meeting, which is doing good.

I closed my second meeting yesterday; was assisted by Bro. T. C. Wier, our presiding elder, who led off with three of his best sermons, followed by Rev. J. D. Coxson, a Vanderbilt young man, and followed by Rev. W. T. Barnett, from Shuqualak circuit, who

E. H. CASEY

Bill and by one our days do pass,
And one by one we die;
For all our flesh is as the grass,
Our life is but a sigh.

The pulses of youth lead him to age,
And age leads him to the tomb;
Our life is frail at every age -
We die ere from the womb.

The places here that know us now
Will soon be known no more;
Life's bark from West must turn its prow
And seek an unknown shore.

O God! let whom we love and move,
And he who loves us here,
Quicken us by the gutting love
To his eternal sphere.

She bore her last wearisome day with the spirit of martyr, and hard to live for the children's sake was perfectly resigned to her Fawell. Sometimes her joy was rapt and her radiant testimony was the way was bright and clear.

Farewell, precious sister, thy life a constant blessing to thy loved one on earth. May we all find a companionship with thee among spirits of just men made perfect.

C. G. ANDRE

SYKES—SISTER LUCY SYKES, born in Greenville county, Va., December 21, 1835. In early life she attracted attention to God's claim for her services, and she wisely dedicated her life to him. She united with the Methodist church, and labored for its doctrine and communion. She died in grief to leave Benjamin J. Sykes, April 17, 1821. She moved from this to North Alabama, and then to Carroll county, Miss., where she spent the greater part of her life. Her husband died in 1845, and with a considerable family of children, giving her child a great education—each of them was enabled to do much good in the world. Her benevolent relations of life satisfied her heart well. For sixty years she fulfilled the power of holy religion, and died June 18, at the residence of her son, John H. Sykes, in Duck Hill, Miss., in the state of better inheritance.

J. W. POS

Resolved, That a page in the winter back of the Fidelity Weekly be dedicated to her memory, and that an obituary transmitted in the family and to her friends of the deceased is a token of our heartfelt sympathy and respect,
also a copy to the Sunday School
Visitor and the NEW ORLEANS CHRIS-TIAN ADVOCATE, with the earnest request that they be published in the next issues.

MISS LULA H. STEIN,
S. c. Felony Workers

It is said by her intimate friends that she never was known to be angry or hear unkind. She may have been grieved at an injury, but never suffered a malignant spirit to gain dominion over her heart. It is unnecessary to ask how she died. Her consistent life of constant piety is no answer to the question. She died as she had lived, in the death of the righteous—and rests, except in through the gates to Heaven, of God.

A. W. BROWN.

R. P. GOUGH, Pastor.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

The use of a good soap is certainly essential to preserve the skin in health, to maintain its complexion and tone, and to prevent its falling to wrinkles. Ivory Soap is an article of the most careful manufacture, and is the most agreeable and refreshing of all for the skin.

0088
 ecter
 the was a war
 Sep-gave mun ealed
 a the form was know,
 Vir-trum from where

We are selling the watches of the American Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12.
 Stem-winding Silver Watches at $15 and $18.
 Stem-winding Gold Watches at $25 and $30.
 All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.
 115 Canal street, New York.

become ding the ting out not born very very
the best
s. H. L. diko him
our Pres-nor Nor-
How did
Society
riest and child? "
n. 1, 24, 25.
the pri-
and bal-
the Phil-
s. 19, 17.
the friends

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. J. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. C. HENNING.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1884.

Pastors in our patronizing Conferences are requested to forward promptly reports of their Centenary collections. We desire to open a column of "Centenary Gifts."

The Mississippi Conference has already raised thirty thousand dollars of her resolved sixty thousand as a Centenary offering. We believe every dollar will be forthcoming.

The man who makes mere difference of political convictions an occasion for personal estrangement hasn't breadth enough for a respectable partisan nor the clarity of a mustard-seed Christian. Character, and not party policy, should control personal friendships.

Many of the brightest blessings of Providence come to us and stay with us without our asking for their coming and their stay. Why is this? They are the precursors of spiritual favors which God designs to bestow. If we do not defeat his designs by an improper use of those bright blessings. Learn hence the value of temporal favors in the economy of salvation.

The South-Western Presbyterian, of this city, gives the following statistics of the Presbyterian Churches in Europe and America, collated from a report made to the Pan-Presbyterian Council: Synods, 186; presbyteries, 1,207; pastoral charges, 2,821; ministers on roll, 21,251; ministers in service, 10,680; communicants, 6,750,400; Sabbath-schools, 21,657; Sabbath-school teachers, 212,734; Sabbath-school attendance, 1,645,177; mission stations, 1,561.

The fact that God has placed before men the model of a perfect human life and a perfect human character shows that he would have men be perfect in life and character. This perfection of life and character can be attained only by copying the model. In the sayings and doings of Jesus, the model man, we find the helps to assist us to higher planes of Christian living and deeper depths of Christian experience and to broader views of God's love and clearer conception of our destiny.

Dr. Lipscomb, of Vanderbilt University, has laid a lasting obligation of gratitude upon the ministry and church in the publication of his "Studies in the Forty Days between Christ's Resurrection and Ascension." Coming to us in the guise of "Studies," these essays will put the thoughtful mind into new channels which will lead to new mines where the precious ore of truth lies glistening in the richest beauty. This book is a demonstration of the fact that Dr. Lipscomb is eminently qualified to write a better life of Christ than any that has yet appeared.

The book publishers and Sunday-school editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) say in a recent circular: "We shall begin with January, 1885, the publication of a library book every week—each book containing from 150 to 300 pages—covering a wide field of useful and entertaining reading, religious and general biography, church and general history, stories of the imagination in the interest of historical illustration and the enforcement of moral and religious teaching." The churches of Christ can not do a wiser thing, or one more fruitful of good results, than to prepare nourishing mind-food for their young people.

The earthquake of Sunday, August 10, shook quite a number of people into a recognition of God. Some very earnest prayers were sent out of frightened souls inquiring for a place of security. People who are afraid of a trembling earth ought to be reminded that the earth is between them and their only security, and that they must come around on the other side. Earthquakes have played an important part in God's administration of affairs here below. We recommend to all concerned a careful perusal of Mr. Wesley's sermon on the "Cause and Cure of Earthquakes." "Therefore, we will not fear, though the earth be removed, for God is our refuge and strength."

The Habit of Gratitude.

It is not a matter of option or opinion whether we shall cultivate the grace of gratitude. Nothing is more important to the full and symmetrical development of Christian character. Indeed, it is the very foundation principle of our holy religion. A being not capable of gratitude is not susceptible of religion, while, on the other hand, our attainments in spiritual grace and culture are in exact ratio to the development of this habit. It is peculiar to and becoming in dependent creatures. If all beings and intelligences were independent and needed no extraneous aid or favor, there would be neither room nor reason for any expression of gratitude. This grace, therefore, does not belong to God. He is self-existent and infinite in all his attributes. He can not be grateful for mercies received, for he himself is infinite Mercy and needs no favor. But, as the creator and gracious benefactor of mankind, he demands and must have an expression of our gratitude. And nothing in us is more beautiful and spiritually beneficial. No virtue more lovingly adorns human character. On the contrary, nothing so hardens and debases heart and conscience as the habit of ingratitude. An ingrate is the most despicable of characters, viewed only in his relations to human beings. But, as related to God, he is utterly without hope in the world.

Every historic period which has been characterized by great wickedness and apostasy has been introduced by long forgetfulness of God as the father of mercies and source of all life and blessing. Forgetting God is the chiefest sin, and worthy of condemnation. It was this that provoked the desolating flood. It was the foster-mother of idol worship among the Israelites in the wilderness. And at last, we are told, that the unrepentant are to be cast out "with all the nations that forget God." On the contrary, every revival of religion has been inaugurated by a general turning to our Lord with the offerings of thanksgiving. When we begin to enumerate and acknowledge the blessings vouchsafed to us, then our hearts expand, love takes on a new flame, faith is invigorated and charity abounds. Gratitude transfigures the world to our eyes. Everything seems to join in our hymns of praise and all voices make melody in our hearts. Like the psalmist king of Israel, we want the rocks, hills, mountains, rivers and stars to assist in rendering thanks unto the Most High.

This occasional expression we want to urge as a habit. It should be the experience and practice of every day. And such a habit is evidence of rare attainments in the divine life. The spiritual eye is certainly undimmed and vigilant that discerns the Lord's hand in all the affairs of life and gives him glory. How blind we often are! Blessings abound, and we do not see the open, giving hand. Many times we have lamented that the Lord was in this place but we knew it not. No eyes to see, no hands to touch the hem of his "seamless dress."

The habit of gratitude encourages and invigorates faith. When we acknowledge the gift of a single favor or the bestowment of a single grace, faith is emboldened to ask for larger blessings and lean more lovingly and entirely upon the arm of God. But if blessings are given and yet unacknowledged, faith is chilled and enfeebled, and the spiritual life suffers certain declension. Nothing so cheers faith to greater exercise as the grateful recognition of blessings already received. We discount prayer and discredit God when we fail to see his every gift and praise him for his generous bestowment. Once we knew a gracious revival to be retarded for days because of failure to thank the Lord for grace already given. After a full week had passed, with two or three daily services, the prayers were of the same import—asking God to revive the church. When individual experiences were compared, and the fact was elicited that Christian hearts had been revived, the good work began at once. Grace had been granted, but unappreciated. We plead, therefore, for the habit of gratitude as an attainable grace worthy of noblest effort.

Nehemiah's words of warning, spoken centuries ago, need now to be proclaimed from every housetop. O! that New Orleans might have ears to hear: "I testified against them on the day wherein they sold victuals. Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them: 'What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the Sabbath day? Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us and upon this city? Yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the Sabbath.'"

The "First Draft."

This is the subject of a thoughtful leader in the London Methodist. A few words in the same line may be profitable to our readers. The "first draft" is the first announcement and published list of the appointments in the Wesleyan Conference. On the first day of the session this list is ready. For a week or more the Stationing Committee, in advance of Conference, works diligently on the appointments, and has the "first draft" in readiness by the day of opening. This is sent abroad over the kingdom, and is subject to revision. Objections and modifications are forwarded to the committee, and after careful consultation, a second draft is issued. In order "to reconcile contradiction and to harmonize the inharmonious" even the third revision is made, which is final, beyond which there is no appeal. With us the reading of the appointments is the last business of Conference; and it is its supreme hour. What anxious fears and feverish hopes gather about that closing scene!

Another important difference of methods is in the manner of determining appointments. The Stationing Committee of the English Conference largely ratifies agreements already entered into between circuits and preachers. And the Methodist claims superior merit of that plan over ours that recognizes no consultations or invitations. It says: "We affirm, then, that our system has in it the best elements of the Congregational mode, but protects the whole against what may be the arbitration of the part, and provides, too, that the weak shall not be over-ridden by the strong, and that the best circuits shall not have a monopoly of the best men. It utilizes also the best elements of episcopacy. The representations are the picked men of their respective districts, and make it their business to study the wants of the circuits and the ministers within their jurisdiction. But any tendency to arbitrary power is at once provided against by the Conference itself, in which the ministers have their appointments in their own hands."

Instead of these invitations and agreements in our Southern Methodism, it is considered a point of honor to be indifferent to appointments and entirely innocent of our possible destination. Bishops send men without inquiring whether it would be agreeable for them to move, or where or when. And from their decision, there is no appeal. But, with slightly different methods, the same spirit animates the Methodist preacher on both sides of the sea. All surrender themselves to the Conference to labor where the most good can be accomplished. Wonderful system! Its like is not found in all the range of ecclesiastical history.

Man's Judgment vs. God's Teachings.

Ever since the devil obtained access to the human mind men have been putting their judgments against God's teachings. Men say that the things of this world are of first and vital importance; the word of God says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." Men say, "Food and drink and raiment," profits and pleasures and possessions, honor and growing fame, first; God says, Self-denial and repentance and restitution and crucifixion of the old man, and spiritual birth into the higher life. Men act upon their judgments and suffer themselves to be harassed by deep-seated cares and place themselves under the heaviest burdens of a grinding toll to obtain temporal good—a good that gradually wastes away with each passing day, while eternal good—that which grows with time—costs them no more than a passing thought. If the Bible is the standard by which to judge the actions of men, then the proper conclusion is that many people begin life wrong. They commence with false views of their highest interests, and false views of interest lead men to engage in a labor that in the end is unproductive of the highest good. When men set out in life with the idea that it is an arena where the contestants struggle only for the prize of temporal wealth or worldly honor or social pleasures, and then bend all their energies and use all their efforts to attain these things, they really have time for nothing else. At the beginning of such a career there is no time found to "seek the kingdom of God." If the thought of spiritual riches and heavenly honor and the pleasure of piety ever enter the mind, it is quickly crowded out by earthly things. When such people are reminded that there is another estate of existence which will commence when probation ends, for the enjoyment of which they are not fitted and for which they should prepare, they put off a present preparation by indulging the hope that some time in the future they will have rest from their incessant toils and leisure to prepare themselves. It is a wonder that such people have never considered the rashness of the reasoning that leads them to this conclusion. The outcome of such a principle, governing the beginning and controlling the maturity of life, is simply this: A man may give his best years and the energies of youth and manhood and his maturest thinking and the stepless ambition of his vigorous soul to timely things, and, after that, with wasted powers and with the decrepitude of age upon him, and with a mind weakened by the long conflict to conquer the profits and honors and pleasures of the world, and with a soul paralyzed by two victorious assaults of sin, be able to make a proper preparation for the tremendous issues of eternity! When we look at that eternity, as God has revealed it, the wonder is that, with this most diligent use of opportunities and the most rigid economy of time practiced through the longest life, a man should be able to prepare himself for it!

Another thing which demonstrates the rashness of putting man's judgment against God's teaching in this matter is the stubborn fact that, when men enter so earnestly upon the pursuit of the things of this life, the mind and soul become so engrossed by these things that it is the most difficult matter to turn away from them. The things of this life take a very strong hold upon men. They have a grip which only God's grace can break! While a man is pursuing these phantoms, oblivious of God's law and his own responsibility under that law, his soul is being educated in the wrong direction. The spiritual nature is going through a process of dwarfing! In the matter and manner of life the plan of heaven has been set aside, and another substituted in its stead. The wisdom of the man is set up against the wisdom of God. But the wisdom of God vindicates itself. The great law of the moral world—a law as inexorable as the law of gravitation—is that "every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." The reward comes after the work is done. If a man works for the perishable things of the earth, those are the only things he can justly receive. He may work diligently and accumulate largely, but his accumulations are only perishable things, and when his life comes to a close all his profits and pleasures and honors have vanished and he finds himself standing before the Supreme Judge empty handed, with the undischarged obligations of his moral being still pressing heavily upon him. All his victories have been nothing but ruinous defeats! All his successes have been only disastrous failures! His gains have accumulated into a loss which eternally itself will afford no opportunity to repair! Surely folly is justified of her children!

OUTS.

The following from the Richmond Advocate gives us some of the thoughts and feelings of its editor when brought face to face with the "eternal verities." Only a humble Christian could have such thoughts and feelings.

Before these lines go to press the writer will turn his face toward his home in Richmond. One month ago he had little hope of entering that city again except as an addition to its cemetery statistics. By his special request admission in print to his illness was suppressed till death or recovery should come to pass. He desired, if possible, to save his friends from anxiety. During his progress toward convalescence kind words have come, which have been embalmed in grateful memory.

He finds it good to be brought to the extreme point of life with the rising tide of the narrow isthmus behind and parting him from the mainland and its concerns. No imagination can anticipate the vivid realization of such a moment and situation. It is as if earth and its nations had vanished, leaving the God of eternity and the one mortal being alone. The divine Being seems near, very near and august. The conception of him expands with amplitudes of astronomy and the majesty of the mount that kindled and quivered under his feet. Awe and worship come as instinct. On the dead eye of one smitten by a stroke of lightning there remains, photographed and fadeless, the picture of the cloud and its fringe of fire. The ensoulment of the glory of God to the soul lifted by the struggling buoyancy of immortality to ethereal heights, and hardly held to earth by the weak strand of life, is never forgotten. The attrition of time can not wear down the impression.

And the telescope is reversed. The lonely man and his affairs are multiplied. Earth seems paltry. Vanity is on all. His own achievements dwindle into nothing. He sinks into humility. It comes home to the heart that "there is nothing great but God."

The conclusion of the whole matter is, that God's condescension and concern for the race alone dignifies man. And in heaven he will have no higher claim than the confession of a sinner saved by grace.

J. J. L.

The Dress-Parade of Modern Civilization.

Thus a writer in the Century Magazine, "civilized" characterizes a fashionable church. He says: "At one end of the church dignified and polished oratory; at the other, sensuous and ravishing music, and, in the territory between, unexceptionable manners and rich, stylish apparel. If people want fine music, good oratory and brave millinery, why should they not have them?"

Severe as is this arraignment, it is not undeserved in some localities. Nor is it confined to the very wealthy. There is as much foolish display of personal adornment in some of our smaller towns as in the large cities. What a profanation of the Lord's house and prostitution of the true motive of church-going! We should crowd the courts of our God to have the spiritual life quickened and fed. And to secure such edification and blessing we must guard vigilantly the purpose of our going. Without such previous spiritual preparation—some prayerful thought of the occasion, the preacher, his message and our needs—we can not enjoy the sanctuary service nor receive from it one crumb of wholesome soul-food.

"Brave millinery" should be avoided in a church. It is unbecoming and suggestive of gross worldliness. Besides it seriously and unrighteously affects other weak souls who aspire after similar display. Modesty of manner and millinery become the house of the Lord. The wealthy sisters of a certain congregation who pledged themselves to lead a reform in this matter need a helping hand.

A Case of Discipline.

At the late Wesleyan Conference Rev. W. J. Frankland was put upon trial for holding and promulgating a doctrine contrary to the teachings of Methodism. Having admitted that he did not believe the doctrine of future punishment, his case was referred to a committee, which recommended that he should become a supernumerary and be inhibited from preaching. We give below the speech of Dr. Osborn in the case, and commend it to the thoughtful consideration of certain would-be advisers of the churches in this country:

Dr. Osborn thought the time had come for them to declare that they could not regard the matter before them as an open question. When he was ordained he was asked: (1) Did he believe in the sovereignty of Holy Scripture? (2) Did he concur in John Wesley's interpretation of Scripture, and in the general system of doctrine in his Notes, Sermons and Minutes? The Conference did not ask him to become a Methodist preacher; it was he who asked the Conference to receive him. They put certain books before him, and asked, Did he agree to them? He answered, Yes. Before they received him on trial, they put the question again, and they received the same answer. Those statements were (1) fixed by law; (2) accepted by every minister on his ordination; (3) accepted by every minister from year to year. (Hear, hear.) If, then, they either taught the doctrines in question, or allowed others to teach them in their name, how could any one of them at the last say, "I have kept the faith." (Hear, hear.) He had kept the faith for himself as the foundation of his hope and the gate of life; kept it for the church which he accounted it his highest honor to serve in the defense and propagation of the faith; but he could not say that he had kept the faith if he tolerated sneers at orthodoxy. (Hear, hear.) He consented to a Methodist preacher, as such, teaching the doctrine of the conditional immortality of the soul. (Hear, hear.) He knew that he should be told he was setting up a human standard, and that he ignored the New Testament. But all that was beside the mark. The question was, Did a man's teachings agree with those standards, the acceptance of which was a condition of his entrance into the church to which he professed to belong? It would be said that this was liberal and so it would be if it were to be said that he should be prohibited from preaching them at all; but such was not the case. (Hear, hear.) He held that it was better to be a Methodist than to be a Churchman; better to be a Methodist than a Baptist; better to be a Methodist than an Independent. (Hear, hear.) The whole question was, What was a Methodist to teach? What was a Methodist to do? It was not a question as between the human race and the New Testament. It was wholly and purely a question relating to Methodist standards. If they were to put up with express contradictions of those standards because a man who expressly controverted them was an honorable man, where were they? (Hear, hear.) Moral character had nothing to do with the question before them. On the principle that they must keep the faith, they could not afford to keep silence as to the great future, or to tell men that it was "an open question" as to whether they got immortal souls or not. (Hear, hear.) Men might talk to him as they liked about "open questions," but he had laid it upon his conscience to "keep the faith," and to keep it in the form in which John Wesley presented it. (Hear, hear.) He foresaw the reproach that would be cast upon them. It would be said that "they were running counter to the spirit of the age!" Then so much the worse believed that what they were all pledged to was the word of God, and every other age and other spirit, and the evil spirit into the bargain, take care of himself. (Applause.) Let them do their worst. Would they make them martyrs? Would they afraid of that? (No.) Well, but if they did, were they bound to be martyrs for the faith? If they were not called upon to be martyrs, they were called upon to be confessors, and he hoped that they would not shrink from the responsibility or the honor. (Hear, hear.) Dr. Osborn concluded by moving the faith in the best interests of truth. Mr. Frankland should cease to be recognized as a minister. This was seconded. Several other speakers followed in the same direction, among them the Revs. J. K. Brooks, G. Bowden, T. Inglis Walsh and W. Hirst. Dr. Pope said the question before them was not one simply of fidelity to Methodist standards. He wished to say for the sake of the young men in the gallery that the more microscopically the New Testament was studied in the light of the most modern science the more absolutely did they find the doctrine that they all maintained. That doctrine was taught in the Scriptures right up to their very close, where was the city of God, and outside of it—extant still—all classes of the reprobate and the ungodly. (Hear, hear.) In the case supposed, however, he thought that if a brother did not voluntarily resign his position among them, their ends would be sufficiently met by refusing him a pastoral charge. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

The decision at length was that the Rev. W. J. Frankland become a supernumerary, and be inhibited from preaching; also, that he be requested not to promulgate his views in pulpits or press, in public or private.

Boycotting Scandal.

A cablegram from Dublin, of August 4, reads as follows: Archbishop McCabe caused to be read in all the Catholic Churches, yesterday, a pastoral letter urging the people to petition the press to refrain from publishing the details of the Cornwall scandal trial. If the papers will not consent to suppress the disgusting matter, his grace advises the public to boycott them until such time as it ceases to appear in their columns.

This was very commendable in his grace. His great influence could not be used to better advantage than suppressing the sensational embazoury of crime and scandal. Familiarity with wrong-doing is a fruitful source of evil in our modern society. An enterprising press seems to delight in collecting such news items, and thereby cater to and develop a depraved moral appetite. But, while commending the course of Archbishop McCabe, we can but pray that a like revival of conscience may be vouchsafed to his grace of each archiepiscopal diocese in America. What Sabbath decorations, rattlings, whisky sellings for Christ, and other evils, might be suppressed if an Archbishop would only write a pastoral letter!

Rev. Heslop R. Tucker, writing under date of August 11, 1884, reports as follows:

We report another good meeting on Crawford circuit. We closed a meeting at Shafter's Chapel, on last Friday night, which resulted in a powerful revival of religion in the church and in the awakening of many sinners. Nine persons professed faith in Christ and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We were assisted by Bro. W. T. Barnett, of Shuqualak circuit, and Bro. Gaines, a local preacher. These brethren did good and faithful service, which was highly appreciated by the people.

Dr. Whedon, for twenty-eight years editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review, is reported as critically ill at the residence of his son, in Sag Harbor, L. I. The New York Advocate says:

His death may occur at any moment. When asked if he would not like to partake of the Lord's Supper, he replied, "I am too dead to hear and too weak to undergo it, but I want to make the confession that I die in the Christian faith, according to the Scriptures." He realizes fully his condition, and is triumphantly awaiting the final change.

The widow of Dr. Wilbur Fisk died August 11, at her residence in Middletown, Conn.

It is stated that Gen. Booth is coming to this country to look after the "Salvation Army."

Some modest benefactor who withholds his name has presented the Wesleyan Conference in England with a theological library of 30,000 volumes.

Philip Embury and Paul Heck arrived at New York City, August 10, 1700. It was several years thereafter before Embury preached his first sermon.

America contributes one-third of the ulno millions of dollars raised annually throughout the world for foreign missions. And of the thirty-eight woman's missionary societies, she has twenty-seven.

may last, in honor of Julia A. Tevis, the founder of Seelye Hill Female Academy—a distinguished educator for more than 50 years, and a lady of large character. She was an honored member of the Southern Methodist Church.

10.00 MEN WANTED to sell The St. Louis Post-Dispatch. A work of power and interest. Send or Circulars. FULLWELL & CO., COLUMBIA-JOURNAL BUILDING, LOUISVILLE, KY.

mental and his organ recital in her new mu-that sweet nax you'll stop once more!"

WHOLE NO. 1465.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 28, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate,
OUR FIRST EDITOR'S BIRTHDAY—JULY 28.

BY MISS L. C. CRYSTAL.

Just three times ten
The years had then
Their exit made,
For him to whom our Advocate
Had been intended to state,
To get subscribers early—late,
As plans were laid.

And well those plans,
As any man's,
Were carried out
The "plans of men" are all alike,
In this the plan of God we see,
For he hath made all things,
Without a doubt.

This enterprise
Was good and wise,
And grand has been
The work our Advocate achieved,
The help from all it has received,
Beyond what angels could believe,
In war against sin.

And three times ten
The years have then
Their days have gone,
And he who first our Advocate
Has by the church been higher placed,
But watches still our "plans" with care,
For God's loved son.

Dear friend of mine,
No far-fetched lore
Have I to give,
But breathe this prayer in simple lay,
That Christ with you on earth may stay,
And you with him in heaven's bright day
Forever live.

The Nature and Object of the Steward's Office.

Stewards are elected annually by the Quarterly Conference on the nomination of the preacher in charge, but may be re-elected the same year from year to year, at the fourth Quarterly Conference, without restriction. Their duties, as set forth in the Discipline, are thus stated, in substance, by the Rev. James Porter, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is required of stewards:

1. "To take an exact account of all the money or other provision collected for the support of the ministry." They are
2. "To make an accurate return of every expenditure of money, whether for the support of the ministry or the relief of the sick or the poor," showing that they have charge of the local charities of the church, as well as its necessary expenses. They are
3. "To seek the needy and distressed in order to relieve and comfort them, and to inform the preacher of any sick or disorderly persons." This is religious pastoral work of the highest importance—the very work Mr. Wesley performed himself before the idea of a lay stewardship occurred to him. (Works, Vol. V, p. 185.) Then he transferred the business to stewards, charging them in these significant words: (1) "Be frugal; save everything that can be saved honestly. (2) Spend no more than you receive. Contract no debts. (3) Have no long accounts. Pay everything within the week. (4) Give none that ask relief either an ill word or an ill look. Do not hurt them if you can not help them. (5) Expect no thanks from man."
4. "Another important duty of the stewards (one that is assigned to no other officer of the church) is to tell the preachers what they think wrong in them, or to use the language of Mr. Wesley, to tell them, 'in love, if they think anything goes amiss, either in their doctrine or life.'" (Works, Vol. V, p. 185.)
5. "To attend the official meetings and the quarterly meetings; to give advice, if asked, in planning the circuit; to attend committees for the application of money to churches; to give counsel in matters of arbitration; to provide elements for the Lord's Supper," etc. (Discipline, § 87.)

From the foregoing it will be seen at once that the finances of the church—the duty of providing for current expenses, etc.—are all in the hands of the stewards except when the civil law imposes this work upon the trustees, who hold and protect the property of the church. In reference to the important question of finance, they sustain the same relation to the church (Methodist) as the early deacons did to the infant church of Christ, i. e. They are appointed to take charge of all the temporalities of the church, and thereby relieve the ministry of the work of "serving tables." They are the collectors of the finances of the church and the almoners of its bounty; so that their trust is both tender and sacred and of the utmost importance. Let all the officials of this class in the Methodist Church see to it that they dignify and honor the important office to which they have been appointed and fulfill this ministry and labor of love which has been so sacredly committed to their trust.

But the design of this paper is to consider more particularly the relation of the Methodist steward to the great question of the support of the Methodist preacher—a question that is big with interest and laden with the burden of eternal things. And I may as well state at once that the whole question of ministerial support in the Methodist Church lies in part and in toto with the stewards of the church. From beginning to last they have charge of this whole question, as they are the only ones legally authorized to take any steps whatever in the matter. If they do their duty in full, if they are diligent and laborious in this their chief and greatest work and, therefore, succeed in collecting a sufficiency of funds for the apportioned end of supporting the Methodist ministry, then the Methodist ministry will live, and the great work of the conversion of sinners and spreading scriptural holiness all over these lands will go on, and that gloriously, and that, too, as long as such adequacy of support is maintained, or provided by the stewards of the church into whose hands the whole matter is committed. On the other hand, if the stewards from any cause whatever fail to collect and bring up the amount of money necessary to afford a competency for the itinerant ministry of the Methodist Church, then this great cavalry force of the universal church of Christ will be sadly crippled and hurt in its operations, if not entirely disbanded, and sent back to the local ranks of a narrow and unsatisfactory sphere of ministerial efficiency. The hands on the dial-face of the world's redemption and conquest by the spread of truth will be slower in their onward movements whenever the stewards of the Methodist Church fail to provide a competency for the itinerant ministry, and thereby compel their location, and, therefore, say that it is with the Methodist stewards to say how many preachers shall locate and what kind of men they will have to serve them from the pulpit. It is with the Methodist stewards to say when and where and how that greatest and most efficient of all religious systems, called Methodism, shall die, if it should ever die; and, without any fear of being called on to account for the statement, I hesitate not to affirm that it is with the Methodist stewards of our great Methodist Church to say whether or not the long looked-for dawn of the millennium shall be the more speedily ushered in or kept back even beyond the appointed time. For aught that I know to the contrary, the Methodist steward, next to the Methodist preacher, may be in the eyes of the great God the most important personage on earth or in the kingdom of his Son, Jesus Christ. Whether it is actually so or not I can not say; but one thing I can say, viz.: That whatever importance may be attached in heaven to the Methodist ministry for the conquest of the world to Christ is likewise attached, in great measure, to Methodist stewards, and for the simple reason that it is with them to say whether the Methodist preacher shall be supported and, consequently, whether he shall be kept in the field or not. If Methodist preachers are supported as they should be and deserve to be, they will continue to preach on; otherwise they will continue to locate, and nothing short of a miracle can prevent it. And this important matter—the decision of it one way or the other—is placed almost exclusively in the hands of Methodist stewards. It is with them to say who shall live and who shall not, who shall locate and who shall not.

I am afraid that in a large majority of cases the stewards of the Methodist Church are not even half awake to the importance of the sacred trust which is committed to their keeping. I am afraid they do not fully appreciate the kind and extent of that relation which exists between them and the Methodist preacher, and, consequently, between them and the conversion of the world. I am afraid that they are put in possession of a power whose magnitude and reach they have never adequately measured, and the extent of whose influence for good or bad has never been properly calculated. I am afraid they do not see the fact that they hold the reins of the Methodist itinerant horse, and have the power of throwing him back on his haunches or of hobbling him down around some purely local stake to his own regret and to their shame, or of sending him round the world on his mission of love under the inspiring motive of the financial lash, whose letters spell out the idea and fact of a competent and adequate support for the itinerant and his family. The Methodist ministry hold themselves ready to go anywhere and do any work for the glory of God and the salvation of the world, and it is with the official Board, called stewards, to say whether or not they shall go, and how long they shall stay if they do go. Do they see it in this light? Reader, do you see it in this light?

I do not want to be misunderstood. I do not mean to say that the support of Methodist preachers must come in toto out of the pockets of the stewards, and of them only; that they shall "foot the bill" and pay him all the salary that he gets out of their own funds. No, by no means. But I do mean to say that they stand between him and his support, and must determine by their efficiency or their inefficiency whether he is actually supported or not; whether he gets what is due him or not, and, consequently, whether he lives or not. They stand between him and the people who are fully able to support the ministry, and will do it even in spite of the spirit of covetousness which has, perhaps, seized upon them if the right kind of men are put into the steward's office to collect the preacher's salary. The stewards are the media through which the salary comes, "if it comes at all; and that it comes to be determined by them. They, and they only, have the legal key into the Lord's treasure-house—the pockets of his people, out of which the preacher is to be paid and supported for services duly rendered. If they will unlock the door, they will get the money, and through them the preacher a support. Otherwise the door into the Lord's treasury will remain closed, the money will not be forthcoming and the preacher will have to suffer for it. According to the Discipline, no one else has any legal right to take any steps whatever toward securing a competent support for the ministry except the stewards and the collectors appointed by them, i. e. No one besides them has any right "to make estimates of expenses and provision for the support of the ministry," to say how much the preacher's salary is to be, or to take any active measures in approaching the people to ascertain and take steps to collect what they are able and willing to pay toward making up the preacher's salary. Neither the trustees, class leaders, superintendents of Sabbath-schools, nor any other officer in the church, have a legal right to take any steps whatever looking toward ministerial support unless, perhaps, they are stewards also, and in addition to some other office which they hold. No, the stewards stand alone in this matter. The whole thing is committed into their hands. It is with them alone to collect the appointed salary for the officiating preacher. If they do it, all well and good; if they do not, there the matter ends. No one else has any legal right to interfere or to take any steps whatever toward securing the desirable end. Their action or their failure to act is final. If the preacher is fortunate enough to get his salary, it is through their efficiency that he does so; if he fails to get a competent support, it is also through them—through their inefficiency—that he must suffer. In either case, whether he is supported or not, the whole responsibility is with the stewards. They alone are to be praised for success or censured for failure in the important matter of ministerial support, for they only have any legal right to act in regard to the matter. This is the law of the Discipline, which lays down in detail their duties and by which the church is governed.

Now, in the name of the whole church, and as voicing her sentiment and reiterating her law in reference to this vital subject, I call upon all her Boards of Stewards, her Committees of Finance, existing in every station and circuit within her bounds to awaken to a sense of the important trust which is committed by her into their hands. Let them remember that they are the body-guard—aye, the old guard of the laboring itinerant that comes to them in the name of the Lord, and let them not neglect or forsake him. Let them remember that, as a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, the preacher looks to them alone, on the human side, to make provision for maintenance and that, if they fail him, there is no other recourse left him by the law of the church as a means of obtaining a support. Let them remember that the itinerant minister, imposing full confidence in their sympathy with him and great faith in their power to procure an ample support for him and his, looks to them with an earnest expectation that they will do their utmost to see that he wants for nothing and that he is paid up as promptly as any other man whose time and talents and labors call for a moneyed expression of their gratitude and the equitable recompense for services rendered. Let them remember that from first to last, all through the year, he is depending on them, and no other human agency, as those who are pledged by the church as the men who will at all times and in all places be his necessities are all met and that his salary is paid in full. Let them, I say, remember these things, and may they be aroused this Centenary year to a due sense of their obligations as they have never been before, and may they redouble all their energies from this time henceforth to see that the self-sacrificing itinerant who labors among them from year to year are fully appreciated or, at least, fully paid the salaries promised, and that these salaries are ample enough to afford him a comfortable, if not a handsome support. And may the Lord repay them with tenfold interest for this—their service and labor of love!

REUTERS.

The Sabbath and the Exposition.

We hope the managers will seriously consider this subject, and with one bold and masterly stroke of the pen inscribe in living letters high over the gates of the Exposition: "No Desecration. Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep It Holy." All eyes in the South just now are turned to this city, and the question is, Will the other States consent to participate in and contribute tens of thousands of money to aid and assist this unnatural proposition to desecrate the Sabbath—the day that has been observed and held sacred for more than three thousand years by all the civilized and Christian people of the world? New Orleans bids us come with the understanding that whilst in Rome, do as Rome does.

With her Exposition gates thrown open, her race tracks in good condition, her grog shops in full blast, her lotteries ready for action, her handsomely draped pickpockets and gambling dens thoroughly organized, the Sabbath will be ushered in with the roar of her engines and machinery and will present a spectacle too sad to witness and from which we believe all Christian and civilized people will turn with disgust.

While the managers are so solicitous in regard to the accommodations and conveniences of the poor of their city, why not use freely of the government donations and apply it in erecting grog shops at short intervals under the sheds, so that their poor may not be troubled in procuring plenty of cheap whisky on Sundays? And that model reform sheet of the nineteenth century, which has taken so much interest in the annulling of the Sabbath and the "infusion of new blood," "the immigration of continental ideas to modify and liberalize our puritanical views," let them contract with it for a savory mess of its peculiar pottage for Sunday morning reading, erect a spacious tabernacle on their grounds and invite Bob Ingersoll to officiate once every seventh day, provide special accommodations for his majesty of Utah and a few of his so-called "latter day saints," repeal the marital law and start their city on a big boom.

A. M. C.

The Status of Infants.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

THE "FALL" AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

Sin is in the world; we know it; we see it, and feel its corrupting touch all along the line of moral sensation. Either, it was always here, or it came. If always here, then sin is immortal, and in some way must exist forever. If it came, it came as a probationer, or, it came to stay; and if it came to stay, why then it is immortal, since that which is to stay can not be abolished. But since sin results from wrong moral action, and since—initially being the judge—there was a time when there could be no wrong moral action, it is clear that sin has not always existed.

Then if sin came, whether to abide or to be abolished, it necessarily came at some time, and in some way. Ontologically, we may as well accept the Bible theory as any other. But just here is the question: Does this sin result from a divine purpose, the volition of man, or is it the product of the two? Out of this arises another: How far do the effects of the fall extend? To this life only, and to the body only, or to this life, the life to come, and (consequently) to the souls, as well as the bodies of men.

On this question Augustine held that sin had its seat in the will of man, and that it affects his moral nature. The Manicheans seem to have relegated sin to the divine purpose by insisting that it "is inherent in matter." They found the seat of sin in the body, Athanasius believed sin to be a negative something. Basil and Gregory are represented as holding this view. But in the fourth century, the church held to the opinion that sin was a positive something—"rebellion against the authority of God, and opposition to his holy will."

The views of Athanasius probably gave rise to the arguments of Gregory, who seems to be the first of the fathers who properly discriminated between sin of omission and sin of commission. At the same time, we find a distinction argued by Augustine, not, as we think, so clear and so correct as the distinction made by Gregory. Augustine went so far as to distinguish between small sins and great sins—venial and mortal—the one destroying the happiness, the other the souls of men.

Widely different from all these views were the views of Pelagius and Celestius. These taught that the sins of Adam injured only himself, and not the human race, that infants are born with all the purity of and capacity for good, that Adam had when first he saw the beauties of the garden.

For all that we know this whole Pelagian theory resulted from a purpose to harmonize the word, parts of which had been misunderstood. One of the cardinal points with them was that men lived without sin before Christ. Sin, therefore, was not a necessity, "for death reigned from Adam unto Moses, even over them who had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression." This proposition had the assent of Athanasius. He, however, did not believe that this fact involved the other assertions of Pelagius and Celestius. Sin was, according to Athanasius, a negation. Just how he could make this admission and maintain his consistency is more than we can see. For if sin is a negative something it exists everywhere in the absence of good; and hence there could have been none who "had not sinned." All these views of Pelagius and Celestius were condemned at Carthage, A. D. 418, as unworthy of the credence of man. With respect to the effect of the fall on the freedom of the will there seems to be but little difference between Pelagius and Augustine. Each allotted to man that degree of freedom necessary to choice, and each admitted the necessity of grace and its presence in well doing. The latter held the doctrine of hereditary depravity, the injured guilt of man, and his consequent condemnation unless relieved by the power of God. From this view of the subject, by some long leap, Augustine went into the doctrine of election and reprobation, just as if some of these poor depraved creatures were to be as purged by the Almighty in their helplessness, while saving grace was ministered to other like subjects of the Divine power and law.

It is true, that by some very curious crook of logic, he got around and concluded that predestination extended to the punishment, but the sin was not predestinated. These extreme views of these parties brought out, as might have been expected, a middle party headed by a disciple of Chrysostom, Semi-pelagianism arose, and so far accomplished its mission as to secure the condemnation of the idea that evil was predestinated by the decision of the two Synods in A. D. 529.

At the reformation Luther adopted the views of Augustine, and in some things went even further than he, e. g., that all natural good (or virtue) in the unconverted) resulted from ambition. Zuingle and Melancthon crossed swords on these issues. James Arminius struck out beyond the fathers to gather up the testimony of the apostles. Wesley followed after him, and out of all these contradiction and extravagances we have this. (See Discipline, page 15, Article 7.)

Original sin standeth not in the following of Adam (as the Pelagians do vainly talk), but it is the corruption of the nature of every man that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil and that continually.

This Article sets forth: 1. That human nature has been corrupted by the fall. 2. That this "corruption" attaches to all the race, "every man." 3. That this corruption is the result of the loss of "original righteousness" and the inclination of human nature "to evil, and that continually" follows it. In this is retained all that is scriptural from Augustine, Gregory, Basil, Luther and others, and is in perfect accord with Scripture—as in Adam all died—"through the offence of one many have died." (Romans v, 15.) "For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." 1. This "corruption" is the ground of the necessity for regeneration—"created anew in Christ Jesus." 2. The "corruption" of all is the reason for the redemption of all—"even so in Christ Jesus shall all be made alive." 3. The loss of "original righteousness," and the inclination of every one "to evil and that continually," is the reason why the Lord would "rather that all should come to repentance and live." He that believeth not, shall be damned.

But here we face another difficulty. Do these passages apply to all sin, both actual and original? If so, can infants and idiots be saved? Can they exercise faith? Dr. Ralston says "that infants are not required to believe," and if so, these passages do not apply to infants. But they are

"According to a man whose guilty fall Corrupts his race and taints us all."

Now, what is the character of this hereditary taint, and what the extent of it? Article 20 sets forth that "The offering of Christ once made, is that perfect redemption, propitiation and satisfaction for all the sins of the whole world, both original and actual." The first point to be observed here is that there is a "perfect redemption." There can be no redemption from a condition into which one has not fallen, and as the unborn offspring of Adam had not fallen into actual sin, the "perfect redemption" would have been of the sort which Dr. Ralston denominates "imaginary redemption, of an imaginary creature from an imaginary evil." The human being now unborn could not have been redeemed 1,800 years ago, from the evil into which it may not fall for 1,800 years to come. But the sins into which his vitiated, moral tastes may lay the future lead him, may be forgiven as declared in Article 19. So we come, at this point, to deal with two very different classes of human beings—the one, an intelligent actor; the other, an unintelligent subject. One for his own actions, and one for the acts of another; one for original sin, the other for actual sin. This distinction—between original and actual sin—is of the utmost importance. This distinction may have led Irenaeus to regard the atonement in a twofold sense—negative and positive. If this idea does not refer to the views of our fathers, (and recently more fully developed by Binney, viz.: "redemption is from sin—atonement is for sin,") it is exceedingly difficult to see to what it does refer.

Article 20 recognizes two classes of sins, viz.: 1. In which the sinner has been wholly passive. 2. In which the sinner has been wholly active. The first brought the world into the bondage of sin at the beginning, and produced hereditary effects—real entailments of moral taint and spiritual guilt and condemnation—which, in their nature, were perpetual. This was the act which brought the Saviour—the sin which shut man out from heaven and made him an heir of sin and death. To redeem him from bondage and restore him to life was the one object of the "offering of Christ once made."

There was no lack nor shortage in the work of Christ; therefore our doctrine is that the "redemption, propitiation and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world" was "perfect." As to actual sins Article 9 tells us how this perfect satisfaction is reached; but as to original sin the case is not so clearly settled. The effect of it (original sin) was manifold, the loss of righteousness, the corruption of the nature, the guilt of the soul, and condemnation, are some of the effects of original sin. "The offering of Christ is that perfect redemption, propitiation and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world, both original and actual." Bear in mind that you and me had not fallen into actual sin when the "sacrifice for sin" was made, neither sonically nor otherwise. Neither we nor our sins had any existence in any sense other than a representative one; but original sin was ours by the law of heredity; it was transmitted to us from Adam; it had a real existence from the beginning, and for man to exist was to come within its dominion, to be born was to die and be lost. But Christ came. He came for a purpose. A perfect Saviour for a perfect work. It was a success or a failure. If a success, man is saved in so far as the purpose to redeem went. If a failure, man is not redeemed, and can not be saved. But it was a "perfect" redemption. Not from hell for the race was not there; not from natural taint, for man is still "inclined to evil and that continually." It must have been redemption "from the curse of the law, which was 'death,' not physical death, for man is born to die. It must have been from spiritual death, and consequently from all that produced it—guilt."

The Model Death.

Men are addicted to hero-worship. Tastes vary as to the character of the hero, with the people, and with the ages. At one time Barabbas engrossed attention and was much called for; another the playboy Robespierre; another the pugilist with heavy fists or pedestrian with thin flanks has been sufficient to fill the world with ecstasy. So you see by character we refer not to moral excellence, but to the outside man—the way he looks and talks—even the circumstances of the hour—the external make-up and general dash and show. It is marvelous what effect dash and show have upon some people.

Our Christianity emphasizes the worth of the inward man; the patience of hope; the quiet labor of love is enjoined. The attitude of the soul to everything, the body amounts to little. But the world reverses the order. Attitude of body—gesture—everything, especially in the hour of death. How to die has always been an interesting question, but it is a question no longer, the whole matter has been settled lately to the complete satisfaction of certain secular newspapers in the city. The world at one time set up quite an admiration over Currier, who leaped into the chasm all armed, we fancied that men saw in his death the devotion of the patriot, but later light we find ourselves in error, the applause of the crowd was inspired by the fact that Currier was well dressed, and sprang into the opening of a horse in a manner combining sagacity and dignity—not to speak of agility—that, so to speak, it brought down the house. But the young Roman must retire into the background from henceforth and hide his diminished head. The world, long waiting for another such hero who would die clean, unwrinkled thing, so far as clothes were concerned, has lately been deeply gratified and thrilled over a personage who figured on the deck of a ship sinking off the coast of Cuba. According to the telegram, just as the sea was going down head, foremost in the sea, this Spaniard, a certain dignitary, "lighted a cigarette, justed his gold-bowed spectacles, waving his hand elegantly," entered eternity. And straightway the newspapers, commenting on the occurrence, go into spasms of delight and admiration. The attitude, together with a cigarette and spectacles, have since electrified them. It would hardly be safe to tell these papers that to see the mode of exit of this noble Spaniard was not without its ludicrous features. We, for one, can not thrill a bit at those two articles. Somehow the cigarette never did inspire us with reverence for itself or bearer—spectacles, however, are reflectors we yield. But we fail to see just wherein advisability or propriety of lighting a cigarette and putting on spectacles go down into the mighty ocean. I humbly conceive that water is unfavorable to both. Entering equipped with a lighted cigarette and adorned with spectacles, shades of the many Your glory is gone—you missed it. Truly, No! the folded hand and turned countenance to the spirit was where the great and holy God dwells. No, what was needed and felt to be proper thing was to roll a cigarette, adjust a pair of eye glasses and go on, entering or awagging into heaven. And this is the model death held up to the admiration and imitation of young men. Alas! for the man that tobacco and glass were not just in that day, or they might have been likewise and the world have been ed. But it may be done heretofore, cigarettes are cheap; spectacles are procured by the gross and of assorted colors. It is true that in heaven are not to see through a glass darkly, but one could have the presence of mind to take them off just as he was touching the strand of the everlasting world.

No more used for dying world illuminated faces, no heavenly features while waiting for the electric fire and band of accompaniment. These are things of the past—powerful, but at present outwitted. Let the dying minister, or Christian statesman, or devoted servant of God when he comes to die, worry not about anything, save an attitude of character is nothing; godliness is that which is left. Instead, let him light a cigarette, let him see to it that a pair of gold-bowed spectacles is fitted to upon the nose, and then bringing to a focus on an admiring crowd surrounding friends, let him quietly disappear to the sound of slow music. Lately there was an execution in the city of a murderer. Just a minute before the trap fell, he lighted his pipe, smoked until the black cap was placed in position. He was orthodox as to the world's standard, and was have been quite a hero, but the Spaniard came along and adds gold-bowed spectacles, so now he is not worthy to be mentioned in the same breath. Yet he was in the true line, and was doing his best.

Let our young men know that the faithful, Christian life, and quiet, Christian death are not to be thought of again. The thing to be desired is the rappings of death—claret and eye glasses. Let the undertaker keep them hereafter in bountiful supply. We need to attach great value to certain things, some in the Bible and some upon tombstones. It stirred my spiritual being to read such as this: "He walked with God." "He being dead yet speaketh." "And having served God in his time and generation he fell on sleep," and he said, "Lord Jesus receive my spirit—and fell asleep." But we see our mistake; we confess that we are filled with confusion at our error. Such words are not to be desired at all. Here is the inscription every worthy longs for and should have carved upon the marble or granite that marks his grave, henceforth let there be none other: "He lived a Christian, adjusted his gold-bowed spectacles and—vaunted."

H. CARRADINE.

Vicksburg District Conference.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

We are glad to reaffirm to principle long announced by our church, based on the word of God, that we should be temperate in all things. Our words and actions, our eating and drinking, should all be ordered according to this rule. The rational and moderate use of what is lawful and profitable of our good is our ideal of temperance. But, since one form of intemperance—indulgence in alcoholic liquors—has risen in gigantic proportions above all others, we give special attention to that "matchless evil."

The virus of this fearful vice permeates the life current of civilized society to an extent simply stupendous and threatening. We ought to be, we are, alarmed at its ravages. The remedy is the urgent question. We recommend that our preachers and people all adhere faithfully to the letter and spirit of our church legislation on this subject. We insist that it is contrary to the spirit of our holy religion and to the morality for Christians to sign petitions for liquor license, and as far as in them lies, the church to the dissemination of what destroys the bodies and souls of men.

We invite the co-operation of all Christians and patriotic citizens—male and female, old and young, white and black—in a plan we hereby suggest to detail the baneful results of this vicious traffic. Our State laws are now absolutely prohibitory of the sale of intoxicants. The fearful responsibility of all these innumerable evils is thrown on the voters themselves. Christians will simply withhold their partnerships in this business by voting to prohibit that the dark beverage shall be dealt out among them, the revolution of one twelve-month will witness the cessation of these baneful agencies for making drunkards; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will endeavor to have circulated and signed by large numbers of the voters in our several precincts the following pledge:

I, _____, do hereby promise on my truth and honor, that during the next five years, I will not sign my name, nor authorize to be signed, to any petition for permission to sell vicious or spirituous liquors.

J. P. BRAKE, for Committee.

Gates Ajar.

BY MRS. J. H. HUNTER.

Read before the Woman's Missionary Society of Enterprise, Miss., and published by request.

From over the waters of the great deep, a voice came calling for help. We are in the very depths of ignorance and superstition, and need help from our more favored sisters. Our way is dark, we have no light to guide our steps to the fountain of pure and living water. Send us the gospel, the broad life, that your God may be our God. The answer is borne back upon wings of love, we come. Woman, with her love and sympathy for woman, is responding to their sad appeal. Missionary societies are being organized almost every hamlet. Our society has only been established a few months, and we have thirty names enrolled. This society meets monthly, with its doors always open for the reception of new members, and I regret to say that I have been denied the pleasure of meeting with them. These monthly meetings, these pleasant reunions, will draw the cord of love that binds these workers together nearer and nearer. They will stand as firm as the storm-beaten rock, united in heart and united in purpose. The little flowers that will twine and cluster about their narrow home will be trained to lift their noble and loving deeds. The passing breeze will gather up the sweet sound and bare it out upon the light of time. The field is broad, the harvest is ripe, and we raise our banner with the motto inscribed: "Woman's work for woman," and ask can any woman refuse a helping hand. We have women in foreign fields who are devoting their life's work to the cause. Only a few days since a young woman, tender in years, presented herself to the Board to be sent as a missionary to any field of labor. It was a woman that anointed Christ for his burial, and it was a woman that was first at his tomb. All can not go to China, Japan or Mexico, neither have all a capacity for the work, but each one may find something to do. The gates are ajar, we are close upon the eve of their being thrown open when a flood of light will enter that will illuminate and beautify these lands. There is room enough in this great work for every man, woman and child on this continent. One single penny given to the cause of missions may be instrumental in the conversion of some dark and benighted soul. And the good work may spread and branch out like the burning flames upon some vast prairie. It may break the chains that fetter and bind our heathen sisters. God loveth a cheerful giver.

Draw the line of demarcation between our country and that of heathen China. While we rejoice that we are in a Christian land, a land of liberty, a wall of lamentation reaches our shores, come over and help us.

In all civilized and Christian countries woman's sphere in life is more elevated. She is placed upon a higher plane, one more congenial to every feeling and sentiment. Her merit meets its reward. Each one has a mission, and what work is more worthy or commendable than trying to raise our heathen sisters up to our own standard in life. The cross may be heavy, we may grow faint beneath its burden, but let us take it up and press on, remembering the heavier the cross the brighter the crown. We may at some time brush away the silent tear, let the tear fall, let the very depths of the heart be broken up, it will only enlarge and deepen our sympathies for behalf of our heathen sisters. When heart and hand are engaged in a good work, and every feeling and sentiment become enlisted, the work moves on gathering strength and power.

Come, join our little band, Throw wide the gates with willing hands, And work and wait and pray, Till our sisters see the light of day.

A Meditation.

With mingled emotions of joy and sorrow we call to mind the years are passing by. Yes, the busy hand of time is at work and, in changing from weeks to months, months to years, may unfold to us events never before thought of. Are we ready to obey this great conqueror? Can we look back on the fleeting moments of the past year and feel we are pressing onward to that home prepared for the faithful? How strange and confused our thoughts when we remember with tearful eyes it is almost a year since the sweet face of our darling Mamie was borne from our side and home, we trust, to a brighter, higher life! We will feel this vacancy and look forward with joy indescribable to the glad day when we will join our dear little angels, together with the innumerable throng in heaven, and realize the truth as it is—all things must change. We extend our sympathy through the Christian's friend, your valuable paper, to all those who have experienced this great trial. As we notice the obituaries from week to week, feel, happy, indeed, shall we be if time in passing onward ever bears us toward this higher and nobler life!

Woman's Work.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me space to say a few words about our missionary society, which was organized May 11, 1881, by our highly esteemed pastor, Rev. Mr. Scarborough, now in charge of Livingston mission. The name of our society is Springfield Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society. We organized with nine members, the following officers being elected: President, Miss V. Ovidier; vice-president, Miss L. Kinchen; recording secretary, Miss A. Spole; corresponding secretary, Miss M. Stevens; treasurer, Mrs. L. Faust. We have not three times, and now have fourteen members, with the promise of more. Thanks to our heavenly Father in blessing our work in the missionary cause! May this feeble society be enabled to send the holy word to some poor, struggling heathen in a foreign land and bring some poor, trembling soul to the cross of Jesus!

At our last meeting our president was absent. The house was called to order by the vice-president; prayer by our pastor. We received four members, which was a great pleasure to us all.

C. H.

SPRINGFIELD, LA., Aug. 19, 1884.

"A Thank Offering."

MR. EDITOR: The church and friends of Bolton have brought us under special obligations. Last Friday night the ladies had an "ice cream festival," which was well patronized. Saturday morning one of the stewards came with a wagon containing flour, ham, lard, sugar, coffee, tea, besides many other articles in the grocery line; also a box of bleached domestic, lawns, towels, handkerchiefs, etc. Very soon a delegation of ladies came bearing the net cash of the festival. All was given as a thank offering. In addition to the above, we received as a gift to the parsonage, a large handsome table cloth, with twelve beautiful napkins, with the compliments of Messrs. Switzer, New-witter & Co., of Vicksburg, amounting in all to over fifty dollars. May God bless each giver.

D. P. BRADFORD.

BOLTON, MISS., July 26, 1884.

A Trip to Caddo.

MR. EDITOR: A few days ago I left my home in North Bossier circuit, Shreveport district, Louisiana Conference, to visit a daughter living in the northeast corner of Caddo parish, on the west side of Red River. The first day I passed through Bellevue. The residence of Bro. E. B. Foust is located here, pastor in charge of South Bossier circuit. So I moved on, and crossed Lake-Boeacane at the long bridge (900 yds.) About four miles from this bridge on the Rocky Mount road stands a very nice little frame church, in a low flat country, quite handsomely finished. At the church I found a good congregation convened for public worship, and, as it was on Monday, I readily supposed it was a protracted meeting. Disappointing, I went in and found Bro. Foust in the pulpit discoursing on "The little captive Jewish maid that waited on Naaman's wife." Bro. J. B. Cassidy, preacher in charge of North Bossier circuit, closed the services. The good people then spread before us a bountiful supply of provisions of various kinds, and good enough for kings, queens and nobles of earth. I remained till the close of the evening service. The feeling was good for a revival, and on my return I learned the meeting closed the next day. The membership were greatly revived and seven new members added, nearly all young men, on profession of faith. Brother Cassidy is doing a good work on his charge, and will doubtless bring up to the Annual Conference very favorable reports from the several charges in his work, especially if he can control the services of Bro. Foust at protracted and revival meetings, for he is a full team himself.

SEMAJ DROFF.

NEAR MINER, LA., AUG. 1, 1884.

Our Brotherhood.

MR. EDITOR: In the last issue of the Advocate, "Incognitus" makes a very feeble attempt to deny the intention of our "Brotherhood." While there is neither pity, point, nor logic in his effusion, yet, it may be well, so far as the general reader of the Advocate is concerned, to say to "Incognitus," that every member of the brotherhood believes every word of the Bible, and finds comfort in all of its promises.

It is not for a want of faith in God that this brotherhood has been organized. No, no. We believe, and therefore speak. But it is more for a want of confidence in the promises of our fellow-men. Inasmuch as the assessment for the widows and orphans of deceased preachers is seldom, if ever, paid in full, and inasmuch as the pro rata is so small, and indeed inadequate to meet the real necessities of each claimant, it should be augmented in some way; hence we say, it is discreet, it is wise for each preacher to make some provision for the comfort of his family, after his death; in order that they may be spared from the embarrassment of absolute poverty, and he from that awful curse of God, which says, "But if any man provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." Let "Incognitus" remain incognitus, till he shall have more benevolence and forethought for the needy wife and children of a deceased preacher. Much more could be said, but it is not necessary.

B. F. JONES.

CAREVILLE, MISS., AUG. 15, 1884.

Centenary Sunday-School Fund.

The Centenary Sunday-School Fund is growing, both by the sale of medals and by the direct contributions of many Sunday-schools. The object of the Centenary Committee is to raise a fund during this Centenary year to be reported to and administered by the next General Conference for the purpose of assisting needy Sunday-schools in our missions and other destitute sections. If the matter is fully presented and considered in all our schools, the result will be sufficient to give great relief. The direct contributions and the amount arising from the sale of medals both go to the same fund; and as the collections are made they may be sent in as donations, or invested in medals, as the schools may determine.

Every church member and Sunday-school scholar should have one of these Centenary medals. They are beautiful memorials of the organization of American Methodism, and of our first Centenary. If you have not seen one, send one dollar for a specimen gift-case, and fifty cents for a white-faced medal. We expect the preachers and Sunday-school superintendents to co-operate in this matter.

I am authorized to send a specimen medal to any preacher who will agree to present the matter to his congregation and Sunday-school, with the understanding that should he send cash orders for $20 worth of medals he is to have the specimen free—otherwise, will pay for or return same before or at his Annual Conference. For further information address—L. D. PALMER, "Troas, Cent. S. S. Fund," NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE.

From the Corporal.

From the Marine Barracks, Pensacola, Florida, Corporal Ben. Barger writes of the benefits of Brown's Iron Bitters in that malarious region. He says: "I have used several bottles and must say I am greatly benefited by using it. Several of my comrades use Brown's Iron Bitters, and you may rest assured they all think it is the greatest thing on earth." This kind of testimony comes from all quarters concerning Brown's Iron Bitters—the best tonic.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12.

Stem-winding Silver Watches at $15 in $25.

Stem-winding Gold Watches at $35 and upwards.

All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. R. GRISWOLD & Co.,

119 Canal street, New Orleans.

W. C. SHEPARD,

49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

Crockery, China and Glass Ware

General Furnishings for

HOUSE, HOTEL AND STEAMBOATS.

For Country Dealers

Packages Nicely Assorted.

CROCKERY WARE

YELLOW WARE

GLASS WARE

TIN WARE.

Sole Agents for

Coal Oil Stores and Garden Pumps,

Wanted Agents in every Town in the State.

Refrigerators, Ice Boxes, Water Coolers, Ice Cream

Freezers, Cheese Saws, Fly Fans,

Fly Traps, Bird Cages,

Parrots and Squirrel Cages

CHEAPEST CASH HOUSE IN THE CITY.

Send for Catalogue.

WANTED.

WHITE OAK STAVES

Delivered in Mobile or New Orleans.

Write us for particulars and prices.

DANNER & CO.,

54 Carondelet Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

or MOBILE, ALA.

W. G. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

HEADQUARTERS

FOR

Sunday-School Supplies:

Consisting in part of

GOSPEL BIBLES, Single and Combined,

With and without Music.

Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teachers' Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible

Dictionaries, etc.

Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books; Union Spelling Books; Union Question Books; Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards; Tickets, etc. Also a large assortment of books suitable for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents to children. Pulpit and Family Bibles, from $2.50 to $15. Liberal discount to families, churches and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.

W. D. SELLMAN,

Business Manager,

91 Canal street, New Orleans.

W. C. TEBAUT,

The Cheapest

FURNITURE

HOUSE

—IN—

THE SOUTH.

Has Removed on 1st October 1 to Nos. 62 and 64

BIENVILLE STREET,

NEAR ROYAL ST.

Where he will be pleased to meet his old patrons and the public in general.

All orders will be promptly filled.

W. G. TEBAUT,

62 and 64 Bienville Street.

THE NEW HIGH ARM

SINGER SEWING MACHINE

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!

—FOR—

Range of Work, Perfection of

Stitch, Ease of Operation,

Rapidity, and almost

Noiseless.

GREAT REDUCTION

In price of NEW MODEL for all

Machines, and parts for the Singer Machine. Singer

New Family Needles, 15c. per doz., two doz. 25c.

All other styles from 15c. to 25c. Oil, 5c. a bottle.

Singer Sewing Machine.

Send for illustrated Catalogue and Price List; also, ask for the book, "Genius Rewarded" (History of the Sewing Machine).

McCall's Sewing Patterns, Catalogue Free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

135 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

N. E. HUNDE, Agent.

M. C. F. INSTITUTE,

JACKSON, TENN.

The English Colliery Year begins September

1st, 1884, with additional buildings and increased advantages. Four hundred and sixty graduates in the year. For full information, address Prof.

G. C. Jones, M. A., or the President, A. W. JONES.

FIRE INSURANCE.

MECHANIC'S TRADER'S

Insurance Company.

14 CARONDELET STREET,

New Orleans, La.

Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks.

AT LOWEST TARIFF RATES.

GEO. H. PHOENIX, LLOYD R. COLEMAN, President, Secretary.

F. C. CHESBROUGH, J. M. CHAMBERLAIN, Asst. Sec. and Fire Officer, Valuation and River Officer.

R. C. SHORTLIFFE, Collector, (Late Sec. Union Ins. Co.) Inspector.

TRUSTEES:

J. H. Allen, H. J. Leav, J. A. Bradshaw, H. J. Nathan, J. B. Britton, Robert Maxwell, T. J. Carter, F. J. Salie, J. D. Cobb, F. J. Tolson, H. T. Collins, W. A. Plott, R. Dudley Coleman, G. W. Seidel, G. Eber, A. N. Silberman, J. M. Frankenhof, W. B. Thompson, P. G. Gilbert, J. M. Walsh, J. Jackson Hill, T. S. Waterman, Chas. H. Hawley, Frederick Wing, Wallace Wood, L. L. Lyons, W. W. Ward, T. L. Menden, W. G. Wheeler, Lloyd R. Coleman.

Factors' and Traders' INSURANCE COMPANY.

49 CARONDELET STREET.

Paid Up Capital $1,000,000.

ED. A. PALFREY, President, JOHN CHAFFEY, Vice President, THOS. F. WALKER, Secretary.

Issues Policies Covering Fire, River and Marine Risks at the Lowest

Tariff Rates.

TRUSTEES:

John Chaffey, Sam'l Friedlander, J. H. Allen, A. H. May, T. L. Lyons, Samuel H. Boyd, Wm. J. Behan, D. B. Paulman, Chas. Chaffey, D. C. Jurey, Wm. Harwell, C. J. Leavelle, A. T. Janin, A. M. Bickham, Henry Larnham, Lewis Dyer, A. Griffin, G. W. Seidel, Wm. Cunningham, John L. Adams, R. T. Buckner, Wm. A. Gwyer, Chas. K. Black.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets. DIRECTORS IN NEW ORLEANS.

J. F. SCHROEDER, Chairman.

Newton Barker, A. Delville, Rodolphe Wueste, Assets in the United States, $5,514,522 41

Surplus over all liabilities, $2,863,312

HENRY V. OGDEN, Resident Secretary.

JULIUS P. ROUX, Assistant Resident Secretary.

CLARENCE E. LUN, Deputy Asst. Resident Secy.

MACHINERY.

COLEMAN'S

"Maid of the South" GRIST MILLS.

Have been in the Market since 1850.

They have taken FIRST PRIZES.

Overall Competitors where exhibited, including

MAYN'S, GAY and CRYSTAL PALACE,

NEW YORK CITY, in 1855.

The "Maid of the South" Grist Mills

—HAVE—

Solid French Burr Stones.

Iron Bridge Trees.

Improved Center-Lift Attachment

And other VALUABLE ADVANTAGES over any

GRIST MILL made.

They have the best record of any MILL in the market.

They are

STRONG,

DURABLE,

SIMPLE.

Made of the VERY BEST material and sold under a

FULL GUARANTEE.

All sizes carried in stock for immediate shipment.

Agents, respectively, Agents wanted where these

MILLS are not already represented.

Address the manufacturer,

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN,

Foundry and Plantation Machinery,

6 Perdido Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

PRESSES & BALING COTTON

Get the Best!

COLEMAN'S

Wrought Iron Screw

PRESSES

Are guaranteed to pack Bales of Cotton weighing

500 POUNDS.

SIMPLEST,

STRONGEST AND

CHEAPEST.

Thousands of them in use Manufactured and sold by Dudley Coleman, New Orleans, La. since 1871.

For one horse or mule, use COLEMAN'S

Simple Screw Press, $150.

OR COLEMAN'S

Independent Screw Press $165.

For water power or steam power, use COLEMAN'S

FRICTION GEARED POWER PRESS,

Of which THREE SIZES are made. Namely—

9 ft. 10 ft. and 11 ft. Packing Boxes

The two larger sizes having SCREWS or PINS FIVE INCHES DIAMETER. All screws are of wrought iron, threaded in place.

Patented improvements attached in these presses cause them to give the most perfect satisfaction. Active and reliable Agents wanted to sell these presses on commission wherever they are not already represented.

Address the manufacturer,

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN,

FOUNDRY AND PLANTATION MACHINERY,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

BODLEY BROTHERS,

OFFICE OF

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HENNINGTON.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 28, 1884.

$325.

At the Downsview Camp Meeting, in Union parish, North Louisiana, on Sunday, $350 were raised as a Centenary offering, which, with the amount previously collected by the pastor, Rev. C. R. Godfrey, aggregated $325. The $250 above was appropriated to the endowment of Centenary College, which, with an impromptu offering at the Jackson District Conference of $200, not hitherto reported, makes a total thus far on President Rush's subscription books of $4,200.

Our "postal correspondence" column this week is crowded with cheering news. There is a revival spirit abroad among the churches—a proper celebration of our Centenary. Let souls be saved and offerings made.

It will be seen that the "make-up" of the ADVOCATE is a little changed this week. The children's department and obituary column appear on different pages. We are experimenting this week, and will doubtless make a further re-arrangement in the next issue.

Christianity contemplates a thorough work—not reformation, but salvation. Christ came to destroy the works of the devil and save the souls of men. A writer has beautifully said: "Christianity does not seek to stitch the purple rags of etiquette over the sores of our poor nature."

An old Christian gives this good counsel: "Frequently clear up your evidences of heaven, and beware of letting sin blot them to you." It is well often to take our spiritual reckonings. There is such a thing as unconscious backsliding. It is said of Samsou that he "went out and shook himself, and was not that the Lord had departed from him."

In his "charge" to the young preachers on the occasion of their ordination at the Wesleyan Conference, the Rev. Dr. Pope, said some very timely things, not inapplicable to our latitude. He cautioned the candidates against assuming a too apologetic tone in preaching Christian truth. He believed that they might apologize too much. It was too late in the day for Christianity to be put upon its defence. It was something else that was on its defence. And let every pulpit say, Amen! We need to declare the truth, not apologize for it.

The editor of the Holston Methodist attended the Morristown District Conference, and pays this handsome tribute to Bishop Hargrove as a preacher:

The new Bishops are generally underrated by those who have not heard them. An idea is getting abroad in the church that we have reached the short rows; that great men are now altogether a matter of history; that the present generation are Lilliputians. Under the tyranny of this idea I am expecting no big things of Bishop Hargrove. I have been quite agreeably disappointed. His sermon on Saturday was first class, and his analysis of Methodism on Sunday was very great. * * * He utters great thoughts in simple style. Occasionally he utters a single thought that could be beaten out into a popular sermon. He would do well to take a great thought occasionally, and by boiling it make soap out of it for weak stomachs. The rich diet which he furnishes is adapted to those only who have vigorous digestive powers.

Dr. Potter, of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, thus cordially commends our position on the Sabbath and the Cotton Centennial. We are obliged for his timely aid, and hope other many blows will be struck in the same righteous cause:

By all means let the gates to the Exposition grounds be closed on Sunday; give the gate-keepers and the thousands of employees who will be worked hard for six days; their day of rest; let the visitors from the United States; and above all, let the law-defying multitudes of this country, who in theatres and beer-gardens, in such cities as Cincinnati, on Sundays learn to despise and contempt authority, know that Louisiana without a Sunday statute, has yet self-respect enough to treat, with consideration, her visitors and helpers from the other States of the Union. Dr. Galloway is surely right when he says that local laws and sentiments ought not to govern the directors in this case.

The Menace of Materialism.

There is an evident and dangerous materialistic tendency in our modern society. Its spirit is aggressive, and threatens to become dominant. In our home life, our systems of education, college curriculums, national and State legislation, it asserts a menacing front. All things must be subordinate and subservient to "practical" aims and immediate gains. Men are estimated by their productive value in moneyed wealth. Those pursuits are followed and that system of training exulted that will yield the quickest and largest revenue in coins and exchange. The industrial and commercial spirit is everywhere prominent and potent. Parents think only of fitting their sons "for business," giving them a "business education." Culture is nothing if not a means of making haste to be rich. What is not immediately necessary is eliminated as unworthy of study. The larger and broader education of our fathers—the symmetrical and harmonious development of all the faculties—which made the splendid triumphs of the nineteenth century possible, are now discounted and discarded as unnecessary. In an able article, in the current number of the North American Review, on "The Demand of the Industrial Spirit," Mr. Charles Dudley Warner forcibly says: "This spirit insists that the knowledge of how to shoe and cure a horse, set type, build a railway, assay metals, suit fertilizers to soils, conduct a business, is an education; and if you throw in a modern language or two, it is, I suppose, a liberal education: that is to say, education—this is the reasoning—must be suited to the exigencies of modern life instead of endeavoring somewhat to ennoble and correct the tendency of modern life by education." This, we regret to say, is not an inaccurate or overdrawn sketch of the materialistic tendency of our times. To arrest it is the demand and command of the Christian religion, the broadest patriotism and the truest philosophy. Those who stand against the current may expect ridicule and sneers; but the ages will hold them in sacred and heroic reverence.

Let us indicate the evils and perils of this tendency:

1. It lowers and cheapens the aims of life. There is no lofty ideal, no profound and noble moral purpose. The higher aspirations of the soul that find their full fruition in the moral and spiritual world are offered no field of exercise or recompense of reward. Life being a material development, only that finds countenance and cultivation that will subserve material ends. Motives are purely commercial and wholly unspiritual. It reaches not beyond into that larger life "unmeasured by the flight of years," but expends itself in the contests and successes of the marts of trade and the varied secular avocations and ambitions of the day. No wonder we find an absence of broad philanthropy in the presence of such a material philosophy. Moral and spiritual virtues can not grow in that soil and atmosphere.

2. It gives only a half education to our children. That system of discipline which exercises and develops only the lower faculties can not be of large value. The movement now among college curators and administrators is to eliminate everything not practical and immediately necessary. As education is to fit men for the activities of life, those things only are to be studied which contribute to that end. Thus mind receives a one-sided, abnormal development, and the supreme purpose of education—fitting man to best serve his generation and glorify God—is sadly defeated. On the general subject we quote again the timely words of Mr. Warner, in the North American Review: "A mere metaphysical training tends to speculation, and refinement of canisrity, and a hallooming of the imagination. It was the mislous of the eighteenth century with the inductive philosophy to bring men back to realities. We are in no danger of underrating its splendid results in modern life. We seem to be in danger of forgetting the importance, to the individual mind and to society, of literature and philosophy, and the laying up of intellectual goods safe from moths and from thieves. I beg readers to notice that it is not a question between real science and real literature—between which there can be no quarrel; but it is a question of the prostitution of all learning and all methods and facilities of education to merely material purposes, leaving out of view the fact that if you pursue learning not primarily for the cultivation of the mind itself and in pursuit of truth, but for concrete ends of utility, you inevitably lower the tone and morale of life." And yet this is the drift of the age, at once as strong and hoisterous as a cataract.

3. This spirit encourages estrangement from God. Materialism leads to infidelity. In its last analysis it is purely infidel. The conception of life it gives, the aims it offers and the duties it enjoins, all tend to dwarf the moral faculties, eliminate the idea of responsibility to God, and convert man into a material, money-making machine. The modern estimate of "a practical man" is the legitimate fruit of gross materialism. Children had better be made plons than "practical." Religion, common sense and a liberal education will make the typical man—the noblest work of God.

The Editor in North Louisiana.

Accompanied by President D. M. Rush, of Centenary College, we left Jackson on the early morning of Friday, the fifteenth instant, en route to the Downsview Camp Meeting. Vicksburg was reached by six o'clock, just as the sun was flooding with golden light the picturesque bill-ops of that historic city and chasing the shadows from the slumbering valley across the river. We have no war reminiscences connected with those once beleaguered heights; but that bright morning revived the more delightful memories of a four years' pastorate. No returned soldier from the tented field reviews more gratefully the experiences of a campaign than does a true pastor the scenes and events of his labors among a loving people. Happy if every one could feel the satisfaction Paul enjoyed in recounting to the Ephesian elders his three years' ministry in their city.

Two hours and a good breakfast in the city at the Pacific House, a ride to the "lower landing" on the steam railway, a short ferrage to Delta, and at nine o'clock we were off toward Downsview. With all possible dispatch the railroad authorities are putting the long submerged track in good condition. That road has contended heroically against floods and insecure levees, and now promises to be one of the most popular and best paying lines in the South. With its completion and daily trains to Shreveport, the tide of Texas travel is turning that way. But what a waste of wealth saddens the eye all through that marvelous valley between the Mississippi and Ouschtal! Large estates that once stood high on the assessment rolls and yielded fabulous crops of cotton have been abandoned to the weeds and willows. If the national government would do simple justice to that delta and protect it against destructive overflows, the wilderness would soon be redeemed and again blossom as the rose. Yet in that section, we were told, our Methodism has far more than a name to live. Faithful pastors remained with their flocks during the floods and cast bread upon the waters.

Monroe is an old town and wears a substantial expression. The solid brick buildings and neat private residences look as though they had come to stay. The extension of the railroad from Monroe to Shreveport is rapidly developing the hill country of North Louisiana. Many little towns have sprung up like magic along the way and are growing quite rapidly. This is especially true of Ruston, which gives promise of being an important business centre. Bro. Stone, our pastor there, is also wide awake, and has secured over two thousand dollars to build a church.

Raachling Choudrant (improperly pronounced, Shooder) at half-past four P. M., we found it impossible to reach Downsview, ten miles distant, that evening; so we tarried for the night. At four o'clock, next morning, we renewed our journey over a hilly, rooty, rutty road in a public hack with a lame wheel and sluggish team, but a careful driver. We had associated all Louisiana with alluvial flat-lands, and were scarcely prepared to see so much hill and valley. It quite resembled our native county in Mississippi, which, together with the thumping, humming journey, brought back the old home feeling with vividness and vigor.

